An example of this is what happened at Banu An-Nadir, when the exile took place, and the believers claimed the land of Banu Qurayzha, which was a gift of truly good fortune from Allah. So Allah the Exalted treats believers in two different ways: the first is that they make preparations which lead to results: ‘Fight them; Allah will punish them by your hands.’ (at-Tawba: 14). In this verse, the True Lord made the fighting of believers a means. As for the second way, it is that an event of His devising that brings about victory by His Lordly protection and power.

The words ’may’ and ’perhaps’ are expressions of hope, so that a speaker hopes that what follows the modal verb ‘may’ will happen. For example, if we were to say, ‘You may treat Zayd generously.’ The one who says this wants the one to whom he speaks to treat Zayd generously; and this means that the one who is speaking is not able to treat Zayd generously himself. If someone says, ‘It may be that Allah will treat Zayd generously’, this shifts the hope from man to Allah. The one who says this is a human being, and he is speaking about another human being, while hoping for something from Allah Glorified is He. His Power is greater than any other power. This means that the breadth of hope increases. So what if Allah Himself expresses hope? If He does, this hope will be realised beyond any doubt.

Therefore, we see different levels of hope: ‘one when a person hopes for something from another person and one when a person addresses a hope to Allah for someone else. The highest level is when Allah expresses a hope for a person which He is the one to bring it. Also, since the final hope is between the Supreme Lord and Himself, then He would assure that '...Perhaps Allah may bring a victory or a decision according to His Will,' (al-Ma'ida: 52) and this was indeed realised. When they said, 'We fear that fortune may turn against us, so we will preserve our relations with the people of the Book for the sake of alliance and support.' After this, the victory by means of good fortune and Allah's devising has come – so what did they do then?

What they did was revealed in the following verse: 'Then they will become regretful for what they have been keeping as a secret in themselves.' (al-Ma'ida: 52) They felt remorse. Their statement revealed the disease of hypocrisy in their hearts. It is as though what they harboured within themselves was hatred for this religion, and its way of guidance and a dislike of seeing it become victorious over anything else. Therefore, the True Lord the Exalted tells us that their words were not the direct cause; rather, the direct cause was the disease that dwelt in their hearts; and this disease was their dislike to see the Islamic way gain victory since they lived off the wealth of those who opposed the religion. However, once Islam became dominant, they would lose their wealth. Likewise, before the coming of Islam, the people of the Book in Medina were people of knowledge, wealth, and prestige, and the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj would take usurious loans from them, buy weapons, and take their learning from them. However, when Islam came, Jews lost all of this, so their hearts became diseased, for Islam had taken their temporal power from them, the power which had made them distort Allah's Scriptures. Since they were prepared to oppose Allah by distorting His Scriptures, would not they also direct their enmity towards you, O, Muslims, and act as though they were aiding you when in reality they were plotting to betray you?! Allah the Exalted says: 'Then they will become regretful for what they have been keeping as a secret in themselves.' (al-Ma'ida: 52) When they hear this Divine Speech in the Quran which is repeated regularly everywhere they go, this was before there had been any victory or any event of Allah's devising. So, when they heard Allah Glorified is He telling them of their fate, it means that He had recorded what their souls had concealed, just as He had said before: 'and they say to themselves.' (al-Ma'ida: 52) This means that they said it to themselves, and the Creator heard it. When they heard all this, they would have announced that they had never said, as if they had not truly said it to themselves. However, they were amazed when the True Lord exposed them, recorded what they said, and then revealed it. They should have acknowledged that indeed they did say it which should have caused them to embrace faith, but they did not do so. Thus, they were doomed to remorse. The True Lord then says:

وَيَقُولُ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ أَهَٰٓؤُلَآءِ ٱلَّذِينَ أَقۡسَمُواْ بِٱللَّهِ جَهۡدَ أَيۡمَٰنِهِمۡۙ
إِنَّهُمۡ لَمَعَكُمۡۚ حَبِطَتۡ أَعۡمَٰلُهُمۡ فَأَصۡبَحُواْ خَٰسِرِينَ ٥٣

And the believers will say, ‘Are these the men who swore by God using their strongest oaths that they were with you?’ All they did was in vain: they have lost everything [53]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 53)

In this verse, believers will see the remorse of these people with their own eyes. Remorse is a woe felt presently that fills the heart for a previous action, such as when a person does something regrettable, and then its consequences become clear later. So, he says: ‘If only I had not done that!’ He feels down and sorry about what he did in the past, and the woe of his soul is also expressed on his face. However, when good fortune comes, the hypocrites and the people of the Book will be severely and grievously disappointed, so much so that they will not be able to deny it nor pretend to be cheerful. It will be so severe that it appears on their faces.

When this happens, believers will become aware of it and will say: ‘Are these the ones who swore by Allah their strongest oaths that indeed they were with you.’ (al-Ma’ida: 53) If hypocrites were truly honest, then, they would be happy and their joy would appear on their faces; their pleasure would be obvious, but the opposite was the case, and they were filled with regret and disappointment.’ Their deeds have become worthless.’ (al-Ma’ida: 53) This means that their deeds and their saying, ‘We are with you’ were all in vain. Allah says: ‘And they have become losers.’ (al-Ma’ida: 53) The basic meaning of ‘loss’ is that one’s capital has diminished. The hypocrites did what they did in order to hide behind the Muslims, but they failed and were exposed. The True Lord then says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ مَن يَرۡتَدَّ مِنكُمۡ عَن دِينِهِۦ فَسَوۡفَ يَأۡتِي ٱللَّهُ بِقَوۡمٖ يُحِبُّهُمۡ
وَيُحِبُّونَهُۥٓ أَذِلَّةٍ عَلَى ٱلۡمُؤۡمِنِينَ أَعِزَّةٍ عَلَى ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ يُجَٰهِدُونَ فِي سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِ وَلَا
يَخَافُونَ لَوۡمَةَ لَآئِمٖۚ ذَٰلِكَ فَضۡلُ ٱللَّهِ يُؤۡتِيهِ مَن يَشَآءُۚ وَٱللَّهُ وَٰسِعٌ عَلِيمٌ ٥٤

You who believe, if any of you go back on your faith, God will soon replace you with people He loves and who love Him, people who are humble towards the believers, hard on the disbelievers, and who strive in God's way without fearing anyone's reproach. Such is God's favour. He grants it to whoever He will. God has endless bounty and knowledge [54]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 54)

These words are addressed to believers, and every call of this kind is probably followed with a commandment, a glad tiding, or a warning to those who disobey. The only case which might seem problematic, though actually it is not, is if this expression is used and then followed by an exhortation to have faith, such as when Allah says: 'O you who have attained to faith! Believe.' (an-Nisa': 136) Why would the True Lord say this? To answer this, we have to ask ourselves, 'What is faith?' Faith is a deep belief of the creed in the heart so that it does not resurface to the mind to be debated again. Therefore, when Allah the Exalted addresses a believer and tells him to believe, this means that He is saying, 'You believed before I called you, and it was because of your faith that I called you. So, always protect this faith and renew it constantly, for I called you because of the faith I knew you possessed.' The True Lord is saying, 'O, you who believe, be constant in your faith and let every moment of the rest of your lives be filled with it which is a sign of loftiness and strength. You came to believe before I addressed you as believers, so hold onto this, and be firm in your faith.'

Also, the meaning of His Words 'whoever of you should revert from his religion' (al-Ma'ida: 54) is that if anyone leaves Islam, Allah will replace them and will bring forth those who will not be like these apostates. So, those who apostatise should be made aware that they are not a loss of Allah's soldiers in the slightest since the One Who ordained His Law to be revealed to a final Prophet and Messenger would not place this messenger and this religion at the mercy of human vicissitudes. If people leave the religion, Allah the Almighty will replace them with others.

This verse differs slightly in its grammatical usage from a similar phrase in a verse in the chapter of al-Baqara wherein Allah says: 'They ask you about the sacred month - about fighting therein. Say, "Fighting therein is great (sin), but averting (people) from the way of Allah and disbelief in Him and (preventing access to) Al-Masjid Al-Haram and the expulsion of its people therefrom are greater (evil) in the sight of Allah. And Fitnah is greater than killing." And they will continue to fight you until they turn you back from your religion if they are able. And whoever of you reverts from his religion (to disbelief) and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and those are the companions of the Fire, they will abide therein eternally.' (al-Baqara: 217)

So what is the reason for the True Lord using one grammatical version of the verb in one verse and another version of the verb in a different verse? We know that the Quran was revealed in the dialect of the Quraysh who were the leaders of the Arabs, and no other tribe could match them. We all know that no one dared to disturb the journeys the Quraysh undertook to Yemen and to the Levant. This was due to the fact that the Quraysh's homeland was the location of the Inviolable House of Allah, to which all the Arabs made pilgrimage, and if anyone were to disturb the caravan of the Quraysh, he would bring down punishment upon himself or his tribe. Therefore, it was the Inviolable House of Allah which gave this gift to the Quraysh, which is why Allah Glorified is He reminded them of this in the chapter of al-Fil: 'Have you not considered, (O Muhammad), how your Lord dealt with the companions of the elephant? Did He not make their plan into misguidance? And He sent against them birds in flocks, striking them with stones of hard clay, and He made them like eaten straw.' (al-Fil: 1-5)

Allah's warning was carried out upon the Army of the Elephant since they intended to destroy Allah's Inviolable House. Then, the True Lord followed the chapter of al-Fil with the chapter of Quraysh, wherein He said: 'For the accustomed security of the Quraysh; Their accustomed security (in) the caravan of winter and summer.' (Quraysh: 1-2)

He thereby made it clear to them that as part of the protection He afforded His Inviolable House, Allah kept the Quraysh safe during their winter and summer journeys. Furthermore, had the Temple which gave the Quraysh their ascendancy been destroyed, the people would have attacked them from all sides. The evidence of this is when He says of those who intended to destroy Allah's Inviolable House: 'And He made them like eaten straw' (al-Fil: 5) and 'Their accustomed security (in) the caravan of winter and summer'. (Quraysh: 2)

Since this is what Allah did for the Quraysh, they should have worshipped Him: 'Let them worship the Lord of this House, Who has fed them, (saving them) from hunger and made them safe from fear.' (Quraysh: 3-4) So, the Quraysh derived their leadership of the Arabs from the location of the Inviolable House, and their dialect also became superior. All of the great markets of the Arabs that were held there, the most famous were the one of 'Ukazh. On these occasions, all the beautiful examples of language from the different tribes were presented to the Quraysh, so that their dialect was especially refined and pure. Every poet would offer the best poetry he could muster, and every orator would give the best speeches he could compose. As a result of this, the Quraysh would hear the finest examples of language. This meant that their dialect of Arabic was the highest, and when the time came to record the Quran in writing, the counsel given was the following, 'If you differ amongst yourselves on anything, then write it in the dialect of the Quraysh.' This was due to the fact that the dialect of the Quraysh had adopted the best features of all the other dialects. The Arabs of Tamim and Hijaz differed on certain points. It is as though Allah the Exalted gave one verse in the dialect of Hijaz and another in the dialect of Tamim, which is further evidence that the Quran has not come to bolster Quraysh dominance, rather, it came for all of mankind. Therefore, we find each dialect represented by one of its words in order to make it clear that the Quran is meant for all people.

When we read the True Lord's Words, 'whoever of you should revert from his religion – Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54), we know that He is telling us that He is able to bring forth people of faith if others apostatise, just as He told us before: 'And whoever of you reverts from his religion (to disbelief) and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and those are the companions of the Fire, they will abide therein eternally.' (al-Baqara: 217) This tells us that an apostate is destined for hell after the coming of the Last Hour. However, the Words, 'Whoever of you should revert from his religion – Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54) tell us that something else will happen even before the Resurrection comes. Who could imagine that Allah would send down a Quran which challenges the world, and then declare unequivocally in this Quran that something will happen that is still unknown to man, if it were not truly going to happen? The phrase 'will love' infers something which will happen in the future. We ask, in this respect that who could declare what choice people will make about faith? No one can, but Allah can do so, and He is declaring that He will bring forth people who believe to replace those who apostatise.

Also, if people had apostatised and then waited to see who would replace them, but no one did, then what would have happened? Everyone would have certainly left the religion. Allah the Exalted would not have unequivocally stated and placed in the mouth of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that some people would apostatise unless He knew that people indeed would do so; the knowledge in this verse, as in the rest of the Quran, came from Allah, Exalted and Glorified, and the True Lord stated it as true fact. Also, are there any people whom Allah loves, and yet who love Him not? We say that this does not happen with Allah, but it does happen in human life, as the Arab poet said:

You are my beloved, but I seek refuge
Lest I be one who loves, but is not loved

The misery of those who love occurs when one loves someone, but the love is not reciprocated so that the one who loves spends his life weeping. We may observe that Allah's Love is mentioned first in this verse: 'He will love and who will love Him.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) This is due to the fact that it is the way in which knowledge is revealed: The True Lord knew that they would turn to Him, so He loved them; and when they came forth, they did what made them beloved to Allah. Furthermore, what is 'love'? It is the affection of the heart, and we have spoken much already about this. We know that there is a kind of love which is determined by reason, while another is determined not by reason, but by emotion.

For example, when we go to a doctor, he prescribes medicine for us which is bitter and tastes unpleasant. We find that the one for whom this medicine is prescribed goes to the pharmacy to ask for it, and if he does not find it there, he goes around asking every pharmacy in town. If he does not find it, he asks someone who is travelling abroad to bring it back for him. If his friend brings him this medicine, he is filled with joy and happiness. Does this sick person accept this bitter medicine with his emotion or his reason? He accepts it and loves it with his reason. Rational love, as we said, means to prefer what is beneficial. For example, we find that the father of an unintelligent child loves the intelligent child of another man. He loves his own unintelligent son with his emotion, but he loves the other man's son because of the intelligence he possesses. Therefore, there is rational love, and there is emotional love. This is what happens on the human level, but it does not happen with Allah Glorified is He.

They love Allah the Exalted with their reason, and their love might increase until it becomes emotional love. This might be tested when Allah sends people something which seems to be evil on the outside, but they continue to feel love for Him. This means that their love for Allah has gone from being merely rational to being emotional as well. A story about 'Umar Allah be pleased with him explains this point for us. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, 'None of you (fully) believes until I am more beloved to him than his own self.'(1) Some people might have told the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him that he was more beloved to them than their wealth and children, but 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him said, 'You are more beloved to me than my wealth and my son, but not my own self.' So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him repeated his words, 'None of you (fully) believes until I am more beloved to him than his own self.' Upon this, 'Umar Allah be pleased with him realised that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him meant rational love. Since 'Umar Allah be pleased with him knew that no one is held responsible for emotional love, he replied, 'I now love you more than my own self.' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him responded, 'Now, O 'Umar!' It was as though at that moment 'Umar's faith was perfected. So do not ask, O, believer, whether Allah's Love is rational or emotional, for the meaning of 'Allah's love' is the continuous Grace He shows to those whom He loves in this life. In the Hereafter, the True Lord will receive them into His blessings and grant them the Grace of the beautiful vision of Him: 'For them who have done good is the ultimate (reward) and extra.' (Yunus: 26) The 'ultimate reward' is paradise, and scholars say that 'extra' means the beautiful vision of the One Who bestows all this good.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad (iv. 336) and As-Suyuti in Ad-Durr Al-mManthur (iii. 223)

Allah says: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) When the True Lord says, 'will bring', we should know that what comes after these words is one of the signs of prophethood which came upon the tongue of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in Allah's Quran, for all of this indeed happened just as the Quran said it would, and certain people apostatised. Those who apostatised were of two kinds: those who apostatised during the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and those who apostatised during the reign of Abu Bakr and 'Umar Allah be pleased with them. The words 'will bring' indicate that a certain amount of time would pass before what followed would occur.

The first apostasies were in Yemen after the Farewell Pilgrimage and before the passing of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. There was a deceitful soothsayer in Yemen named 'Abhala ibn Ka'b who was known as Dhu Al-Khimar, or Dhu Al-Himar according to another narration. In the books of Islamic history, he is known as Al-Aswad Al-Anasi. He was one of the two liars of whom the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke when he said, 'While I was sleeping, I was given the treasures of the earth and two gold bangles were put in my hands. I did not like that, but

I received the inspiration that I should blow on them, and I did so, and both of them vanished. I interpreted it as referring to the two liars between whom I am present: the ruler of San'a and the ruler of Yamaha.'(1)

This soothsayer owned a donkey which he had trained in a special way just as monkeys are trained. It would stop when he told it to stop and go when he told it to go, and this soothsayer considered his command over the donkey to be miraculous. Or according to the narration which calls him 'Dhu Al-Khimar' as he used to wear a veil over his face. It is strange that no apostate was ever asked for any sign to prove his prophethood by those who followed him.

The first thing which must be done to confirm a man's claim to be a prophet is for the people to ask him for a sign to prove it and a miracle which they can recognise, but we never find this to be the case with any apostate. How could those who follow the apostate not bother to ask him about himself and his claim to be a prophet? Also, the miracle which proves his message needs to be genuine, for this is what happens with any messenger. How could the people believe in someone when he does not bring miracle?

We must consider this matter psychologically and say that religiousness is a natural instinct of man, and even the man who is irreligious gets angry and sad when we call him 'irreligious'. Therefore, we find that every imbecile amongst such people considers himself to have a religion and does not imagine himself to be an imbecile with no religion or morality. This is why the True Lord said: 'For you is your religion, and for me is my religion.' (al-Kafirun: 6)

It is as though the basic truth of natural disposition is that religion is essential for man; and as long as this is the case, then why is everyone not religious? It is due to the fact that religion is not only a name or an attribute, but is also a matter of adherence to moral responsibilities. What makes people fear religions is that they do not want to endure the hardships of its responsibilities. This is why when a man comes along and says, 'I am a prophet, and my miracle is that I excuse you from praying and paying the poor-due. Also, I allow you to look at each other's womenfolk.' The people who follow their desires and are devoid of insight will be attracted by this, along with saying, ‘This is a wonderful religion!’ They will surrender to it and further deceive themselves into thinking that they are religious, even though, in fact, they are excusing themselves from religious observance. It is a strange thing that when people claimed to be prophets in the pasts – and when they continue to do it in our times – we do not find any educated people going to such people and asking them what their miracle is, but everyone asks them what their teachings are!

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, Ibn Majah and Ahmad

Furthermore, when the people of Yemen asked Dhu Al-Khimar what his teachings were, his response was to excuse them from some religious obligations beginning by lessening the number of prayers, lowering the poor-due alms, and allowing them to mix with the womenfolk of others. Some of the people found these teachings agreeable and were fooled by them, so consequently they forgot all about asking for a miracle. All who falsely claimed to be prophets were of this type, which is why we find that everyone who falsely claims to be a prophet tries to make the teachings of the religion easier. One tried to decrease the poor-due alms, and a woman named Sujah tried to decrease the prayer, while a third tried to lighten the issue of usury by permitting it, but none of them ever brought a miracle. Some people, nevertheless, followed them simply because they made the religion easier. False prophets only seek to please souls that are too weak to bear the burden of Allah’s religion by adhering to it faithfully and devotedly.

An example(1) of this is what happened in Alexandria when a false prophet appeared and made lawful an insidious evil. Some of the educated people who wanted a religion that would satisfy their whims followed him. It was like this in old times too. Historians have described how Dhu Al-Khimar (the one with the veil) or Dhu Al-Himar (the owner of the donkey – it was said that he had a trained donkey who would bow on hearing his injunction), who as we said was an illusionist, enchanted the hearts of those who heard his words. He showed them wonders and was thus able to claim the rule of Yemen after which he announced his apostasy. He took control of Sana’ and all that lies between At-Ta’if and Bahrain, and his malice spread like wildfire.

(1) The story of the Alexandria man who claimed to be prophet

Our master Mu'adh ibn Jabal Allah be pleased with him had been appointed governor of Yemen by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and he told of what had happened, saying that a soothsayer named Dhu Al-Khimar (or Dhu Al-Himar) had apostatised. Our master Mu'adh ibn Jabal Allah be pleased with him went to Hadramaut, where a message reached him from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him telling him to send men to fight Dhu Al-Khimar, and the Muslims planned the best way to carry out the Prophet's command. After this, a man of the Daylami tribe named Fayruz went in where Dhu Al-Khimar was sleeping and killed him in his bed.

Despite the distance between Yemen and Medina, that very night the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Al-Aswad Al-'Anasi has been slain this night.'(1) By the end of that month, news came that the false prophet had been killed. And this was one of the miracles of prophethood.

During the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him some people's beliefs were shaken by this incident of Dhu Al-Khimar (or Dhu Al-Himar), but at the same time, this event was like a shot of vaccine because it caused immunity to develop. Allah the Exalted told them about it first: 'whoever from among you turns back from his religion, Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54).

The True Lord said this in order to give believers spiritual immunity. It is as though He said to believers: 'Do not think that you will not encounter any challenges to your religion and belief. Indeed you will encounter them.' It is as though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'People might think that as long as I am alive, I will administer Allah's Way of Guidance on Earth. However, when I die, perhaps they will abandon their faith.'

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed the words of Allah the Almighty to believers, the intention behind it was to impart spiritual immunity. Had the Muslims been caught unaware by the apostasy, along with Allah having not warned them of it beforehand, they would not have had the necessary immunising cautio, which is the first step towards protection. We know that modern science has found a way of isolating the microbes or viruses which cause infectious diseases, and scientists can weaken these microbes or viruses, and then place a little of them into the human body, so that the body's defence mechanisms fight the microbe or virus and defeat it. Once this is done, the body possesses the power to defend itself against this disease. This is the True Lord's aim when He says these Noble Words: 'whoever from among you turns back from his religion, Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54). Therefore, when apostasy occurs, the Muslims would not be caught unaware by it, and they would trust that this apostasy would be a means of the fruition of Allah's promise: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54). Thus, believers have no need to panic when apostasy occurs, along with their souls not being disturbed. When apostasy occurs, believers should say, 'The One speaks truthfully when He says there will be apostasy also speaks truthfully when He says: "Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him."' (al-Ma'ida: 54) When the Arabic particle sa (will) precedes a verb, this means that the event will occur in the near future, such as when the True Lord says: 'The foolish among the people will say…' (al-Baqara: 142). He says, 'sayaqulu' (will say). When the particle sawfa (will - in time) is used, this means that a larger amount of time will pass before the event occurs. This is why we see that apostasy extended during the rule of Abu Bakr and 'Umar Allah be pleased with them.

(1) Kanz Al-'Ummal

What will be the attributes of the people whom Allah the Almighty will bring forth in the verse: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him (who are) humble toward the believers, powerful against the disbelievers; they strive in the cause of Allah and do not fear the blame of a critic.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) There are six attributes here: Allah Glorified is He loves them, they love Him, they are humble towards the believers, they are powerful against disbelievers, they strive hard in Allah's Cause, and they do not fear to be the blame of someone who might criticise them.

How can a believing man be humble and powerful at the same time? It can happen because the True Lord does not want us to have the same attitude all the time; rather, He wants us to react to our circumstances. When a situation requires a believer to be kind hearted, he must deal with it with kind-heartedness. When a situation requires a believer to be tough, he must deal with it with toughness. When a situation requires generosity, he must be generous. A Muslim must react appropriately to every situation and must not react the same way to everything. Were a believer to be humble at all times, a circumstance requiring power might arise that he would be unable to deal with. On the other hand, if he were powerful all the time, a situation requiring humility might arise which he would be unable to deal with. Therefore, the True Lord has made a believer's heart flexible and able to deal with each situation appropriately.

A believer must be powerful and undefeatable in the face of his enemy. He must meet him with strength. He must be humble and tender towards his parents as the True Lord commands: 'And make yourself submissively gentle to them with compassion…' (al-Isra': 24). If a believer is humble and tender towards his parents, does this negatively affect his powerfulness? No, this is something which rather increases a man's powerfulness. Allah speaks of them as those:' (who are) humble toward the believers, powerful against the disbelievers…' (al-Ma'ida: 54). In Arabic, 'adhillatun ala al-mu'minin' literally says 'humble toward the believers'. It uses the proposition ala which means 'on or upon', rather than the more usual li which means 'to or towards'. Why does the True Lord say it this way (when the word ala (upon), or in this verse translated as towards) implies that something is above, whilst humility means for something to be below)? This expression is worded this way for a wise reason which is that as long as a believer loves Allah, He loves him, and he humbles himself before his fellow believers, this raises his status. It is not humility in the ordinary sense of the word; rather, it is kindness, affection, and mercy. Therefore, when Allah Glorified is He says, 'humble towards' (ala (literally upon)) 'the believers' (al-Ma'ida: 54), this means that believers have affection for one another, so this affection appears to be humility. The root of the word adhilla (humble) contains the letters dh and l, which scholars say has two opposing meanings. For example, the True Lord says: 'And we have subjected them to them' (Ya Sin: 72). He says, 'dhallalnaha', or 'We subjected them'. This means that we have made them subject to man's control. This subjugation is not the result of man's overpowering of animals; rather, it is the result of Allah's subdual of them; they are meant to serve man. Another example is found when the True Lord says: 'and follow the ways of your Lord submissively' (an-Nahl: 69). He says, 'dhulula', or 'submissively'.

This means to do so calmly and yieldingly; and this is the humbleness of tenderness. Also, there is dhull which means 'humbleness' or 'the opposite of pride', whereas dhill which means 'tenderness' or 'the opposite of hardness'. Therefore, if we consider the word in its meaning of 'tenderness', then a believer's tenderness towards his fellow believer is dhill, whereas if we consider the word in its meaning of the opposite of pride, then it is dhull, or 'humbleness'. When a believer is humble towards his fellow believers, this means that he is humble in his tenderness and affection. Also, when the True Lord wants to describe how something is within the reach of a believer so he does not have to exert effort to get it, He says: 'Its (fruit) to be picked are hanging near.' (al-Haqqa: 23)

In another verse, He says: 'And low will hang, down its clusters of fruit, most easy to reach.' (al-Insan: 14) He says 'dhullilat', or 'low will hang' and 'tadhlila', or 'most easy to reach'. This means that its fruit will hang low and within reach, and it will fall in the place where a believer will be. If a believer stands, he will be able to pick it by stretching out his hand, and even if he reclines, he will be able to reach the fruit because it will hang low for him. Even if he lies down, the branches of fruit will come down to him. Thus, he will be able to eat them at any time and in any position.

In this verse, the True Lord says, 'humble towards the believers' (al-Ma'ida: 54) which means that the humbleness of a believer towards his fellow believer elevates his rank since he is blessed by being loving and being loved by Allah, the Exalted. There is no exaltation higher than this. Therefore, the Hadith that reiterates this is the following: 'When a man humbles himself to Allah, He raises him.' This means that when he humbles himself, while remembering Allah Glorified is He and doing so for His sake, Allah raises him.

Allah says, '…powerful against the disbelievers' (al-Ma'ida: 54). This is the fourth attribute of believers in this verse, after the True Lord says: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him (who are) humble toward the believers' (al-Ma'ida: 54). A believer is powerful towards disbelievers in that he is invincible, and as long as he realises this, he will be happy to join fighting in Allah's Cause: 'they strive in the cause of Allah' (al-Ma'ida: 54). The phrase Al-jihadu fi sabil Allah (strive in the cause of Allah) refers to a particular kind of striving: a man might strive to protect or defend his nationality or some other allegiance. However, as far as the religion is concerned, all these allegiances are worthless unless they spring from allegiance to Allah's Way of Guidance so that His Word is supreme.

The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was once asked about the best kind of fighting: Abu Musa Allah be pleased with him narrated that a man came to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'A man fights for booty, he fights for fame and he fights to be seen by others. So who fights in Allah's cause?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'The one who fights to make the Word of Allah supreme fights in His cause.'(1)

As long as a believer is beloved to Allah, and loves Him, is humble towards believers and is powerful against disbelievers –as long as this is the case, when he is given a position of authority over other believers, none of them should despise to be under his command. In this way, a believer stays away from having arrogance and conceit since he is striving in Allah's cause. Also, should anyone criticise him for doing so, he does not allow this. It is as though Allah clarifies this point: 'Be well aware that you should not imagine that those whom Allah loves, who love Him, who are humble towards believers, who are powerful against disbelievers and who strive in Allah's Cause will not be exposed to mocking, scorn and condemnation from those who wish to dissuade them from this striving in the cause of Allah the Exalted.

Therefore, the True Lord says: 'do not fear the blame of a critic.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) This has been clearly manifested throughout the history of Islam, and the True Lord did indeed bring forth people whom He loved, who loved Him, who were humble towards believers, who were powerful against disbelievers, who strove hard in Allah's cause and who did not fear the blame of someone who criticised them.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and Ahmad

Also, when we examine this verse closely, we see that the indication of the words that contain sawfa (will in time) first began to be manifested during the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When he peace and blessings be upon him was asked about those whom Allah loves, who love Him and who have these attributes, he pointed towards Abu Musa Al-Ash'ari Allah be pleased with him and said, 'They shall come from this man.'(1)

When Allah revealed His words: 'And (to) others of them who have not yet joined them' (al-Jumu'a: 3), Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him asked the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him' Who are these people, O, Messenger of Allah?' So, he peace and blessings be upon him placed his hand on Salman Allah be pleased with him and said, 'Even were faith as far-flung as Pleiades, a man of these people would attain it.'(2)

The first apostasy happened in Yemen, among the people of Abu Musa Al-Ash'ari Allah be pleased with him. As we said, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wrote a message to Mu'adh ibn Jabal Allah be pleased with him then Fayruz Ad-Daylami volunteered to assassinate the false prophet Dhu Al-Khimar (or Dhu Al-Himar) and succeeded. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him informed the people of what happened that very night even though the news of the assassination did not reach Medina until after Muhammad returned to the Most Exalted Companion, and this was one of the miraculous signs of his prophethood.

Also, it occurred during the Prophet's time that Musaylama, the Liar(3) claimed to be a prophet and wrote a letter to the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him which said: 'From Musaylama, the messenger of Allah to Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah'. Therefore, he was unable to deny that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truly a Prophet of Allah Glorified is He. Musaylama's letter continued: 'Then, half of the earth shall be mine, and the other half will be yours.' It seems that he believed that it was important to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the earth should be divided. So, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him wrote a reply to him with words filled with the gifts of true prophethood: "From Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him to Musaylama, the Liar. Peace be upon him who follows guidance! The earth belongs to Allah. He causes it to be inherited from whomever He wills of His servants. The (best) outcome is for the righteous.'(1)

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and Ahmad

(3) The story of Musaylama, the Liar, alleging to be a prophet

However, Musaylama did not heed the words of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and a campaign was prepared to deal with him. The battle finally took place during the rule of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and it was severely brutal. Wahshey, the man who had killed Hamza Allah be pleased with him at the battle of Uhud, wanted to expiate his sins, so he went to kill Musaylama. He, thus, uttered his famous words: 'As an ignorant pagan, I killed the best of men (meaning Hamza), and as a Muslim, I killed the worst of men (Musaylama).' This was the end of Musaylama.

There was a third false prophet during the lifetime of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him named Tulayha ibn Khuwaylid(2) of the tribe of Banu Asad. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent Khalid ibn Al-Walid Allah be pleased with him to deal with this false prophet. When the imposter learned that Khalid Allah be pleased with him was coming to fight him, he fled. However, later he embraced Islam sincerely and became a true Muslim.

We should note that the Arabic word ridda (apostasy) is used to describe the events, which we have just described and which met these responses. We do not call them radd which simply means return; the reason for this is that radd might mean a return to the truth, while ridda always means a return to falsehood. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: 'refer it to Allah and the Messenger' (an-Nisa': 59). He says, 'rudduh' (refer it to). As for the one who apostatises, he returns to falsehood. It is curious that the word ridda (apostasy) which Islam uses to refer to abandoning faith to disbelief is also used by the enemies of Islam who do not believe in any religion. When a follower of communism abandons it, they call this ridda. If they were truly people of principle, they should have used another word, but there is no word which describes the return to falsehood except ridda. Likewise, the word minbar only exists in Islam where it means the pulpit on which a preacher stands to give the Friday sermon. Therefore, when they establish a left-wing organisation, they speak of the 'minbar of the left'. So, that raises the question, 'Why did you take this word from us?'

(1) Narrated by Abu Hanifa in his (Musnad) and Ibn Sa'd in (At-Tabaqat A-Kubra)

(2) The story of Ṭulayha ibn Khuwaylid alleging to be a prophet

Another example is when a writer writes: 'This dancer worships at the "mihrab" (prayer-niche) of art (or in English, we might say, 'worships at the altar of art'), we ask, 'Why is he using the word "mihrab"?' You should look for another word. All of this indicates that religious language is the richest language, which is why they resort to using it.

Islam is often superficially criticised because its law states that an apostate must be executed. We rhetorically ask: 'Does anyone really think that this is to Islam's detriment?' No, it is a credit to Islam since when a man embraces Islam, he embraces the complete religion. Those who leave it forfeit their lives, while those who are thinking about embracing Islam must therefore be cautious with their lives. Islam, therefore, cannot be embraced lightly; rather, it must be embraced seriously. Everyone should be aware of this before they embrace it, for they are entering a complete religion, not a game or vain amusement.

All those who wish to embrace Islam must think hard and find their way to the truth since their life will be the price of leaving Islam. This proves the seriousness of this religion and how unforgivable it is to enter it frivolously. Since it is a serious matter to embrace Islam, this gives the opportunity of choice. Therefore, those who would choose to embrace Islam must understand that the price for leaving it, after having entering it, is one's life. When a religion asks a person to think seriously before embracing it, is this deception or sincere advice? It is sincere advice, and therefore, it is a credit to Islam. It is a matter of public knowledge so that everyone who enters it knows that this is the precondition. Had Islam wanted to make things trivially easy, it would have said, 'Come and join Islam, and you can renounce it whenever you want.' Rather, the true religion does not deceive anyone, as Allah Glorified is He says: 'that those who perished (through disbelief) would perish upon evidence and those who lived (in faith) would live upon evidence' (al-Anfal: 42).

We have previously spoken about the apostasies that occurred during the lifetime of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him, but the words sawfa (will - in time) that occur in Allah's Speech: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54) indicate that the affair would be protracted. Apostasies also occurred during the rule of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and seven men appeared claiming to be prophets, such as Banu Fazara, the people of 'Uyayna ibn Hisn, who apostatised and to whom Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him sent troops to fight; the people of Ghatfan apostatised as well. There were also the people of Qurra ibn Habidah ibn Salama, and Banu Salim, the people of Al-Fuja'a ibn 'Abd Yalil to whom Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him sent armies to chastise them; and there was also Yarbu', the people of Malik ibn Nuwayra, and some of the tribe of Banu Tamim, amongst whom Sujah bint Al-Mundhir, the wife of Musaylama claimed to be a prophetess. There was also kinda, the people of Al-Ash'ath ibn Qays, and the people of Al-Hutyam ibn Dabi'a who were named Banu Bakr ibn Wa'il and resided in Bahrain. Our master Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him abolished all of them which made many people say that the people whom Allah loves, who love Him and who have the attributes which this verse mentions, were Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him and his companions. However, does this discount the possibility that any other group of people amongst them might have the likes of Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him? No, it does not, and an example of this is 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him because of what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said on the day of Khaybar: Salama ibn Al-Akwa' Allah be pleased with him narrated that 'Ali Allah be pleased with him was late for the Prophet at Khaybar due to an infection in his eye, so he said, 'Shall I stay behind when Muhammad has gone out to fight?' So, 'Ali Allah be pleased with him went out and set out to catch up with the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. On the eve of battle, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'I shall surely give…', or he said, 'he shall surely take the banner tomorrow to a man whom Allah and His Messenger love.' – Or he said, '... a man who loves Allah and His Messenger' – 'and Allah will give us victory by his hands.' Then, came 'Ali Allah be pleased with him whom the people had not expected to attend. Then, the people said, 'Here comes 'Ali!' So, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him gave the banner to ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him and Allah the Exalted gave the Muslims victory by his hands.’ (1)

During the rule of our master ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab only one apostasy took place. It came from Al-Ghasasinah, led by Jabala ibn Al-Ayham(2), a Levantine tribe who were allies to the Byzantines. Jabala was their chief, and he embraced Islam and came to circumambulate in the Sacred Mosque, bringing much wealth with him as the chief of the tribe of Ghassan. They were renowned for their horsemanship and fine clothing, and Jabala was wearing a long cloak. Someone stepped on Jabala’s cloak and caused him to fall down, so Jabala slapped the man, who informed ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him of this. ‘Umar declared that the man had the right to exact retribution, and the Ghassanite chief said, ‘I shall purchase this slap for one thousand Dinars’, but the man refused, so Jabala increased his offer to two thousand dinars, but the man refused this, too; so he increased his offer to ten thousand dinars, but the man refused this, too. So, Jabala said to ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him ‘Give me some time to think about this.’ When ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him gave him some time, Jabala fled to the Levant and became Christian. Thus, we see the extent of the words sawfa (will -in time) and how much time they covered; and indeed they extend even to the present day. In our time, apostasy came from Persia in the form of Baha’ism and Babism.

The goal of the apostate is to gain superficial prestige in this worldly life if he has the desire to rule; and the modus operandi of the apostate is to make religious obligations lighter for those who follow him. Those who claim to be prophets usually make up their own sacred laws are only seeking prestige for themselves in this world, and those who follow these false prophets are only trying to make their religious responsibilities lighter. Why do they wish to make their religious responsibilities lighter? It is due to the fact that man is instinctively religious which is proved by the fact that if we call a disbeliever ‘irreligious’ or ‘immoral’, he will become angry and fly into a rage. The reason he does so is that he does not like the idea that anyone else should deny that he is religious and moral in some form or other. We might see a

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, Ibn Majah, and Ahmad

(2) The story of the palm of Jabala ibn Al-Ayham

Muslim who has sinned numerous times, thus he wronged himself, but when he hears someone insult Islam, he becomes enraged and begins to defend Allah's religion. This is the faith-based natural of which Allah Glorified is He has placed within all people; and what makes religion difficult for the human soul is not religious disposition, rather, religious responsibilities are what most consider difficult since they are a matter of free will. The True Lord has placed all the responsibilities of religion inside the realm of human free will, and He did not wish to make them a matter of compulsion. Had He willed to make all people believers, no one would have been able to disbelieve: 'Perhaps, (O Muhammad), you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers. If We willed, We could send down to them from the sky a sign for which their necks would remain humbled.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4)

Therefore, no one has the ability to defy Allah, but He willed to make the responsibilities of faith subject to free will. Man is free to fulfil or not to fulfil the responsibilities of faith, and either way he will be requited. An example of this is the tongue: Allah the Almighty created it with the ability to say, 'There is no deity but Allah, and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is his Messenger.' This tongue is also able to say – Allah forbid – 'I do not believe in Allah.'

The tongue does not disobey its owner, for Allah Glorified is He created it with the ability to express the secrets of man's heart, along with making it subject to man's will. Another example drawn from our own inventions during this time is the television which man made to be a device compelled to show whatever programmes he decides to broadcast on it. If man uses television to broadcast religious and scientific films and programmes which reveal the secrets of Allah's creation and strengthen man's spiritual values; this is a faith-based decision. On the other hand, if he broadcasts depraved films that specialise in buffoonery and iniquity, this is a decision that places him amongst those who spread corruption on the earth.

So, the True Lord created man with the ability to adhere to the responsibilities of faith and also the ability to flout them. When Allah the Exalted commands His servants to implement or adhere to a responsibility of faith, He knows that man is more than capable to do this, for He has complete knowledge of His servants. Likewise, if it were not within their power to adhere to the responsibility, He would not have ordained it for them. We all know the difference between ibad (worshippers or servants) and abid (slaves): all beings are Allah's slaves, and a man remains His slave even if he despises his responsibilities. If he does not live up to his responsibilities, he is, nevertheless, compelled in many ways which he cannot evade. For example, no one can stop breathing by their own free will, for as we know this is something which occurs whether one likes it or not. Likewise, no one can continue to breathe once his time to die comes, and no one can resist illness when it comes to him. Therefore, man's haughtiness and his disobedience of Allah Glorified is He in certain matters does not mean that he has completely freed himself from Him in every way, for the True Lord does what He wills. No one can control his beginning when he is born, and nor can he control his end when he dies; and many things occur between the brackets of birth and death which no one has the ability to control. Free will only applies to some things, and everything else is a matter of compulsion, and we are all Allah's slaves therein. However, the True Lord has given us the freedom to choose for the rest of life's affairs.

The truly intelligent person is the one who asks his Lord, 'you have created me with free will, O Lord. What would You like me to do?' The person then finds himself faced with Allah's Commandments and Prohibitions, along with His Way of Guidance and its requirements. This Way of Guidance sets out the guidelines to what a believer may do and what he must not do. A believer then says, 'I relinquish my free will in favour of Your Will, O Lord.' The servant who relinquishes his free will in favour of his Creator's Will becomes one of those servants whom the True Lord calls' The (true) servants of the Most Merciful.' (al-Furqan: 63)

In our daily lives, we see examples of what takes place between the head of a family and its members. The head of the family says to his children, 'You want to go on an outing. So, where would you like to go?' One of the family members says, 'Let us go to such-and-such place', while another says, 'Take us wherever you like as long as we are together.' It is certain that the one who says the latter to the head of the family will earn a special place in his affections. If this happens amongst human beings, then what do we think of the favour which will be earned by the servant who says this to his Most Generous Creator? He will certainly attain to a high rank since he moves from the level of slave to the level of worshipper, of whom the True Lord says: 'And the servants of the Most Merciful are those who walk upon the earth easily, and when the ignorant address them (harshly), they say (words of) peace, and those who spend (part of) the night to their Lord prostrating and standing (in prayer). And those who say, 'Our Lord, avert from us the punishment of Hell. Indeed, its punishment is ever adhering. Indeed, it is evil as a settlement and residence.' (al-Furqan: 63-66)

These are the true servants of the Most Gracious whom He loves and who love Him. As for the one who rebels against Allah's Way of Guidance, he should be aware that he cannot rebel against His decrees of fate. The True Lord wants to give us spiritual immunity when He says 'O, you who believe, whoever of you should revert from his religion, Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him.' (al-Ma'ida: 54) This immunity is manifested in the fact that a believer must be careful of those who rebel against Allah's religion by claiming to be prophets sent after Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

This verse explains to us the gravity of what these apostates do. One such apostate says, 'I am a prophet sent by Allah.' Then, this false prophet finds people to listen to him, believe him and follow him. Also, he may not find anyone who asks him, 'If you are indeed a prophet then, what is your miracle?' He only finds those who believe his lies due to the whims of their souls. These whims can be summarised by saying that this false prophet brings an easy religious message which deceives his followers, who in turn deceive themselves into imagining that they are devoutly religious, when in fact they are following a false message. Many people have claimed to be prophets or have claimed to be the awaited Mahdi (He is the prophesied redeemer of Islam who will rule for five, seven, nine, or nineteen years according to differing interpretations before the Day of Judgment. He will rid the world of evil); however, no one had ever asked them for a miracle to prove their prophethood since the false prophet lures people by offering to lighten their religious responsibilities.

We find that some well-educated people, who claim to use their intelligence in all matters, follow these charlatans. For example, a few years ago we saw incredible scenes when someone claimed to be a prophet, and several men and women believed in him and followed him. A married woman would go to this false prophet and kiss him, and even let him kiss her on the lips right in front of her husband. What has happened to men's honour to allow such things to happen? This is the nature of these misguided swindlers who claim that they have guidance; indeed, it is guidance that leads to hell.

Do these movements spring from Islam? No, they come from people who hate Islam. For example, someone entraps a man of special talent and vision, and then convinces him that he can play the role of a false prophet. An example of this is the Indian Mirza Ghulam Ahmad, who founded the Qadiani movement. We know that the English colonised India for many years and considered it the jewel in the British crown. We also know that the enemies of Islam, led by the colonising force, attempted to undermine it since they saw that religious adherence had allowed Muslims to conquer whole empires, not by the sword but by protecting people's right of choosing religion.

Although the message of Islam began in Arabia, it spread throughout the world, and the Persians and Byzantines had capitulated before those who carried the banner of 'There is no deity but Allah, and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His Messenger.' After this, we find that it was Muslims who defeated the Tatars, and likewise the Wars of the Crusades were waged in successive campaigns, but those who fought for Islam resoundingly defeated them.

The occupation of India was made difficult by Islam due to the power of the faith and the willingness of the faithful to fight in its cause. Therefore, Mirza Ghulam Ahmad came along and tried to weaken Muslims' power to fight in Allah's cause. He said, 'I have come to you to abrogate the principle of the struggle in Allah's Cause"jihad" from Islamic doctrine.' Mirza Ghulam Ahmad dared to announce that fighting was abrogated, although the True Lord says in His Noble Book, the Holy Quran: 'Fighting has been enjoined upon you while it is hateful to you.' (al-Baqara: 216)

With His infinite Power, Allah the Almighty respites but never neglects. Thus, the cholera epidemic came to India in 1908 to deal with Ghulam

Ahmad and brought his existence to an end, just as the True Lord says: 'Allah will bring forth (in place of them) a people He will love and who will love Him' (al-Ma'ida: 54).

In Persia, as well, the homeland of Salman Al-Farisi Allah be pleased with him a man emerged and claimed to be a prophet, and he was clever enough to attempt to associate himself with Islam only to turn against it later. The man said, 'I am the Door (Al-Bab), and after me the Mahdi will come.' When the people asked him what his teachings were, he said, 'I have come to make your religious responsibilities easier since Islam's responsibilities are no longer fitting for these times.' Some people followed him, and others rose up against him. Those who followed him did so because they wanted to make their religion easier, while those who opposed him were those whom Allah the Exalted loved and who loved Him. Scholars were brought to him to debate and argue with him, and he admitted that he was wrong and made public repentance in the Grand Mosque, whereupon his followers deserted him.

Then, others came and tempted this man to return to his misguidance and deception. A Russian consul in Paris took him in, gave him refuge, and convinced him to announce that his public repentance was only made to save him from execution. So, this 'Bab', whose real name was' 'Ali Muhammad Ash-Shirazi,(1) was able to disperse a great deal of propaganda, especially after a girl named Qurrat Al-'Ayn, who was known as 'The Pure One', joined his movement by giving a public speech. Anyone who reads this speech will recognise the profligacy which this 'Bab' preached. This woman announced that Islam's period as a religion had ended and that the Bab had gone into occultation for a while because he was awaiting a new sacred law. She also said that the world was going through a period of transformation. The new religion began to be 'revealed' to the Bab, and this assuming 'Pure One' said that the new law concerning women which had been revealed to the Bab was as follows:

Woman is a flower, created to be smelled and embraced,
So there is no punishment for the one who smells and embraces her.

---

(1) The story of 'Ali Muhammad Ash-Shirazi who claimed to be a prophet

And as long as woman is a flower, she can also be plucked, picked, and given to one's friends. At the end of the speech, she said, 'Do not veil your women from your friends!'

Those who wish to learn of the series of the moral outrages which Qurrat Al-'Ayn's speech contained may read the book 'Nuqtat Al-Kaf' by Al-Bab Al-Kashani, London, page 154. This is what the Bab brought after annulling Islam: 'Do not veil your women from your friends, for now there are no barriers or punishments. Take all that you can from life, for there is nothing after death.' This is the summary of the profligacy, which this so-called Bab (Door) brought. He declared that there shall be no Reckoning or Last Day and that the purpose of a woman is to be exposed, embraced, and smelled. It is beyond belief that some married couples followed him and called themselves 'religious'. They looked at the affair and considered that the licentiousness which the Bab brought was a religion, although his teachings facilitated corruption to it. They replaced responsibilities with profligacy, and then called it 'religion'!

This is what the enemies of Islam wanted to do to it, and the Russian imperial consul was the one who encouraged this man and protected him in the year 1261 AH. Despite this, the people of Persia sentenced him to death after a wave of fierce condemnation. No one could save him, so he was executed. Those who read the accounts of what he said before his execution will see how he abased himself, pleaded and wept. Had he truly been sent by the True Lord he would not have abased himself and pleaded for his life. Rather, he would have been filled with contentment and joy because he was on his way to Allah Glorified is He.

This charlatan knew the punishment for which he was heading, so he wept and begged for mercy. Once the Bab was killed, one of his followers, Mirza Husayn, announced that the 'scripture' which the Bab had brought and had called 'The Message' (Al-Bayan) was false. Also, Mirza Husayn Ali said that he had brought a scripture called 'The Most Holy' (Al-Aqdas), as though the whole thing were simply a matter of deceiving people, and then justifying this deception.

If we take a look at a book they call 'Bahjat As-Sudur' (The Heart's Delight) by Haydar ibn Ali Al-Baha'i, we will find that it contains every imaginable deviation. Al-Baha' said, 'Conceal your gold, your destination, and your religion.' This means you should not let people know how much wealth you possess, nor where you are going, nor that you are a Baha'i, otherwise, you might be killed. The Baha'is believe that the time of the Quran has ended and that 'The Most Holy' is a superior scripture to the Quran. This book 'The Most Holy' states that Jerusalem is the rightful home of Jews and solely for them and that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is the master of all prophets. This shows us that this man was a tool of the Zionist occupation. They held a party in Britain to honour him and gave him knighthood for his services to the colonial power.

Sheikh Rashid Rida, who documented the biography of Imam Mohammad Abdu, has mentioned a meeting with Baha'ullah in Beirut. As reported by Sheikh Rida, on the authority of Imam Mohammad Abdu, Baha'ullah used to perform the five daily prayers and attend the Friday Prayer like Muslims. When he was asked about the Baha'i movement, he said that it was an attempt to bring Shiites and Sunnis closer, to establish a common ground between them. The Ottoman State was about to bring Baha'ullah to trial, but a Russian consul intervened, and it was agreed that the man would only be exiled to Baghdad. He lived there for some time and then died; his son 'Abbas, who was known as 'Abd Al-Baha', presided over the Baha'i movement.

The movement started with a man who called himself the Bab. He wrote a book where he said, 'Anyone who claims to bring a new religion after my religion before a thousand years have passed will be cursed and deprived of mercy!' Only seven years had passed before a second man appeared; he called himself Baha'ullah and preached what he referred to as 'a new religion'. His son, 'Abd Al-Baha', was his vicegerent. 'Abd Al-Baha' was then succeeded by his son, Shawqi Effendi, who lived in Akko. Thus, their lies were exposed; and the current head of the Baha'i movement is a Jew named Peterson.

Modern apostasy from Islam does not spring from among Muslims; rather, it is instigated by anti-Islamic individuals who use people with atheistic tendencies and cunning thought to misrepresent the message of Islam. Centres have been established to call for such anti-Islamic beliefs in Belgium, America, and England. They have tried to infiltrate into Islamic societies to drag them into accepting their erroneous calls. Their ever-preferred trick has often been the issue of women, using it to attack and present Islam in the most untrue light. They accuse Islam of restricting the freedom of women, imprisoning them in their homes, and they make other similar accusations, all aiming to conceal the clear fact that Islam honours women. Ironically, I have heard a young Western woman saying, ‘I wish I were a Muslim woman and had a Muslim son.’

Let no Muslim be deceived by all this hype intended only to destroy the values of Islam which protect people and respect their feelings. These movements which creep into our societies are meant to distort the values of our religion. It is incumbent on our governments to deter those who conspire against Islam and not let anyone who can merely put sentences together speak about religion. Every Muslim is required—however he can—to refute and contest any beliefs alien to Allah’s religion. May Allah reward the judges of Egypt well for how they barred the way for such attacks and took an uncompromising stance to defend Islam! The country’s constitution states that Egypt is a Muslim country even though some laws are still to be issued or amended. Egypt’s judges, through their attitudes, gave an example worthy of emulation to prove that faith is what should govern the life and conduct of true Muslims even though some of the laws do not conform to the Islamic Law.

Whenever any of those malicious movements appears, we should remember the words of Allah: ‘You who believe, if any of you go back on your faith, Allah will soon replace you with people He loves and who love Him…’ (al-Ma’ida: 54). All of such movements which intend to defy Islam come to an end; Islam remains strong because of its followers whom Allah loves and who love Him. Allah makes Islam victorious by their hands, and He describes them as: ‘people who are humble towards the believers, hard on the disbelievers, and who strive in Allah’s way without fearing anyone’s reproach’ (al-Ma’ida: 54).

Allah ends this noble verse by saying: ‘Such is Allah’s favour. He grants it to whomever He wills. Allah has endless bounty and knowledge’ (al-Ma’ida: 54). Indeed, it is a favour from Allah; He loves them and has made them love Him, and they are humble towards the believers and hard towards the disbelievers. Thus, Allah has made them the bearers of the banner of His religion, and this is a great favour from Him. We should be aware that regardless of what or how many our good deeds are, Allah does not gain any benefit from them, for He the Exalted is the Giver of all that is good. He has brought us into this world that is so abundant in provision. The earth is so rich in minerals, metals, and sustenance; the sky is adorned with stars, the sun, sending warmth and heat, and the moon. All these are favours the Almighty Creator has bestowed upon His creatures.

Allah Glorified is He grants His favours to whomever He wills, and His Power is limitless—He is able to do anything. Therefore, a believer does not do Allah any favours by believing in Him, nor does it harm Allah in any way that some people do not believe in Him. He is absolutely able to bring forth people who will bear His Message. When falsehood rears its head, it means that the time when it will be uprooted is imminent, for scum and dross are always washed away, while that which benefits people remains on earth.

When Allah assigns a spiritual mission to the believers, the honour is from Him, not from the believers for accepting the mission; Allah bestows a favour on the believers when He chooses them for the mission of bearing His Message; all the benefits of such honour pass to the believers, and they are amply rewarded for their obedience. We know that 'favour' (fadl) means that something is given in excess to what is due and fair; Allah says: 'Say (Prophet), "In Allah's fadl (grace) and mercy let them rejoice; these are better than all they accumulate"' (Yunus: 58).

Every moral responsibility Allah gives to people constitutes a favour from Him, for He enjoins such responsibilities on us only for our own good, to set life to rights. So long as the Ordinance of Allah is for our own benefit, then it would be logical to think that we need not be rewarded for living up to its responsibilities. However, Allah does not want to charge His creatures with responsibilities, which they carry out with obedience and love, and then not reward them for that with the best of rewards. This is why He says: '…Say, "Do not consider your submission a favour to me; it is Allah Who has done you a favour, by guiding you to faith…"' (al-Hujurat: 17). So the favour is all His; He has guided us to faith and obedience and rewards us for that by making us lead good lives and granting us eternal happiness in the Hereafter.

'Say (Prophet), "In Allah's fadl (grace) and mercy let them rejoice; these are better than all they accumulate."' (Yunus: 58) Allah's bounty and grace know no bounds. Some might wonder, 'How come you say Allah's bounty has no bounds, whereas He says, 'that man will only have what he has worked towards; that his labour will be seen.' (an-Najm: 39-40)

Ponder this example: when a Muslim dies, we should observe the Funeral Prayer for him and implore Allah to grant him mercy and forgiveness. Those invocations earn well for the deceased, for Allah grants him mercy for his brothers' entreaties; and his brothers are also rewarded for doing good things to the deceased fellow Muslim as Allah commands them.

Now, the noble verse says, 'that man will only have what he has worked towards' (an-Najm: 39-40), so, has the deceased person worked for this reward he is given because of his brothers' invocations? Are such invocations his good deeds so that he may be rewarded for it? No. The fact that 'man will only have what he has worked towards' actually refers to justice, to the rightful reward one directly receives because of his deeds. However, this is not all that Allah gives His devoted servants; He does not treat them with justice, but with His grace and bounty. For example—and Allah is above all comparison—an employee may be told that he will be paid one hundred pounds, 'but then, at the end of the month, he receives one hundred and fifty. Justice consists in the fact that he receives his rightful wage of one hundred pounds, but the fifty pounds he is given in excess to the promised wage represent a token of generosity from his employer.

When Allah commands us to pray for a dead Muslim, this is a favour from Allah to the deceased person and to us as well; it is one of the ways He grants His favours to His servants. He the Exalted rewards everyone for his good deeds, not in proportion to such good deeds, but in excess. Through the prayers He commands us to offer for a deceased Muslim, He showers His mercy on that person and on those who pray as well. This is one of the meanings implied in His words: 'Say (Prophet), "In Allah's fadl (grace) and mercy let them rejoice: these are better than all they accumulate."' (Yunus: 58)

In fact, Allah's reward to His servant is always far greater than his good deed. What makes a believer offer prayers and invocations for a deceased believer is the bond of their faith in Islam, so a believer continues to belong to Islam and receive Allah's mercy on its account even after death: '…Such is Allah's favour. He grants it to whomever He wills. Allah has endless bounty and knowledge.' (al-Ma'ida: 54)

That is a favour from Allah extended to every believer, for Allah is Limitless and All Knowing. He says in a Qudsi Hadith, 'O My servants, if the earliest and latest of you and the human and jinn of you were to rise in one place and ask Me whatever they want, and I were to give to everyone what they ask, that would not decrease what I have any more than a needle decreases the sea when dipped into it. O My servants, it is only your deeds that I reckon for you and then recompense you for: so whoever finds the outcomes of his deeds good should be grateful to Allah, and whoever finds them otherwise should blame no one but himself.'(1)

Allah's stores are full and they never empty. His Power is infinite. He blesses whatever you do for Him, and for whatever you give, He gives you abundant reward. This applies to love. When your love for anyone stems from your love for Allah, He blesses this love and increases it. On the other hand, when love originates from a temporal cause, it will diminish one day when that cause is no more.

When love is for the sake of Allah, when one's love for others is out of his love for Him, it will last, for it stems from a cause that never ends. When love is based on desire or interest, it soon disappears when the desire is extinguished or the interest is fulfilled. Such worldly love is apt to increase so long as it receives the expected return from the loved ones. If no such return is received anymore, the relationship is seen as a loss by the one who offers this transient love. However, love that is only for the sake of Allah originates from an unending source, so it never decreases, for Allah blesses those whose love for each other is out of their love for Him. He is the All Knowing and Almighty who gives every one of His servants what he deserves. Allah says in the following verse:

(1) Cited by Muslim, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah

إِنَّمَا وَلِيُّكُمُ ٱللَّهُ وَرَسُولُهُۥ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱلَّذِينَ يُقِيمُونَ
ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَيُؤۡتُونَ ٱلزَّكَوٰةَ وَهُمۡ رَٰكِعُونَ ﴿٥٥﴾

Your true allies are God, His Messenger, and the believers – those who keep up the prayer, pay the prescribed alms, and bow down in worship [55]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 55)

Allah forbids us from taking the Jews and Christians as allies, which necessarily implies that this prohibition extends to all those who harbour enmity to Islam. Allah the Exalted and Almighty is Sufficient for us. He, His Messenger (Muhammad), and the believers are our allies. Not only because they are enemies, but rather, assistance should not be sought from those who are helpless—and such are all mortals; rather, we should take refuge with the One Who is Omnipotent. Our enemy might pretend hypocritically to offer us help. Allah has forbidden us from making His enemies our allies to free us from depending on their limited help; He calls us to rely on Him whose Power never comes to an end.

The original Arabic text of the verse uses the word innama (only) which denotes 'restriction' or 'limitation'. For example, if someone says, 'The only generous one is Zayd', it is like saying 'Zayd is generous, and no one but Zayd is generous,' and the two clauses have been made into a single clause. This is a statement that affirms that Zayd possesses generosity and negates that anyone else does. If we only say, 'Zayd is generous,' this does not exclude the possibility that other people might be generous, too.

Allah makes it clear where the believers should seek assistance: 'Your true allies are Allah, His Messenger, and the believers…' (al-Ma'ida: 55). He reassures the believers before forbidding them from taking the people of the Book as allies. If the disbelievers had affection for the believers and eagerness to help them fulfil their spiritual mission, they would not remain disbelievers then! They would be ready then to embrace faith since they are ready to assist its people.

The fact that a disbeliever remains a disbeliever proves that his heart has not received guidance, so how can he help a believer with regard to his faith?

The people of the Book cannot be trusted since they have distorted the Scriptures which were revealed to their Prophets and concealed whatever news they contained of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. How, then, can they give aid to a Muslim? He cannot give assistance to the people of faith because he has not accepted faith himself. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'neither trust the people of the Book (in what they say regarding religion) nor accuse them of lying (in everything they say; some of it might be true). (Only) say, "We believe in Allah, what He has sent down to us and what He has sent down to you." This is because the one who cannot guide himself certainly cannot guide others.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him forbade us from trusting what the people of the Book say; he knew they strayed into deviation and misguidance. They mixed the truth with falsehood and harboured fierce hatred against those who had attained faith. This is why Prophet Muhammad forbade us from asking them about religion. They might give a truthful answer, which we deny as falsehood, or they may lie, and we believe what they say is true. Therefore, it is not right or appropriate for a Muslim to ask the people of the Book about religion because the result is either one of these two: he may believe a lie or deny a truth. The people of the Book actually argued with one another, as Allah tells us: 'The Jews say, "The Christians have no ground whatsoever to stand on", and the Christians say, "The Jews have no ground whatsoever to stand on"…' (al-Baqara: 113).

Whom of the two should we believe? Should we believe what the Jews say about the Christians or what the Christians say about the Jews? We can neither believe nor deny what either of them says. We should understand that when Allah has forbidden us from taking any allies but Him, He would never leave us, as believers, without any helper. He only forbade us from seeking alliance from those who cannot possibly be sincere in helping us.

In the English translation of the verse, the plural noun' allies' is used, but the original Arabic text uses the word wali (ally) which is the singular form. Why does Allah use a singular word when it refers to Allah, His Messenger and the believers? Here is the answer. Is the help that Prophet Muhammad gives separate from the help of Allah? Is the help that the believers give separate from what is given by Allah and His Messenger? No, because all help comes from Allah; the Messenger's assistance is not separated from his Lord's, nor is the believers' assistance separated from the Messenger's peace and blessings be upon him. All are comprised in one thing. Allah says, addressing the believers: 'Your true allies are Allah, His Messenger and the believers…' (al-Ma'ida: 55). This means that Allah is the Helper of Prophet Muhammad and the believers; Prophet Muhammad is the helper of the believers and the believers are helpers of one another, as Allah says: 'The believers, both men and women, support each other…' (at-Tawba: 71). Such is the protection and support Allah grants to the believers, who should also offer protection and support to one another.

People are subject to vicissitudes, so a believer is not always in a position where he can give advice. Sometimes you can give advice, but other times you are the one who needs it. You may falter in a certain aspect of religion; therefore your fellow believer offers you advice so that you may correct yourself. That fellow believer may falter in a certain aspect of religion, too, and then it will be your turn to offer advice so that he too may correct himself. The One Who has created humankind knows them best; He knows they are subject to change, and each has his weaknesses and strengths. Therefore, He commands the believers: '…urge one another to the truth, and urge one another to steadfastness' (al-'Asr: 3). Why does Allah command us to urge one another to the truth? The path of the truth is difficult to follow; those who commit to it encounter difficulties caused by people of falsehood. Therefore, people who follow the truth must support and urge one another to remain steadfast and be ready to sacrifice every precious thing for the cause of Allah. Whatever we do and say must spell the truth. The believers have to seek a reminder through what happened to others and see how they were patient. This is how the believers should support one another. This is what this verse means: 'The believers, both men and women, support each other…' (at-Tawba: 71). Therefore, the verse we are dealing with teaches us to seek protection and assistance from Allah Who possesses absolute Power. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'If anyone (of you, o believers) relieves a distress of a believer in this world, Allah will relieve for him a distress in the Afterlife. If anyone protects a believer from being exposed (due to a slip he has done or an affliction that has befallen him), Allah will protect him from being exposed both in this life and the Afterlife. Allah helps His servant as long as he helps his brother.'(1)

And how can you help your brother? It is through offering him assistance, support, and advice, and through spending of your time, energy, power, and wealth to help him. Do not begrudge him your time; do not think you have wasted your time while you were helping him and you could have accomplished more for yourself if you had not helped. All your time, wealth, and energy have been given by Allah, and you do not do anything by your own power, but by His. When you dedicate some of your limited power to others, He, Who possesses unlimited Power, will compensate you. He will help you as you have helped your brother. If you want Allah to be on your side, extend help to others. In doing so, a believer ascends to the highest level of sagacity.

So Allah says: 'Your true allies are Allah, His Messenger and the believers– those who keep up the prayer...' (al-Ma'ida: 55). He the Exalted and Almighty wants to show us the qualities of the believers, for when we become acquainted with the nature of faith and attributes of its followers, we can distinguish the believers from the disbelievers. The most prominent attribute of those who have faith in Allah is their constant observance of salat (prayer) which constitutes a renewed declaration of one's allegiance to Allah five times every day. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Islam is based on five tenets: the testimony that there is no deity, but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, observance of salat (prayer), paying zakat (obligatory alms), Fasting in Ramadan and performing Pilgrimage to the House (of Mecca) for whoever can afford the journey.'(2)

These five tenets form the foundation on which Islam is built—but a house is not built with foundations alone. Other elements are required to make the building stand firmly. A believer is required only once in his life to testify that there is no deity but Allah and that Muhammad is His Messenger. Mandatory salat is observed five times daily, which takes but a little portion of the day. Obligatory Alms are paid only by the able, and even those who are enjoined to give it only have to do so once a year. Mandatory fasting is enjoined only in the month of Ramadan, but even a sick person, a traveller or anyone who has one of the prescribed excuses, is permitted not to fast then and make up for that later, when the excuse is no more. Furthermore, a sick person who does not expect to be cured may give charity in lieu of fasting, and so may the elderly who could be put at risk by fasting. As to hajj (Pilgrimage to the Sacred House of Mecca), it is enjoined only once in one's life and only on those who can afford to make the journey (in terms of expenses, physical strength, etc.).

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim in Al-Iman, Ahmad 2/26, 93, Al-Hamidi and At-Tabarani

Those are the tenets of Islam, and there are particular circumstances where the believer may be excused from observing them, but the exception is the salat (prayer); no one may be excused from observing it regularly. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'The head (the most important part) of the matter is Islam, and salat (prayer) is its pillar.'(1) He also said, 'What is between a person and disbelief is the abandonment of salat (prayer).'(2) He also said, 'the pact between me and them is the salat (prayer): whoever abandons it has thus forsaken faith.'(3)

No Muslim is excused from abandoning salat. Whoever cannot stand up may observe it while sitting; if he cannot, he may observe it while lying down. One may even observe salat by nodding; he may perform the prescribed movements with his head only. If one is unable even to move his head, he may observe salat with his eyes. In case of total paralysis that one cannot even move his eyes to perform the movements of salat, he may observe salat in his mind. Only if one loses consciousness, is he excused from observing salat (prayer).

Allah further describes the attributes of the believers by saying: '…the believers– those who keep up the prayer, pay the prescribed alms...' (al-Ma'ida: 55). Paying zakat, or the obligatory alms, is the act of using the fruits of your work to help others, to share your gains with the weak and needy. This exertion is a sign of your faith, since you give a portion of the fruits of your effort for the sake of complying with Allah's Commands. Allah ends the verse by saying: '…and bow down in worship' (al-Ma'ida: 55). Does this mean the physical act of bowing that we perform in the salat (prayer)? Is the word raki'un (bowing down) only used figuratively as the submission to Allah? Were these words revealed in a specific event and therefore carry a specific meaning? It has been narrated that 'Abdullah ibn Salam Allah be pleased with him went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'The people of Qurayzha and An-Nadir have abandoned us and sworn that they will never even sit with us, and we cannot reach your Companions as we live so far from them. 'Abdullah complained about the way the Jews treated him(1), so Allah revealed this verse to His Messenger: 'Your true allies are Allah, His Messenger and the believers–those who keep up the prayer, pay the prescribed alms and bow down in worship.' (al-Ma'ida: 55) Ibn Salam hence said, 'We are content to have Allah, His Messenger and the believers as our helpers.' Another version of this narration adds that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to his mosque as people were bowing and prostrating in salat (prayer). Then, a man went into the mosque and asked for charity but no one gave him anything. The man said, 'O Allah, bear witness that I have come to the mosque of the Messenger of Allah and asked for charity, but no one gave me anything!' Companion 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb Allah be pleased with him heard him say that as he was observing salat (prayer), so he stretched out his hand where the man could see it and then take the ring he was wearing from his hand as charity, so the man took it. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked the man if anyone had given him anything, and the man said, 'Yes, a ring', and pointed to 'Ali ibn Abu Taleb. As related, it was on that occasion that the verse was revealed: 'Your true allies are Allah, His Messenger and the believers– those who keep up the prayer, pay the prescribed alms, and bow down in worship.' (al-Ma'ida: 55) (The Arabic text of the verse can also be rendered as '... who…pay the obligatory alms as they bow down in worship', which is appropriate for this version of the narration.)

(1) Companion Abdullah ibn Salam had been a Jew from Banu Qaynuqa' before converting to Islam (reviewer's note)

Usually, yarka' (bow down) means to submit. In the verse, it refers to submission to Allah by obeying His commands. If we say, 'So-and-so raka'a (literally, 'bowed down') to that person', this is a figurative usage of the word which here means 'to surrender'. Allah the Exalted and Almighty says:

وَمَن يَتَوَلَّ ٱللَّهَ وَرَسُولَهُۥ وَٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ فَإِنَّ حِزۡبَ ٱللَّهِ هُمُ ٱلۡغَٰلِبُونَ ٥٦

Those who turn for protection to God, His Messenger, and the believers [are God's party]: God's party is sure to triumph [56] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 56)

In the previous verse, Allah says, 'Your allies are Allah, His Messenger and the believers…' (al-Ma'ida: 55), and in this verse, 'And whosoever takes Allah, His Messenger, and those who have believed, as Protectors…' (al-Ma'ida: 56) Thus, on the one hand, Allah grants His protection and support to the believers, and on the other hand, the believers should seek protection and support from Allah. This lays the general rule that Allah protects those who take Him as a Protector, just as He loves those who love Him, '…people whom He loves and who love Him…' (al-Ma'ida: 54). This makes clear the issue of Allah's support. To Him belongs the omnipotent Power that has no limits; He can bestow it on all His servants, but He assists with it those who struggle for His cause, as He says: '…If you help (the cause of) Allah, He will help you…' (Muhammad: 7).

The two verses together explain how Allah helps His servant. He is the Ally of those who ally themselves with Him, His Messenger, Muhammad, and the believers, and He ends the verse by the general statement: '…the hizb (party) of Allah will be the victorious.' (al-Ma'ida: 56)

The word hizb means a group of people who come together for a particular cause. People would not unite their powers and thoughts for a cause unless they have agreed that it is a good thing. What about a group of people who unite for the cause of Allah? They must be the victorious party. It was the custom of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that, 'If anything hazabahu (occupied his thought), he would hasten to observe salat (prayer).'(1)

Prophet Muhammad thus taught us that whenever a matter concerns us, we should turn to Allah and seek Him as an Ally and Protector, while we exhaust all the possible means we have in our hands. We should take our guidance from the teachings of the Prophet; he was never concerned for transient worldly matters, but his main concern was delivering the Message of Allah to people. He turned to Him at times of hardship to implore His support. He stood before Allah to observe salat (Prayer) whenever he faced a difficult matter and declare that his means were exhausted and that he could not face that difficulty without His assistance. Thus, Allah always granted him victory over all difficulties. If we do the same whenever something is hard on us, we will find Him there.

When the believer's means do not avail him, and he has expended all his effort on something but in vain, he should hasten to observe salat (prayer), and Allah will dispose his affairs in the best way. When you have exhausted all means and get no result, turn to the Creator of all means: Allah the Exalted and Almighty. However, it does not befit a believer to sit back, do nothing and just implore Allah does everything for him. Allah has created means and causes; these are His Hand outstretched for His servants and we are commanded to employ them for achieving our ends. If you do not use those means and causes, then you have rejected Allah's Hand, so how then can you implore His help and expect to be answered? While you exhaust all possible means, turn to the Creator of all means: 'Who is it that answers the distressed when they call upon Him? Who removes their suffering? Who makes you successors in the earth? Is it another god beside Allah? Little notice you take!' (an-Naml: 62) Glory is to Him who relieves the distressed and has no partners in His dominion; He says: 'Say, "No one in the heavens or on earth knows the unseen except Allah." They do not know when they will be raised from the dead.' (an-Naml: 65)

Someone may say, 'I call on Allah, but He does not answer me.' Perhaps you have not yet used all the means at your disposal. You must struggle and persevere first; you must do your best, while you pray to Allah to help you. Only when there is nothing you can do you can just pray to Him, and He will respond to you.

So long as Allah tells us that His party will be the victorious, we should take it as an unquestionable fact. This verse makes a plain statement of fact: ‘And whosoever takes Allah, His Messenger, and those who have believed, as Protectors, then the party of Allah will be the victorious.’ (al-Ma’ida: 56) Allah Glorified is He knows all that exists in His creation, and no Quranic statement of fact can ever contradict an actual fact of the universe. Why then do we see the believers sometimes defeated? If you see people who are apparently’ the party of Allah’, yet they are not victorious, know that they have deceived themselves and deceived people into thinking that they are on the Straight Path when actually they are not, for Allah says: ‘And the ones who support Our cause will be the winners.’ (as-Saffat: 173)

This is a statement of fact Allah makes in the Quran. Muslims are granted victory against the enemies of religion when they truly take Allah as their Ally. If they are afflicted with defeat, it means they are not truly ‘the party of Allah’. We have a clear example of this from the life of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. At the Battle of Uhud, he commanded the archers to stay in a particular position. Seeing that the believers were on the cusp of defeating the disbelievers and were starting to claim the battle spoils, the archers went down to get their share. They thus disobeyed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who had commanded them, ‘Even if you see the birds snatch us up, do not move until I send for you. Even if you see that we have defeated our enemy, do not move until I send for you.’(1) When they disobeyed the command of Prophet Muhammad, were they truly the party of Allah who fought for His cause? No; they were heedless then; they were distracted from their sublime end by worldly gains. The fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was with them did not suspend Allah’s practice with His servants. Had they been victorious despite their disobedience of Prophet Muhammad, they would not have taken his commands seriously ever after. Allah Glorified is He wanted them to experience the pain of temporary defeat in order to discipline them and teach them to always hold fast to the commands of His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. That temporary defeat was for the good of all Muslims: victory on that occasion would tempt all into persisting in disobedience. Allah says in the following verse:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تَتَّخِذُواْ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّخَذُواْ دِينَكُمۡ هُزُوٗا وَلَعِبٗا مِّنَ ٱلَّذِينَ
أُوتُواْ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ مِن قَبۡلِكُمۡ وَٱلۡكُفَّارَ أَوۡلِيَآءَۚ وَٱتَّقُواْ ٱللَّهَ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤۡمِنِينَ ﴿٥٧﴾

You who believe, do not take as allies those who ridicule your religion and make fun of it – whether people who were given the Scripture before you, or disbelievers – and be mindful of God if you are true believers [57] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 57)

The way in which the people of the Book mocked the people of truth was a kind of antithetical reaction. When irreligious people see a devout person who observes salat (prayer), transcends mundane desires like chasing women, displaying high morality, etc., they may laugh at him to mislead him into thinking he is in the wrong. They would love to dissuade him from the Straight Path so that he would follow them.

Suppose a man, even though persistent in evildoing himself, had an impious friend, and that friend asked his sister's hand in marriage, would he marry her off to him? Even though they are friends and equally corrupt, he would reject the proposal and would rather give his sister in marriage to a righteous man. He would not deceive himself. He would not trust his impious friend with his own sister; he must know his friend too well for that!

Moral values remain the same. When a person who adheres to the truth meets with people who follow falsehood, they would spare no effort to mislead him. Desirous to persist in their own corrupt ways, they would at least mock him to shake his faith and lead him astray. Wrongdoers like to entice others into the same trap; a drug addict would like all people to be like him and have nobody to tell him he was in the wrong. The Creator of all beings, the One Who knows them best, tells us about this in the Quran: 'The wicked used to laugh at the believers— they would wink at one another when the believers passed by them, joke about them when they got back to their own People' (al-Mutaffifin: 29-31). They would not only mock the believers, but they would accuse them of being misguided: 'and say, when they saw them, “These people are misguided,” though they were not sent to be their keepers.’ (al-Mutaffifin: 32-33) What will be their requital on the Day of Resurrection? Allah says: ‘So, today the believers are laughing at the disbelievers as they sit on couches, gazing around. Have the disbelievers (not) been repaid for their deeds?’ (al-Mutaffifin: 34-36) Will Allah not claim for the believers their right? Yes, He will. So beware of trusting those who mock religion, make a jest of those who act upon it, and hypocritically claim to have faith. Allah has already warned us: ‘O you who have attained to faith! Do not take the Jews and the Christians for your allies: they are but allies of one another…’ (al-Ma’ida: 51).

In the verse we are dealing with, He warns us against taking as ally whoever mocks Allah’s religion, and He ends the verse by saying: ‘…be mindful of Allah if you are true believers’ (al-Ma’ida: 57). Faith should make its followers alert. Do not take the Jews and Christians as allies, or those who falsely claim to be believers, seeking to gain the benefits Islam offers, and the rights it guarantees, whereas faith has not entered their hearts. Mindfulness of Allah is to embrace His religion and guard it against the cunningness of its enemies who try to deceive the believers by affecting their faith. Allah says in the following verse:

وَإِذَا نَادَيْتُمْ إِلَى ٱلصَّلَوٰةِ ٱتَّخَذُوهَا هُزُوًا وَلَعِبًا ۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّهُمْ قَوْمٌ لَّا يَعْقِلُونَ ﴿٥٨﴾

When you make the call to prayer, they ridicule it and make fun of it: this is because they are people who do not reason [58] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 58)

It is worthy of mention that this noble verse proves that the practice of adhan (the Call to Prayer) has been legislated by the Quran. This is an argument against those who say that adhan was legislated by Prophet Muhammad and that this verse only endorses the legislation.’ When you make the call to prayer (salat), they ridicule it and make fun of it...’ (al-Ma’ida: 58). When they heard the adhan, they would say, ‘They are crying out like donkeys!’ Allah says, describing their conduct: ‘…this is because they are people who do not reason’ (al-Ma’ida: 58). Reason is what makes one choose between alternatives; it is the process of weighing pros and cons and making the best choice.

Caprice is what spoils reason and dazzles it into making a wrong choice. It is what leads a person astray. Therefore, a true believer must let the check of reason withhold the reckless impulse of caprice. The Arabic word for 'reason' is 'aql which is derived from the same root of 'iqal which means the cord used for tying a camel's feet so it cannot bolt. Reason should be employed to restrain caprice, not to justify it. When one's thoughts are devoid of reason, they only allow caprice to dominate behaviour. It is through reason that one realizes that serving caprices is only a waste of one's life. Death comes suddenly, and what benefit can one have then by pursuing desires and whims? Most people now do not live longer than a hundred years. The end of the world is, to you, the day when death comes. Allah conceals the time when each will meet his end so that everyone may continue to persevere in worship, so long as he does not know when he meets his Lord. It can be at any moment. Those who use their reason thus sacrifice transient worldly pleasures for the sake of the Hereafter. If the disbelievers use their reason, they will realise that by taking this stance against faith and submission to Allah, they are only sacrificing eternal peace by their defiance of their Creator. Allah then says:

قُلْ يَٰٓأَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ هَلْ تَنقِمُونَ مِنَّآ إِلَّآ أَنْ ءَامَنَّا بِٱللَّهِ وَمَآ
أُنزِلَ إِلَيْنَا وَمَآ أُنزِلَ مِن قَبْلُ وَأَنَّ أَكْثَرَكُمْ فَٰسِقُونَ ٥٩

Say [Prophet], 'People of the Book, do you resent us for any reason other than the fact that we believe in God, in what has been sent down to us, and in what was sent before us, while most of you are disobedient?' [59]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 59)

The word 'Say' here is addressed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When Allah addresses His Messenger, He is also addressing all the believers, so we must also say: '…People of the Book, do you resent us for any reason other than the fact that we believe in Allah, in what has been sent down to us, and in what was sent before us, while most of you are disobedient?' (al-Ma'ida: 59) Why do the people of the Book resent the believers? Is faith something to be hated by followers of the previous messages which actually came from the same source?! Here, Allah Glorified is He poses a question which they are unable to answer. We, Muslims, believe in Allah, His Messengers, what He has revealed to us and what He had revealed before, so what is in all that to arouse resentment? Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told the Jews that he and those who follow him believe in Allah and His Messengers—including Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him son of Maryam (Mary) Allah be pleased with her—so they were severely enraged! Why do the people of the Book hate the fact that Muslims believe in Allah?

An example of this is when someone invites you to do something impious or to go an obscene place, and then you refuse, so he hates you for it. So you say to him, ‘Do you hate that I am upright in my behaviour?’ We know that an honest man is a treasure to those who know him. A harmful thing is what deserves to be hated. As for faith in Allah, it is a praiseworthy thing because it teaches one how to have good conduct with all of creatures. Religion commands us to protect the dignity of others, not to transgress against their property and lives, not to backbite them, to reject bribery, to be sincere in one’s work, to keep one’s promises, etc. What is it about religion that deserves to be hated?! When one’s hatred of another stems from the fact that the latter is good and righteous, this is illogical and unjustifiable since what causes his hatred should actually have inspired his love. Imagine someone telling you, ‘There is nothing to fault in such person except that he is chivalrous’; is this a flaw?! It is as though the speaker searched his mind to find fault with the person he were speaking about yet it was in vain, so he would criticize his merits. In fact, this is only praising that person! That reminds me of a mechanism in Arabic rhetoric where one praises someone or something through apparent dispraise. Someone might say, ‘There is nothing to fault in such person except that…’, and when you hear this you expect that what comes next will be an unpleasant attribute, and then you are surprised to hear a praiseworthy trait. This is real praise.

So Allah says: ‘Say (Prophet), “People of the Book, do you resent us for any reason other than the fact that we believe in Allah, in what has been sent down to us, and in what was sent before us, while most of you are disobedient?”’ (al-Ma’ida: 59) You say, O people of the Book that you believe in the Torah; then you should be aware of how faith disciplines souls and protects them from evil, for you have experienced faith. You have believed in Allah and His Messengers until Musa (Moses), but you rejected 'Isa (Jesus); Muslims believe in Allah, what He has revealed to them (the Quran) and all His Messengers, including Musa, 'Isa and Muhammad, so what is there to hate in that?! Hating the believers only on account of their faith only proves that the issue of faith is unclear in their minds. It means faith is not truly established in their consciousness. They not only hate the believers, but they show disrespect for Allah by ascribing to Him attributes of imperfection, saying: '…Until we see Allah face to face…' (al-Baqara: 55), '…Allah is poor while we are rich…' (Al-'Imran: 181) and: '…Allah's hand is shackled…' (al-Ma'ida: 64).

This tells they only hate the fact that Muslims believe in Allah in the way that befits His perfection, for they failed to attain correct faith in Him. Besides, if they truly believed in the Scriptures revealed to them, they would not have distorted them; if they truly believed in Allah, they would have believed in every Messenger He sent, including 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. No one of sound disposition would hate true faith which proves that their dispositions have been corrupted. O people of the Book, if you hate the followers of faith, what power do you have over them? You do not have the power to harm them, but if Allah hates you, He has absolute Power to avenge us against you. So your hatred of us is worthless, and what business of yours is it that we are believers?

For argument's sake, we say to the people of the Book: Even supposing that your hatred of us could avail you anything, and you had the ability to harm us, you will incur a worse outcome for your attitude anyway; namely, Allah's punishment. We do not need to mind your hatred of us, but you should consider what you will face when Allah hates you, for He is Able to do everything. Thus, even if you could do us any harm, the harm you do to yourselves by incurring Allah's hatred is much greater, so it is a losing bargain you are making.

This is why Allah says in the following verse:

قُلْ هَلْ أُنَبِّئُكُم بِشَرٍّ مِّن ذَٰلِكَ مَثُوبَةً عِندَ ٱللَّهِ ۚ مَن لَّعَنَهُ ٱللَّهُ وَغَضِبَ عَلَيْهِ وَجَعَلَ مِنْهُمُ
ٱلْقِرَدَةَ وَٱلْخَنَازِيرَ وَعَبَدَ ٱلطَّٰغُوتَ ۚ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ شَرٌّ مَّكَانًا وَأَضَلُّ عَن سَوَآءِ ٱلسَّبِيلِ ﴿٦٠﴾

Say, 'Shall I tell you who deserves a worse punishment from God than (The one you wish upon] us? Those God distanced from Himself, was angry with, and condemned as apes and pigs, and those who worship idols: they are worse in rank and have strayed further from the right path [60] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 60)

For argument's sake, let us suppose that your plot against us, O people of the Book, could bring on us evil consequences. Know then that what awaits you is far worse: the punishment which Allah has in store for you. This supposition, furthermore, is only for argument's sake; it is like when Allah commanded Prophet Muhammad to tell his opponents: '…either we (who believe in Him) or you (who deny His Oneness) are on the right path or have clearly gone astray!' (Saba': 24) Allah's Messenger is undoubtedly on the right path, and his opponents have undoubtedly gone astray, but Allah commanded him to say so just for argument's sake; it is meant to call his opponents to reflect on the Message which if they do, they will find that Islam is the right path and that they are the party that has gone astray. Thus, this is not an implicit acknowledgement that those who have rejected the call of Prophet Muhammad may be rightly guided. It is only a call on which to reflect. Allah ended the previous verse by saying: '…while most of you are disobedient' (al-Ma'ida: 59). This is a reference to the fact that few of them probably consider accepting Islam. Therefore, Allah would never make a generalization that all of the people of the Book are disobedient; He gives an opportunity to those who probably think of embracing true faith.

In the verse, the news of their punishment comes: 'Say, "Shall I tell you who deserves a worse punishment from Allah than (the one you wish upon) us…"'? (al-Ma'ida: 60) So there is something even more harmful in store for you; namely, Allah's rejection, for it was not right for you to hate us on account of our faith '... Those Allah distanced from Himself, was angry with, and condemned as apes and pigs…' (al-Ma'ida: 60). Is that all? Is this all the punishment they get? No. This is apparently meant to give them hope of receiving Allah's Mercy—after incurring those punishments. However, Allah deprives them of this false hope of deliverance, as when He says about them: '…announce to them a painful torment.' (Al-'Imran: 21) In this manner, Allah means to let them entertain a false hope of being forgiven, and then gives them news of what they should actually expect, which makes the admonition more painful.

This is like a prisoner who asks for a cup of water, so the guard brings him a cup of water and moves it close to his mouth then pours the water on the ground. His action first instils hope in the soul of the prisoner that he would drink, so when he pours the water on the ground, this torments and devastates the prisoner. If the guard simply refused his request for water, the prisoner would simply despair which is 'one of the two reliefs. We notice the same thing when a man waits for the verdict of his execution or acquittal, and this period of waiting is filled with anxiety. And when they weigh this man, they find that he is losing weight; but once he has been sentenced to death, he begins to gain weight because despair is one of the two reliefs. So the expansion and contraction of the soul is the toughest and cruellest thing it can experience; this is why the True Lord says: 'Give them tidings of a painful punishment.' (Al-'Imran: 21) Mention of glad tidings causes the soul to expand, but then it is followed by contraction.

Another example is found when the True Lord says: 'And if they call for relief, they will be relieved with water like murky oil, which scalds (their) faces.' (al-Kahf: 29) That is, they will be tormented in such a way as will make them beg for water, and then they will be given water which, instead of saving them, will make their torment even worse. And here, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Say, "Shall I inform you of (what is) worse than that as penalty from Allah?"' (al-Ma'ida: 60)

The word worse here is a comparative; yet this does not mean that the believers are in a bad state as well; rather, it is a case of going along with the rival and supposing that what he says is correct, just for argument's sake. Yet, the thing which is 'worse' is expressed in Allah's saying: '(It is that of) those whom Allah has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs and slaves of Taghut. Those are worse in position and further astray from the sound way.' (al-Ma'ida: 60)

Why is the fate of those people so bad? Because they hate the conduct of the believers and could not give vent to the rancour in their hearts by punishing the believers; but Allah hates them, and He is very much able to punish them. Their fate will be as the True Lord describes: ‘those whom Allah has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs.’ (al-Ma’ida: 60) Rejection means that Allah dismissed them from His mercy, and this means that they were denied anything that is good.

An example to illustrate this—and Allah is beyond compare—When a servant works for a man who pays for his lodgings, food and clothing, yet this servant does not fulfil the rights of service properly, his master will not be pleased with him and will dismiss him from his job. And when the employer dismisses his servant, he will tell everyone that this servant did not do his job properly, and no one will ever hire him again. This is ‘condemnation’, and thus we see the difference between being dismissed from mercy alone without being punished, as opposed to the condemnation continuing so that the reason for the dismissal is announced publicly. This means that after dismissing them, Allah sent His condemnation and wrath upon them, so that His rejection of them would never be revoked.

Allah the Exalted announces to the people of the Book: ‘My dismissal of you from My mercy, and My continued condemnation of you, is a mighty evil.’ As we know, Allah’s condemnation has consequences in every aspect of life. He would prevent guidance from finding their hearts by sealing them so that faith cannot enter and disbelief cannot leave; or He would turn them into apes and pigs. And if we ask where their descendants are, the answer is that they did not procreate after they were transformed, but rather, they were transformed and made to be seen in their transformed state, and then they were caused to die.

Are we to suppose they were the ones who violated the Sabbath, or who worshipped the golden calf or those who disbelieved after the table of ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was sent down? They are all of those. Or the meaning of ‘apes’ here is that they have the attributes of apes, such as frivolity, quick movements and nakedness; or their characters and natures are like that of pigs, for they are as filthy and malodorous as a pig; and one notable character of a pig is that it does not jealously guard its female, this is also the case with some of them; it has become prevalent amongst them to send their daughters into prostitution, besides other evil acts.

Given this understanding, it would either entail a literal transformation took place, which would not have continued to exist but would have been confined to a specific time so that people would see them transformed after which they would die and it would be over; or their conduct is like the conduct of apes and pigs.

The True Lord continues: ‘and slaves of Taghut.’ Worship means obedience to what is worshipped in all that it commands and forbids; and the ‘Taghut’ refers to those who beautify evil, hypocrisy, and the consumption of foulness and sin. And their fate is, as the True Lord says: ‘those are worse in position and further astray from the sound way.’ And indeed this is the reality in which they live, which is pure evil, and they do not even consider crossing over to the right path.

And when we read the verse in full, we know that they are in a state of heedlessness of the way of true guidance because’ sound way’ means the paved way which leads directly to the goal. The roads of the Arabs would lead either across sand or between mountains, and they would always walk in the middle of the road so that they would not be harmed by unstable sands which could cause them to slip and fall down steep banks, or by rocks falling from mountains which could land on them. That is why the True Lord said: ‘A speaker among them will say, Indeed, I had a companion (on earth), Who would say, Are you indeed of those who believe That when we have died and become dust and bones, we will indeed be recompensed? He will say, would you (care to) look? And he will look and see him in the midst of the Hellfire.’ (as-Saffat: 51-55) That is, he will be in the middle of the fire.

And the True Lord then says, about those who have incurred His wrath:

وَإِذَا جَآءُوكُمۡ قَالُوٓاْ ءَامَنَّا وَقَد دَّخَلُواْ بِٱلۡكُفۡرِ وَهُمۡ قَدۡ خَرَجُواْ بِهِۦۚ وَٱللَّهُ أَعۡلَمُ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَكۡتُمُونَ ﴿٦١﴾

When they come to you [believers], they say, ‘We believe,’ but they come disbelieving and leave disbelieving – God knows best what they are hiding [61] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 61)

These are the ones who mock the religion and make a jest of it. When they come to the believers, they harbour disbelief; and when they sat with the Messenger of Allah, they would depart the gathering with the same disbelief. That is, disbelief remained with them when they came and when they left, and it is as though the time they spent with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him did not avail them anything. It was possible that a man could go to Him as a disbeliever and sit with him, and later be touched by guidance in the course of sitting with him, and so leave as a believer.

An example of this is Fudala ibn ‘Umayr Al-Layth who came to assassinate the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him in the year of the Conquest of Mecca. When the Messenger of Allah passed by Fudala, he said: ‘What were you thinking to yourself?’ He said, ‘Nothing, I was invoking Allah.’ So the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said: ‘I ask Allah to forgive you.’ And He placed his hand on Fudala’s chest; and later on, Fudala said: ‘By Allah, by the time he removed his hand from my chest, there was no one on the face of the earth more beloved to me than him.’(1)

He was touched by guidance, and thus he came with disbelief but left with the deepest of faith. These people, on the contrary, came with disbelief and left with the same, as though they only came out of hypocrisy—this is indicated by the True Lord’s words: ‘And Allah is most knowing of what they were concealing.’ This indicates that they were hypocrites in claiming to have faith when actually they harboured disbelief all along. What ‘they would conceal’ was that their coming to the Messenger of Allah was out of pure hypocrisy. This was a specific trait of those who said that they had attained faith, when actually they only entered Islam hypocritically because their disbelief was settled firmly in their hearts and could not be shaken. The repetition of the pronoun’ they’ in the words of the True Lord is to refer specifically to their disbelieving nature. In other words, it is as though their action of coming in a state of disbelief and leaving in the same state was something inevitable; therefore, the True Lord exposes them: ‘Allah is most knowing of what they were concealing.’ The superlative form ‘most knowing,’ implies that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knew they were hypocrites because of the illuminations and insights Allah has given him. But the Messenger of Allah’s knowledge did not reach the level of the True Lord’s, for Allah’s knowledge is intrinsic, whereas His Messenger's knowledge was a grace from Him. So the True Lord's words 'most knowing' do not deny that some people might have known that they were hypocrites. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was well aware that they were hypocrites, and Allah was fully aware of what they were concealing. To conceal means to suppress one's true emotions so that they are not visible to others. And to attempt to conceal is not a natural thing to do because it requires force. Their disbelief was close to revealing itself, so they would try to conceal it by doing their best not to be exposed; but nothing can escape Allah's knowledge.

(1) Narrated by Ibn ‘Abd Al-Barr in (Ad-Durar) and Ibn Hajar in (Al-Isaba)

The True Lord then says:

وَتَرَىٰ كَثِيرًا مِّنْهُمْ يُسَٰرِعُونَ فِي ٱلْإِثْمِ وَٱلْعُدْوَٰنِ
وَأَكْلِهِمُ ٱلسُّحْتَ ۚ لَبِئْسَ مَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿٦٢﴾

You [Prophet] see many of them rushing into sin and hostility and consuming what is unlawful. How evil their practices are! [62] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 62)

Hastening into sin means that they were already sinners to begin with. Hastening would therefore imply that they were in the first stages of sin and then they raced to the final stages of it. So their misguidance was plain from the onset, and it is as though their disbelieving nature exposed them despite their efforts to conceal it. They found themselves vying with one another to commit sin – that is, their conduct tended towards disbelief. The True Lord Glorified is He made them lax in concealing it, so they did things which exposed them even more clearly than their speech did because sin has different stages: the stage of speech and the stage of action—and action reveals more than speech.

The term 'many of them' means it is likely that there may have been faith in the hearts of a few of them, and this absolved any of them who were thinking about embracing true faith. They also vied with one another in aggression. If sin covers any kind of crime, whatever it may be, then aggression means a sin in which one person violates the right of another. An example of this is the person who harbours jealous hatred: he sins against himself, and therefore he suffers from internal conflict until he is completely consumed.

As we know, jealousy is a personal sin which is not subject to any legal punishment. It is said that it is' the one crime whose punishment precedes it, 'which is the opposite of other crimes. All crimes occur before their punishments except hatred and envy, for the one who hates is punished for his hatred before it even begins because the only reason he hates is that his heart and emotions are pained when he sees the one he hates progressing in life. This is why the Hadith goes, 'If someone hates you, it is enough a consolation for you to know that he is miserable when you are happy.' So the person who sins against himself does not harm anyone else with his sin; but the one who is guilty of aggression, on the other hand, violates the rights of others. This can occur in two ways: those who commit aggression by giving the right of one person to another, and those who commit aggression by being silent when they see someone else's evildoing. The evildoer is consumed by his lust for evil, but if someone sees him doing evil and remains silent instead of reproaching the evildoer, it is also a kind of aggression; for the evildoer has a personal motive for committing evil, while he who remains silent does not have any personal motivation for being silent. So who is more evil? It is the one who remains silent instead of telling the evildoer that he is guilty of evil.' And you see many of them hastening into sin and aggression. 'Notice that the word 'hasten' is as the same as the word 'compete' in the sense that there are people racing one another in sin and aggression, as though sin and aggression are goals upon which their hearts and minds are set.

'And the devouring of (what is) unlawful. How wretched is what they have been doing.' The word 'unlawful' here means all wealth which is unlawfully earned, whether through bribery, usury, theft, embezzlement, robbery, or plundering. All of these things and their likes are forms of the unlawful. They involve taking the rights of others. If done secretly, this is theft; if done hurriedly aiming to snatch another's goods, this is robbery; and if the owner of the item follows him and argues with him and tries to get it back, this goes from robbery to forcible seizure; and if someone is entrusted with looking after something but then takes it, this is embezzlement –and all of these are forms of 'devouring of (what is) unlawful'; and this is vile conduct indeed.

The True Lord then says:

لَوۡلَا يَنۡهَىٰهُمُ ٱلرَّبَّٰنِيُّونَ وَٱلۡأَحۡبَارُ عَن قَوۡلِهِمُ ٱلۡإِثۡمَ وَأَكۡلِهِمُ
ٱلسُّحۡتَۚ لَبِئۡسَ مَا كَانُواْ يَصۡنَعُونَ ﴿٦٣﴾

Why do their rabbis and scholars not forbid them to speak sinfully and consume what is unlawful? How evil their deeds are! [63] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 63)

The ‘godly scholars’ are those whose every action is ascribed to Allah, and the ‘rabbis’ are those who are schooled in religious matters; yet, neither one of such groups forbids those amongst the people of the Book to commit sin and perpetrate evil. So, how could these men of Allah and rabbis appoint themselves spiritual leaders without doing their duty by advising the people? This confirms the fact that the godly scholars and rabbis desire nothing more than the power of having authority over people.

The godly scholars are the leaders of the Christians, and the rabbis are the leaders of the Jews; and amongst the Christians and Jews, there were people overcome by the desire to consume all that is evil, commit tyranny, and make sinful accusations. So why did not those who ascribed themselves to Allah do anything to forbid this, though they have made their livings from being appointed the task of protecting Allah’s way of guidance from human deviations? Was it not their duty to forbid evildoers and sinners from evil and sin?

The evildoer has a desire to profit from his evil; but as for godly scholars and rabbis, why do they not do anything to prevent this? It must be that they were glad with sin, tyranny, and devouring all that is evil. The cause of their gladness was that if one of these people was righteous in his conduct and his judgements, he would have been jealously protective of the religion, yet none of them objected to these deviations because no one would blame him when everybody deviates. The True Lord Glorified is He uses the words ‘Why do not’ at the beginning of this verse as an exhortation; that is, He is encouraging the correct action. The godly scholars and rabbis should have forbidden them from devouring all that are evil making sinful assertions and committing tyranny. And then the precision of the Quranic expression – as always – is manifested when the True Lord says: ‘How wretched is what they have been practising!’

In the previous verse, the True Lord spoke about the conduct of the majority of the people of the Book, saying: ‘How wretched is what they have been doing!’ So the True Lord makes a distinction between what they practise and what they do. The former is concerned with the godly scholars and rabbis. We know that every part of the human body has its own function: the eye sees, the ear hears, the hand touches and performs actions, the foot walks and the tongue speaks. Moreover, the parts of the body are of two kinds: there is the tongue the function of which is speech, and the rest of the body parts the functions of which are actions. This is shown when the True Lord says: ‘Grave is hatred in the sight of Allah that you say what you do not do.’ (as-Saff: 3)

So speech is contrasted to action, and both speech and action are kinds of deeds. Since the things which the majority of the people of the Book do in this regard are comprised of both speech and action, the True Lord therefore says: ‘How wretched is what they have been doing!’

Concerning the godly scholars and rabbis, He said: ‘How wretched is what they have been practising.’ There is a difference between the one who does something and the one who practises it: if a man’s robe gets torn, he gets a needle and thread and sews it, which is merely engaging in the act of tailoring. On the contrary, only the one who does this professionally is called a ‘tailor.’ The one who does something professionally is named after his profession because he does it well; as for the one who only does it once, it is clear by the way he does it that he is not a professional.

The godly scholars and rabbis had adopted the matters of religion and priesthood as a contrived profession and became adept in it; and this is what made all the legislative bodies in the world turn away from the Law of Heaven to the law of earth. When we study the history of law, we find that the original sources of law were the priests who ascribed themselves to Allah and Revelation. They would judge between people, but they became corrupt, and society saw that they would give one judgement for a particular case but then give the opposite judgement for an identical case, taking bribes for it and privileging certain people over others. Therefore, people saw that the priests could not be trusted, so they abandoned the priests and began to make laws for themselves which were very different to what the priests gave them. Thus, this marks the transformation from the laws of the priests to a society which no longer adhered to any religion because of how the priests' judgements deviated from justice and how they sold their judgements to the highest bidder, or judged in favour of people of influence. In this way, it became a matter of their contrivance, and vile indeed was what they contrived. The True Lord then says:

وَقَالَتِ ٱلۡيَهُودُ يَدُ ٱللَّهِ مَغۡلُولَةٌۚ غُلَّتۡ أَيۡدِيهِمۡ وَلُعِنُواْ بِمَا قَالُواْۘ بَلۡ يَدَاهُ مَبۡسُوطَتَانِ
يُنفِقُ كَيۡفَ يَشَآءُۚ وَلَيَزِيدَنَّ كَثِيرٗا مِّنۡهُم مَّآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡكَ مِن رَّبِّكَ طُغۡيَٰنٗا وَكُفۡرٗاۚ
وَأَلۡقَيۡنَا بَيۡنَهُمُ ٱلۡعَدَٰوَةَ وَٱلۡبَغۡضَآءَ إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِۚ كُلَّمَآ أَوۡقَدُواْ نَارٗا لِّلۡحَرۡبِ
أَطۡفَأَهَا ٱللَّهُۚ وَيَسۡعَوۡنَ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ فَسَادٗاۚ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُفۡسِدِينَ ٦٤

The Jews have said, 'God is tight-fisted,' but it is they who are tight-fisted, and they are rejected for what they have said. Truly, God's hands are open wide: He gives as He pleases. What has been sent down to you from your Lord is sure to increase insolence and defiance in many of them. We have sown enmity and hatred amongst them till the Day of Resurrection. Whenever they kindle the fire of war, God will put it out. They try to spread corruption in the land, but God does not love those who corrupt [64] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 64)

We know that the hand is a free-moving limb which can be moved right, left, up and down. It has fingers which each have their own Allah-appointed duty. If each one of us watches his finger as he does anything, he will see how they come closer to or go further from one another in a harmonious controlled motion which gets the task done. The fingers were created with joints and knuckles, each one a different size, in order to fulfil their function harmoniously. When you prevent this limb from doing what it is meant to do, you' shackle' it. So the meaning of 'The hand of Allah is chained' is that Allah's hand – Allah forbid – is unable to move. They said this before the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and before Islam had come to destroy all of their falsehood. Jews spent their efforts in making the weapons of war, building fortresses yet, they were distracted from farming so their yields were poor in quality; and when harvest time came, they found they had nothing. So a Jew named Finhas (Pinhas) said, ‘Why has Allah withheld His hand from giving us? Allah’s hand is chained.’ We can observe that this was only a single person, yet the True Lord says here: ‘the Jews say, “The hand of Allah is chained.”’ This means that when Finhas said this, they heard him, and not only were they pleased by what he said, but also agreed with it. Or it may be that when they saw the Messenger of Allah, at the beginning of the Emigration, forging bonds of brotherhood between the Emigrants and the Ansar; and there were nights when the Muslims had no food to eat, the Jews saw this and made fun of this by saying: ‘Allah’s hand is chained withholding sustenance from Muhammad and his people.’

Or it may be that they said: ‘Allah’s hand shall be chained in the Hereafter from punishing us because He will only punish us for a few days.’ The one who allows himself to say that Allah Glorified is He can be affected by the actions of His creatures thereby disbelieves in Allah because he attempts to remove Allah from His due place. If Allah’s Hand were chained, this restriction would have to have been performed by one of Allah’s creatures; yet how could any of Allah’s creatures tie Allah’s Hand? They dared to speak so boldly about the Divine, and this was disrespectful of them, just as it was when they said: ‘Indeed, Allah is poor, while we are rich.’ (Al-’Imran: 181)

When they said ‘Allah’s Hand is chained, ‘and the True Lord Glorified is He responded to them: ‘rather, both His hands are extended.’ and said before this: ‘chained are their hands;’ does this mean the True Lord was supplicating against them? Of course, He was not, for He is the source to which all mankind turn with their supplications, and He is able to do what He wills with His creatures. But when the True Lord quoted their words, He was alerting the faithful mind who receives His words to the fact that whenever one finds an unfitting attribution describing Allah Glorified is He, he must dismiss these words before he even sees the response to them.

This teaches us that when we hear an attribution which is inappropriate, we must utterly negate it; for Allah Glorified is He does not supplicate against His servants because supplication is made by the weak who raises his request to the strong hoping that he will fulfil it for him. So if the True Lord says it, this either means it is a simple factual statement or a lesson for us. If it is a factual statement, we should observe that Allah Glorified is He ordained miserliness for them when they said this from the very moment they said it; and if it is meant as a lesson to us, then it teaches us the conduct of faith, that is, we must rebut any attribution which does not befit Allah's Majesty.

There is another Quranic statement which raises a similar issue. When the True Lord Glorified is He acknowledged the longing of Prophet Muhammad and the believers to go to the Al-Masjid Al-Haram, He said to him: 'You will surely enter Al-Masjid Al-Haram, if Allah wills.' (al-Fath: 27) Was this a factual statement from Allah or a lesson to us? It was a lesson to us that we should do this whenever we yearn for something. Likewise, when He says here' and the Jews say: Allah's hand is chained, 'He the Exalted teaches us to say: 'chained are their hands, 'just as He taught us to say: 'if Allah so wills;' so that we attribute everything to Allah's power. Philosophers tried to define the power of divine will saying that Allah Glorified is He created the universe with natural laws which govern everything. Did the True Lord relinquish His authority when He created these natural laws and leave things to their own devices? No, and this is why He has ordained miracles which broke the natural laws to show us that those laws do not have the final word, but rather that Allah's Hand is still involved in His creation. For example, we find that He commanded fire which usually burns: 'O fire, be coolness and safety' (al-Anbiya': 69). And He commanded water, which usually drowns: 'Then We inspired to Moses, "Strike with your staff the sea," and it parted, and each portion was like a great towering mountain.' (ash-Shu'ara': 63)

And He said: 'and We had inspired to Moses, "Travel by night with My servants and strike for them a dry path through the sea; you will not fear being overtaken (by Pharaoh) nor be afraid (of drowning). (77) So Pharaoh pursued them with his soldiers, and there covered them from the sea that which covered them. (78)"' (Ta Ha: 77-78).

The staff which was created from a dry tree branch was transformed into a snake, meaning that it was turned into something of completely different nature, from a plant into an animal. This is how the laws of nature are broken.

The True Lord Glorified is He says about those who claimed that His hand is chained: 'Chained are their hands, and cursed are they for what they say.'

They have been expelled from Allah’s Mercy because they brought this on themselves by saying that Allah’s Hand is chained, and He is able to refrain from giving them. Allah continues: ‘Rather, both His hands are extended; He spends however He wills.’ He gives to whom He wills. The word ‘Hand’, linguistically speaking, can mean both the body part and also ‘favour’. When someone says, ‘So-and-so gave me a hand which I will never forget’, he means that someone did him a favour he will not forget. The reason why the word ‘hand ‘is used in this way is that the hand is always used to give and take things. The word ‘hand ‘is also used to indicate the concept of possession, as when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘unless they forego the right or the one in whose hand is the marriage contract foregoes it.’ (al-Baqara: 237) That is, the one who possesses the right to marry the woman forgoes his claim. And in the context of fighting, we find that Allah says: ‘Fight them; Allah will punish them by your hands.’ (at-Tawba: 14)

Of the word, ‘hand ‘can be used to refer to someone who had the role of performing a certain action, such as when the True Lord says: ‘O Iblis (Satan), what prevented you from prostrating to that which I created with My Hands?’ (Sad: 75) Adam peace be upon him was the first man to be created, and all of us who came after him were created by means of human reproduction. Allah Glorified is He has honoured man by creating him with His Hands, and He has created everything with the word ‘Be!’ So the word ‘hand ‘has many different meanings, and the Messenger of Allah said: ‘The blood of all Muslims is equal in their law, and if the least of them promises protection they all honour his promise, and they are (as) a single hand above all others.’(1) That is, when all hands come together, theirs is the most powerful hand; and when we read the words ‘Allah’s Hand’, do we take it to mean His favour, or His possession?’ Blessed is He in whose Hand is dominion, and He is over all things competent.’ (al-Mulk: 1)

Allah Glorified is He knows His Own Self best, so let us stop at the attribution itself and go no further. Yes, He has a Hand, and He has two Hands, but do not imagine that everything connected to Allah is the same as everything connected to you; for it is true that you have existence now, and Allah Glorified is He has existence, but your existence is not the same as Allah's existence. Likewise, His Hand is not like your hand; and in order that we do not fall into anthropomorphism by saying that He has a hand like our hands, let us say that the meaning of 'hand 'here is 'power' or 'favour'; and the supreme goal of this is to exalt the True Lord above all comparison. There are those who say that Allah Glorified is He has a Hand, but it is not like our hands because we must view every description of Allah in the light of the fact that' There is nothing like unto Him' (ash-Shura: 11), and interpretation is possible, just as it is when the True Lord said that He created Moses 'under His eyes.'

(1) Narrated by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Al-Bayhaqi (in Al-Kubra), Al-Hakim (in Al-Mustadrak), Al-Hindi (in Kanz Al-‘Ummal) and Ibn Kathir in his Tafsir

It is possible to accept every description Allah Glorified is He gives Himself just as it is given, by saying that He has a hand but it is not like our hands; He has existence, but it is not like human existence; He has an eye but it is not like other eyes. In short, every description of Allah Glorified is He must be viewed in the light of 'There is nothing like unto Him.' It is also possible for us to interpret the attribution by saying that it means 'favour' or 'power'. The True Lord says: 'Rather, both His Hands are extended.' What is meant here is His favour. He did not simply reply by saying that He has one hand which gives, but He gave the strongest rebuttal possible which is that He gives with both of His Hands. Moreover, Allah Glorified is He says elsewhere: 'and amply bestowed upon you His favours, (both) apparent and unapparent?' (Luqman: 20)

He gives in an obvious way and He gives in a hidden way. Do not say that one of these means His right hand and the other means His left, for both of Allah's Hands are right hands.' Rather, both His hands are extended; He spends however He wills.' That is, He the Exalted could not be miserly. Even when the True Lord withholds, this is another form of giving and dispensing because the one who misuses a favour might thereby be led into trial and a bad end; therefore, Allah the Exalted withholds this favour from him to protect him from being led astray by it. This is why we find that the True Lord says, in the chapter al-Fajr: 'And as for man, when his Lord tries him and (thus) is generous to him and favours him, he says, 'My Lord has honoured me. (15) But when He tries him and restricts his provision, he says, "My Lord has humiliated me. (16)"' (al-Fajr: 15-16). And then, the True Lord Glorified is He responds: 'No.'

So, giving is not a sign of honour, nor is withholding a sign of disgrace; and how could giving be a sign of honour when Allah might give unto you, but you might not fulfil the rights of this favour? How could withholding be a sign of disgrace when it might prevent you from going astray? Hence, sometimes when He withholds from you, He gives you something much more lasting, which is guidance. Thus, we see that His withholding is also a kind of giving.

People always think that Allah's bestowal only consists of what is positive, but they forget that there is also a negative bestowal (i.e. preventative). The True Lord spares you from misfortunes. Before, I have given the example of the man who makes sure that all his income is lawful, and is conscious of Allah Glorified is He in his work, and takes his pay and arranges his life's affairs within the bounds of this pay, this man might go home and find that his son has a slightly high temperature and because his income is lawfully earned and the cells of his body know this, he deals with the situation calmly and takes his son to a doctor at a charity clinic for a few pennies. The doctor prescribes a medicine costing only few pennies, and the boy is cured.

This man's situation is different from that of another man whose wealth is unlawfully-earned and who, when he sees that his son's temperature is high, finds a thousand bad thoughts running through his mind, and takes his son from doctor to another without believing what any of them say. Allah the Exalted granted the first man peace of mind by preventing paranoid notions from entering his heart and thoughts, whereas the second man ended up spending far more than what he had earned from his unlawful work. This means there is also such thing as a negative gift; and the gift which a man loves to receive is that of wealth which ultimately dwindles away to nothing. As for withholding, it prevents a man from committing sin, after which he receives his bliss in the Hereafter. We find that many people ask things from Allah, but they are not aware that Allah also gives by withholding. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He, says: 'And man supplicates for evil as he supplicates for good, and man is ever hasty.' (al-Isra': 11) This is why sometimes the True Lord gives His servant things for which he had been imploring Him, and then he finds out that they are actually bad for him. It is as though when the True Lord has denied him what he wanted for a while, He was actually doing this to protect him.

Therefore, He is always dispensing His bounty, and He dispenses it as He wills. Allah Glorified is He has never been miserly, even when He withholds, because withholding at the right time is the same as dispensing. Thus, Allah's bestowal is always a blessing whether it is outward or inward. Also, if the meaning of 'Hand 'is 'power', then Allah's hands are stretched out with reward for some and punishment for others; and He gives spiritual immunity to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him against all those who rebel against him and against every opponent and arrogant rival whether from the disbelievers or the people of the Book.

It is as though He Exalted and Glorified is He were saying: 'Prepare yourself, Muhammad, and have your community prepare themselves because those disbelievers will not be content to only hate you a little; rather, every time Allah favours you with additional guidance, they will envy you and hate you; and their opposition and rancour towards you will increase – so prepare yourself for that.' This imparts spiritual immunity, silences all the negative thoughts of the soul, and readies the soul to deal with anything which might happen, even if it is bad.

Let us make this easier to understand, not by way of comparison but simply to make it easier for the mind to grasp – for Allah is beyond compare. Let us consider what happened in Europe during the Second World War when Britain fought against the Nazis. Terrible destruction wreaked the British cities by the German bombers. Churchill stepped up to lead the British war effort saying to them: 'Terror and difficulty await you, so prepare yourselves to face these perils.'

If this happened in a war between two countries, then what do we think about the True Lord Glorified is He who knows how essential it is to test His community who would bear the banner of His perfect way of guidance? Therefore, He had to prepare Prophet Muhammad's soul and the souls of the believers who followed him to face up the envy, hatred, malice, plots and schemes of their enemies.

The True Lord says: ‘And that which has been revealed to you from your Lord will surely increase many of them in transgression and disbelief. And We have cast among them animosity and hatred until the Day of Resurrection.’ The True Lord Glorified is He would not have said ‘among’ unless there were more than one party here. The referral is either among the different Jewish sects, among the different Christian sects or among the Jews and Christians, especially since this group of verses began with the words: ‘O, People of the Book.’ (al-Ma’ida: 59) So if the Jews are meant here, then enmity and hatred indeed exist among their different sects; and if the Christians are meant, then enmity and hatred also exist among their various sects. If it is taken to mean between the Jews as one group and the Christians as another, and this could also be the case—this enmity and hatred will never end and will remain among them until the Day of Resurrection.

Then, the True Lord says: ‘Every time they kindled the fire of war (against you), Allah extinguished it.’ This statement addresses what happened in the Islamic territories such as when the Jewish tribe of Banu Qaynuqa’ broke their treaty after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had gathered them in the marketplace of Qaynuqa’ and said to them: ‘O Jews! Surrender yourselves, before Allah afflicts you just as He afflicted Quraysh!’(1) But they refused, saying: ‘O Muhammad, do not be deluded by how you killed a horde of Quraysh who were greenhorns with no knowledge of warfare. By Allah, were you to fight us, you would learn that we are true men, and that you have never before encountered the like of us.’ So the True Lord revealed His words concerning them: ‘Say to those who disbelieve, “You will be overcome and gathered together to Hell, and wretched is the resting place.”’ (Al-’Imran: 12) So, the tribe of Banu Qaynuqa’ was the first of the Jews to break their treaty with Prophet Muhammad, and they were fought against during the time between the battles of Badr and Uhud.

The reason for this was that an Arab woman took her wares to the market of Banu Qaynuqa’ and sat next to a Jewish goldsmith in the market. The Jew tried to force her to unveil her face, but she refused. Then, the goldsmith knotted her clothing at the back without her noticing, so when she stood up, the whole dress came off and left her naked. They laughed at her, and she cried out. A Muslim man answered her cry and killed the goldsmith, but the Jews took hold of the Muslim and killed him too. This event caused civil strife to erupt, but Allah Glorified is He has extinguished the fires of this strife and exiled Banu Qaynuqa', and then exiled the tribe of Banu An-Nadir, who had the power in Medina because of their wealth and knowledge. The Muslims fought the tribe of Banu Qurayzha, and exiled the people of Khaybar, and the Muslims were able to take control of the valley of Al-Qura. All of this happened within the Islamic territories; so what happened outside it?

(1) Narrated by Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Kathir

We have seen how they were destroyed by the Babylonian Nebuchadnezzar (Bakhtansar), and then by the Roman, Titus. We know that they were dispersed throughout the earth in every place and time. Someone might say: 'If the True Lord says, 'every time they kindled the fire of war (against you), Allah extinguished it, 'why is the war between them and us still happening?' We say that the one who extinguishes the fires of war must be one of Allah's true soldiers; and when we really become Allah's true soldiers, this war will be extinguished.

The nearest example to us is our victory on the tenth of Ramadan. Our victory came when we fought under the banner of 'Allah is the Greatest!' Allah Glorified is He has rewarded those generals and soldiers who knew that the enemy was better equipped than we were, yet victory went our way because we entered with' Allah is the Greatest' as our guide.

As for those who claim that it was a victory of civilisation, we ask: Which civilisation about which are you speaking? Islam is the wellspring of balanced civilisation, and one cannot make claims about 'civilisation', whilst outside the confines of Allah's religion. If we adhere to the principle of 'Allah is the Greatest', not just as a slogan, but also as a practical guide, then Allah Glorified is He would extinguish the fires of any war.

Allah the Exalted has established cosmological ways in His universe which give practical experience to those who harbour doubts about faith. An example of this is what happened when some of those who fought at the battle of Uhud disobeyed the orders of Prophet Muhammad and were almost routed as a result. At the battle of Hunayn, they said, 'We shall not be defeated today because of our small numbers!' And so Allah said: 'Allah has already given you victory in many regions and (even) on the day of Hunayn, when your great number pleased you, but it did not avail you at all, and the earth was confining for you with its vastness; then you turned back, fleeing.' (at-Tawba: 25)

Allah Glorified is He has created these cosmological ways to alert anyone who is heedless of religion to that fact that the enemy will be able to defeat him in this state; for heedlessness leads to deviation, and deviation can never lead to victory. This is why the True Lord warns the forces of faith. As for the forces of disbelief, the True Lord wants them to be debased, so He sometimes allows them to defeat the believers when the believers are heedless; and all the believers have to do is to wake from their heedlessness, and they will be able to defeat the forces of disbelief. That will happen at a time when the forces of disbelief are in a state of arrogance and excess. There is a rustic proverb which explains it: 'The believer cannot fall from a reed mat.'

The meaning is that humbleness protects one from delusions of grandeur and arrogance because the one who falls is the one who imagines that he has a high status on earth and, therefore, Allah the Exalted makes him blind to caution, as He says: 'and to destroy with utter destruction all that fell in their hands.' (al-Isra': 7)

That is, to make everything come to ruin. When crafty politicians want to punish their enemies, they try to raise their enemies by being patient with them and giving them time until the enemy's status rises high, and surprisingly, they expose them and reveal their bad conduct so that people no longer respect them. Therefore, we find that the Quran is completely direct about this matter: 'So when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the doors of every (good) thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they were given, We seized them suddenly, and they were (then) in despair.' (al-An'am: 44) Therefore, Allah Glorified is He gave them time and left them be so that they could amass wealth, build, prosper and rejoice in what they had gained; He has opened the doors of all good things to them; and life has shown us many examples of that.

We have seen powerful nations aiding our enemies, and the forces of East and West agreed for many years to aid the enemy, and we said to them: You are now at the stage of 'when they forgot that by which they had been reminded; 'your enemies will soon move onto the stage of 'when they rejoiced in that which they were given, 'and after that, you will move on to the stage of 'we seized them suddenly, and they were (then) in despair.'

Later, the Soviet Union collapsed, and Allah Glorified is He took them to task all of a sudden by the hands of people from within, and many calamities befell those who had persecuted the people of faith. Hence, there is no need for anyone to be deluded by whatever he has attained. And the True Lord says: 'And that which has been revealed to you from your Lord will surely increase many of them in transgression and disbelief. And We have cast among them animosity and hatred until the Day of Resurrection. Every time they kindled the fire of war (against you), Allah extinguished it. And they strive throughout the land (causing) corruption, and Allah does not like corrupters.'

They are always dejected because the True Lord does not allow them to satisfy all of their desires, and therefore they labour to spread corruption on earth by means of stealth. Whoever reads The Protocols of the Elders of Zion will see that they were the creators of the theories which spearhead false ideas such as Marxism, Existentialism and Darwinism which were ideas formulated before so that their harmful effects would appear in non-Jewish peoples; as for the Jews themselves, they were pre-warned about such corrupt principles. They wanted to plot against the world, and this is how they labour hard to spread corruption amongst people. If we look at all the current deviations in the world, we will find that they are behind them all.

The unbridled capitalism came from the Jews, as did communism. All of those who claimed to be prophets after Prophet Muhammad only did so because of the actions of the Jews. Likewise, the organisations which hide behind names such as 'Masons', 'Rotary Club' and 'Lions' all come from the Jews. Yet, despite this, we see people who claim to be civilised and proud to be members of the Rotary Club. And when we ask them what they do at these clubs, they say that they engage in charitable activities and good works. So we say to them: 'Why do you not do good works in the name of Islam? Do you think that any good comes from outside of Islam?'

Every now and again, the world discovers that all its corruption has been caused by these people and their plots; and this is why the True Lord Glorified is He afflicts them with calamities from time to time because of how they labour hard to spread corruption on earth. This labouring to spread corruption takes many forms; sometimes it takes the form of scientific theories, sometimes it takes the form of extremism in political ideologies, such as unbridled capitalism and communism. All of those destroy people's lives. When people try a new ideology, they judge its success or failure by the good or the evil it brings them.

Russia, for example, used to supply the world with wheat from Siberia, but then it suffered from agricultural deficit and looks for others to sell it wheat. In countries where the unbridled capitalism rules, people lead an irresponsible lifestyle in the name of freedom. In Germany, on the other hand, we saw its capital Berlin divided into two halves, each half with its own life, but it was then united with consequent problems.

Some societies might place themselves in the hands of people who are even more malicious, such as the ruling parties in every country that does not follow a balanced system. We find that the members of such parties are like an organisation that embraces an ideology and its opposite so that no one can rebel against them. They have the workers under their control, and the factory of the capitalist is in their hands, and they live princely lives without anyone daring to question them.

Another example is the 'existentialist' philosophy which calls every man to affirm his own existence and was accompanied by a wave of pure liberalism and irresponsibility—for he did not understand the affirmation of existence as being founded on the responsibility of doing good deeds in life. They understood existence to mean the complete freedom of instincts—despite the fact that it is required of any man that if he wishes to stretch out his hand, he must stop his hand before it gets to the point where it would strike another man. Those people treated people like children, just like when the father gives his son a toy telephone, giving it to him so that he can take advantage of his energy before he becomes morally responsible; but the father would not let his son play with a real telephone. Yet, those people encourage adults to play and amuse themselves so that they do not get involved in serious matters.

An example of that is football: they hold championships for it, and apply serious rules to a mere game. Three hours before the match, you find that the security forces close the roads to the stadium which will host the match. If the referee makes a simple mistake, people become incensed and outraged, but when leaders and governments make thousands of mistakes, no one says anything. Why not? Because you have transferred your serious laws to games and sports and left what is truly serious without any laws at all.

Another example is the sporting attire young people wear; it covers the bodies of the men, but they do not cover the women's bodies. Why do they not also cover the women's bodies when playing sports? The goal is, naturally, to titillate people; and all of this is corruption on earth. 'And they strive throughout the land (causing) corruption.' What is curious is that their efforts to spread corruption on earth is disguised in truth, progress and civilisation, and certain Muslims come along and actually encourage this kind of corruption forgetting that the fundamental truth is: 'Allah does not like corrupters.' He created the universe in a state of soundness, and if you receive Allah's goodness according to the soundness of the world which you were brought into, you will make the best of your life and your work; and if you do not wish to increase the soundness of the world, you, at least, must not cause it to be corrupted.

The True Lord Glorified is He created the world in a precise order. You can observe this in those things wherein man plays no part, which we find to be of the utmost precision and soundness such as the sun, the stars, the seasons, and the wind. Corruption comes, however, when man interferes with things without the guidance of Allah's religion. So, corruption is what draws people away from Allah's guidance, and we find that some people follow their whims rashly and believe that their actions is what makes things better, and thus the True Lord's words apply to them: 'And when it is said to them, "Do not cause corruption on earth," they say, "We are but reformers." Unquestionably, it is they who are the corrupters, but they perceive (it) not.' (al-Baqara: 11-12)

This is the True Lord's judgement of them. They claim to be making things better, but they must cease their actions at once and stop spreading corruption. And after this, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ أَنَّ أَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَٱتَّقَوْا۟ لَكَفَّرْنَا عَنْهُمْ
سَيِّـَٔاتِهِمْ وَلَأَدْخَلْنَٰهُمْ جَنَّٰتِ ٱلنَّعِيمِ ﴿٦٥﴾

If only the People of the Book would believe and be mindful of God, We would take away their sins and bring them into the Gardens of Delight [65] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 65)

These words indicate that all of the people of the Book are outside the confines of faith, and it is as if Allah Glorified is He says to them: Your corruption took place before the coming of Islam, and therefore Islam came to free people from corruption. You were given a way of guidance from Allah, but you have altered it, Allah Glorified is He has sent messengers to you but you dishonoured them and you contrived your own religious customs. Islam did not only come to guide atheists; it also came to guide those who were led astray by the leaders of the people of the Book. After Islam came, they fought it with orientalism, writing books to criticise Islam, but they found that people are turning away from them. Hence, they brought people who praised Islam, whilst involving in this praise what would corrupt the doctrine of the Muslims.

We find that some books speaking of Islam's greatness come from the West, but they attempt to criticise it surreptitiously. They might say, for example, 'Muhammad was a rare genius in human history', basing everything they say on the notion that what Muhammad brought was a product of human genius, not Divine Revelation. For example, there was a European man who wrote a book about the one hundred greatest men in the world and placed Muhammad at number one in the list. We say to him: Thanks, but why do you not believe in the Message of Muhammad ibn 'Abdullah? Your statement does not concern us in the least.

They have explicitly attacked us before, and now, they are trying to conceal their assaults. In addition, they have arranged for the young people from the Islamic countries to be educated at schools and universities in the West. Their intention was to make them spokespeople for their efforts to corrupt Muslims, although they only succeeded with a few of them. Therefore, we say to our youth, 'Beware of being spreaders of corruption while claiming to be reformers. Do not judge these actions by their cover, but look at what their depths conceal.' Remember that Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "shall we inform you of the most miserable people, who will not gain in whatever they may do? (It is) they whose labour has gone astray in (the pursuit of no more than) this world's life, and who none the less think that they are doing good deeds."' (al-Kahf: 103-104)

If we pay attention to the instances of corruption in this world, we will find that the enemies of Islam have made a great deal of impact in that direction. The impudence of the Zionists has even led some of them to confess, 'Allah's chosen people can rest easy, since eighty per cent of the world's media is under our control and cannot report anything without our approval.'

Allah says: 'If the People of the Book would but attain to (true) faith and conscious piety, We should indeed efface their (previous) bad deeds, and bring them into gardens of bliss.' (al-Ma'ida: 65) With this verse, Allah Glorified is He is presenting a chance for these people to enter the boundaries of faith if they ask Allah's forgiveness for their past sins. They are encouraged to begin a better life of purity and virtue instead of a life of corruption and misguidance so that they can truly recognise what Allah said to Prophet Muhammad, 'and (thus, O Prophet Muhammad), We have sent you as (an evidence of Our) grace towards all the worlds.' (al-Anbiya': 107) We call on both Muslims and non-Muslims to follow these words to be granted this grace. Indeed, they will find in these words the revival of their spirits and the first steps to advancing themselves in the right path.

When Allah says: 'If the People of the Book would but attain to (true) faith and conscious piety,' (al-Ma'ida: 65) Allah is only calling them to heartily conviction and devoutness. The heart is the seat of our beliefs and sincerity. This means that the belief in the existence of the Supreme Deity, Allah Glorified is He settles in our hearts, and the belief in the message of this Supreme Deity is conveyed unto us by His messengers. Believing the teachings that the Messengers brought, with the clear understanding that we shall all return to Allah, should be reflected in our actions on earth. Faith and piety should inspire a man to perform good deeds and to steer clear of impious deeds. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Consider the flight of time! Verily, man is bound to lose himself, unless he be of those (group of believers) who attain to faith and do good works, and enjoin upon one another the keeping to truth, and enjoin upon one another patience in adversity.' (al-'Asr: 1-3)

One of the righteous Arab scholars said, 'Faith is like the stakes of a tent, and deeds are like its ropes.' Just as every house has a foundation of pillars and stakes to make it steady, the Arab tent is made of thick pieces of fabric held up by wooden stakes and fastened to pegs by ropes. The Arab Bedouins used to untie these tents and load them on the backs of camels to move them from place to place. They would also choose fabrics that prevented rainwater from collecting inside the tent.

In the same manner, just like building a house, Allah Glorified is He has called upon the people of the Book to have faith and piety, so that He would efface their bad deeds. The Arabic word kaffara (efface) means to cover and conceal, and the Arabic word 'afw (pardon) means to wipe away a mark. Hence, upon their belief, Allah Glorified is He will conceal and erase their bad deeds by pardoning them. They must utilize the message of mercy that Islam came with so that Allah Glorified is He may grant them forgiveness for their bad deeds in leading their followers astray.

They should have recognised that the coming of Prophet Muhammad was an opportunity for them to desist from their disbelief and falsehood. Prophet Muhammad came to grant this world spiritual enlightenment. He was sent to guide atheists to believe in the Creator of this universe and to direct those who strayed (from Allah's way of guidance) to His straight path. This is the definition of complete spiritual enlightenment. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَوۡ أَنَّهُمۡ أَقَامُواْ ٱلتَّوۡرَىٰةَ وَٱلۡإِنجِيلَ وَمَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡهِم مِّن رَّبِّهِمۡ لَأَكَلُواْ مِن فَوۡقِهِمۡ
وَمِن تَحۡتِ أَرۡجُلِهِمۚ مِّنۡهُمۡ أُمَّةٞ مُّقۡتَصِدَةٞۖ وَكَثِيرٞ مِّنۡهُمۡ سَآءَ مَا يَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٦٦﴾

If they had upheld the Torah and the Gospel and what was sent down to them from their Lord, they would have been given abundance from above and from below: some of them are on the right course, but many of them do evil [66] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 66)

If they had adhered to their unaltered Torah and Gospel and had faith in the Quran, it would have been better for them. The Torah was the Scripture of the Jews, while the Gospel was the Scripture of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. After these scriptures (or books), Allah sent down the final and all-encompassing book, the Noble Quran. Allah wanted them to have faith in the glad tidings mentioned in the Torah and the Gospel that informed them of the coming of Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him. The faith in the unaltered former scriptures would lead to their faith in Prophet Muhammad and what Allah has revealed to him.

The Jews themselves had warned the Arabs that Prophet Muhammad would arise one day. They warned that that they would follow him and reign over the Arabs with his message. However, when Prophet Muhammad was sent, the Arabs believed in his message before the Jews. Allah Glorified is He has said: '…and (bear in mind that) that they (the Jews) used to pray for (and foresee) victory over the disbelieving (pagan Arabs). Then, when there came unto them that which they recognized (the truth and Prophet Muhammad), they denied it.' (al-Baqara: 89)

The natural path of the people of the Book, who had faith in the unaltered Torah and Gospel, was to believe in the Quran because their earlier Scriptures entailed descriptions of Prophet Muhammad. 'Abdullah ibn Salam had been a Jewish rabbi before embracing Islam. He said about Islam, 'I knew that Prophet Muhammad was the prophet we were waiting for, the moment I saw him, just as I knew my own son. Nay, my acquaintance of Muhammad's character was even more solid.'

Allah Glorified is He has promised the people of the Book that having faith and observing piety would not only erase their sins and grant them salvation from the hellfire, but would allow them to enter the Gardens of bliss. Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He knew that many of them were pure materialists who cared only for this worldly life. Thus, He has informed them that their faith would bring them material bounties in this world as well. Allah says: 'And if they would but truly observe the Torah and the Gospel and all (the revelation) that have been bestowed from their Lord upon them, they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth.' (al-Ma'ida: 66) Allah Glorified is He has offered them the material means of this worldly life. The believer is the one who works hard to utilise the means of this worldly life as well as he can, with the aim of gaining the bliss of this world and the Hereafter. As for the disbeliever, he utilises these means only having this worldly life in mind, without thanking the Creator for providing them.

Allah Glorified is He wanted the people of the Book to have proper faith in the unaltered Torah and Gospel because this would facilitate their faith in the Quran. This was the way for their sins to be forgiven, and their path to paradise in the Hereafter. In addition, their faith would grant them worldly bounties because Allah Glorified is He does not hold His bounties from those who utilise the proper means.

Allah says: ‘To him who desires a harvest in the life to come, We shall grant an increase in his harvest; whereas to him who desires (only) a harvest in this world, We (may) give something thereof – but he will have no share in (the blessings of) the life to come.’ (ash-Shura: 20) Therefore, those who adhere to disbelief will only benefit from the means of this world, and will never receive any blessings in the Hereafter. Allah Glorified is He says about the disbelievers: ‘For We shall (in the Hereafter) turn towards all the (supposedly good) deeds they ever wrought, and shall transform them into scattered dust.’ (al-Furqan: 23) In this way, Allah Glorified is He clarified the fate of the disbelievers in the Hereafter. He stated what their fate will be in this ephemeral worldly life. If they utilise the worldly instruments, Allah will (justly) give them the results of their efforts.

Allah Glorified is He alone possesses omnipotent Power. He (alone) is able to prevent the physical laws from working, and to remove all the natural characteristics of matter. The farmer might utilise all his available resources, ploughing the earth, fertilising it and breeding the best strains of seed. However, a great storm might uproot his plants, a flood might drown his soil, or a swarm of lethal insects might consume his crops. The Creator, who possesses omnipotent Power, controls all these resources. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He who has established the laws of nature is also able to annul them. As a human being, you are a master in the universe by Allah’s will, but you are also compelled to follow his laws in many ways. For instance, in this physical realm, illness might cause death to human beings, as might sudden accidents. Those decrees under the will of Allah can make man helpless and devoid of physical ability.

Allah Glorified is He has showed us that areas of land which have received rain for ages are sometimes struck by droughts. What does that teach us? Some people become deluded by the constant regularity of Allah's blessings; therefore, Allah Glorified is He occasionally holds some bounties back from people. Those events wherein He withholds His means occur so that man is not deluded in thinking that the forces of this material world have any sovereignty.

There are many examples of that in our lives. A farmer who owns many acres of land may find them infested with insects consuming his harvest, while his farming neighbour who owns a smaller piece of land may be graced with ampler harvest. The cause for that may be that his poorer neighbour is more righteous and pays regularly the purifying dues and alms from his harvest. Some farming people call these dues 'the land's shield'. In this scenario, the insects are among Allah's forces that consume the ill-gotten property, while leaving the lawful harvest without harm.

'And none can comprehend the forces of your Lord (Allah) except Him alone.' (al-Muddaththir: 31) Thus, Allah Glorified is He gives worldly means to everyone who strives appropriately, and gives additional support to the believers. 'And if they would but truly observe the Torah and the Gospel and all (the revelation) that have been bestowed from their Lord, they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth.' (al-Ma'ida: 66)

Provisions, as we know, are of two kinds. The first kind is the direct provision and sustenance, and the second kind is the indirect instrument that delivers the direct provision. Direct provisions bring immediate benefit, such as the food we eat or the water we drink. On the other hand, the instruments include the money with which we buy our direct provisions. Allah Glorified is He speaks of worldly matters here so that we understand that His way of guidance only came to regulate man's motions in this life. The Hereafter is the reward for one's good actions here on earth.

After promising them paradise as a reward for their faith, Allah Glorified is He now extends to them the provisions of worldly life that give ease, comfort and happiness. The verse literally says: 'They would indeed eat from above them and below them.' Someone might ask, 'And how can they eat from above them?' Eating is the essential phenomenon of man's life because all the work a man does can only be achieved following his basic existence. This existence depends on three constituents of sustenance which are food, water, and air. If we want to preserve this life, we must ensure the continuous delivery of these three factors. When we consider these three in order of importance, we find that a man might go without food for a month and may persevere without water for three to ten days. However, he cannot survive in the absence of air for a few minutes.

Allah Glorified is He in His compassion to humankind made human ownership of these essential constituents related to their levels of importance. Thus, we find that some people own the sources of food and have control over them. However, Allah Glorified is He has placed sufficient food stores in the human body that allow the body's systems to survive for a month without external nutrition.

Then, concerning water, we find the ability of humans to control the sources of water is less than their ability to control those of food. Allah Glorified is He has reduced human control over water because a man can only survive without water for a few days. As for air, Allah Glorified is He has not allowed anyone at all to have ownership over it because all humans needs air in all their breaths, as their bodies cannot store much air in their lungs. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He did not entrust other human beings to control the air we breathe.

When Allah Glorified is He says: '... they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth.' (al-Ma'ida: 65) This means that if humans properly adhered to Allah's way of guidance, life's material means would yield to their wills. On the other hand, if man rebels against Allah's way, He will only grant him the low and worldly bounties of this life. Thereafter, Allah the Almighty will resurrect him on the Day of Reckoning. These natural laws of the physical world certainly do not lie outside Allah's supreme control.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He addresses all humankind with these words. If they respond to these verses, He will make it easy for them to utilise the materials He has granted them in this world. However, if they do not respond, He will withhold these material means. He is able to break their laws and neither the earth and the air, and nor any other force in His creation will be able to disobey His rules. If an entire community rebels against Allah's blessings, or against Allah's orders, Allah will set their punishment as an example to others by withholding their worldly means.

Allah Glorified is He has allowed man to be the master of all the beings in the universe. However, man is also subject to Allah's physical decrees. For example, humans are subject to illness and mortality. A human might fracture a bone or drown in water. Thus, if human beings, the masters to all the other creatures in the universe (by Allah's will) are subject to the Divine word, 'Be!' spoken by their Lord, other subordinate creatures follow the same rules as well.

Allah Glorified is He is able to command the earth, 'Be barren,' and to stop the rain from falling. He is the One Who created the habitual processes of nature that are regularly observed. Did Allah not speak to all humankind saying, 'As your Lord will have inspired it (the earth) to do'? (az-Zalzala: 5) If Allah Glorified is He inspired the earth to reveal its treasures or erupt in earthquakes, then what should we deduce about His control of everything else? Everything runs according to Allah's Command, and they all sing their praises to Allah; however, man does not understand the language of the other beings. Allah says: 'But you (O men) fail to grasp the manner of their glorifying Him!' (al-Isra': 44)

Allah's orders are understood by every being that is subject to His decrees—whatever the form or genus it might be. If Allah Glorified is He were to teach you about the response of everything in nature, you would understand the languages of all the other beings. An example of this is the story of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him who heard an ant say to its fellow ants: 'Get into your dwellings, for I fear that Solomon and his soldiers might crush you.' (an-Naml: 18) How did Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him respond to this ant's request? He said: 'O my Lord (Allah)! Inspire me so that I may forever be grateful for those blessings of You with which You hast graced me.' (an-Naml: 19)

Allah Glorified is He says: '…And We caused the mountains to join (our Prophet) David in extolling Our limitless Glory, and likewise the birds.' (al-Anbiya': 79) The Quran also tells us that the hoopoe bird said to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon): 'For should not they (the tribe of disbelievers) come to adore Allah, (although it is He) who brings forth all that is hidden in the heavens and on earth.' (an-Naml: 25) So every creature in existence knows about faith and Allah's Oneness. Everything in existence responds to its Lord, as does everything which sustains man's life.

What about those who rebel against Allah Glorified is He? Allah commands the worldly means to be withheld from assisting the disbelievers, and we see various manifestations of that in different nations and lands. A land might be known for its abundant rain, and then Allah alters the nature of its environment so that it suffers from drought. Another land that has sufficient technology to visit outer space might be unable to withstand a hurricane. All of this confirms to us that the Hand of the Creator Glorified is He controls the means of this world.

Therefore, Allah says: 'And if they would but truly observe the Torah and the Gospel and all (the revelation) that have been bestowed from their Lord (Allah), they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth.' (al-Ma'ida: 66) The last sentence in the verse literally says that Allah will grant them sustenance 'to eat' from above their heads and below their feet. That is, bounties will be granted to them from every side.

If what is meant by the word 'eat' here is direct sustenance, then it means that rain will pour from the skies to water the earth and grow crops for them. It could also refer to the trees, like the date palms as well as apple and orange trees that tower over us and provide their fruits from above. Furthermore, below our feet we will find vegetables and fruits that grow without having stalks above the earth, such as melons, cantaloupes and others. The fruits fallen from tree branches above us after they ripened should represent a profound message to us. If provision is sufficiently satisfying, it will fall to your feet, even if you do not seek it out.

If we understand Allah's words, '…they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth,' (al-Ma'ida: 66) in a broader sense, we will perceive how Allah has placed secrets of provision above us, in the sky, and other secret blessings below us, under the ground. Do we not extract from the earth treasures that enrich our lives, by mining iron and copper or drilling petroleum? Thus, we find that everything known in our existence serves the preservation of the human species, and that this life is a gift from Allah Glorified is He.

If the people of the Book truly observed the Torah, the Gospel, and The Quran and followed their guidance, Allah Glorified is He would grant varied forms of blessings to them. Allah Glorified is He affirms this in another verse when He says: 'Yet if the people of those communities had but believed and observed piety (being consciousness of Us), We would indeed have opened up for them blessings out of the heaven and the earth.' (al-A'raf: 96)

We can observe how Allah Glorified is He has given certain people ample blessings, but they use such blessings with extravagance and tyranny. Then, our Lord leaves them in their inebriety until they rise to great heights before striking them with a punishment that only the Almighty can deliver. Our modern life is the best witness to this intoxication and lavishness of some people. Every nation that has used Allah's blessings to refuse His commands and act against His guidance ended up sinking into corruption. Its inhabitants became fierce enemies to one another and destroyed their provisions with their own hands. The experiences of real life confirm the truth of this fact, as if Allah Glorified is He is telling us to take heed, if we possess insight!

Allah says: 'And Allah propounds (presents to you) a parable: (Imagine) a town which was (once) secure and at ease, with its sustenance coming to it abundantly from all quarters, and which thereupon blasphemously refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings.' (an-Nahl: 112) The meaning of the Arabic word qarya (town) here is not merely the little village in the countryside which we know today. For the ancient Arabs, a town meant a place akin to a capital of a nation. The ancient Arabs were nomadic people, mostly roaming the wilderness without fixed homes. Their capital was a town that contained a small number of houses. This is why the Quran calls Mecca Ummul-Qura (the 'Mother of Towns').

Here in this verse, Allah gave a parable of a town which was secure and at ease. Its sustenance arrived abundantly from several places. This meant that its provisions were not intrinsic or self-provided, but was collected from foreign lands. In the times in which we live, we find that all the riches of the world pour into certain towns. When the people of such town refused to show gratitude for Allah's blessings, what happened? 'Allah caused it to taste the all-embracing misery of hunger and fear.' (an-Nahl: 112)

We can observe this phenomenon in several lands that received Allah's blessings and then responded to them with ingratitude. Their own inhabitants opened the doors of ruin upon themselves, and Allah Glorified is He caused these towns to taste the all-embracing misery of hunger and fear.

Now, the literal meaning of the Arabic words used in these verses is, ‘He (Allah) clothed them in the garment of hunger and fear.’ When we consider the Arabic word libas (garment) used here, we can see how the pains of hunger and fear are pictured as garment that enveloped these towns, just as garments envelop the body. That is, Allah Glorified is He unleashed hunger upon them so that they could not find any means of sustenance, and then fear was sent upon them. The fear could be a result of the enmity they showed towards one another, for their mutual enmity was severe. It could also mean their fear from foreign enemies. This is very similar to the events actually happening in our times.

How does a person show ingratitude towards Allah’s blessings? It may be by concealing these blessings and using them to disobey Allah Glorified is He. In that form, it is similar to kufr (disbelief) in Allah Glorified is He which means ‘To conceal Allah’s existence.’ Ingratitude may also be when a person is being lazy and indolent in deriving these blessings from the places where they are thought to be.

The corruption which exists in the world today has mostly been caused by these two types of people. The first type of people is those who are slothful to seek out the blessings which Allah has placed in His universe. The second group are the people who work hard to extract these blessings, but then assign the credit to their own selves, without giving anything to the weak. They also use these blessings to commit sin.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Yet if the people of those communities had but believed and observed piety (being consciousness of Us), We would indeed have opened up for them blessings out of the heaven and the earth. However, they disbelieved, and so We punished them with what they (themselves) had been doing.’ (al-A’raf: 96)

He Glorified is He also says: ‘…And if they would but truly observe the Torah and the Gospel and all (the revelation) that have been bestowed from their Lord upon them, they would indeed partake of all the blessings of heaven and earth.’ (al-Ma’ida: 66) This is a general judgement, but were there people who actually fulfilled it? Indeed, there were, and some of them acknowledged the truth of that and followed the right path. Allah Glorified is He describes these righteous people: ‘Some of them do pursue a right course.’ (al-Ma’ida: 66)

The right course is a purposeful linear path that leads directly to a particular goal without straying.

So, Allah's true words, 'Some of them do pursue a right course,' (al-Ma'ida: 66) indicates that a group of the people of the Book followed the right path, while others did not. These words also indicate that Allah Glorified is He always leaves in His universe and creation a modicum of good.

This tiny amount of integrity might exist in the weakest of people who have no influence, prestige, or power in this world. Were it not for those people, Allah would destroy the world and all those in it. Prophet Muhammad explained this matter when he said, 'Were it not for servants of Allah who bow to him in prayer, babies who suckle and wild beasts that roam (on the earth), torment would have been poured upon you copiously and pressed tightly.'(1) Allah allows the seeds that preserve the good to persevere in His creation.

Therefore we find that there are those who say, 'As humankind increases its disbelief and aberration, Allah Glorified is He increases His aid to (the good in) them.' There might be a nation of atheists, except a single believer who is truly devoted to his Lord. For this devout servant, Allah may preserve the air and water of this land. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Some of them do pursue a right course; but as for most of them – vile indeed is what they do!' Allah Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلرَّسُولُ بَلِّغۡ مَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡكَ مِن رَّبِّكَۖ وَإِن لَّمۡ تَفۡعَلۡ فَمَا بَلَّغۡتَ رِسَالَتَهُۥۚ
وَٱللَّهُ يَعۡصِمُكَ مِنَ ٱلنَّاسِۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهۡدِى ٱلۡقَوۡمَ ٱلۡكَٰفِرِينَ ٦٧

Messenger, proclaim everything that has been sent down to you from your Lord – if you do not, then you will not have communicated His message – and God will protect you from people. God does not guide those who defy Him [67]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 67)

This verse begins with a command from Allah to His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him. One of the aspects of the greatness of the chosen one, Prophet Muhammad, and the high rank he holds in Allah's sight, is that Allah has addressed all the messengers by their names alone, except for Prophet Muhammad. For instance, Allah Glorified is He said: 'O Adam, convey unto them the names of these (objects of creation),' (al-Baqara: 33) and said: 'O Moses! Verily, I am Allah.' (al-Qasas: 30) He also spoke to other prophets saying, 'O Jesus, Son of Mary, did you say to the people' (al-Ma'ida: 116), or saying: 'O Noah! Disembark in peace.' (Hud: 48) Thus, Allah Glorified is He called every messenger by his name without attaching any attribute to it. However, He did not call Prophet Muhammad by his name, but rather called him by an attribute: 'O Messenger, 'O Apostle' or 'O Prophet.'

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in (Al-Mu'jam Al-Kabir) and Al-Bayhaqi in (As-Sunnan Al-Kubra)

It is as though this meant: 'O Messenger of Allah, all the teachings of the divine Messages have been combined in your message because you are the bringer of the religion which will last until the end of time. After your message, there will be no more messages sent to the earth except the understanding of the Book of Allah which might be granted by Allah to certain people.'

Another aspect of the greatness of Prophet Muhammad is that Allah vowed by Prophet Muhammad's life, and Allah Glorified is He never vowed by the life of any other human being except Prophet Muhammad. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He can vow in whatever manner He decrees. However, we notice that He vowed by the wind, the brightness of morning, the night, the angels, but He had never vowed by the life of any human being except when He said: 'By your life (O Prophet), they are truly blindly stumbling in their delirium (of desire)!' (al-Hijr: 72) That is, by your life, O Prophet Muhammad, they (the people who disobeyed Prophet Lut (Lot)) are bewildered and confused.

Similarly, to indicate Prophet Muhammad's glorified standing in Allah's sight, Allah Glorified is He addressed Prophet Muhammad here as 'O Messenger'. Since Prophet Muhammad is the final messenger who came to confirm what the previous Scriptures had revealed, this means that all the bounties presented in the Scriptures before the Quran are encompassed in the Quran. In addition, the Quran also imparts more bounties that are required for the benefit of contemporary life.

Allah's Command in this verse is initiated with the words 'O Messenger'. This means that he is sent by Allah with a way of guidance for His creatures.

However, Allah continued His command with these words: 'Announce all that has been bestowed (and revealed) unto thee by your Lord.' (al-Ma'ida: 67) So why did Allah order His Messenger to announce the message, when the task is clear in the initial words 'O Messenger'. Is the whole purpose of a messenger not to announce a message by the One Who has sent him?'

In saying this, Allah Glorified is He knows that His Messenger will not hold back any part of the message. This verse means that Allah Glorified is He wanted to give an excuse to His Prophet in front of the people. He wanted to inform the followers that, if Prophet Muhammad announced unto them something which some of them disliked, he was only doing so in obedience to Allah's Command. Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him was not constructing this message by himself. In addition, Prophet Muhammad does not benefit from this message. They must receive his rulings attentively as if they had received it directly from Allah Glorified is He.

Then Allah Glorified is He says to His Messenger, Prophet Muhammad: 'For unless you reveal it (the message) fully, you will not have delivered His message (at all).' (al-Ma'ida: 67) Thus, he is obliged to deliver the message as it is, without even minor changes, as Allah Glorified is He wants His perfect religion to be delivered without fault.

The structure of faith requires these words to be spoken so that the message is delivered without fail. Therefore, it must also be completely implemented to mend the faults of this world and repair the corruption caused by man's ways. Allah Glorified is He has revealed His religion and its laws so that the world is operated in the way that He has ordained without any imbalance. Therefore, Allah says: 'For unless you reveal it fully, you will not have delivered His message (at all).' (al-Ma'ida: 67) In this way, Allah Glorified is He gives His Messenger Prophet Muhammad complete immunity. Allah has only sent forth the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him, for the best of people.

Allah Glorified is He created Prophet Adam peace be upon him and gave him His way of guidance. Prophet Adam was obliged to convey this guidance to his progeny. However, some generations of the children of Adam did not heed to this guidance. Thus, Allah Glorified is He has sent messengers to remind them of it. A messenger would only come after corruption had widely spread among the people. Allah Glorified is He had placed within the human mind three aspects of consciousness. The first aspect is that of self-reproach and conscience that refuses evil deeds (an-nafs al-lawama). The second aspect is that of evil and misguidance that incite us to commit misdeeds (an-nafs al-amara bil-sou'). The third aspect enjoys constant peace and serenity (an-nafs al-mutma'ina).

The purpose of the conscientious self-reproaching mind is to refuse all the allusions made by the misguided part of our mind. If the self-reproaching mind does not admonish this misguided mind, its evil will be encouraged and will persist unchecked. As for the third, the peaceful mind, it is the part of our minds that desires to follow Allah's way of guidance.

An example of the three aspects of the mind is a man who has passionate urges to commit a sin. He may commit the sin and then, later, regret it, reproach himself, and repent from the sin. If he does that, this man will have acted as his own deterrent. However, if the soul which enjoins evil gains control over him, there will be no deterrent in his mind from further misguidance.

What if corrupt thinking gains control of the general public and the people no longer forbid one another from committing evil? Because of that, Allah Glorified is He has sent a succession of messengers with new miracles to bring the world back to righteousness and His way of guidance.

Allah Glorified is He did not send any messenger without letting them know that their job is to convey His message. In the verse we are currently examining, Allah is giving His Messenger an excuse when conveying commands that his people might dislike, for the Messenger's role is only to announce Allah's orders. Allah says, 'For unless you reveal it fully, you will not have delivered His message (at all).' (al-Ma'ida: 67)

A message requires a sender Who here is Allah Glorified is He. It also requires a recipient who here is humankind, and a messenger who here is the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. The message's content is then revealed for the Messenger to announce.

In similar Arabic lexical structures, we find that the word arsala (to send), as in 'I sent a messenger to a receiver', has two objects. The first object is the messenger or the person who is sent. The second object is the receiver or the person to whom the message is meant. One object is direct and the other is indirect. The indirect object is joined to the verb with a preposition. The Arabic preposition used here is ila (to). Indeed, the messenger knows that he has been sent from Allah Glorified is He to the people for their own benefit. Certainly, no part of this message gives any benefit to Allah Glorified is He. If you see this verb followed by the preposition 'to' (ila), know that it is specifying the destination to which the message is being sent. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: 'and (He will make him) a messenger to the children of Israel.' (Al-'Imran: 49) This clarifies that Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) was sent with a message of guidance to the children of Israel that was meant for their own benefit. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And We have sent you (O Muhammad) as an apostle unto all humankind.' (an-Nisa': 79) That is to say, 'You have been sent for the benefit of humankind.' The proposition li (unto) here implies both meanings: benefit and destination. '... For unless you reveal it fully, you will not have delivered His message (at all)' (al-Ma'ida: 67). Thus, Allah Glorified is He has prevented the delivery of Prophet Muhammad's message to be incomplete in any way, just as His way of guidance is comprehensive and faultless.

Someone might say that people might not adhere to all the obligations that Allah requires of them at their proper times and places, such as prayers, for example. This is a result from our failure to organise our lives in accordance with Allah's way of guidance. It is a duty of society to organise people's daily jobs in the time between dawn and the Midday Prayers. This time can efficiently be made sufficient for compulsory activity and work. Most labour should end at midday. In this way, people's work will not clash with Allah's orders, and their activities will not be hindered or interrupted.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'And Allah will protect you from the (disbelieving) men.' (al-Ma'ida: 67) These words in the Quran are unavoidable because messengers are only sent after evil and corruption have become rampant and widespread. Had corruption not become the norm, Allah Glorified is He would have left society to restrain itself. He would have left the 'self-reproaching souls' to restrain the 'souls which enjoin evil' so that the 'souls at peace' would regain control of human behaviour. However, when corruption fills the world, Allah sends a messenger with divine guidance to amend the human state. Thus, it follows that the evil members of society will not simply leave the Messenger alone, but they will resist his endeavours. Such a society desires the scales of existence to be unbalanced because its leading members benefit from corruption and evil. Therefore, they seek to defend corruption, and if someone comes along to give justice to the weak and the oppressed, he will certainly encounter difficulties caused by the powerful and the corrupt.

These evil schemes will be primarily directed to the messenger's person. Since the messenger enjoys direct revelation from Allah, he will be able to bear this resistance as Allah Glorified is He had prepared him for this mission. Then, these difficulties will start to overcome the followers of the messenger, so Allah Glorified is He extends His spiritual aid to them so that they too are able to bear such hardships.

Allah has protected Prophet Muhammad's safety in all those events, as Allah has said: 'And Allah will protect you from the (disbelieving) men.' (al-Ma'ida: 67) It is as though Allah Glorified is He were saying to His Messenger: 'Be at peace, O Muhammad, for the One Who sent you to guide humankind will not allow anyone to harm you. I will extend your life until your message is complete. You might experience pain and hardship or encounter difficulties in the course of your mission, but you are divinely protected.'

The extent of some of these difficulties that Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him encountered were narrated to us. Were his teeth not broken at the battle of Uhud and his face injured? When his finger bled in an injury, he said: 'You are but a finger that bleeds, and all you have encountered is for Allah's cause!'(1)

When Allah Glorified is He has said to Prophet Muhammad: 'And Allah will protect you from the (disbelieving) men,' (al-Ma'ida: 67), this did not mean that Prophet Muhammad would not struggle and suffer in Allah's Cause to spread His message. Allah Glorified is He was telling His Messenger that, despite the hardships, his life would be protected. Allah Glorified is He did not prevent His Noble Messenger, Prophet Muhammad, from suffering so that no one who later called to Allah's way would ever suffer more than the pains suffered by Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Dala'il An-Nubuwwa

Let us listen well to what 'Aisha, the Mother of Believers, may Allah be pleased with her, is narrated to have said about this verse. She said: 'Prophet Muhammad stayed up late one night, and I was by his side. I said, "O Messenger of Allah, what ails you?" He said: "Would (it happen) that a good man from my companions guards me at night."' At that moment, she continues, 'I heard the sound of a sword, and Prophet Muhammad said, "Who is that?" A voice replied, "It is Sa'd and Hudhayfa. We came to guard you." So, Prophet Muhammad slept until I heard his breathing. Then, this verse was revealed. Prophet Muhammad raised his head at Qubbat Adam and said, "You can leave, those who are standing in guard, for Allah Glorified is He has protected me."'(1)

A Belgian researcher spent a great deal of time studying the biography of Prophet Muhammad. When she reached this point, she stopped and said, 'Even if this man was deceiving all the people, he would not have deceived himself about his own life. Had he not been convinced that his Lord would indeed protect him, he would not have done that.' So this was a practical application of the trust he had in his Creator Glorified is He. The Belgian scholar added, 'Therefore, I can say with complete certainty: There is no deity but Allah Glorified is He and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.' The woman embraced Islam because of her reflection on one single moment from the life of Prophet Muhammad.

Allah Glorified is He then says: 'Behold, Allah Glorified is He does not guide people who refuse to acknowledge the truth.' (al-Ma'ida: 67) We know that guidance means taking a direction that leads to the desired destination. Guidance is also any aid that helps a person who seeks direction to reach their destination. The disbelievers plotted against Prophet Muhammad and constructed schemes against him. Allah Glorified is He banned every way to them and aided His Messenger against them. Allah's succour of the believers at the Battle of Badr was a practical manifestation of His divine words: ‘How often a small soldier has overcome a great soldier by Allah’s leave (and will)!’ (al-Baqara: 249)

(1) Narrated by Al-Qurtubi, and Muslim narrated the likes of it

Indeed, despite their plots to get to Prophet Muhammad and his Companions, there was no evil plan or scheme which could result in killing him. Another manifestation was on the day when Prophet Muhammad emigrated from Mecca, and Allah Glorified is He blinded the sight of the young men who intended to kill Prophet Muhammad. They wanted to kill him together so that his blood indemnity would fall on all the tribes, but they could not see him as Allah Glorified is He cast a veil over their sights. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He made them unable to carry out their plans. It is as though He were saying to them: ‘You will never be able to stop Muhammad from delivering his message, neither openly, secretly or covertly. In fact, you are serving the message even as you attempt to destroy it.’

Their actions against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him at the onset of his mission affirmed the strength of his message. Then, Prophet Muhammad emigrated from Mecca. His guide on his emigration journey was a disbeliever named ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Urayqit. This showed us that one person’s disbelief was transformed by Allah to guide Prophet Muhammad to safety.

Although he was a disbeliever, ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Urayqit was not tempted by the bounty offered to betray Prophet Muhammad, and he did not deliver news of the Prophet to the idolaters of Quraysh. However, the disbelievers still did not take admonition from any of these events. Likewise, sheep covered the tracks of the Prophet and his Companion. Also, the hooves of Suraqa’s horse sank in the ground as he attempted to harm the Prophet’s procession.

Allah’s forces were on the side of Prophet Muhammad ibn ‘Abdullah. Thus, we saw how Allah Glorified is He did not guide the disbelieving folk to the goal which they sought which was to kill Prophet Muhammad, and nor did He guide them to the right path. Allah Glorified is He then says:

قُلْ يَٰٓأَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَسْتُمْ عَلَىٰ شَىْءٍ حَتَّىٰ تُقِيمُوا۟ ٱلتَّوْرَىٰةَ وَٱلْإِنجِيلَ
وَمَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيْكُم مِّن رَّبِّكُمْ ۗ وَلَيَزِيدَنَّ كَثِيرًا مِّنْهُم مَّآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيْكَ مِن
رَّبِّكَ طُغْيَٰنًا وَكُفْرًا ۖ فَلَا تَأْسَ عَلَى ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلْكَٰفِرِينَ ٦٨

Say, ‘People of the Book, you have no true basis [for your religion] unless you uphold the Torah, the Gospel, and that which has been sent down to you from your Lord,’ but what has been sent down to you [Prophet] from your Lord is sure to increase many of them in their insolence and defiance: do not worry about those who defy [God] [68] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 68)

As we know, ‘Say’ is a directive given to Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him. An announcement follows this directive from Allah Glorified is He to the people of the Book. It tells them that they are bereft of guidance because they have not properly observed the Torah and Gospel. Instead, they have corrupted their Scriptures and have not believed in the Quran, the perfected message of Divine Guidance revealed to Prophet Muhammad (ibn ‘Abdullah).

Allah Glorified is He says ‘You have no valid ground for your beliefs…’ (al-Ma’ida: 68). The Arabic words literally mean, ‘You have nothing of solid ground (that holds your belief).’ The word shay’ (thing) means the least important object of any class of materials. For instance, a piece of straw is a ‘thing’ and a leaf is a ‘thing’. That which is called a shay’ (in Arabic) is the flimsiest of beings.

Thus, Allah’s words: ‘You have no valid ground for your beliefs,’ (al-Ma’ida: 68) mean, ‘Do not think that when you apply some particular element of the Torah or Gospel’s teachings, while concealing and ignoring the remaining commands, that you have thereby attained some kind of guidance. You have no guidance at all until you truly observe the Torah and the Gospel, and then believe in the Book which has been revealed to Prophet Muhammad. You cannot simply take the parts of Allah’s way of guidance that please you, and leave aside the portions that do not please your desires.’

Furthermore, knowing that a shay’ (thing) is the lowest level of existence, these verses explain to them that they have sunk to the lowest level of existence because they have no guidance.

Allah Glorified is He adds: ‘Yet, all that has been bestowed upon you (O Prophet Muhammad) by your Lord is bound to make many of them more stubborn in their arrogance and in their denial of the truth.’ (al-An’am: 68) This means that they will not remain on a certain steady level of arrogance and disbelief. In fact, every time that Allah Glorified is He reveals a verse of guidance unto His Prophet, and every time He protects him, they will become even more obstinate in their misguidance. Their stubbornness should have been weakened, and their hearts softened by further guidance, but their hatred and abhorrence for the religion of Islam only intensified.

Khalid ibn Al-Walid may Allah be pleased with him who had once led the pagans in their military expeditions against Islam, one day said to ‘Amr ibn Al-’As may Allah be pleased with him: ‘It is clear (now) that the matters of power are now on Muhammad’s side.’ Then, they both embraced Islam despite the power and status they enjoyed amongst their people. When Khalid and ‘Amr saw the calamities which befell anyone who opposed Prophet Muhammad, irrespective of status and rank, they embraced Islam. This is the natural position of a logical mind that contemplates matters without any hatred or prejudice.

As for the disbelieving minds that are bent on hatred and prejudice, every verse that is revealed to support the believers will only serve to agitate rage and bitterness. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him, had to prepare himself to face these disbelievers.

O Messenger of Allah, you are not facing a limited force, but a growing force of evil. Every revealed verse guides those who have any goodness in their depths, while increasing the resentment of those who are utterly bereft of any goodness. Their evil increases with their sins and crimes, while the good people lessen their crime and relinquish their pasts.

We have the best example of this in the story (1) of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He told us that Prophet Yusuf’s brothers said: ‘Truly, Yusuf (Joseph) and his brother (Binyamin (Benjamin)) are dearer to our father than we are, even though we are so many in number. Behold, our father is surely suffering from an aberration!’ (Yusuf: 8)

---

(1) The story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph)

After that, they said to their father: 'Why will you not trust us with Yusuf (Joseph)?' (Yusuf: 11) Then, they began to plot and plan against their brother. They said: 'Let him go out with us tomorrow that he may enjoy himself and play.' (Yusuf: 12) The first plan that they had, as Allah Glorified is He tells us was: 'Slay Joseph.' (Yusuf: 9)

To slay means to force the soul out of the body, and this is the worst level of evil. However, they backed down from this first plan and said, 'Or drive him away to some (faraway) land '(Yusuf: 9) for they did not want to slay him. Thus, they were satisfied with the idea of leaving him in a faraway place, imagining that a caravan would pick him up, and thus they would separate Joseph from his father. So, their first plan was to kill him, and then they ended up thinking of a way that confirmed his survival: 'One of them said: "Slay Joseph, or else drive him away to some (faraway) land, so that your father's regard may be for you alone."' (Yusuf: 9) The third stage of planning was when they said: 'Cast him into the dark depths of this well.' (Yusuf: 10) A well contains water, and so many people will pass by this source of water. Thus, Allah Glorified is He showed us how goodness came from the depths of evil plots.

Thus, Allah's true words, 'but what has been sent down to you (Prophet) from your Lord is sure to increase many of them in their insolence and defiance' (al-Ma'ida: 68) mean that many of them will sink deeper into evil (O Prophet Muhammad). So prepare yourself (Prophet) for this.

We may observe here that Allah Glorified is He has allowed for the possibility that a minority of them might eventually embrace the true faith. He spoke only about the majority of the disbelievers and not all of them. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Nay, feel no sorrow for the people who deny the truth.' (al-Ma'ida: 68) Thus, do not grieve over them, O Messenger of Allah.

Nevertheless, despite the animosity and hatred of the disbelievers to his mission and all their attempts to harm him, Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him, never ceased to supplicate for their guidance. He used to constantly say, 'O Allah, guide my people, for they know not!'(1) He also never ceased to say: ‘Perhaps Allah Glorified is He will produce from their progeny those who will worship Allah alone.’(1) Indeed, this proved to be the case.

(1) Narrated by Az-Zabidi and As-Suyuti

After the first battles between the Muslims and the disbelievers, some companions would say to one another: ‘I am sad that ‘Amr escaped from me and I did not kill him.’ Another would say, ‘I am sad that ‘Ikrima escaped from my grip,’ and a third would say, ‘I do not know how Khalid ibn Al-Walid managed to escape.’

Allah Glorified is He did not allow the early Companions to kill those fierce warriors because He was saving them for Islam, and the inability of the Muslims to harm these men allowed them to aid Islam later on, by carrying the sword to defend it and spread its message. When 'Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl(2) may Allah be pleased with him finally received the injury which ended his life, he laid his head and asked Khalid ibn Al-Walid may Allah be pleased with both of them ‘Is this a death which would make the Messenger of Allah (Prophet Muhammad) pleased with me?’

Thus, Allah Glorified is He prevented the early Muslims from killing them in the earlier battles because in the later battles, they would become forces that fought for Islam’s cause with their military prowess. Thus, Allah Glorified is He kept them alive to serve His message. Allah Glorified is He then says:

إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَٱلَّذِينَ هَادُواْ وَٱلصَّٰبِـُٔونَ وَٱلنَّصَٰرَىٰ مَنْ ءَامَنَ بِٱللَّهِ
وَٱلْيَوْمِ ٱلْءَاخِرِ وَعَمِلَ صَٰلِحًا فَلَا خَوْفٌ عَلَيْهِمْ وَلَا هُمْ يَحْزَنُونَ ﴿٦٩﴾

For the [Muslim] believers, the Jews, the Sabiun, and the Christians – those who believe in God and the Last Day and do good deeds – there is no fear: they will not grieve[69] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 69)

There are four kinds of people who do not believe in the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and the blessings be upon him. This verse is one of the three verses in the Quran which share a similar structure. The first verse is in the chapter of al-Baqara, the second verse is here in the chapter of al-Ma'ida and the third verse is in the chapter of al-Hajj.

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

(2) The story of the martyrdom of ‘Ikrima ibn Abu Jahl

In the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Verily, those who have embraced (testified) faith (in this Divine Book), as well as those who follow the Jewish faith, and the Christians and the Sabi'un – all who believe in Allah and the Last Day and do righteous deeds – shall have their reward with their Lord; and no fear need they have, and neither shall they grieve.' (al-Baqara: 62) We can observe here that in the original Arabic of this verse, the word for Sabi'un is as-sabi'een in the Arabic accusative case.

Here in the chapter of al-Ma'ida, Allah Glorified is He says: 'For, verily, those who have embraced (testified) faith (in this Divine Book), as well as those who follow the Jewish faith, and the Sabi'un and the Christians – all who believe in Allah and the Last Day and do righteous deeds – no fear need they have, and neither shall they grieve.' (al-Ma'ida: 69) Here, the word for Sabi'un is as-sabi'un, in the nominative case, and is mentioned before the words 'the Christians'.

In the chapter of al-Hajj, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Verily, as for those who have embraced (testified) faith (in this Divine Book), and those who follow the Jewish faith, and the Sabi'un, and the Christians and the Magians (on the one hand), and those who are bent on ascribing divinity to others but Allah (on the other hand) – verily, Allah will decide between them on Resurrection Day: for, behold, Allah is a witness unto everything.' (al-Hajj: 17)

Here, four groups of people are mentioned in all the verses. In the verse of the chapter of al-Hajj, Allah Glorified is He adds two more groups. We can see that the information given in each verse is different as is the wording. In one case, the Christians are mentioned before the Sabi'un, whilst in another the Sabi'un followers are mentioned before the Christians. Additionally, in one case, the word Sabi'un is in the Arabic nominative case (Sabi'un), whilst in the other it is in the accusative case (Sabi'een).

As for the different information given, the verse in the chapter of al-Baqara tells us: 'All who believe in Allah and the Last Day and do righteous deeds – shall have their reward with their Lord; and no fear need they have, and neither shall they grieve.' (al-Baqara: 62) In the verse of the chapter of al-Ma'ida, Allah Glorified is He tells us: 'All who believe in Allah and the Last Day and do righteous deeds – no fear need they have, and neither shall they grieve.' (al-Ma'ida: 69) The verse in the chapter of al-Hajj says: 'Verily, Allah will decide between them on Resurrection Day: for, behold, Allah is a witness unto everything.' (al-Hajj: 17)

All three verses are presenting the same concept in diverse ways for different purposes. We may observe here that Allah Glorified is He says: '…embraced (testified) faith.' The word faith in the verse refers to the spoken faith and does not refer to the genuine belief of the heart. These verses speak of many groups and faiths. The verses mention the hypocrites as well as those who follow the Jewish faith (the followers of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him) and the Christians (the followers of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him). The verses also mention the Sabi'un. Those were not followers of any prophet. They probably used to follow Prophet Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him, but then broke away from Noah's faith and began to worship the stars, or they were people who broke away from Judaism and Christianity and began to worship the angels. Finally, there are the 'Magians' who are fire-worshippers.

So Allah Glorified is He wants to make a spiritual renewal in the world. All those who rush to embrace this Islam will be saved from the evil they did before the coming of Islam. Allah Glorified is He will forgive their past efforts that led people astray and ruled them unjustly.

In the chapter of al-Baqara, Allah Glorified is He says '… (they) shall have their reward with their Lord,' (al-Baqara: 62) which means that after forgiving them for the sins they had done, He will additionally reward them for the good deeds which were not annulled by evil. This was the explanation of the first two verses: those of the chapter of al-Baqara and that of al-Ma'ida.

We may observe that in the chapter of al-Ma'ida, Allah Glorified is He did not say: '…shall have their reward with their Lord.' (al-Baqara: 62) Perhaps, this is because this was already stated in the verse of the chapter of al-Baqara. There are many examples of this in the Noble Quran, as when a general statement is explained in the light of a specific statement elsewhere.

As for the verse in the chapter of al-Hajj, Allah Glorified is He pronounces therein: 'Verily, Allah, will decide between them on Resurrection Day: for, behold, Allah, is a witness unto everything.' (al-Hajj: 17) It appears that (many of them) will never embrace the true faith or do righteous deeds. Thus, these verses were revealed as novel and clarifying contracts of creed in this world.

Prophet Muhammad came to renew the religious affairs on earth. Allah Glorified is He says about those who testify faith only with their tongues, namely the hypocrites: 'For, verily, those who have embraced (testified) faith,' (al-Baqara: 69).' Those who have embraced faith' is the subject of the sentence, and it is in the Arabic accusative case because of the use of the particle (inna) ('verily') which always makes the noun following it accusative. Yet, Allah Glorified is He follows the particle inna by mentioning the noun As-Sabi'un in the nominative state instead of the grammatically traditional accusative state As-Sabi'een. Why did Allah place the nominative noun instead of an accusative noun, when this breaks the usual rule of Arabic grammar?' Verily, those who have embraced (testified) faith (in this Divine Book), as well as those who follow the Jewish faith, and the Christians and the Sabi'un...' (al-Baqara: 62).

In this occurrence of the word Sabians, it is put in the accusative case – sabina – without breaking the rule of I'rab (desinential inflection). In one instance, we find the word 'Sabians', preceding the word 'Christians,' while in another instance it follows it. Here, we must become acquainted with the period in which the Sabians lived. They existed before the coming of the Christians. So, if we want to know their chronological position, the True Lord Glorified is He mentions them before the Christians; and if we want to know their rank, we read elsewhere in the Quran that they come after the Christians. It follows that, when chronologically viewed, the True Lord mentions them before the Christians; and when categorised in terms of their numbers and size as a nation, He places them after the Christians. This is due to the fact that their numbers were less, and they did not represent as large a community as the Christians did.

Allah Glorified is He mentions the Sabians once in the accusative case and another in the nominative case to make us pay attention to this group of people and recognise them. Breaking the usual rule of grammar is a way of drawing attention to what is being said. The Sabians were a people who worshipped the stars and the angels, which is a form of misguidance and error.

So, there were the Jews, who acknowledged the existence of One True Lord (Allah), and Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him conveyed Allah's Message to them. And then there were the Christians who also acknowledged the existence of One True Lord, and `Isa (Jesus, son of Mary) peace be upon him conveyed Allah's Message to them. Last, there were the hypocrites who declared belief only with their tongues, although belief had not entered their hearts.

Allah Glorified is He wants to draw our attentions to the fact that the Sabians were a people who stepped outside the scope of belief regarding the existence of an Unseen Creator, yet the True Lord is telling us that He will forgive them if they have correct faith and do righteous deeds. Faith in Allah constitutes an essential condition to acceptance and reward of righteous deeds. Here, Allah mentions them before the Christians to dismiss any doubt that He will not pardon them if they believe and do righteous deeds.

We may also observe that they are mentioned in a context where Allah ranks them alongside those who worship Allah's creation instead of Allah. Anyone who attributes divinity to anything other than Allah is akin to those who worship stars and go beyond the precincts of monotheism.

Allah the Exalted allows every human being to enter the arena of faith and begin a purification of their creeds by means of which everyone can attain to true faith and dissociate themselves from all forms of joining false gods with Allah. If the hypocrites, Jews, Christians and Sabians embrace true faith and do righteous deeds, they will receive recompense and reward from Allah. They shall have no fear of any punishment in the Hereafter or grief over what they have lost in this worldly life. Evidently, faith is coupled with righteous action because faith unsupported by righteous words puts it in the jeopardy of being lost – Allah forbid. Such faith is worthless. Allah the Glorious and Exalted wants faith to rule all acts of life through righteous deeds. He commands every believer to act righteously so that they can be rewarded by their Lord and have no fear or grief.

As for those groups who persist in their position of disbelief, Allah will judge between them on the Day of Resurrection. For Allah is the Witness to everything. The word 'judge' indicates to us that Allah will give a judgement that separates the holders of right and truth from false ones. We know that the one who passes judgement only does so based on strong, irrefutable evidence. Evidence consists of confession, known as 'the queen of all proofs' in legal language, or the testimony of witnesses or the swearing of an oath. Allah the Glorious and Exalted will pass judgement between diverse parties and positions; to' judge' or 'decide' here means to pronounce judgement. When the one who judges is also the one who has been witness to the case, his verdict will be just. Therefore, the True Lord says: 'Allah witnesses all things.' (al-Hajj: 17) The True Lord then says:

لَقَدۡ أَخَذۡنَا مِيثَٰقَ بَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ وَأَرۡسَلۡنَآ إِلَيۡهِمۡ رُسُلٗاۖ كُلَّمَا جَآءَهُمۡ
رَسُولُۢ بِمَا لَا تَهۡوَىٰٓ أَنفُسُهُمۡ فَرِيقٗا كَذَّبُواْ وَفَرِيقٗا يَقۡتُلُونَ ﴿٧٠﴾

We took a pledge from the Children of Israel, and sent messengers to them. Whenever a messenger brought them anything they did not like, they accused some of lying and put others to death [70] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 70)

The Arabic word mithaq (covenant, pledge) means a seriously binding commitment. Pledges are only declared to be solemn if there is fear that they may be disregarded and breached. Many covenants of faith have been made. The first was that taken from all the descendants of Adam peace be upon him when Allah drew from the loins of the children of Adam their progeny and made them bear witness to His Godhead and Lordship.

'When your Lord took out the offspring from the loins of the children of Adam and made them bear witness about themselves, And (mention) when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, (saying to them), "Am I not your Lord?" They said, "Yes, we have testified." (This) - Lest you should say on the day of Resurrection, "Indeed, we were of this unaware." (al-A'raf: 172)

Or the firm pledge of support for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that Allah took from all previous Prophets peace be upon them all:

“And (recall, O People of the Scripture), when Allah took the covenant of the prophets, (saying), “Whatever I give you of the Scripture and wisdom and then there comes to you a messenger confirming what is with you, you (must) believe in him and support him.” (Allah) said, “Have you acknowledged and taken upon that My commitment?” They said, “We have acknowledged it.” He said, “Then bear witness, and I am with you among the witnesses” (Al-’Imran: 81).

Or the special pledge that was taken from every community to which a prophet or a messenger was sent. Also, every element of the religion entails a pledge. In Islam, we are committed to many pledges. Likewise, we also know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked to be pledged allegiance at Al-`Aqaba. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saw that many ties linked him to the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj; just as the many ties that linked him to every people who longed for unity under the banner of a single faith.

On their part, the Jews considered the Arabs of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj to be mere barbarians and servants who worked for them. They deemed leadership as belonging entirely to them. Every time they differed with the Arabs, they would threaten them with the imminent coming of a messenger in whom they would believe, and then they would slay them all.

Both tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj tried to win the Jews to their side. Al-Aws made a treaty with Banu Qurayzha, and Al-Khazraj made treaties with Banu An-Nadir and Banu Qaynuqa`. Still both of them were threatened by the Jews with the coming of this new Prophet. Therefore, both Arab tribes were eager to meet and get to know Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. It happened that during the pilgrimage season, a delegation of six men arrived, and Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him invited them to embrace Islam. They announced their belief in him saying: ‘We have left our people and there is not worse enmity and evil between any people than that between them. We hope that Allah unites them through you. We shall go to them and invite them to your cause, and present to them this religion which we have accepted from you. If Allah unites them through it, no man shall be dearer than you’

The delegation revisited Mecca during the pilgrimage season of the following year. Their number increased to twelve men. The pledge they made was that none of them should associate anything with Allah, or steal, or commit unlawful sexual intercourse (adultery or fornication), or kill his children, or commit slander or disobey the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him in any of the good things he enjoined. They returned to Medina accompanied by Mus`ab ibn `Umayr Allah be pleased with him who went to teach them the Quran. In the third year, seventy-three men came along with two women, Nusaiba bint Ka`b, known as Umm `Umarah, and Asma' bint `Amr ibn `Adi. They all pledged allegiance to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which heightened the apprehension of the Quraysh. In this pledge, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them: 'I covenant with you on the condition that you protect me from anything you protect your women and children from.' At response, Al-Barra' ibn Ma`rur took hold of his hand and said: 'Indeed yes, we swear by Him who has sent you with the Truth, we shall protect you from whatever we protect our kindred from. So, accept the pledge of our allegiance, O Messenger of Allah. For by Allah, we are men of battle and arms.' Abu Al-Haytham ibn At-Tayyihan interrupted and said: 'O Messenger of Allah, there are ties between us and certain men (meaning the Jewish tribes) which we shall sever. But if we do this and then Allah grants you victory, will you return to your own people (meaning the Quraysh) and leave us?' Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him smiled and said: 'No! Rather, blood for blood, and forgiving of blood for forgiving of blood. You are of me and I am from you. I will fight whom you fight and I will make peace with those with whom you make peace.' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him then stretched out his hand and they pledged allegiance to him. The second Pledge of `Aqaba comprised a promise of Paradise to all who made this pledge and honoured it – and they all did honour it.

These were some types of covenants and pledges. When the True Lord tells us in the verse under discussion that He took a solemn pledge from the children of Israel, this means that it was a firm and binding covenant: 'Verily, we took the covenant of the children of Israel and sent them Messengers. Whenever there came to them a Messenger with what they themselves desired not- a group of them they called liars and others among them they kill.' (al-Ma'ida: 70)

The True Lord received a solemn pledge from the children of Israel and sent messengers to convey His Law and Message to them. However, every time a messenger came to them, they would first debate to decide whether the law of guidance that he brought from Allah was to their liking or not. If they did not find it to their liking, they would kill the Messenger of Allah or deny him. They did this, even though they were bound by a solemn pledge to follow any Messenger of Allah once he produced a miraculous sign of his prophethood and brought Allah's Law that would give guidance and direction to their lives.

But the children of Israel rebelled over and over against the teachings of the Messengers because they did not find them to their liking. The first form of rebellion was denial, which was the first step in the course of violating their solemn pledge. They did not stop at merely rejecting and denying the Messengers of Allah, but they tried to isolate the Messenger so that his teachings would not get through to the people and guide them. Therefore, their rejection did not stop at denial, but went as far as killing the Messenger for bringing a message that did not conform to their likings and disliking.

First, what is the meaning of the Arabic word hawa (vain or egotistical desires, inclinations, likings)? It derives from the three-letter root' ha-waw-ya'. This root has three derivatives: hawa, hawa' (air) or huwiyy (falling down). All these pronunciations signify 'permeation' and 'inclination'. The word hawa means a liking and inclination of the soul to a thing. You may feel passionate about something in your soul, associated with strong cravings, even though the thing you want may be disagreeable, unacceptable, or unlawful.

But does hawa only signify negative desires? No, because there are positive kinds of desires, as those motivated by faith, which Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him taught us when he said: 'None of you (truly) believes until his desires (or inclinations) are in line with what I have brought.'(1) So it is possible that desires are towards good things; in this case, the desire becomes the motivator and director of the soul towards the truth. As for the word hawa' (air), it means the gas mixture that is inhaled and exhaled to provide vital oxygen to nourish the body and keep it alive. A popular saying expresses it this way: 'I approached as a breath subtly moves in and out, 'which denotes that the approach was subtle and unnoticed. We know that when we eat something we like, we enjoy its taste. Also, when we drink something we like, we taste its flavour. But breathing is involuntary and imperceptible; so when we breathe in something we like, it produces a subtle sensation.

(1) Narrated by Al-Baghawi in Sharh Al-Sunnah, At-Tabrizi in Mishkat Al-Masabih and Al-Muttaqi Al-Hindi in Kanz Al-`Ummal

There is a third derivative from the same root ha-waw-ya', and it is pronounced as huwiyy. The verbal form of the word is hawa/yahwi means 'to fall down' or 'drop'; such as lowering a bucket into a well. So, what kind of hawa about which is this verse talking?

The True Lord says: '…whenever there came to them a Messenger with what they themselves desired not - a group of them they called liars and others among them they kill.' (al-Ma'ida: 70) Accordingly, the hawa being referred to here is the desire of the soul, devoid of guidance from Allah. It establishes itself as the power that controls the behaviour of this soul and leads it into disobedience of Allah. But did the True Lord Glorified is He leave the human soul without any means of protection? No, because He sent Messengers who conveyed His law, summarised in the commandants of 'Do' and 'Do not do'. In this way, guidance can watch over and direct the soul's inclinations.

Yet, if the True Lord willed that His Law should be a guardian over the soul's inclinations, why did He create the soul at all? The answer is that Allah Glorified is He created the soul because, through its existence, the human beings shall have desire towards truthful and lawful aims which result in the perpetuation of their species and the earning of honest livelihood and gains. So instinct exists; Allah created it to perform a certain function in life; and, by means of His Law, He keeps it protected from deviating from its proper purpose.

Some people may suggest that since Allah Glorified is He created the sexual instinct, why should it not be left it to freely express itself? Our answer is that one has to be conscious of Allah and learn that the sexual instinct is meant to ensure the perpetuation of human life. To use it in ways that anger Allah causes ruin to the human species. It is a deviation from Allah's Way of guidance and it has punishable consequences.

This is similar to the instinct for food. The True Lord Glorified is He has created it to preserve human life. He did not give it to us so that we consume ourselves with gluttony and greed. Likewise, He did not give us the instinct for curiosity to spy on one another, but rather to discover the secrets of the universe and develop new techniques for the benefit of humankind. Every instinct exists for a specific purpose; and the moment it swerves from its original purpose defined by Allah Glorified is He the Divine Law intervenes and objects. Every instinct should be used within a certain sphere. The Divine Law has not come to eliminate instincts, but rather to elevate them so that people use them to bring benefit, not harm, themselves, and others.

An Arabic proverb says: ‘Vain desire is the bane of reason.’ When two people, an oppressor and an oppressed, stand before a judge to present their case, a fair judge is the one who lifts the injustice off the oppressed, even if he favours or is inclined towards the oppressor. Therefore, we find that the True Lord made His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him infallible; for He says: ‘He (Muhammad) does not speak from his own desire.’ (an-Najm: 3)

People who do not look deeply into the previous Quranic words will fail to notice the perfect usage of diction, so they may ask: ‘Since the True Lord corrected Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then how could he not have spoken out of desire?’ Our answer to this is that you do not understand Allah or His Messenger well enough. When Allah corrected His Messenger, this was not because Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went against a judgement that Allah had placed, nor did he change a Judgement of Allah to make it suit his own personal opinion. Rather, he used to exert his human capacity to reach a ruling on a certain issue according to what he saw as right. Then, Allah Glorified is He would amend this ruling, so Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would pronounce the amendment just as Allah had sent it down to him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never went against any of his Lord’s Judgements. All the amendments that Allah gave were associated with cases without precedents. Every amendment came as an improvement to a legal decision that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him arrived at by his independent human reasoning. Private inclinations played no part in the issue.

The saying of the True Lord, ‘He does not speak from his own desire’ (an-Najm: 3) informs us that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never received a ruling from Allah which he contradicted deliberately by his own desire. All the corrections or amendments that Allah made were concerning cases that had no precedent or pertinent guidelines from Allah to rule on. Therefore, we notice the kind tone that the True Lord uses to correct the decision of His Messenger such as when He says: 'Allah forgives you (Prophet)! Why did you give them permission to stay at home before it had become clear to you which of them spoke the truth and which were liars?' (at-Tawba: 43)

The pardon in the previous situation was not due to a contravention of a divine ruling, but it was a kind pardon; because Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him exercised his independent human reasoning to determine the ruling on issues that had no precedents in the divine law. Another example is found in the saying of the True Lord: 'O Prophet! Why do you ban (for yourself) that which Allah has made lawful to you…?' (at-Tahrim: 1)

The Messenger of Allah, in this particular situation, forbade himself certain things that he did not forbid the people. Here, the True Lord told him not to forbid himself the things which He has permitted him. Thus, this admonition was in the favour of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When Zayd ibn Haritha may Allah be pleased with him was asked to choose between remaining with Messenger Muhammad as his slave or to return to his family, he preferred to stay with the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him who rewarded him by taking him as his own son. Adoption was a known practice among the Arabs, so the people started calling him Zayd, the son of Muhammad. When Allah wanted to annul adoption, He said: 'Name your adopted sons after their real fathers; this is more equitable in Allah's sight…' (al-Ahzab: 5).

The word aqsat (more equitable) means 'more just' which indicates that equity is interrelated with justice. When someone is described as equitable, it means he is just. Equity was thoroughly administered by Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and indeed Allah's Judgement was even more equitable. This means that what Messenger Muhammad did was equitable by human standards, but Allah wanted him to follow the most equitable course.

Accordingly, the saying of the True Lord, 'He does not speak from his own desire' (an-Najm: 3) cannot be objected by someone who opposes the teachings of Islam. To an opponent of Islam who asks, ‘Allah would correct Muhammad, so how could it be said that Muhammad did not speak out of his own desire?’ We answer him first by asking: Do you know what ‘judging by desire’ denotes? To judge by desire would mean that a person knew well Allah’s Ruling and went contrary to it by his own will and desire. This was something our Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never did. Any correction from Allah Glorified is He was reported by no one other than the Messenger of Allah himself. This shows how absolutely honest he was in conveying Allah’s Message.

The True Lord the Exalted says about the children of Israel: ‘…whenever there came to them a Messenger with what they themselves desired not-a group of them they called liars and others among them they kill.’ (al-Ma’ida: 70) So there were two groups: the first group consisted of those who were unwilling to have faith in Allah’s Law because of their private inclinations which resulted in their denying the Messengers. The second group consisted of those whose souls were filled with fierce opposition and strong enmity towards the Messengers of Allah. They feared that if the Messenger lived, he would convey his message to other people. Therefore, they attempted to kill the Messenger.

Denial is the first stage of opposition. There were those who dropped down into deeper levels of opposition and feared that the message might reach and convince other people, so they tried to kill the Messenger. Denial is to disaffirm a statement or an action. As for killing, it is to bring an end to life; the one who commits it adopts the most severe stance of opposition.

The precision of the Quran language emerges in Allah’s use of the past tense in referring to one group and the present tense to refer to the other group: ‘…whenever there came to them a Messenger with what they themselves desired not - a group of them they called liars and others among them they kill.’ (al-Ma’ida: 70) This is because denial is an arrogant refusal to listen to the Messenger, while killing is an arrogant refusal to allow the very existence of the Messenger on the part of the deaneries. Killing is more heinous because it aims at obliterating any trace of the existence of the victim. Therefore, the act of denial is framed in the past tense, while the act of killing is framed in the present tense.

Killing, repugnant as it is, may cool down after a while. This is what makes society react angrily when a heinous crime is committed, but after the elapse of ten years and the execution verdict is finally issued, the people do not show any reaction. Some of them may even sympathize with the criminal. The True Lord, therefore, warns us that we should not wipe out from our minds the image of their killing of Messengers of Allah. Rather, we must always recall the atrocity of their crime and never feel sympathy for those who killed the Messengers. The scholars of the Arabic language say that the present tense can be used to evoke the image of an act in the mind.

The moment a fair judge rules that a man guilty of murder must be executed, he does not consider the murder a forgotten event just because it has been committed in the past, but rather, he brings it to his mind as though the blood is still flowing and the wound is still open. He is not judging something chronicled in the past, but something real in the present. It is as though the True Lord is commanding us to keep alive in our minds what has been committed. Another example of evoking vivid images in the mind is found in the saying of the True Lord: 'Have you (Prophet) not considered how Allah sends water down from the sky...?' (al-Hajj: 63) Allah sends down the rain and as a result: '…the next morning, the earth becomes green…' (al-Hajj: 63). Thus, Allah uses the present tense to keep the images vivid and fresh in our minds through a circumstantial and continuous description. The True Lord says, '…whenever there came to them a Messenger with what they themselves desired not-a group of them they called liars and others among them they kill.' (al-Ma'ida: 70) Yet, since Allah wills the Messengers to have enough life to completely deliver His Message, how could the True Lord say that these people killed their Messengers, when the Messengers of Allah cannot be killed, and only the Prophets can be killed? Our answer to this is that the Prophets are also Messengers, as proved by the following Words of the True Lord: 'We have never sent any messenger or prophet before you (Muhammad)…' (al-Hajj: 52).

Both the Messenger and the Prophet are sent by Allah. The difference is that the Messenger brings new religious teachings, while the Prophet is sent forth as a role model of guidance for an already revealed message. The True Lord the Exalted and then says:

وَحَسِبُوٓاْ أَلَّا تَكُونَ فِتۡنَةٞ فَعَمُواْ وَصَمُّواْ ثُمَّ تَابَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيۡهِمۡ
ثُمَّ عَمُواْ وَصَمُّواْ كَثِيرٞ مِّنۡهُمۡۚ وَٱللَّهُ بَصِيرُۢ بِمَا يَعۡمَلُونَ ٧١

they thought no harm could come to them and so became blind and deaf [to God]. God turned to them in mercy but many of them again became blind and deaf: God is fully aware of their actions [71]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 71)

The Arabic word hasiba means 'to think', 'suppose,' 'deem' or 'consider'; but it means 'to calculate', 'reckon' or 'count' when it is pronounced hasaba. As for the noun husban, it means to think or suppose something is true. The people from whom Allah received the solemn pledge—the children of Israel—thought that denying and killing the Messengers would not bring trials upon them. This denotes that they did not have proper knowledge, but they thought it was likely that no trial and testing would ensue. The root meaning of the word fitna (trial or test), as we have said before, is to place gold in the fire to cleanse it from impurities. The word fitna also means 'test' or 'trial,' in which a human may either pass or fail. So, why did they think that they would not be tested in consequence of their behaviour? They were led into this assumption because of the mistake they made when they said: '…We are the children of Allah and His beloved ones…' (al-Ma'ida: 18).

Also, the mistake they made when they said: '…The Fire will only touch us for a few days...' (al-Baqara: 80). They thought that Allah Glorified is He would only punish them for worshipping the golden calf and nothing else. This was an incorrect assumption. Religion has not come into the world simply to deliver a certain people no matter what they do, but rather, it has come so that every human can be judged and recompensed for their actions during this life. It is strange that they made this mistaken assumption and misjudged matters, even though they were experts in calculation and reckoning. Just calculation and reckoning is what determines whether something is true or false. The amazing point that can be made here that emphasizes Allah's Mercy is that when the True Lord the Most High judges humankind. He says: 'This is for you, and this is against you', but when He provides for them, He does so without measure or account. But they did not pay attention to this; the True Lord says of them: 'and they thought there would be no resulting trial (or punishment)…' (al-Ma'ida: 71). That is, they thought that the matter would involve no testing or accountability for anyone of them.

Concerning the part of the verse, 'wahasibu an-la takuna fit'natun' (they thought there would be no resulting trial), we know that the Arabic particle an (that) puts the following verb in the subjunctive mode. About this point, someone asked me about a Quran reciter whom he heard on the radio reading this verse and following it with the verb takun (to be) pronounced as takunu in the indicative mode, instead of takuna in the subjunctive mode.

I said to him: There were three prominent Quran reciters during the early eras of Islam, namely Abu `Amr, Hamza, and Al-Kisa'i. Each of them had his own distinctive style of recitation. Although we know that the particle an (that) makes the verb subjunctive, this rule only applies if the verb before this particle does not indicate knowledge, certainty, or assurance. The accusative particle (an) will not induce the following verb to take the subjunctive mode if it comes after a verb denoting certain knowledge, as in the saying of the True Lord, ''alima an sayakunu minkum marda waakharuna yadribuna fil-ardi,' translated as, 'He knows that there will be some among you sick, others travelling through the land...' (al-Muzzammil: 20).

The prominent grammarian Ibn Malik expressed this rule in a poetic line in his Alfiya: 'Subjunctives are made by the subjunctive particles lan, kay and anna – unless it comes after a verb denoting certainty.' As for the particle an after verbs denoting doubt or probability, it can be followed by a verb in the subjunctive or indicative mode. Those who considered the verb as more indicative of uncertainty used the indicative mode, while those would did not view the assumption as closer to probability than certainty used the subjunctive mode. The methods of Quran recitation used by Al-Kisa'i, Abu 'Amr and Hamza applied the indicative mode here because they considered that the assumption at this point was close to being certain, in which case the particle an would be meant for emphasis, not to introduce the subjunctive (i.e. empathic rather than accusative). It is considered a shortened form of the emphatic particle anna, termed an al-mukhaffafah. As for the word 'fitna' (punishment) in the part of the verse saying, “And they thought there would be no (resulting) punishment” (al-Ma’ida: 71), it is in the nominative case because it is the subject of the verb takuna, which is derived from the verb kana (to be).

The verb kana usually has a nominative subject and an accusative predicate, but here it has no predicate because this kind of kana corresponds to what is termed kana at-tamma (complete kana) rather than kana an-naqisa (incomplete kana). The reason we are mentioning all these details is because we need to have a precise understanding of the Quran. For example, when we read the True Lord’s Words: ‘wa-in kana dhu‘us’ ratin fanadhiratun ila maysaratin’ translated as: ‘and if (the debtor) is in a hard time (has no money), then grant him time till it is easy for him to repay…’ (al-Baqara: 280).

The verb kana (to be) here is a perfect tense verb; dhu‘us’ ratin is the subject of complete kana (kana at-tamma), so it needs no complement because the intended meaning is that if the debtor is found to be in straitened circumstances, then grant him time till it is easy for him to repay.

We should discern the meaning of ‘complete’ and ‘incomplete’ forms of verb kana. We know that every word we say is one of two things: either it is unused and unfamiliar or it is a used familiar word. A used word is that which, when said, has a distinctive, independent meaning that comes directly to the mind. If this word does not involve time, it is a noun, such as the words ‘earth,’ ‘sun’ and ‘moon.’ There are also words which do not have independent meanings like prepositions, such as fi (in). It is true that it indicates the notion of one thing being inside another, but still it does not have an independently understood meaning. Therefore, it must be attached to something else, such as when we say, ‘The water is in the cup’ or ‘the pupil is in the classroom’. On the other hand, if a word has an independent meaning, and includes the element of time, it is a verb.

For example, when we just say ‘sky’, the element of time is absent here - the sky existed in the past, it exists in the present and it will exist in the future. As for the word ‘eat’, we understand that it comes from the concept of eating. It has an independent meaning, and time is part of its meaning. As for the word ‘in’, it does not have an independent meaning, and it must be added to another word to make sense. So every word has a meaning which can either be independently understood or not. If it can be independently understood, we ask whether or not time is an integral part of its meaning; if it is, this means it is a verb (fi'l). But if time is not part of its meaning, this means it is a noun ism. Last, if the word does not have an independent meaning and needs something to be added to it to make sense, we call it a particle (harf).

This is how we can understand the different parts of speech. A verb is a meaning that includes time; for example, the word 'ate' means that someone consumed some food in the past. This is how we can understand the verb kana (to be); and if we use the word 'was' just to indicate that something happened in the past, such as saying, 'Zayd was travelling,' this means that the verb kana here is naqis (incomplete). In light of this, we can better understand the True Lord's Words: 'And if someone is in hardship, then (let there be) postponement until (a time of) ease.' (al-Baqara: 280)

If you want to express the concept of 'being' on its own without anything new added to it, the verb is 'complete'. If you want to express the concept of being with something added to it, then this verb is 'incomplete'. For example, when Allah says: 'wahasibu an-la takuna fit'natun' (literally, 'they thought there would be no resulting trial'), this meant they thought that no trial would ensue, so the meaning is complete.

Here, the children of Israel acted as the pupils who went to school while unaware that there would be a test at the end of the year. So they spent the whole year without exerting any effort or studying. Instead, they just played around. This was a mistaken assumption, because religion did not come randomly or arbitrarily, but rather, it came to organise all the actions of life and to be applied by the believers. They should have accepted Allah's Religion and acted upon it according to its teachings. It is strange that they made this assumption and did not reckon things properly even though they were a people who mastered the knowledge of counting and calculation. They made assumptions hasibu (pronounced ha-si-bu), but they did not make any calculation or reckoning hasabu (pronounced ha-sa-bu). Examining and calculating matters properly are what determines and ensures their truthfulness.

For Allah, everything is based on just measurement and accounting; accounting for and against the servant.' And they thought there would be no resulting trial (or punishment),' (al-Ma'ida: 71) that is, they thought that they would not be tested. They thought that Divine Messages and laws did not present any test to them. Even when they learned the truth, they shut their eyes and closed their ears to it. We know that human perception abilities include hearing, sight, and mind: 'It is Allah who brought you out of your mothers' wombs knowing nothing, and gave you hearing and sight and minds, so that you might be thankful.' (an-Nahl: 78)

So, the means of perception are hearing, sight, and mind. Seeing is a personal experience, whereas hearing is an act of receiving from others which makes hearing broader than seeing. Hearing is also the first sense that fully functions at birth. If we place something close to the eyes of a newborn, he does not move because he cannot see well. This may continue for ten days until he begins to see properly. But a newborn reacts to a sound that is close to his ear; hence, hearing is the first sense to come into being. Therefore, the True Lord first mentions the hearing, then the sight and the mind.

In this part of the Quranic verse, 'so they became blind and deaf' (al-Ma'ida: 71), Allah Glorified is He asks first about their personal act of seeing and does not ask about what they heard from other people.' So they became blind, 'that is, they even failed to see the things that concerned them and did not contemplate the signs of the cosmos, and nor did they listen to the glad tidings, warnings or guidance brought to them by Allah. They did not assent to follow them. Allah the Glorious and Exalted rebukes them first for the things which they should have seen for themselves. The ear hears things from other sources; therefore, Allah first rebukes them for not using their eyes. Even if we suppose that they could not see for themselves the cosmic signs, what was wrong with them that they did not try to look, not even after a Messenger came to them and urged them to look at Allah's Universe and reflect upon it?

Suppose that they were heedless at first, and they did not care to look, why did they not wake up and listen attentively and positively when the bearer of glad tidings and warnings came to alert them? Thus, the words: '…so they became blind and deaf...' (al-Ma'ida: 71) are very logical here.

After that, Allah accepted their repentance, saved them from Pharaoh, and split the sea for them to cross. But as soon as they came out of the sea and saw some people serving and worshipping idols, they said to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him 'Make for us a god as they have gods.' (al-A'raf: 138) Musa peace be upon him commanded them to repent, and Allah accepted their repentance despite their numerous sins. Then, Allah turned forgivingly and mercifully to them: '…Then Allah turned to them in forgiveness…' (al-Ma'ida: 71).

The Arabic word tawbah (repentance) means a fresh chance for sound souls to run back into goodness. Let us think; what would be the reaction of sinners if Allah had not allowed them to repent, leaving them without hope of forgiveness? They would have persisted in sin and felt that they were proceeding on the road to evil with no way of return. When Allah accepts the repentance of a sinner, it means that He wants to protect the society from his evil. Repentance has stages. The first step is Allah allowing forgiveness to be sought from Him, the second is the servant showing repentance, and the third is by Allah accepting his repentance. This can be found in the True Lord's words: '…He turned to them in mercy in order for them to return (to Him)…' (at-Tawba: 118).

What does it mean that Allah turned to them in mercy? He the Glorious and Exalted did not turn to them to accept their repentance until after they had repented. So, Allah's first turning to them was in the sense of first allowing them to repent, and then came their repentance, followed by the True Lord's acceptance of it. But although these people became blind and deaf in heart, Allah was still kind to them. So what did they do next? They turned blind and deaf once again: '…Then Allah turned to them in forgiveness; then (again) many of them became blind and deaf. And Allah is seeing of what they do.' (al-Ma'ida: 71)

The verb fa'amu, translated as 'became blind', is an action verb like 'ate', 'drank', or 'attended'; so where is its subject? The subject is waw al-jama'ah (plural masculine pronoun – which in Arabic comes after the verb in the form of the letter u attached to the end). Ibn Malik stated a rule for this issue: when an Arabic verb refers to two or more people, the pronouns referring to the plural or dual forms of the pronouns (jama' or muthanna) must be removed from the verb. You do not say qamaa Zayd wa 'Amr (Zayd and `Amr stood up), but rather qama Zayd wa 'Amr, without using the dual verb form qamaa. Similarly, you do not say, qamu at-talamidh (the pupils stood up) with the plural verb form qamu, but rather, you say qama at-talamidh with the singular verb because the word ‘pupils’ replaces the need for the attached pronoun. Ibn Malik said: Remove all pronouns from the verb if it refers to two persons or a group (at least three persons) as the subject, such as faza ash-shuhada’ (the martyrs attain salvation), wherein the verb faza is singular, not plural.

That is, if the subject is dual or plural, all the verb dual and plural suffixes must be removed. As for the word kathir (many) here, it is either considered to be a substitute for the masculine plural suffix or a predicate of an omitted subject. The sentence would say if this subject is not omitted: ‘the deaf and blind are kathir (many); or it could be a subject of the preceding verbs, in which case the clause is worded in the dialect of an Arab clan named Banu Al-Harith ibn Ka’b who would use the plural or dual suffixes, when the verb was attached to an apparent noun subject in the dual or plural form, such as qamu ar-rijal (the men stood), instead of the more usual form qama ar-rijal, with the singular verb followed by the plural subject.

Some people consider this to be syntactically similar to Allah’s Words, ‘wa-asarru an-najwa alladhina zalamu,’ translated as: ‘... those who do wrong ‘conceal their private conversation…’ (al-Anbiya’: 3) in which the masculine plural suffix u (they) is attached to the end of the verb asarru (conceal).

Concerning the part of the verse saying, ‘…then (again) many of them became blind and deaf,’ (al-Ma’ida: 71) the True Lord says: ‘... many of them…’ rather than (all of them) to allow for the possibility that a few of them were contemplating embracing true faith. The word ‘many’ draws our attention to the fact that the True Lord the Glorious and Exalted did not ignore the minority who were thinking about embracing faith. This also emphasises and affirms Allah’s previous statement: ‘…while most of you are disobedient.’ (al-Ma’ida: 59)

‘…Then (again) many of them became blind and deaf. And Allah is seeing of what they do.’ (al-Ma’ida: 71) The word basir (literally, ‘one who sees’) is like the word ‘alim (one who knows) meaning that Allah is witness over them – and the eye is the best witness.

The True Lord the Exalted then says:

لَقَدۡ كَفَرَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ هُوَ ٱلۡمَسِيحُ ٱبۡنُ مَرۡيَمَۖ وَقَالَ ٱلۡمَسِيحُ
يَٰبَنِيٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ ٱعۡبُدُواْ ٱللَّهَ رَبِّي وَرَبَّكُمۡۖ إِنَّهُۥ مَن يُشۡرِكۡ بِٱللَّهِ فَقَدۡ حَرَّمَ ٱللَّهُ
عَلَيۡهِ ٱلۡجَنَّةَ وَمَأۡوَىٰهُ ٱلنَّارُۖ وَمَا لِلظَّٰلِمِينَ مِنۡ أَنصَارٖ ٧٢

Those who say, ‘God is the Messiah, son of Mary,’ have defied God. The Messiah himself said, ‘Children of Israel, worship God, my Lord and your Lord.’ If anyone associates others with God, God will forbid him from the Garden, and Hell will be his home. No one will help such evildoers [72] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 72)

There are three glorious verses that deal with this issue. The first is the verse saying: ‘They have certainly disbelieved who say, “Allah is the Messiah, the son of Mary”…’ (al-Ma’ida: 72) The second is the verse saying, ‘They have certainly disbelieved who say, “Allah is the third of three…”’ (al-Ma’ida: 73) And the third is the verse saying, ‘and (beware the Day) when Allah will say, “‘O Jesus, Son of Mary, did you say to the people: Take me and my mother as two gods alongside Allah?” He will say, “Exalted are you! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right. If I had said it, you would have known it. You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself. Indeed, it is you who is Knower of the unseen.”‘ (al-Ma’ida: 116)

Accordingly, the dispute over this issue consisted of three main positions: one group held that the Messiah peace be upon him was Allah; another group believed that the Messiah was Allah along with two other gods; a third group said that the Messiah and his mother peace be upon them were both gods; and to each group a rebuttal is given. This rebuttal is based on the simplest of evidence present before our eyes in living beings. The human, as we know, is the master of the universe and is served by all lesser beings. The humans need animals for obtaining subsistence, and they also need plants and minerals. This master, the human being, needs creatures that are lower than him. Therefore, rebutting the claim that our Prophet ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and his mother, Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her, were gods, the True Lord the Exalted says: ‘…they both ate food (like other mortals)…’ (al-Ma’ida: 75). This provides a proof of the clearest and most convincing character not only on the logical and philosophical level, but also on all other levels as well. Since they had to eat to sustain themselves, they had need for lesser beings. Anyone who has need for lesser beings cannot be the Supreme Being or the One and Only Creator God.

The followers of these three groups disagreed with one another. The True Lord Glorified is He says, '…Say not: "Three (trinity)!"' Cease!…' (an-Nisa': 171) The expression 'the third of three' is used to imply that some item is one of three others, but unspecified. Whenever three things are grouped together, any of them can be referred to as 'the third of the three.' This expression is quite unobjectionable except in respect to God. We cannot say 'the third of three gods,' for there is only One God. It is possible to say, with respect to Allah, 'the third of two' because Allah says: '…There is no secret conversation between three people where He is not the fourth, neither between five where He is not the sixth, nor between less or more than that without Him being with them…' (al-Mujadala: 7).

So it is possible to say, 'Allah is the fourth of three', or 'the fifth of four', or 'the sixth of five', meaning that when He is present, the three becomes four, the four becomes five or the five becomes six. If we add an ordinal number to a cardinal number that is less than it is, this implies that it is the final addition to this group. So, if someone says: 'Allah is the fourth of three people, who sit together', this is correct. But if we say that they are all gods, this is unlawful and prohibited because God cannot be multiple; there is but One Sole God.

We may observe that the True Lord the Exalted did not say: 'There is no secret conversation between two people where He is not the third' because najwa (secret conversation) only involves three or more people. When two people sit together, they may speak with one another without secrecy. A confidential tone is only adopted to make sure that no one else hears. Hence, najwa means to impart or discuss matters in a confidential tone, and it takes place between a minimum of three people. Therefore, when mentioning it, the True Lord uses the lowest number to which it is applied. Thus, when you say, 'the third of three', this is correct as long as you do not mean three gods. The True Lord the Exalted wants to assert the falsity of the above claim through His Statement: '…they both ate food (like other mortals)…' (al-Ma'ida: 75). Food is one of life's basic necessities and provides the energy needed for life's activities. A man needs to preserve his life and to supply himself with the necessary energy. Food is a lesser entity than human beings are; it is at their service. Therefore, if both `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and Maryam (Mary) used to eat food, this means that they had need of lesser orders of creation. On the other hand, if they had not eaten, they would assuredly have experienced hunger and emaciation. This proves they were not gods. Some may say that, '…they both ate food (like other mortals)…' (al-Ma'ida: 75) is rather an allusion to excretion, but we say that expulsion of body waste is not essential since in paradise Allah will feed us, but we will not excrete any waste; hence, this is not a sound argument. The True Lord always elevates the argument. The Jews said inappropriate things about the Messiah peace be upon him, things that did not befit his status as a Prophet and Messenger. They also said inappropriate things about Maryam (Mary) that did not befit her status as a virtuous woman elected by the True Lord Glorified is He.

The Jews were the opponents of the Messiah peace be upon him, whereas his helpers were the Disciples. Since he was unable to cause harm to his enemies or to bring benefit to his Disciples, how could he be a god? The Quran also says of Maryam (Mary), 'Mary, be devout to your Lord, prostrate yourself in worship, bow down with those who pray.' (Al-'Imran: 43)

The Messiah himself peace be upon him was always a devoted worshipper of Allah; a worshipper only worships that which is higher than him. God cannot worship Himself. If such a claim is made by those who attribute themselves to heavenly guidance and have faith in Allah and His Religion, what would the atheists—who have no connection with heavenly guidance and deny the existence of Allah—say?

It was the duty of those who claimed to be believers in Divine Guidance which was brought to them by Prophets in the form of law and teachings, to clear these ambiguities and agree among themselves on the truth. For example, the world already existed and was already being managed before the coming of Messiah peace be upon him. So, who was managing the world before he was born? Therefore, the True Lord wanted to settle this issue conclusively, forever; and the Glorious Quran teaches us to say: '…verily, (either) we or you are rightly guided or in a plain error.' (Saba': 24) Could two contradictory positions be true simultaneously? No, because one of them must be right, while the other must be wrong. Therefore, we say that what you say does not bind us, and what we say does not bind you; we will refer the matter to the God in whom we believe. And to end this issue once and for all, let us recall the True Lord’s Instruction: ‘If anyone disputes this with you now that you have been given this knowledge, say, “Come, let us gather our sons and your sons, our women and your women, ourselves and yourselves, and let us pray earnestly and invoke Allah’s Curse on those of us who are lying.”’ (Al-’Imran: 61)

Let us ask Allah to send His Curse upon those who are lying to finally resolve this dispute between us, thus allowing neither of us to dominate the other. All matters are in Allah’s Hands. Here we are, presenting our womenfolk, our children, and ourselves and making a single call, ‘May Allah’s Curse be upon those of us who are lying!’ Inevitably, every time two contending parties mutually invoke Allah’s Curse on the lying party, Allah brings out the truth instantly; however, no one among the people of the Book agreed to engage in this mutual invocation of Allah’s curse on the lying party. The True Lord says:

لَّقَدۡ كَفَرَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ ثَالِثُ ثَلَٰثَةٖۘ وَمَا مِنۡ إِلَٰهٍ إِلَّآ إِلَٰهٞ وَٰحِدٞۚ وَإِن
لَّمۡ يَنتَهُواْ عَمَّا يَقُولُونَ لَيَمَسَّنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ مِنۡهُمۡ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌ ﴿٧٣﴾

Those people who say that God is the third of three are defying (The truth]: there is only One God. If they persist in what they are saying, a painful punishment will afflict those of them who persist [73] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 73)

Consequently, those who do not refrain from saying so and declare their repentance will fall into disbelief and be made to suffer a painful punishment. The True Lord then says:

أَفَلَا يَتُوبُونَ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ وَيَسۡتَغۡفِرُونَهُۥۚ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ﴿٧٤﴾

Why do they not turn to God and ask His forgiveness, when God is most forgiving, most merciful? [74] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 74)

Thus, it becomes necessary for anyone who makes such a claim to repent and seek the True Lord’s Forgiveness. He the Most High then says:

مَّا ٱلۡمَسِيحُ ٱبۡنُ مَرۡيَمَ إِلَّا رَسُولٞ قَدۡ خَلَتۡ مِن قَبۡلِهِ ٱلرُّسُلُ وَأُمُّهُۥ
صِدِّيقَةٞۖ كَانَا يَأۡكُلَانِ ٱلطَّعَامَۗ ٱنظُرۡ كَيۡفَ نُبَيِّنُ لَهُمُ
ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ ثُمَّ ٱنظُرۡ أَنَّىٰ يُؤۡفَكُونَ ﴿٧٥﴾

The Messiah, son of Mary, was only a messenger; other messengers had come and gone before him; his mother was a virtuous woman; both ate food [like other mortals]. See how clear We make these signs for them; see how deluded they are [75] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 75)

The word afaka (to be deluded or tempted away) means to be astray or to be led astray by someone else’s influence. This signifies that Satan had insinuated this false idea about the Messiah into their minds because the Messiah peace be upon him was only a Messenger just like the other Messengers who had come and gone before him. His mother was described as a siddiqah (a confirmer and supporter of the truth) because she believed in the truth of what the Messiah brought from Allah. The proof of their humanity was that, just like all human beings, they needed to sustain themselves with food, drink, and clothing. The divinity which they claimed for them contradicts this fact. This is the very essence of ifk (delusion), where such beliefs make no sense to a mind that is free of passions. The True Lord Glorified is He says:

قُلۡ أَتَعۡبُدُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا يَمۡلِكُ لَكُمۡ ضَرّٗا
وَلَا نَفۡعٗاۚ وَٱللَّهُ هُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ﴿٧٦﴾

Say, ‘How can you worship something other than God that has no power to do you harm or good? God alone is the All Hearing and All-Knowing’ [76] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 76)

The mind rejects acknowledging or worshipping anything other than the Creator because no one except Allah has the power to punish one’s enemies or to benefit oneself or one’s group and followers. This is proved by the fact that the enemies of the Messiah did what they did, and neither the Messiah nor his Disciples were able to cause them harm or do anything to help their own selves.

The True Lord concludes this verse by saying, '…But it is Allah who is the All-Hearer, All-Knower.' (al-Ma'ida: 76) 'All-Hearer' refers to speech, while 'All-Knower' refers to the thoughts that revolve in the mind. As for the thoughts in their minds, was it because of their avidity for temporal power—at any cost—that they said this? Allah knows best. If such words were uttered, He has heard them; and if such thoughts ran through their minds, He knew of them. A rational person deliberates his words before actually saying them, and there is intention behind every word. And Allah the Exalted is eternally Hearing and Knowing. The True Lord then says:

قُلْ يَٰٓأَهْلَ ٱلْكِتَٰبِ لَا تَغْلُوا۟ فِى دِينِكُمْ غَيْرَ ٱلْحَقِّ وَلَا تَتَّبِعُوٓا۟ أَهْوَآءَ قَوْمٍ
قَدْ ضَلُّوا۟ مِن قَبْلُ وَأَضَلُّوا۟ كَثِيرًا وَضَلُّوا۟ عَن سَوَآءِ ٱلسَّبِيلِ ﴿٧٧﴾

Say, 'People of the Book, do not overstep the bounds of truth in your religion and do not follow the whims of those who went astray before you – they led many others astray and themselves continue to stray from the even path' [77] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 77)

When talking about a common issue to both Christians and Jews, Allah addresses them together by the vocative: 'O people of the Book!' In case it is something specific to one group, He addresses it individually. The Arabic word ghulu (exceeding proper limits) means going to extremes in opinions, whether positively or negatively, either by overestimating or depreciating the status of an individual. Therefore, immoderation always triggers contradictions. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to his companion `Ali may Allah be pleased with him 'O' 'Ali, two kinds of people will be destroyed because of (how they see) you: one who loves you excessively, and one who hates you excessively.' He peace and blessings be upon him also said: 'O' 'Ali, no one loves you but a believer, and no one hates you but a hypocrite.'(1) He peace and blessings be upon him also said, 'O' 'Ali, the aggressing faction will fight you.'(2)

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Awsat

(2) Narrated by Al-Hindi in Kanz Al-`Ummal and by Al-Hawarazmi in Jami' Al-Masanid

There are some people who exceed the bounds of proper love for 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him to the point of considering him a Prophet. Some even claimed that the revelation came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by mistake, and that 'Ali was the one supposed to receive the revelation. Some even deemed 'Ali a god! All these are instances of overstepping the bounds of proper love and veneration for 'Ali.

As for the Kharijites, they called 'Ali a disbeliever. So, both sides went to extremes. Those who loved him raised him to the status of a Prophet or even higher than that; thus, they fell into shirk (joining false gods with Allah). Those who hated him labelled him a disbeliever and considered him outside the fold of Islam. Therefore, we must not overstep the bounds in our religion. We must not love a person to the extent of elevating him above the status of human beings, nor hate anyone so much that we reduce him to the lowest of stations. Rather, we must give everyone their proper due according to the position in which Allah has placed them because this is the way Allah honours them. 'Say: "O people of the Book (Jews and Christians)! Exceed not the limits in your religion (by believing in something) other than the truth, and do not follow the vain desires of people who went astray in times gone by, and who misled many, and strayed (themselves) from the Right Path."' (al-Ma'ida: 77) A similar statement occurred in another glorious verse: 'O People of the Book, do not commit excess in your religion or say about Allah except the truth…' (an-Nisa': 171). For us to understand that the excessiveness referred to here is that of deifying human beings, the True Lord then says: '…The Messiah, 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), was no more than a Messenger of Allah and His Word, ('Be!' - and he was) which He bestowed on Maryam and a spirit created by Him…' (an-Nisa': 171). Veneration for Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him must not be carried beyond due and proper bounds by either ascribing divinity to him or claiming that he was part of a trinity. If you had questions that led to this doubtful view because of how the Messiah peace be upon him was conceived without a father, you should understand that all things came into being by Allah's Command 'Be!' If you were to trace back the chain of human existence, you would arrive at a first human who did not come into being by procreation. That was Adam peace be upon him who was created from dust. Further, this entire universe came into existence by a word - Be! Any physical causes for existence were embedded by Allah in this word which He spoke. Therefore, when we have another human being who was created by the same word ('Be!'), do not say: 'This is something incredible' because the entire universe was also created by this same word.' Verily, His Command, when He intends a thing, is only that He says to it, 'Be!' and it is!' (Ya Sin: 82) If this perplexity was caused by the fact that the Messiah peace be upon him was born without a father, a matter which did not conform to the usual laws of procreation, this should not have been a cause of doubt because, at least, he was conceived by a mother – yet Adam peace be upon him was born without a father or mother. So, the logic is thatif there were any perplexity at all on the creation of `Isa (Jesus), then all the more so in respect to Adam. Indeed, a single word from Allah can bring life into existence. Life means the entry of the soul or essence into matter which endows it with movement, sensation, and essential characteristics of life. Hence, the word is spoken by Allah, and then the soul or essence comes and enters the matter. In the verse '... His Word, ('Be!' - and he was) which He bestowed on Maryam (Mary) and a spirit created by Him…' (an-Nisa': 171), the part that says, '…a spirit created by Him…' is similar to what Allah says about Adam: 'So, when I have fashioned him completely and breathed into him (Adam) the soul which I created for him, then fall (you) down prostrating yourselves unto him.' (al-Hijr: 29)

Adam peace be upon him was a soul created by the direct command from Allah and so was the Messiah peace be upon him. In either case, there is no room for misconception. The True Lord asks those who identify themselves as believers in the Divine Scriptures, '…Say not: "Three (trinity)!" Cease! It is better for you…' (an-Nisa': 171). If you claim a connection with heavenly messages, do not confuse people's thoughts with such misconceptions. You should have stopped yourselves at the honourable status that Allah has conferred on Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him the honour of being a good example for others. If he were anything other than human, he could not serve as a role model. An exemplar must be the same species as those who follow him. If he was a non-human, and people saw him worshipping Allah humbly, they would not feel themselves able to imitate his example.

I once said that, if a man saw a lion hunting in the forest and catching its prey, then would anyone who saw it think of making himself into a lion? No, but if he saw a brave knight at a battle hunting down his enemies, he would imitate him and try to be like him. Hence, a role model must be of the same species as his followers. Therefore, if a prophet was above human beings, he would not be appropriate as a messenger.

'Say: "O people of the Book (Jews and Christians)! Exceed not the limits in your religion (by believing in something) other than the truth…' (al-Ma'ida: 77). The True Lord is speaking here to all the followers of the Scriptures because each of them fell into one of two extremist positions. The Jews falsely accused the Pure Chosen Virgin Maryam (Mary) may Allah be pleased with her, and the Christians overstepped the boundaries in the opposite extreme. The True Lord commands both sides not to overstep the proper bounds because the truth is irresistible; it remains firm without any alteration or contradiction. If a person sees something with his own eyes and is asked to describe it, he will describe it today the same way he will do tomorrow, or after one year. His account will remain factual because he has eye-witnessed it. This reality he has seen imposes itself upon him. But a liar does not remember what he has said earlier. He may fabricate a story and tell it differently the second time. It is a common saying: 'A liar should have a good memory.' Here, it is important to know that truth means that one's narration about something is absolutely identical to reality. In other words, it means that the speaker is evoking something which really happened. As for the liar, he does not tell about something which really happened, so he cannot remember what lie he told the first time. Let us offer the following example to illustrate this point. A liar once sat and said: 'Once we were travelling from the village to the city to get our requirements for the festival of Eid Al-Fitr, and the moon was as full as the midday sun.' This last statement of this man reveals that he is actually telling a lie, for how could there be a full moon on the night before Eid which occurs in the first day of the month of Shawwal when the crescent can barely be seen? So, the one who tells of a true event does not change his story, whereas the liar, out of the confusion of events in his mind, does. Therefore, one should not say anything untrue because his lie will be undoubtedly discovered as a result of the contradiction in his speech. Yet, if this confusion of statements concerns divinity, people will certainly have doubts about the religion they follow, and thus you will bear responsibility for leading them astray. Hence, those who bear the Divine Messages must be infallible so that they are not accused of confusion in the slightest. That is why we find in the Quran that Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) asked Allah the Almighty not to make them—Prophets and Messengers—a plaything for those who are bent on denying the truth. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Our Lord, make us not (objects of) torment for the disbelievers and forgive us, our Lord. Indeed, it is you who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.' (al-Mumtahana: 5) But why did Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him make this supplication to Allah the Almighty? Because if he had said one thing and then done another, his people might have imagined – Allah forbid – that he was a liar.

Back to the words of Allah the Almighty 'Say, "People of The Book, do not overstep the bounds of truth in your religion and do not follow the whims of those who went astray before you – they led many others astray, and themselves continue to stray from the even path,"' (al-Ma'ida: 77) They clearly indicate that even though they themselves were astray, they were not content with this, but rather tried to lead others astray. This is proved by Allah's verse in the chapter al-Baqara, where Allah Glorified is He says: 'Many of the People of the Book wish they could turn you back to disbelief after you have believed, out of envy from themselves (even) after the truth has become clear to them. So pardon and overlook until Allah delivers His command. Indeed, Allah is over all things competent.' (al-Baqara: 109) At this point, He the Almighty warns the people of the Book against that because if this is actually the case, they will be held accountable for their own misdeeds and for the misdeeds of those led astray by them. In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: 'That they may bear their own burdens in full on the Day of Resurrection and some of the burdens of those whom they misguide without knowledge. Unquestionably, evil is that which they bear.' (an-Nahl: 25)

Here, we should stress that there is no contradiction whatsoever between the aforementioned verse of the chapter of an-Nahl and that of an-Najm in which He the Almighty says: 'That no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another.' (an-Najm: 38) We have two kinds of burdens; one resulting from leading others astray and another resulting from man's own sins.

As for the saying of Allah, '…and do not follow the whims of those who went astray before you, 'it orders and instructs the people of the Book not to imitate those who followed their caprices before them. The Arabic word Al-Hawa (translated as whims), it refers to the strong inclination of the soul to do a particular act in an inappropriate way; this is why it is always used in the Quran to indicate the meaning of loss and error. For example, in the chapter of Sad, Allah orders Prophet Dawud (David) not to follow his own whim, lest it may lead him astray from His Way. Allah says: 'O David, indeed we have made you a successor upon the earth, so judge between the people in truth and do not follow (your own) desire, as it will lead you astray from the way of Allah. Indeed, those who go astray from the way of Allah will have a severe punishment for having forgotten the Day of Account.' (Sad: 26) In addition, He the Almighty in the chapter Ta-Ha orders Prophet Musa (Moses) and says: 'So do not let one avert you from it who does not believe in it and follows his desire, for you (then) would perish.' (Ta Ha: 16)

Furthermore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is related to have said: 'None of you (truly) believes until his desires are subservient to that which I have brought.'(1) That is, one must force his desire and whim to yield to the Will of Allah the Almighty. As a matter of fact, if one does so, it means that he has actually managed to restrain his own personal desire and whim. Thus, Allah the Almighty says, '…and do not follow the whims of those who went astray before you- they led many others astray and themselves continue to stray from the even path;' so He forbids the people of the Book from following the whim which leads them astray, which meanwhile causes others to be led away from the Right Path. He the Almighty then says:

لُعِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ مِنۢ بَنِىٓ إِسۡرَٰٓءِيلَ عَلَىٰ لِسَانِ دَاوُۥدَ
وَعِيسَى ٱبۡنِ مَرۡيَمَۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِمَا عَصَواْ وَّكَانُواْ يَعۡتَدُونَ ﴿٧٨﴾

Those Children of Israel who defied [God] were rejected through the words of David, and Jesus, son of Mary, because they disobeyed, they persistently overstepped the limits [78]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 78)

This particular verse under discussion is meant to comfort Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by telling him how the previous Prophets and Messengers were opposed and rejected by them. Thus, He the Almighty wants to tell him peace and blessings be upon him that the denial of the people of the Book and rejection to him and to his Message is not something new or strange; it is clearly shown throughout their long history; they had already opposed and rejected the Message of Prophet Dawud (David), and so did they with the Message of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon them. So, you, O Messenger Muhammad, should learn from the examples of those Prophets and Messengers before you because the opposition and rejection of the people of the Book to Messengers and Prophets is not something which you alone have had to face, but rather, it is a part of their nature. Then, Allah the Almighty moves to a further level of offering comfort to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him so that he would never feel any discomfort from them. Allah Glorified is He tells that He knows for certain that what they say certainly grieves Prophet Muhammad. Allah the Almighty states: 'We know that you, (O Muhammad), are saddened by what they say. And indeed, they do not call you untruthful, but it is the verses of Allah that the wrongdoers reject.' (al-An'am: 33) That is why we find the deniers of the truth entrusting Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with all their wealth and interests although they accused him of insanity, sorcery and telling lies. They even called him 'The Truthful and the Honest.' If they had the power of reason, they should have been dumbfounded by their own conduct and the way they barred people from attaining faith. Ironically, even though they accused him peace and blessings be upon him of all these false charges, and even though they stubbornly opposed him and his Message, they used to entrust him with their wealth and precious items. How strange and deviant behaviour theirs is! Even though they knew for certain that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was truthful and had truly been sent forth by Allah the Almighty they, following their caprice and whim, persisted in their error in order to hold on to their worldly, temporal power. They knew well that he peace and blessings be upon him was 'The Honest' a point which is clear in the fact that he ordered 'Ali Allah be pleased with him to stay in Mecca to return the trusts to their owners. Then, Allah the Almighty tells him peace and blessings be upon him that the deniers of the truth knew for certain that he is truthful, honest and of the most perfect moral character that could be ever seen; however, they rejected his Message since they realised that it would make them lose their worldly, temporal power. Allah the Almighty tells him peace and blessings be upon him that He Glorified is He also knew that those deniers of the truth had tried to tempt him away from delivering the Message by offering him power, authority and riches, confirming that if he peace and blessings be upon him had the desire for any of that, they would have given him all what he wanted, yet he peace and blessings be upon him chose to deliver the Divine Message honestly.

We know well that the disbelievers of Quraysh offered him kingship, wealth, authority and power on the condition that he peace and blessings be upon him detached himself from his Message; however, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him chose the Straight Path despite the difficulties he and his followers would encounter upon it—it is the True Path which has been revealed down to you from your Lord Glorified is He.

Having failed to seduce and tempt Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him away from his Message, the deniers of the truth placed an embargo on him and the believers to make them starve. Nevertheless he peace and blessings be upon him never abandoned his Message. If they had the human reason, they must have been aware that he peace and blessings be upon him desired nothing for himself; he neither asked for wealth, nor for authority or power. Not only that, but neither he, nor any of his family members, was allowed to take charity from anyone. At that point, they should have asked themselves why Muhammad would throw himself into this fierce battle, seeking neither fame, nor wealth, nor any worldly pleasures!

So, the deniers of the truth should have learned a lesson from that, for they offered him all these things, and yet he peace and blessings be upon him refused them all. He peace and blessings be upon him is the Seal of all the Prophets and Messengers peace be upon them all; therefore, he embodied all the goodness of the Prophets and Messengers who came before him. Further, we can say that he peace and blessings be upon him followed the example of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him when he replied to the gifts sent by the Queen of Sheba and said that what Allah had given him was so much better than all that He the Almighty had given them: 'So when they came to Sulaiman (Solomon), he said, "Do you provide me with wealth? But what Allah has given me is better than what He has given you. Rather, it is you who rejoice in your gift.' (an-Naml: 36)

Moreover, people were badly and gravely mistaken when they were unable to recognise that the major purpose of Divine Messages was to draw their attention to the Divine Guidance by means of which the course of life will run smoothly. In addition, they were mistaken when they were unable to be fully aware of the fact that they, first and foremost, were the only ones to benefit from this Divine Guidance. Notwithstanding, in case they disobey, they are the ones who will truly suffer from the results of their disobedience. That is why if anyone reflects this point objectively, he will fully realise that this Divine Guidance is for his own good. If we reflect on the example of Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him we will find that he was given a kingdom the likes of which Allah would never give to anyone else again; He the Almighty subjected the wind and the jinn to his will; yet he would give the fine flour to his servants so that they could enjoy the best things and would keep the poorest flour for himself. This example actually offers a conclusive proof that Allah the Almighty sent down these religious Messages for the good and benefit of mankind, not Messengers and Prophets.

Back to the verse under discussion, the people of the Book fiercely resisted and stubbornly denied the Message of Prophet Dawud (David) peace be upon him; so, when they violated the Sabbath, Prophet Dawud (David) invoked Allah's Imprecation upon them; thus, He Glorified is He made them into apes and cursed them in the Psalms. In the same way, when they slandered Maryam, the Virgin Mary Allah be pleased with her Allah cursed them in the Gospel. Here, it is important to know that they were afflicted with such divine punishments as a result of their transgression. That is why we find Him the Almighty concluding the verse saying, ‘…because they disobeyed, they persistently overstepped the limits.’ (al-Ma’ida: 78) We should differentiate between ‘disobedience’ and ‘overstepping the limits’. Disobedience means that the person himself is the one who commits acts of disobedience; it does not affect anyone else. Overstepping the limits actually falls under the category of disobedience, but its impact reaches others. For example, the envious person only brings harm to himself, whereas the thief or the bribe-taker harms himself and others as well. This clearly shows the difference between ‘disobedience’ and ‘overstepping the limits’.

كَانُوا۟ لَا يَتَنَاهَوْنَ عَن مُّنكَرٍ فَعَلُوهُ ۚ
لَبِئْسَ مَا كَانُوا۟ يَفْعَلُونَ ﴿٧٩﴾

they did not forbid each other to do wrong. How vile their deeds were! [79] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 79)

We know well that the careful observance of the Divine Guidance offers the absolute guarantee through which the course of life will run smoothly. In this regard, we should know that Allah the Almighty created man in a manner that enables him to strongly resist evil. That is why when one wants to satisfy his desires of sex, money, authority, etc., we find him trying to do that in whatever way he can. However, there is only one thing that can prevent him from doing so, which is conscience; it forces one to be on the track. Scholars believe that conscience is the nucleus of faith, and that it is what reproaches man when he commits a sin. Of course, this is the case if that person is religiously committed. This very point is crystal clear in the chapter of al-Ma’ida where Allah the Almighty gives us a perfect description of the ever-changing human soul. He Glorified is He says: ‘And his soul permitted to him the murder of his brother, so he killed him and became among the losers.’ (al-Ma’ida: 30) This means that the son of Adam, Cain, killed his bother Abel. Yet, when the killer’s rage and rancour subsided and abated, he realised, as mentioned in the Quran, that he became one of the losers.

Here is another point in the story of the children of Adam; having killed his brother out of rage and hatred, Allah the Almighty sent a raven to show him how to hide his brother's body because he had no previous knowledge on how to do it. Thus, it is clear that the killer, Cain, went from a state of not respecting his brother's right to live to further wanting to honour his dead body. So, even though the human soul has its passions, it is balanced by the feeling of regret, which is shown when a person does something wrong or sinful. Therefore, we might find many people suffering hardships as a result of the sins and acts of disobedience they commit; meanwhile, we find them confessing these sins and misdeeds to anyone, irrespective of the fact that the one to whom they make their confession cannot do anything to remove the effects of these hardships because they have already occurred, and it is too late.

Here, a good question arises, that is, 'Why does man want to confess his sins to another?' As a matter of fact, he does so in order to relieve himself. We know for certain that any movement of the human soul has an effect which leads to a reaction. For example, when someone makes you angry, you react by taking revenge. That is why we find Islam instructing its followers to change position upon getting angry. That is to say, if someone angers you when you are standing, then sit down; and if you are already sitting, then recline, and if you are standing still, then take a few steps. In addition, Islam instructs them to make a special supplication, that is, 'Allah is sufficient for us and most excellent is the Protector'. Then, one's anger will subside and gradually come to an end. It is clear now that Islam asks angry people to act like that to make the body get rid of the surplus energy which has provoked and given vent to anger; thus, one's anger subsides and fades away. That is why an Arab poet strongly advises all those who hear a complaint to be all ears to the complainer, saying:

Complaints must be made to those who are virtuous:
They will assist you, console you or commiserate with you.

In truth, when you show the complainant that you are willing to help, you put him at ease and help him to attain peace of mind. That is why the poet strongly advises the complainant to make his complaint to a virtuous person who will listen attentively and who is actually worthy of keeping secrets. We know well that secrets must be guarded and kept just as precious items are kept in a safe. Once again, when one confesses, he relieves himself by directing his surplus energies to something else. Here is an important point, that is, when the human soul keeps on doing evil, and no one blocks it or forbids it, evil will spread and become prevalent; it is actually at this point that the Heaven intervenes by sending Messengers.

In this regard, Allah Glorified is He makes it clear that the reason for sending Messenger to these people is that they would not prevent one another from doing whatever hateful things they did. As a matter of fact, people's preventing one another from doing hateful and forbidden acts can only be accomplished by enjoining truth and patience upon one another. Furthermore, it is of great importance for the believer to be fully aware of the fact that he is safe from evil notions coming to his soul; we are all human beings and thus subject to continuous change of conditions. Out of Allah's Infinite Mercy, when an evil notion comes to the mind of a believer, he finds a fellow believer who does not have this notion and who will be able to offer him truth and patience. If this particular evil notion comes to the minds of both of them at the same time, both might agree to commit it; however, if it comes to the mind of only one of them and not the other, the latter will be able to enjoin truth and patience upon the first. In this way, believers will keep one another in check by mutual counsel; at one time, a person will forbid his fellow believer from committing evil, while, at some other time, he will be forbidden from doing the same act. This point is clear in the Quran in the chapter of al-'Asr, where Allah Glorified is He refers to this topic when He says: 'By time, indeed, mankind is in loss, Except for those who have believed and done righteous deeds and advised each other to truth and advised each other to patience.' (al-'Asr: 1-3)

The aforementioned verses indicate that Allah the Almighty does not single out a certain group of people to forbid others from doing evil. Likewise, He the Almighty does not assign the others to be always forbidden without any reciprocal role on their part; rather, He the Almighty tells that each one of us can prevent his fellow believer from committing evil if he inclines towards that, and, in turn, be prevented by someone else if he inclines towards doing that. In this way, believers offer counsel and enjoin truth and patience upon one another. Linguistically, this particular act of offering mutual advice falls under the category of al-mufa'lah or 'reciprocity' which means a behaviour in which two people share the doing of the same act. That is to say that one of the two plays the role of the subject at a particular moment of time, while the other is the object and vice-versa. Arabs say: 'Zayd cooperated with 'Amr in doing a particular act.' Now, this particular formula of al-muf'alah indicates that the act is done by two or more people. It is easy, then, for the believers to mutually prevent each other from doing evil. Another possible explanation for this point is that one's soul, out of the subtle instinctive power within, prevents one from doing evil. Hence, it is clear now that this particular act of enjoining truth and patience may take place either within the soul itself or within the society.

Thus, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'They did not forbid each other to do wrong' (al-Ma'ida: 79) tells us that the Jews had already committed evil acts and misdeeds; then, we should ask a very important question, 'How could they have prevented one another from doing the hateful things they had done?' A possible explanation for this particular part of the verse may be given in the light of the fact that they did not prevent one another from doing the hateful things they intended to do, meaning that one of them (the Jews) saw his fellow preparing to commit evil but did not prevent him. We have a similar case in the Quran where Allah the Almighty orders the believers to wash their faces and hands when they are about to pray: 'O you, who have believed, when you rise to (perform) prayer, wash your faces and your forearms to the elbows and wipe over your heads and wash your feet to the ankles.' (al-Ma'ida: 6) This aforementioned particular verse does not mean that a person should begin his ablution after he has already started praying, but rather that he should perform ablution by way of preparing to offer prayers; that is, when you, believers, wish to perform prayer, you should precede it with performing ablution.

In addition, this particular part of the verse, 'They did not forbid each other to do wrong,' urges us to be permanently in a state of spiritual alertness.

In addition, it directs us to carefully consider whether or not we are following the Divine Guidance. That is to say that we should restrain ourselves from committing evil, and that we should also prevent our fellow believers from doing so, lest the ruling of this particular part of the verse on the Jews would be applied to us, the believers; it is as though this verse instructs us to live in a state of spiritual alertness and never get close to evil. In the same connection, the Arabic word la-bi'sa (translated as 'How vile') indicates an oath which gives emphasis. Here, we shall ask the following question: is this divine emphasis given in the same way that we, human beings, do? The answer is definitely no because we know for certain that there is nothing resembling Him the Almighty. In this regard, it is important to know that truth is established either by confessions, testimony or oath. For this reason, judges base their verdicts only on one of those three; namely, the defendant's confession, the witnesses' testimony and an oath. Yet, Allah the Almighty out of His Knowledge of all His creatures gives this particular ruling on the Jews. The absence of mutual prevention of evil involves both action and speech. Here, there is a very important point; that is, even though Allah the Almighty does not phrase this particular part of the verse as follows, 'How vile their sayings were,' the meaning of the verse under discussion refers to both of them. We certainly know that 'saying' is the act of the tongue while 'deeds' are the acts of the rest of the body parts; yet, both fall under the category of 'doing'. This point is clearly illustrated in the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he says: 'Whosoever of you sees an evil, let him change it with his hand; and if he is not able to do so, then (let him change it) with his tongue; and if he is not able to do so, then with his heart — and that is the weakest of faith.'(1)

Therefore, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'How vile their deeds were,' indicates that they had already committed evil, both in speech and in action.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim

تَرَىٰ كَثِيرًا مِّنْهُمْ يَتَوَلَّوْنَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ ۚ لَبِئْسَ مَا قَدَّمَتْ لَهُمْ أَنفُسُهُمْ أَن سَخِطَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَيْهِمْ وَفِى ٱلْعَذَابِ هُمْ خَـٰلِدُونَ ﴿٨٠﴾

You [Prophet] see many of them allying themselves with the disbelievers. How terrible is what their souls have stored up for them: God is angry with them and they will remain tormented [80] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 80)

This particular verse draws our attention to the main reason why Allah the Almighty told His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the acts of disobedience on part of the Jews, including the fact they had been cursed on the tongue of David and Jesus, son of Mary. It is as if Allah the Almighty wants to tell him peace and blessings be upon him that if he considered their affairs with him, he would fully realise that their disbelief and rejection to the previous Messengers and Prophets were not a matter of whim, but rather, their disbelief was an intrinsic part of their nature.

Let us illustrate this point more clearly; we know for certain that when Islam came, it faced and countered several different forces that used to corrupt people's lives, a thing which is totally against the Divine Guidance. Allah the Almighty made all the creatures in the universe subservient to man so that he would set the affairs of the land in order. Accordingly, people are supposed not to let the evil exert its negative impact on the good. This obviously indicates the main reason behind the sending down of the Divine Guidance to man. In other words, Allah's Guidance is meant to protect man's course of life from getting out of order. Thus, it is clear that our adherence to the Divine Laws is always for our own good. Here, we should stress that Allah the Almighty will not get any benefit from our obedience, nor does our worship add something new to His Attributes of Perfection which He Glorified is He already had even before He has created us. We know that it is He the Almighty, the One Who created us out of nothing and supplied us with His Sustenance. That is why it goes without saying that our adherence to His Legal Obligations upon us will not benefit Him in anything at all, for He is in no need of any of His creatures.

So, it is obvious that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to counter a number of disbelieving forces, including the polytheists of Mecca, the Jews and the hypocrites. As for the Jews, they—based on the fact that previous Messengers were sent to them, that Divine Messages were already sent to them, that they were fully aware of the miracles of the previous Messengers and that they knew Prophet Muhammad's descriptions— were supposed to follow Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; yet, they did not. As for the hypocrites, they emerged when Islam became strong, thus they apparently declared their belief, while their hearts did not accept it.

Once again, the people of the Book were supposed to believe in Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since his way of guidance re-established the connection between the Heavens and the earth. We should know that the people of the Book used to tell the people in Yathrib (pre-Islamic Medina) that they would seek the help of Prophet Muhammad to defeat them; for example, it is historically related that they had said to the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj: 'This is the time of a Prophet to be sent in confirmation of what has been revealed to us; when he comes, we shall surely follow him and kill you with him in the same way the people of 'Ad and Iram had been previously killed.' This point is clear in the Quran where Allah the Almighty says: 'And when there came to them a Book from Allah confirming that which was with them - although before they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieved - but (then) when there came to them that which they recognized, they disbelieved in it; so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89) Their heavenly revealed Scriptures told them that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would come forth in a land of palm-trees that truly indicates the place where he was destined to deliver and convey His Message. So, it is clear right now that the Jews knew well the place where he would deliver his Message, his descriptions in their Books, as well as the nature of people he would counter and fight against. Yet, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to them with the truth, they lost their worldly temporal power which they, through corrupting and distorting the Divine Guidance, tried to preserve intact. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came forth with such Divine Message to turn people back to belief.

In that particular period of time when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him entered Medina, the people of Yathrib (pre-Islamic Medina) were about to crown one of them king. As for the Jews, they exploited the disunity and divisionism among the two tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj to earn money, selling weapons and lending usurious loans. However, when Prophet Muhammad came, he united Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj, andthus the Jews lost their power and authority, which is why they—lest this new religion would move to Medina—tried their best to destroy it in the cradle, inciting the enemies of Islam in Mecca to get rid of Prophet Muhammad and the believers with him. This is definitively proved by the Quran in which Allah the Almighty says: ‘Indeed, those who exchange the covenant of Allah and their (own) oaths for a small price will have no share in the Hereafter, and Allah will not speak to them or look at them on the Day of Resurrection, nor will He purify them; and they will have a painful punishment.’ (Al-’Imran: 77) That is, the Jews have bought the life of this world in exchange for the hereafter. Ironically, they were content with trifling gain, including pride, power and rule.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. Ka’b ibn Al-Ashraf, one of the leaders of the Jews who possessed wealth and influence, went to Quraysh to speak to them of the absolute necessity of uprooting the new religion and getting rid of it, whereupon the people of Quraysh asked him: ‘You are from the People of the Book and you have knowledge of the previous Books. Which of the two religions is more guided than the other—ours or that of Muhammad?’ Ka’ab then replied: ‘You are more rightly-guided than Muhammad!’ Amazingly enough, how could polytheists —idol-worshippers— be more rightly-guided than Prophet Muhammad?

Thus, the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘You (Prophet) see many of them allying themselves with the disbelievers,’ (al-Ma’ida: 80) indicates clearly that the Jews had allied with the polytheists, their old enemies, against Prophet Muhammad, so that they would not lose their power and authority. Hence, they allied with each other to get rid of the new religion. Allah’s words, ‘yatawallawan al-ladhin kafaru’ (translated as ‘allying themselves’) mean that they gave them aid and succour over the believers. In addition, they falsely told them that they were on the right path, while Prophet Muhammad and his followers were not. That is why Allah Glorified is He swears and emphasises how terrible what their evil-enjoining souls had made alluring to them; a point which obviously indicates that they had no self-reproaching souls.

Then, Allah the Almighty concludes the verse with, ‘How terrible is what their souls have stored up for them: Allah is angry with them and they will remain tormented’ (al-Ma’ida: 80). This divine anger had led them to keep away from the path of guidance; thus, they will remain tormented in the Hereafter. It is as though Allah the Almighty was saying to them: ‘Although you, O Jews, have taken a little enjoyment from this worldly life, you have brought upon yourselves the eternal misery which awaits you in the Hereafter.’

He Glorified is He and then says:

وَلَوۡ كَانُواْ يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱللَّهِ وَٱلنَّبِيِّ وَمَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَيۡهِ مَا
ٱتَّخَذُوهُمۡ أَوۡلِيَآءَ وَلَٰكِنَّ كَثِيرٗا مِّنۡهُمۡ فَٰسِقُونَ (٨١)

If they had believed in God, in the Prophet, and in what was sent down to him, they would never have allied themselves with the disbelievers, but most of them are rebels [81] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 81)

This indicates that if the Jews had true faith in Allah the Almighty and in the Divine Guidance sent down to them, they would not have allied themselves with polytheists. Yet, most of those people, according to the verse under discussion, are rebels and iniquitous, whereas just the minority of them are not like this. He the Almighty then says:

لَتَجِدَنَّ أَشَدَّ ٱلنَّاسِ عَدَٰوَةٗ لِّلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱلۡيَهُودَ وَٱلَّذِينَ أَشۡرَكُواْۖ وَلَتَجِدَنَّ
أَقۡرَبَهُم مَّوَدَّةٗ لِّلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ ٱلَّذِينَ قَالُوٓاْ إِنَّا نَصَٰرَىٰۚ ذَٰلِكَ بِأَنَّ مِنۡهُمۡ
قِسِّيسِينَ وَرُهۡبَانٗا وَأَنَّهُمۡ لَا يَسۡتَكۡبِرُونَ (٨٢)

You [Prophet] are sure to find that the most hostile to the believers are the Jews and those who associate other deities with God; you are sure to find that the closest in affection towards the believers are those who say, ‘We are Christians,’ for there are among them people devoted to learning and ascetics. These people are not given to arrogance [82] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 82)

In this verse under discussion, Allah the Almighty swears to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he will be fully aware of the nature of both the Jews and Christians- —two groups that share the same goal of opposing and rejecting Islam, but whose emotions towards him and the believers are different from one another.

The Jews—because they held considerable power during that particular period of time, to the extent that they were viewed as leaders—were more hostile towards Prophet Muhammad and his followers. As for the Christians, they did not have any dominance or temporal power, but rather confined themselves to their cells and monasteries worshipping Allah, so they did not show any enmity to those who were sent to devolve the temporal power of such tyrants to those who would surely establish justice.

Then, Allah the Almighty shows us the logical and strong reason behind this ruling deduced from the verse, 'You are sure to find that the closest in affection towards the believers are those who say, "We are Christians," for there are among them people who devoted to learning and ascetics. These people are not given to arrogance.' (al-Ma'ida: 82) The Arabic word qissisun is the plural of qass and it refers to someone who devotes himself to learning (a scholar), whilst rahib is that person who devotes himself to asceticism. As such, it is clear that the mission of the 'qass' is to attain knowledge, whilst that of the 'rahib' is to implement what this learning demands by devoting himself to ascetic worship.

In this regard, we find Allah the Almighty praising two qualities of Christians, that is, there are from among them people who devoted to learning and ascetics. It is by virtue of these two particular qualities that they became closer in affection towards the believers; yet, this is actually the ruling in case they keep those two qualities. This is based on the rule that states: 'The legal ruling is determined in the light of the presence or absence of the effective cause.' So, since the Christians, neither for positions of power, nor for their haughtiness or pride, are not given to arrogance which can be explained in light of the fact that their religion helps them attain a higher spiritual rank. Let us quote the following statement of theirs to illustrate this point−Christians say: 'If someone strikes you on your right cheek, turn your left cheek to him'.

In addition, it is important to know that the real events of life definitively proved the meaning of the verse. The Jews showed bitter and extreme hostility to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the extent that they plotted to kill him by dropping a rock on his head and by poisoning him. As a matter of fact, trying to kill your enemy thinking that this is the only way to get rid of him indicates clearly that you are not brave enough to face him alive; otherwise, you would not think of killing him. If someone does something like this, it actually proves that he is weaker than his enemy, for if he were strong, he would face him in the flesh instead of thinking about killing him. That is why it is said that the weak man is the one who believes that the life of his enemy causes hardship to him.

Jews at this particular period of time of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were so weak. We know well that when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made his call public, some people followed him and believed in his Message, but their families persecuted and hurt them to the extent that people within the one house were divided into believers and disbelievers. Umm Habibah, daughter of Abu Sufyan, is a case in point; she attained faith, while her father was still a disbeliever. She then migrated with her husband to Abyssinia (today's Ethiopia). At this point, it is important to know that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was extremely keen on the safety of those first believers because he knew that they would be the ones who would call to Islam later on. That is why he ordered them to migrate to Abyssinia to protect themselves—the first seeds of faith—so that they would shoulder the responsibility of disseminating the Message of Islam in the future; a spiritual mission indeed! Here, we can quote the great poet Ahmad Shawqi may Allah rest his soul who says in one of his collections known as Aswaq Adh-Dhahab: 'Courage might require one to be cowardly for a moment.' As a matter of fact, courage is supposed to be shown not only when facing one's enemy, but also when facing one's own soul. For example, if a group of strong people are all sitting together one evening when a drifter with a gun comes in and starts insulting them all, they will have to use artful means in order to seize him and eventually punish him.

Therefore, courage requires a person to be cowardly for a moment so that he is able defeat the enemy; this is actually the true meaning of cleverness and astuteness. We should affirm that faith does not mean suicide, but rather, it asks believers not to get involved in any battle unless they are confident, even not fully, that they will defeat their enemy. That is why we find Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him calling Khalid ibn Al-Walid may Allah be pleased with him' The Unsheathed Sword of Allah, 'even though Khalid did not really win this particular battle, but he managed to withdraw the army of the believers, which is viewed as an act of victory. It goes without saying that ordering an army's retreat requires more strength than it does to be victorious since the victorious side has momentum with it, whilst the defeated side has the momentum against it. That is why Allah the Almighty stresses in the Quran that the acts of manoeuvres and plots are part of military skill because they give one the chance to face the enemy again afterwards. Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-Anfal: 'And whoever turns his back to them on such a day, unless swerving (as a strategy) for war or joining (another) company, has certainly returned with anger (upon him) from Allah, and his refuge is Hell - and wretched is the destination.' (al-Anfal: 16)

Supported by the divine revelation and guidance, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him chose Abyssinia to be the destination of his migrating Companions. He did not command them to go to any of the Arab tribes because he knew well that all the tribes in the Arabian Peninsula feared Quraysh which was in full control over the pilgrimage season. That is why it was expected that none of those tribes would ever dare to oppose it. Because of this, Messenger Muhammad did not choose any of these tribes to be the destination of his companions. But why did he choose Abyssinia in particular? The answer to this question is clear in the following statement of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him where he says: 'Go to Abyssinia, for there is a king there who does not allow that anyone should be wronged in his presence, so stay in his land until such time as Allah shall make for you a means of relief from what you now are suffering.'(1)

Imam Az-Zuhari related another narration which reads: 'When the Muslims had increased in number and the idolaters' persecution had begun, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: "Disperse in Allah's

(1) Narrated by Ibn Ishaq

Land, for He the Almighty shall bring you together again", whereupon they asked, "Where shall we go, O Messenger Muhammad?" He pointed his hand towards the land of Abyssinia and said: 'There!'(1)

Carrying out the order of Prophet Muhammad, the Companions crept out in the dead of night to set off to Abyssinia. When Quraysh heard about this, they tried to intercept them and bring them back to Mecca to continue their persecution against them, hoping that this would make them leave Islam. But because the Will of Allah the Almighty cannot be challenged, He made everything easy for the believers so that they arrived in Abyssinia and they were safe from the plots of the disbelievers.

Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the knowledge that Allah has given him, was fully aware of the affairs in the neighbouring territories; thus, he was perfectly able to distinguish just rulers from unjust ones; this is proven by the fact that when the Companions carried out his peace and blessings be upon him order and migrated to Abyssinia, they felt secure about their lives and religion. The Quraysh became enraged; they wanted to take the people back from the Negus, the king of Abyssinia, so they sent their leaders with gifts and presents for the king.

The delegation of Quraysh, including 'Amr ibn Al-'As, 'Abdullah ibn Abi Rabi'a and 'Imarah ibn Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira, travelled to Abyssinia and asked the Negus to give them the Muslims who had emigrated to his land, meanwhile accusing them of having forsaken the religion of their forefathers to adopt a new religion opposing all other religions. They also told the Negus that the Muslims were slandering Jesus and his Virgin mother, but the Negus refused to believe a word of them, which is why he asked to hear from the emigrants themselves; so, Ja'far ibn Abi Taleb Allah be pleased with him approached and said:

'O King, we were a people of ignorance who worshipped idols, ate carrion, committed indecencies, severed family ties, mistreated neighbours and the strong amongst us would exploit the weak. We did all this until Allah sent us a Messenger from amongst us whose lineage, truthfulness, trustworthiness and chastity were known to us, and he called us to uphold Allah’s Oneness and to worship Him Alone, and to forsake the stones and idols which our forefathers worshipped alongside Him. And he commanded us to speak the truth, honour our trusts, keep our family ties, treat our neighbours well and abstain from the property and blood of others. He forbade us indecency, lying, usurping the orphan’s wealth and falsely accusing chaste women. He commanded us to worship Allah Alone and to associate nothing with Him. He commanded us to pray, to give alms to the needy and to fast. And we believed in him, had faith in him and followed him in all that he brought from Allah Alone, with whom we associate nothing; we deemed unlawful all that he made unlawful to us; we deemed lawful all that he made lawful for us. So, our people declared enmity against us, tortured and abused us to make us leave our religion and return to idolatry instead of worshipping Allah the Almighty and to indulge in all the foul things we used to. And when they dominated us and restrained us and came between us and our religion, we came to your land, and we chose you above anyone else, hoping that we would not be wronged in your court.’

(1) Narrated by 'Abd Ar-Razzaq

The Negus was fully aware of the fact that the Quran attested that the Messiah peace be upon him was a pure and honourable Prophet, so he did not listen to the lies of the delegation of Quraysh. The heart of the Negus became filled with faith, and he was not too proud to believe even though he was a king; thus, he stood in the way of the attempts of Quraysh to get the companions of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him back to Mecca. When the Negus heard what had been revealed to Messenger Muhammad in the chapter of Maryam, he said: ‘Indeed, these words and those which Jesus brought shone forth from a single source!’

In this regard, it is important to know that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him fully realised that faith had settled in the heart of the Negus; this is definitively proven by the fact that when the husband of Umm Habiba bint Abu Sufyan converted to Christianity, she remained Muslim even though she loved him dearly. At this point, she may Allah be pleased with her had to separate from him. As a matter of fact, Umm Habiba’s insistence on adhering to Islam indicates clearly that her immigration was made sincerely only for attaining the Pleasure of Allah the Almighty.

As a result, Allah the Almighty wanted to honour Umm Habiba and the Negus, so Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked the Negus to offer Umm Habiba his marriage proposal. This is actually based on the fact that the Negus was a 'man of trust' who did not deny the true information about Mary (Maryam) in the Gospel, bravely declared the veracity of the verses of the Quran on Mary may Allah be pleased with her and rejected to give the emigrants to the polytheists of Mecca. For all of these reasons, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked the Negus to offer his marriage proposal to Umm Habiba after her husband had become Christian. As a matter of fact, this single incident offers a number of good and interesting lessons; it actually tells us that the emigration of Umm Habiba was made for the sake of attaining the pleasure of Allah the Almighty. Had she been following her husband, she would have converted to Christianity like him. It also draws attention to the fact that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not speaking from his own desire when he had said before that the Negus would not allow anyone to be wronged in his presence. Here, we should know that when he peace and blessings be upon him was told about the death of the Negus, he prayed the Absentee Funeral Prayer for him.

Allah's words, 'You (Prophet) are sure to find that the most hostile to the believers are the Jews and those who associate other deities with Allah; you are sure to find that the closest in affection towards the believers are those who say, 'We are Christians, 'for there are among them people who devoted to learning and ascetics. These people are not given to arrogance' (al-Ma'ida: 82), tell you that, out of Allah's Grace, He made scholars and ascetics from the Christians. We have previously explained the difference between these two terms and said that the 'scholar' (qass), in this context, is the one who attains knowledge, whereas the 'ascetic' is the one who acts upon knowledge. Here, we should distinguish between the kind of scholar who do not put their knowledge into practice, from whom only knowledge can be taken, and the other kind that, out of fear of Allah, put their knowledge into practice. Those scholars who do not act upon their knowledge will surely be held accountable before Allah the Almighty; nevertheless, we shall receive knowledge from them and then practice it ourselves. At that point, we can quote the following poet:

Take my knowledge, and look not at my action:
  Pick the fruit, and leave the wood for the fire!

Therefore, when Allah the Almighty says, '…for there are among them people who are devoted to learning and ascetics', it gives the reason why they are kinder to Muslims. However, we are faced with a good question: does this truly mean that Allah the Almighty hold monasticism to be praiseworthy? If this is true, why does He state, 'Which they innovated; we did not prescribe it for them except (that they did so) seeking the approval of Allah' (al-Hadid: 27)?

In the aforementioned verse of the chapter of al-Hadid, Allah Glorified is He is telling us about the succession of Messengers until 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him and the Gospel he brought. He the Almighty placed in the hearts of Jesus's followers great compassion, tenderness and kindness; and how they invented monasticism as a way of increasing their worship, meanwhile confirming that He did not enjoin it upon them, but they had adopted it out of a desire for Allah's goodly acceptance. He the Almighty then made it clear that some of them preserved it, whilst many other became iniquitous and forsook it. As a matter of fact, when Allah the Almighty issues a legal obligation, believers must perform it; as long as the believers keep on offering the recommended acts of worship which are not obligatory, Allah will increase the reward for them. We should know that if one really wishes to increase his reward from Allah, he must be insistent and persistent on offering acts of worship before Him the Almighty. Hence, it is clear that the Christians are not criticised and censured in this verse because they invented monasticism; rather, it is because some of them did not observe it properly.

Further, Allah the Almighty says, '…for there are among them people who devoted to learning and ascetics;' it indicates clearly that there are those of them (the Christians) who devote their lives to knowledge, and others, monks, who are good models of the application of this knowledge. He the Almighty concludes the verse by praising their moral conduct, saying that they are not given to arrogance or pride. So, as long as they keep such characteristics, it means that they do not seek temporal power, and thus they will continue to be closer in affection to us (Muslims). If they abandon those characteristics and seek temporal power, it means that they have forsaken those attributes by which Allah judged them as being closer to us in affection. He the Almighty then says:

وَإِذَا سَمِعُوا۟ مَآ أُنزِلَ إِلَى ٱلرَّسُولِ تَرَىٰٓ أَعْيُنَهُمْ تَفِيضُ مِنَ ٱلدَّمْعِ
مِمَّا عَرَفُوا۟ مِنَ ٱلْحَقِّ ۖ يَقُولُونَ رَبَّنَآ ءَامَنَّا فَٱكْتُبْنَا مَعَ ٱلشَّٰهِدِينَ ﴿٨٣﴾

and when they listen to what has been sent down to the Messenger, you will see their eyes overflowing with tears because they recognize the Truth [in it]. They say, 'Our Lord, we believe, so count us amongst the witnesses [83] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 83)

This particular verse indicates the accuracy of the Quranic style; that is, the Quran has already mentioned scientific facts on the human soul and how the body parts react even before psychology scholars began to study these phenomena by means of research, investigation and experimentation. Science proves that every body part has a particular function to perform: the eye sees; the ear hears; the tongue tastes and speaks; the nose smells, and the hand touches. Scientists, out of caution, called these senses 'The Five Tangible Senses'. At this point, we should stress that there are other things such as hunger and thirst, a person perceives without knowing the mode or the source of sensation.

In this regard, it is important to know that scientists tried to discover how man differentiates between two weights, and they reached the conclusion that he does so by virtue of a particular sense called the 'muscle sense'. When a person lifts something, he uses his muscles to the point where he is able to distinguish different levels of effort. In the same connection, they found out that man has a further sense called the 'sense of dimension', which allows one to sense the level of fineness or thickness of cloth, even if its thickness is only one tenth of a millimetre.

Therefore, it is clear that man has numerous senses by means of which he can perceive things. In truth, there are certain senses which exert effect on the human soul, such as love, affection, hatred and disgust, called senses of emotion. The enjoyment of the taste of a certain food or the dislike for something else falls under this category. If a person likes something, he will surely try it again. This entire process may be explained as bringing a reaction to an emotion which follows perception.

Thus, there are three different processes that are, perception by means of which one senses, emotion by means of which one feels and action by means of which one reacts. For example, one might perceive a beautiful flower in a garden, a process which might inspire the heart to feel yearning and love which are emotions. Here, you should know that you are free to perceive what you like and to feel whatever emotion you like, but you do not have the right to reach out your hand and pick the flower because the Shari'a forbids that, and the guard working in the garden will also prevent you from doing that. But no one will prevent you from looking at the flower and enjoying its beauty; we can reach the conclusion that perception regarding that particular act is allowed and so is emotion.

Reaction is the particular area governed by Shari'a. Once again, we stress that perception and emotion are allowed – all apart from the perception of feminine beauty, which the Shari'a declared prohibited. You might perceive a woman's beauty and then feel inclination and love to her; yet, if you react, how will you control yourself? We know that after the perception and emotion, you might either react or suppress; if you react, you will sully people's honour; and if you suppress, you will be emotionally devastated and hurt. Therefore, the Islamic Shari'a addresses this topic from the very beginning; it prohibits you from even perceiving it (that is, the unlawful feminine beauty). In doing so, it expressly ordered its followers to lower their gazes. This is based on the fact that sex is a very complex process whose elements cannot be separated from each other. In the case of the flower, the three elements of the process— perception, emotion and reaction—can be separated from each other, a matter which is totally different in the topic of sex in which one is supposed to do one of two, that is, either to be chaste or to obey his whim—two matters that cause him considerable harm. That is why the Islamic Shari'a prohibits the matter from the very beginning, at the stage of perception (of a woman's beauty).

Hence, it becomes clear now that this verse under discussion has revealed psychological facts on the matters of perception, emotion and action, which psychologists have only discovered recently. Allah the Almighty says: '…and when they listen to…' which means that they knew about what has been given to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him through the organ responsible for hearing, which is the ear. But what did they hear? The Quran gives us the answer and says that they (the Christians) listened to what had been sent down to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which is the main reason behind the existence of emotion, shown clearly in the fact that their eyes overflowed with tears. But how was their reaction? They actually asked Allah the Almighty to count them amongst the witnesses since they had already attained faith. Thus, we find that the Quran, which was revealed fourteen centuries ago, gave the sequential order of perception, emotion and reaction, even before science spoke about it. The Quran tells that when the Christians heard with their ears, there was an emotional response, and the change in their emotions was manifested by the tears overflowing from their eyes.

Here, we should distinguish between two things: the first is the eye's filling with tears, without these tears actually falling. Arabs say: 'His eye filled with tears', meaning that his eyes became teary, but the tears did not fall. The second is when tears actually flow from the eyes; overflowing only occurs when the container is completely filled, overfilling; so it is as if tears filled the eyes beyond capacity and then fell down—just like when we fill a jug or a cup with water all the way to the top and then add more so that it overflows.

The verse shows that the main reason behind their reaction was that they had recognised that the Quran was true. We notice that the Arabic particle min has been used frequently (three times) in this Quranic verse, as follows: min ad-dam' (translated as 'with tears'), mimma'arafau (translated as 'because they recognised') and min al-Haqq (translated as '(they recognized) the Truth (in it)').

Therefore, the Arabic word min is used three times with a different contextual role, from which a particular meaning is understood. These different meanings, in turn, indicate the rhetorical compilation of the three phenomena of perception, emotion and reaction—an order which includes the three elements of the sensory phenomena which empirical science only discovered when it became acquainted with the anatomy of the body parts, their functions and how they are involved in the processes of perception, emotion and reaction.

What concerns us here is the reaction; the Christians asked Allah the Almighty to count them from the witnesses. This is very important because faith is something which concerns them personally, but being united with all those who bear witness to the truth is something which concerns others, too. As a matter of fact, this particular supplication of theirs indicates that believers will undoubtedly attain high ranks, for they will benefit from their own belief. In addition, they will shoulder the responsibility of disseminating the Divine Guidance to others and thus they will also get benefit; this point is proved by the Quran in which Allah the Almighty says: ‘You are the best nation produced (as an example) for mankind. You enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong and believe in Allah. If only the People of the Book had believed, it would have been better for them. Among them are believers, but most of them are defiantly disobedient’ (Al-’Imran: 110).

That is, Allah the Almighty calls upon the ummah (followers) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: ‘You, O followers of Prophet Muhammad, are the best community which has ever been brought forth for the good of humankind not because of your race or lineage, but because of the way of guidance you follow; and whoever follows the guidance of ‘Do’ and ‘Do not do’, thereby gives practical proof of his faith in Allah.’ He the Almighty then adds, ‘There are those of the People of the Book who attain to faith and become Muslim, but yet many of them are also outside the bounds of faith.’ In another position of the Quran, Allah the Almighty says that He Glorified is He says: “And thus we have made you a just community that you will be witnesses over the people and the Messenger will be a witness over you. And We did not make the qiblah which you used to face except that We might make evident who would follow the Messenger from who would turn back on his heels. And indeed, it is difficult except for those whom Allah has guided. And never would Allah have caused you to lose your faith. Indeed Allah is, to the people, Kind and Merciful” (al-Baqara: 143).

So, the ummah (followers) which follows the teachings of Islam –the way of moderation – is the rightly-guided ummah which follows the path of righteousness and really practices its faith, for it is the religion which abrogates and amends all that had come before it. In addition, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the seal of all Prophets and Messengers, thus his Message abrogates all the previous laws and methodologies. Furthermore, his life and the way he acted is an excellent model of spiritual behaviour that guides believers to the Straight Path. After reflection on the aforementioned verse from the chapter of Al-'Imran, we find that it sheds light on the topic of changing the direction of prayer from Al-Aqsa Mosque in Jerusalem to the Sacred Mosque in Mecca. The verse says that the first command to pray towards Jerusalem was a test that was only passed by those who defer all matters to the Highest Commander, Allah Glorified is He. The execution of this order was really a difficult thing for all except those whom Allah has graced with His Guidance. Then, He the Almighty has ordered them to direct their faces towards the Sacred House in Mecca, which is the first House ever to be appointed for people.

So, since we, Muslims, are witnesses, and Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a witness over us, this means that he testifies that we have disseminated the Message of Islam after him, and thus our reward will be doubled. We will be rewarded for the fact that we received the Message from him and believed in it; in addition, we will be rewarded for disseminating the Message of Islam after him. As a matter of fact, the believer is not a witness unless his witnessing is drawn from the witnessing of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him himself; a point which is clear in the aforementioned verse of Al-'Imran.

This is, the ummah (followers) of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the best which Allah the Almighty has ever brought forth since its members firmly adhere to the Divine Guidance manifested clearly in the order' Do' and the prohibition 'Do not do'. By doing this, you, O Muslims, will have certainly applied the guidance in a manner that shows the sincerity of your faith in Allah. Yet, if the people of the Book were as true as you are in your faith, it would be better for them than what they are currently doing; but while some of them are reviewing the topic of belief in their hearts, most of them have iniquitously gone outside the confines of faith. So, Allah the Almighty has said, '…so count us amongst the witnesses; 'it is an admission that this particular group of Christians had already attained faith in Allah, while disseminating the Divine Guidance to others. Thus, it is clear that they became true Muslims and followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is narrated to have said: 'No one of you becomes a true believer until he likes for his brother what he likes for himself.'(1) Likewise, Allah the Almighty tells us in the Quran about the great reward prepared for those who disseminate His Message to others. In the chapter of Ibrahim, He Glorified is He says that the parable of a good word is like a good tree, firmly rooted, reaching out with its branches towards the sky and yielding its fruit at all times. Allah says: 'Have you not considered how Allah presents an example, (making) a good word like a good tree, whose root is firmly fixed and its branches (high) in the sky?' (Ibrahim: 24-25)

This means that a good word is like a fruit-bearing tree which benefits the people; it gives comfort, it has firm roots in the earth and branches which stretch up towards the sky, and it yields its fruits at all times by its Creator's Will. In truth, Allah the Almighty gives this tangible example as a parable to the people so that they may know the value of high spiritual truths. In other words, the one who speaks the truth, conveying the Divine Guidance to people, will bear the fruits of this good word, as long as there is a believer alive until we all meet Allah the Almighty.

The word ash-shahidin (translated as 'witnesses') refers to the person who conveys a message. As a matter of fact, when the believer asks Allah the Almighty to make him with those who bear witness to the truth, this means that he is requesting for himself a place alongside the Prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous. We should know that 'martyrdom' does not only mean that a person shall die in war; rather, it conveys the meaning of giving testimony. The same actually applies to those martyrs who sacrifice their lives for the sake of belief, for they are also viewed as giving their testimony to the fact that the reward they are going to receive in the Hereafter is more precious than everything in life which is a practical testimony.

Allah Glorified is He says:

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

وَمَا لَنَا لَا نُؤْمِنُ بِٱللَّهِ وَمَا جَآءَنَا مِنَ ٱلْحَقِّ وَنَطْمَعُ أَن يُدْخِلَنَا رَبُّنَا مَعَ ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿٨٤﴾

Why should we not believe in God and in the Truth that has come down to us, when we long for our Lord to include us in the company of the righteous?’ [84] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 84)

This particular verse under discussion includes a rhetorical exclamatory style which indicates that we must know for certain that attaining faith in Allah the Almighty is something which is for our own good because when we believe in Him Glorified is He He consequently confers His Favours, Graces, and Blessings upon us. That is why we should be fully aware of the important fact that belief is not meant to restrict our freedom or even prevent us from (lawfully) satisfying our desires, but rather, it is intended to make us enjoy freedom and satisfy our desires in a rational way which benefits us even after death.

So, it is clear that religion offers nothing but rational benefit. In this regard, it is important to know that a wise man shall benefit from his life in a manner that does not harm anyone; yet, in case this benefit does harm him or even others, Islam judges it unlawful and orders us to refrain from it. We should also take into account that one may not be destined to receive benefit or does not even desire it. In addition, the wise is the one who gives precedence to the benefit of others rather than his.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. A beggar may come to you asking for food because he has not eaten for two days. You have nothing but one pound in your pocket and you give it to him; this clearly means that you prefer him to yourself, thus you will fall under the saying of Allah in the chapter of al-Hashr in which Allah Glorified is He states: ‘And (also for) those who were settled in Medina and (adopted) the faith before them. They love those who emigrated to them and find not any want in their breasts of what the emigrants were given but give (them) preference over themselves, even though they are in privation. And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful’ (al-Hashr: 9).

By doing so, one follows the example of the Helpers (Al-Ansar, Medinan Muslims) who welcomed the Immigrants (Al-Muhajirun, Meccan Muslims) whose pure faith caused them to love all those who shared it and who harboured no envy or hatred for the things which were given to the Immigrants such as battle spoils and the like. As matter of fact, the Helpers' ultimate objective was to please the Immigrants. In doing so, they preferred the Immigrants to themselves, giving from their properties even though they were in dire need, meaning that the Helpers freely chose not to fall under the category of misers. That is why Allah the Almighty saved them from the evil of miserliness, thus they became counted among the triumphant. As for the one who spends a pound in charity, Allah Glorified is He will reward him tenfold which is a considerable benefit. In the same connection, we should be fully aware of the fact that when the Sacred Law commands us to lower our gazes from unlawfully looking at other people's female relatives, this clearly means that we, by doing so, are preventing others from doing the same with our female relatives, which is a considerable benefit as well. So, it is unreasonable to think that religion restricts freedom, which is entirely not true; religion is actually intended to make us enjoy freedom and satisfy our desires in a rational way which benefits us even after death, and it also prevents us from foolish benefit.

I always like to give this example: suppose that a man has two sons, one of whom rises early and does what his father taught him. He makes ablution and prays, then goes to school after breakfast. As for the other son, he gets up late and goes out from the house to the coffee shop. Both sons want to bring themselves benefit but in different forms—the first boy wants to get the benefit in the long run, while the other wants to obtain immediate benefit. Ten years later, the first son graduates, becomes successful and is happy in life, while the other son becomes a parasite and is unsuccessful. That is to say, both of them sought benefit but in different ways.

At this point, I would like to stress the fact that we all love ourselves but in different ways; some may show this love in such way that makes them attain a long-lasting benefit to the extent that they may gain the reward of martyrs—a matter that is only achieved by being righteous—yet, there are others who mistakenly express this love by showing that they are the most greedy for life; they do this even though they actually die a thousand times before their death in the midst of this cowardliness; and thus they lose their dignity, whilst striving to preserve a life which they are powerless to extend even a single day. Here, Al-Mutanabbi, an Abbasid poet, may be quoted,

We all love life for ourselves,
And are keen and eager to preserve it:
The coward's love for life makes him cautious,
And the brave man's love for life leads him to war.

Therefore, the one who properly understands the ultimate objective of religion shall follow this pattern and act like those Christians who say: 'Why should we not believe in Allah and in the Truth that has come down to us'. That is why believers exert their utmost efforts to attain the higher spiritual rank of true believers. As for the Allah's words, 'we long for our Lord to include us in the company of the righteous' it indicates plainly that one of the essential characteristics of the believer is that he aspires to attain the rank of the righteous. Allah Glorified is He says:

فَأَثَٰبَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِمَا قَالُواْ جَنَّٰتٖ تَجۡرِي مِن تَحۡتِهَا ٱلۡأَنۡهَٰرُ
خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَاۚ وَذَٰلِكَ جَزَآءُ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ٨٥

For saying this, God has rewarded them with Gardens graced with flowing streams, and there they will stay: that is the reward of those who do good [85] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 85)

This verse casts light on the 'Word of the Truth' that must be declared every time and place. It is uttered and declared by the powerful Abyssinian Negus to the prestigious men of Quraysh, who were steeped in falsehood; therefore, it is weighty. When the Negus listened to what has been revealed in the Quran on Mary peace be upon her he stated clearly that both the teachings of Prophet Muhammad and those of Prophet Jesus had come from one source. That is to say, he loudly and firmly declared the word of truth. At that point, we should fully realise that Allah the Almighty rewards well those who support the truth, even with a word, for He Glorified is He is the All-Thankful Who gives much in return for little. In addition, Allah Glorified is He is the Most Generous Who multiplies the reward of the doers of good.

Then, we should know well that speech, out of the fact that it has to do with behaviour, is of considerable importance. The words of the Negus were great, but he did not live long enough to continue to practise what he had said and believed in. As a result of the truthful testimony he gave, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked him to offer Umm Habiba may Allah be pleased with her his bid of marriage. The Negus then married her to him peace and blessings be upon him and even gave her dowry from his own property. Shortly after, he died. The rulings and teachings of Islam had not yet reached him so that he could practise them; therefore, it was enough for him to have said those words; a point which is proved by the fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him offered the absentee funeral prayer for him when he died.

Let us offer another example to illustrate this point. Mukhayriq was a wealthy Jew whose heart was filled with Islam and belief, which is why he told the Jews that he would support Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with all his money and power. So, he went out to fight alongside Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and he was martyred, although he had never offered a single Islamic prayer in his life. Thus, it is clear now that 'to speak the truth is to take the first step on the way of action'.

Back to the words of Allah the Almighty "For saying this, Allah has rewarded them with Gardens graced with flowing streams"; they indicate clearly that Allah the Almighty wants to strongly emphasise the fact that every matter of belief, even speech is judged perfect or not in the light of the circumstances surrounding their practise. For example, we know for certain that believers, while in Mecca, used to practise their faith with speech because most of the rulings were not revealed yet during that particular period, which is why Allah Glorified is He rewarded the believers simply for declaring the word of belief. This actually happened even though Allah the Almighty during that particular period of Mecca had not yet given the command to Prophet Muhammad to convey the Message to all the people of Quraysh; the command by virtue of which he peace and blessings be upon him was ordered to warn his nearest relations, 'And warn, (O Muhammad), your closest kindred' (ash-Shu'ara': 214).

Based on this, Allah the Almighty rewarded these people with the best of rewards and even called them Muhsinin (translated as 'doers of good'). This was also the case with the action of the Negus; he embraced the faith without even being called to it; he had done so even before Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him sent messages to the kings inviting them to belief, which is why Muslim scholars opine that the Negus was a doer of good because he embraced faith before he was even asked to do so. Here is a very important point, that is, when Allah the Almighty speaks about one of the ranks of faith, He Glorified is He also presents the contrasting image so that the advice is useful and constructive. So, if He the Almighty speaks about the denizens of paradise, He follows this by speaking of the denizens of hell, and vice-versa. As a matter of fact, when He the Almighty does so, the human soul will be able to properly understand the idea and its opposite. He the Almighty says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُواْ وَكَذَّبُواْ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَآ أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ أَصۡحَٰبُ ٱلۡجَحِيمِ ﴿٨٦﴾

Those who reject the truth and deny Our messages will be the inhabitants of Hellfire [86] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 86)

In the Arabic language, the three words 'sahib', 'suhbah' and 'ashab' all impart the meaning of the company of others, an act which is subject to man's free choice, for we have never heard that someone has been forced to become the friend of another.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Those who reject the truth and deny Our Messages will be the inhabitants of Hellfire,' (al-Ma'ida: 86), it indicates that there is a mutual affection between the fire and its denizens, but this is not the intended meaning. As a matter of fact, this particular part of the verse may indicate that Allah the Almighty mocks at them. Another possible interpretation is that those people who deny the Truth will live eternally in the hellfire.

Having shed light on the affairs of the polytheists, the Jews and the Christians, Allah Glorified is He moves to talk about the believers. In doing so, He first clears up our minds by removing from them all that is connected to the deniers of the truth and their deviant ways, and then He conveys His Rulings and Teachings to us. Allah Glorified is He has actually done this when He began this chapter by ordering us to fulfil our obligations, 'O you who have believed, fulfil (all) contracts. Lawful for you are the animals of grazing livestock except for that which is recited to you (in this Quran) - hunting not being permitted while you are in the state of ihram (ritual consecration). Indeed, Allah ordains what He intends' (al-Ma'ida: 1).

As for the covenant of faith in particular, it is wholly superior to the falsehood of the polytheists. In addition, it has nothing to do with false statements of the Jews and Christians. Having instructed the believers to fulfil their obligation, Allah the Almighty then commands them to keep to the way of guidance by means of which the course of life will run smoothly. It is taken for granted that life is first and foremost preserved by food and drink, which is why He Glorified is He then allowed the believers to only eat the flesh of every beast that feeds on plants: ‘Lawful for you are the animals of grazing livestock except for that which is recited to you (in this Quran)’ (al-Ma’ida: 1).

Having instructed man how to preserve his life, Allah Glorified is He moves to state that believers are not allowed to eat certain kinds of animals. Here arises a very important question, which is: ‘Why did Allah the Almighty create such animals which He declared unlawful?’ If we answer this question in the light of our daily life, we will find that every manufacturer specifies the characteristics of the thing he makes. For example, the manufacturer of a plane designs his plane and precisely specifies the particular kind of fuel it runs with, so it cannot run on the fuel specified for cars. As long as man-made machines themselves get out of order when we misuse them, it thus goes without saying that those who believe that Allah the Almighty has created anything in this life for no use are mistaken; such creatures must have been created to perform a particular role in the universe, although we might not know how they are beneficial to us. The venom of snakes is a case in point. Even though it can kill man, Allah the Almighty inspired them to use it in getting rid of some microbes.

Therefore, it is clear that Allah the Almighty has created the universe by due measure. Let us offer another example to illustrate this point; we see crocodiles lying on the shores with birds in their mouths pecking at the food between their teeth, yet the crocodiles do not harm them in the slightest because these birds, out of the Great Wisdom of Allah alert the crocodile to the presence of hunters. That is to say that these particular birds obtain their sustenance and meanwhile protect the crocodile’s life. The same applies to electricity, which is highly beneficial to us, yet if we misuse it, it causes death and destruction.

Further, we should stress the point that one should not ask why Allah Glorified is He made certain things unlawful to man. That is because everything in this life is created by due measure and thus has a role to perform, although we might be unaware of that role. In the same connection, it is not right to use means in place of ends. By making things lawful or unlawful, Allah Glorified is He wanted man to get benefit from what is good for him. For example, the wisdom behind the prohibition of eating pork is that Allah the Almighty created pigs to consume and get rid of microbes, so man is in no way allowed to turn the means into ends. Here, I would like to draw your attention to the fact that modern scientific discoveries prove the truthfulness and veracity of Islam day after day.

Let us offer a striking example to illustrate this point; we find that diseases spread widely in those communities which eat pork and drink wine to the extent that there is a certain disease called 'cirrhosis of the liver' spreading in those lands. Here is a very good question, that is, 'were we to postpone obeying the Order of Allah the Almighty on the prohibition of eating pork until laboratories were built?! Or was it enough for us to keep ourselves from what He Glorified is He made unlawful?' It goes without saying that we must obey the Divine Orders for our own safety. In the Quran, Allah the Almighty says: 'We will show them our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth. But is it not sufficient concerning your Lord that He is, over all things, a Witness?' (Fussilat: 53) In this regard, it is important to know that every day reveals to us a sign which confirms the veracity and truthfulness of Islam. So, no one should ask, 'Why did Allah the Almighty create these creatures which He Himself declared forbidden?' Once again, we stress the fact that they were created to serve as means, not ends. For example, Allah the Almighty created petroleum for us to extract fuel from it, but can any of us drink petrol? Hence, it is clear that declaring things lawful or unlawful is intended to achieve the maximum benefit for mankind, which is why whoever disregards this has no one to blame but himself. In the Quran, Allah the Almighty says: 'Say, "Have you seen what Allah has sent down to you of provision of which you have made (some) lawful and (some) unlawful?"' 'Say, "Has Allah permitted you (to do so), or do you invent (something) about Allah?"' (Yunus: 59)

This aforementioned verse of the chapter of Yunus tells us that Allah the Almighty is rebuking people for declaring unlawful what He Glorified is He made lawful and for declaring lawful what He the Almighty made unlawful.

That is to say, that doing something like this is against the Will of Allah the Almighty who knows best what is beneficial for man and what is not beneficial for him. Let us offer an example of what the Arabs used to do with certain kinds of camels which are al-bahir, as-sa'iba and al-wasila to fully illustrate this point. For al-bahira, a she-camel whose ears would be clipped so that no one would harm it, especially after it gave birth to five litters, the final being male; the Arabs used to leave it to graze freely without being mounted or milked. In addition, it would not be denied either pasture or water. They furthermore used to offer it as sacrifice for the gods. If we think carefully about the beneficiaries of such acts, we would find out that they are the idolatrous priests. The same applies to as-sa'iba; they voluntarily used to let it roam free. In addition, no one was allowed to mount it or even milk it. Once again, it was the priests who benefitted from this act as well. As for al-wasila, it is a she-camel born alongside a male, so they believed that it was connected with the bull born with it, which is why they would not slaughter the male for their gods. Likewise, they used to set a bull free after it had sired ten litters, and they used to say about it: 'Its back is protected', so it would not be mounted, loaded or prevented from any pasture or water. That is why Allah the Almighty reproached all of those customs, since Allah Glorified is He did not instruct us to act likewise.

In this regard, we should take into account that Allah, out of His great wisdom, made blood and carrion unlawful because He is the One Who declares what is lawful and what is not. In addition, sometimes we are able to define the Divine Wisdom behind a particular legal obligation, while other times we find it difficult to do so with another obligation. That is why He the Almighty says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تُحَرِّمُواْ طَيِّبَٰتِ مَآ أَحَلَّ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ وَلَا
تَعۡتَدُوٓاْۚ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُعۡتَدِينَ ﴿٨٧﴾

You who believe, do not forbid the good things God has made lawful to you – do not exceed the limits: God does not love those who exceed the limits [87] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 87)

So, it is crystal clear now that Allah the Almighty is the Only One Who has the right to declare things lawful or unlawful. That is to say that man has nothing at all to do in this regard; for man sometimes deviates the way by declaring lawful what Allah made unlawful or by declaring unlawful what He Glorified is He made lawful.

Therefore, we must beware of forbidding what Allah has permitted or permitting what He the Almighty has forbidden. This point is fully understood in the following: we should not believe that Allah has declared what is unlawful to be lawful; we also should not say that Allah has declared what is unlawful to be lawful; we should not refrain either from doing what Allah has permitted out of the suspicion that it is forbidden; we should not pass a verdict on the prohibition of something, although Allah has declared it lawful. Finally, we should not forbid ourselves that which Allah has made lawful for us. Hence, it is prohibited for one to make a vow not to eat mutton or oranges because it is not permitted to make such a vow. This is based on the Shari'a ruling that forbidding things which Allah has permitted by means of vows is itself forbidden, a point which is definitively proved by the Quran in which Allah the Almighty says: 'O Prophet, why do you prohibit (yourself from) what Allah has made lawful for you, seeking the approval of your wives? And Allah is Forgiving and Merciful' (at-Tahrim: 1). Thus, we must fully understand this point and then recognise its different stages, as follows: do not believe; do not say; do not refrain; do not give a verdict; and do not vow. Why not? That is because it is a kind of transgression.

Allah the Almighty says: 'You who believe, do not forbid the good things Allah has made lawful to you- do not exceed the limits: Allah does not love those who exceed the limits.' (al-Ma'ida: 87) So, what is transgression? It is to go beyond the bounds of what Allah has forbidden or of what He the Almighty has permitted. That is to say, Allah Glorified is He loves those who stay within His bounds. That is why He the Almighty orders us in a particular position in the Quran not to go near to His limit: 'These are the limits (set by) Allah, so do not approach them' (al-Baqara: 187). Yet in another verse He the Almighty orders us not to exceed them: 'And whoever transgresses the limits of Allah - it is those who are the wrongdoers' (al-Baqara: 229). So, what is the difference between these two orders? The meaning of these two orders goes as follows: with respect to things which are forbidden, we must not approach them; yet, things which are permitted, we must not transgress them. This point is even evident in the Hadith of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in which he says: ‘What is lawful is clear and what is unlawful is clear, but between them are certain doubtful things which many people do not know. So, he who guards against doubtful things keeps his religion and his honour blameless. But he who falls into doubtful things falls into that which is unlawful, just as a shepherd who grazes his cattle in the vicinity of a pasture declared prohibited (by the king); he is likely to stray into the pasture. Mind you, every king has a protected pasture and Allah’s involved limits are those which He has declared unlawful. Verily, there is a piece of flesh in the body, if it is healthy, the whole body is healthy, and if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. Verily, it is the heart.’(1)

Thus, it is clear that every being in the universe has special qualities and a particular role to perform, which is why we must not turn the means into ends, for there are many creatures that are originally created to serve as means and thus should not be used as ends. Therefore, Allah the Almighty commands us to take that from which we can directly benefit and leave aside those things which He has forbidden. Pigs are originally created to rid us of microbes, so we are not allowed to eat them. Yet, if people do so, it means that they turn the means into an end which is against the general maxim on using things in the light of the main reason behind their creation. Here, we should be fully aware of the fact that Allah the Almighty is the One Who sets everything in order in the universe.

This is also proved by the fact that today’s modern scientific discoveries reveal day after day the veracity and truthfulness of the religion of Islam, to the extent that they incline to it. As a matter of fact, Allah’s judgement of things as lawful or unlawful suffices us, avoiding the hardships of attempting to reach the deep wisdom behind the permissibility or impermissibility of such things. That is why we, Muslims, firmly believe that Allah the Almighty based on His great wisdom, judged things lawful or unlawful; at a particular point in time, we will be fully aware of the deep and great wisdom behind such permissibility or impermissibility; a point which is proven by the words of Allah the Almighty in which He says that He shall make them fully understand His Messages through what they perceive in the utmost horizons of the universe and within themselves, so that it will become clear to them that this revelation is indeed the truth. He the Almighty then adds that He is witness to everything 'But is it not sufficient concerning your Lord that He is, over all things, a Witness?' (Fussilat: 53)

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

So, we reach the conclusion that we should not believe in the permissibility of what Allah has forbidden, neither should we say something like that, nor should we refrain from it or even issue verdicts based on it. Allah the Almighty concludes the verse with His words, '…do not exceed the limits: Allah does not love those who exceed the limits.' (al-Ma'ida: 87) We have previously explained the meaning of the word al-i'tida' (translated as 'exceeding the limits') and said that it means to go beyond and violate the bounds in matters of permissibility and impermissibility. We should take into account that Allah the Almighty loves those who do not exceed His bounds. So, one should not even approach that which is unlawful, lest his soul incites him to commit sin. Moreover, by keeping oneself away from approaching what is unlawful, the believer guards himself against doubtful matters.

Once again, it is Allah the Creator Who has the absolute right to judge things lawful or unlawful, which is why we, the creatures, must obey His orders so that the course of life runs smoothly. This is exactly akin to what we do when we invent a machine which helps us make products with less effort. But when the manufacturer makes this machine, he also precisely defines the kind of fuel it runs on, which is why when someone uses a different kind of fuel, the machine breaks down. So, how do we think the Law of the All-Wise will look like?

As a matter of fact, when He Glorified is He tells us that the course of life will run smoothly only by accepting what He has made lawful and by keeping away from that which is forbidden, this means that we must obey Him Glorified is He for He is the One Who created us and knows best what is beneficial or not to us. In addition, we should stress that no one in the universe has ever claimed to have created his own self, which is why we must entrust the affairs of sustenance and the preservation of our lives to Him the Almighty and the Creator. That is to say that we must adhere to what He has declared lawful and keep away from what is unlawful, for this actually achieves the maximum benefit for us in this life. Therefore, it is clear now that we are allowed to do particular things while not allowed to do other things. However, there are things which are not judged lawful or unlawful which is the mubah meaning that one will not be blamed for doing or not doing them. Hence, Allah the Almighty wants to tell us that since He is our Creator, He knows best what is beneficial and unbeneficial for us, which is why if we go against His Rulings, we will be judged' transgressors'.

Hence, Allah Glorified is He in this verse under discussion addresses those who believe, saying to them that He created them and sustained them out of nothing, so that their lives will be preserved, which is why the believers must accept and act upon the Rulings of Allah the Almighty. That is to say that they are not allowed to deprive themselves of the good things of life which He has made lawful to them. In other words, Allah the Almighty says that we must act upon the instructions and teachings He gave us if we want the course of life to run smoothly. In this regard, if we carefully reflect upon the words of Allah the Almighty in which He tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the most hostile to the believers are the Jews and those who associate other deities with Allah; you are sure to find that the closest in affection towards the believers are those who say, ‘We are Christians, ‘for there are among them people devoted to learning-(scholars) and ascetics. These people are not given to arrogance (al-Ma’ida: 82). We find that He Glorified is He gives us the reasons why they are to be praised and why they are close in affection to us. He the Almighty says ‘among them are priests and monks and they are not arrogant’ (al-Ma’ida: 82) When the Companions of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard this verse, they wept copiously to the extent that ten of them, including Abu Bakr As-Siddiq, ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab, ‘Ali ibn Abi Taleb, ‘Abdullah ibn Mas’ ud, ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Umar, Abu Dharr Al-Ghifari, Salim (slave of Abu Hudhayfa), Al-Miqdad ibn Al-Aswad, Salman Al-Farisi and Ma’qil ibn Muqrin, gathered in the house of ‘Uthman ibn Madh’un Al-Jamhi, decided to fast and not to break their fast, to offer prayer all night without sleeping, not to eat meat and fat and to remain celibate all their lives, that is, they wanted to lead an ascetic life. Yet, when news of that reached Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, he called upon them, praised Allah and then said: 'What is the matter with people who say such and such? But I pray and I sleep, I fast and I break my fast and I marry women. Whoever turns away from my Sunnah is not of me.'(1) This statement of Prophet Muhammad goes hand in hand with the verses of the Quran under discussion in which He the Almighty prompts: 'O you, who have believed, do not prohibit the good things which Allah has made lawful to you and do not transgress. Indeed, Allah does not like transgressors.' (al-Ma'ida: 87)

Careful reflection on the statement of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clearly indicates that it is logical and reasonable because if those Companions who decided to act like that wanted to refrain from the good things that Allah has permitted to lead an ascetic life like those who came before them, does that mean they will not offer prayer? Indeed, they will pray. We know for certain that prayer requires doing certain actions, which is why we need energy to perform them. In addition, we are required to cover our private parts while offering prayer; an act which cannot be fulfilled except by clothes; but from where can one get clothes? If we carefully examine the way clothes are made, we will reach the conclusion that it is a complex process which go through different stages including raising animals from which the wool will be taken, spinning the wool so that it can be woven; sending it to factories to tailor it, etc., all things which require us to exert great efforts. However, one is not aware of this complex process unless he is in need of clothes. So, if you, O man, want to spend all your time in worship, then you must not benefit from the work of those who act upon the teachings of Islam and follow the Divine Guidance, seeking to earn their living. Wrong are those who think that life goes like this!

Moreover, does the one who devotes himself solely to worship not have to eat? Indeed he does so that he has the energy to be able to can pray. We all know perfectly well how a loaf of bread is made. It is true that one can go to the bakery and easily buy his bread, but the process of making bread is complex and lengthy and goes through different stages, including getting the flour from the mill, which, in turn, gets the wheat from the warehouse. As for wheat, it was planted, ploughed, and harvested by farmers who, in doing so, had to use machinery and fertilizers; that is, it is a process which requires exerting great efforts.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Further, it is evident now that man needs to do all those activities so that he can offer his prayer. At that point, we should say to those who want to withdraw from life that you are in no allowed to get benefit from the work of those who participate in making the course of life run smoothly. Here, we should stress a very important Usuli(1) maxim which reads, 'That without which an obligation cannot be fulfilled is itself an obligation'. Therefore, if the ruler sees that there is a particular job which is essential for the preservation of the human existence and for attaining a higher spiritual rank, but people are not eager to take it, he has the absolute right to command some to do so. In truth, every field of industry is jurisprudentially judged as' a communal obligation', that is, if some do it, the rest of the community will not be blamed for not doing it, otherwise, the entire community will be blamed for not doing it.

Therefore, it is clear that we must exert our efforts so that the course of life runs smoothly. In this vein, I would like to stress the fact that all actions of life are integrated and complementary to each other. That is why Allah the Almighty orders the believers not to deprive themselves from the good things of life which He has made lawful for them because if they do so, it means that they take the role of the Lawgiver, thus transgressing His bounds by infringing His absolute and exclusive right to declare things lawful or unlawful.

Once again, out of Allah's great wisdom, Allah Glorified is He declares things lawful or unlawful for man's own good. Likewise, we should firmly believe that the existence of such forbidden things will help us get benefit, even if not directly. We have previously given the example of the snake and said that we can extract therapy from its venom. That is to say that the snake itself was, in essence, created to serve man. That is why we firmly believe that all the creatures in the universe are created to serve man. So, it is not right to ask Allah the Almighty why He has created such things, although He declared them prohibited.

(1) The name Usuli derives from the term Usoul al-fiqh (principles of jurisprudence). In Usuli thought, there are four valid sources of law: the Quran, Hadith, ijma' and 'aql. Ijma' refers to a unanimous consensus.

Thus, we should not exceed the limits by declaring lawful what Allah has made unlawful or by declaring unlawful what Allah has made lawful. It goes without saying that the course of life will run smoothly in case we do not transgress the limits. When we consider the jungle, we see that every animal has a particular role to play. This role aims mainly at improving man's life. Here, we should stress the fact that when Allah Glorified is He has judged something to be forbidden, it does not mean that man will not get benefit from it; rather, he will do so but not in a direct way. As for that kind of provision which man gets directly, it includes what he eats and wears. As a matter of fact, we can also get this kind of provision through indirect means. Likewise, those things which Allah has declared unlawful are viewed as means to achieving the good of man, but not in a direct way.

Back to the saying of Allah the Almighty 'You who believe, do not forbid the good things Allah has made lawful to you-do not exceed the limits…'; it issues an order to the believers not to judge lawful what Allah judged unlawful or to judge unlawful what Allah made lawful. It also gives an order to the believers to eat, without any extravagance, from the good things which He made lawful to them—a point which is affirmed in another verse in the Quran in which He the Almighty says: 'O children of Adam, take your adornment at every masjid (mosque), and eat and drink, but be not excessive. Indeed, He likes not those who commit excess.' (al-A'raf: 31) Allah the Almighty then says:

وَكُلُوا۟ مِمَّا رَزَقَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ حَلَٰلًا طَيِّبًا ۚ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنتُم بِهِۦ مُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٨٨﴾

But eat the lawful and good things that God provides for you. Be mindful of God, in whom you believe [88] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 88)

Before delving into the explanation of this verse, we shall first know what is meant by ar-rizq (translated as 'provision' or 'sustenance'). Ar-rizq is a term encompassing all what one benefits from including food, drink, clothes, education and moral characters of forbearance, bravery, etc. However, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'but eat the lawful and good things that Allah provides for you,' (al-Ma'ida: 88) refers mainly to food. That is to say, we must eat what is lawfully earned, which is the 'lawful provision'. This actually means that there is another kind of provision which is obtained through unlawful means—the ‘unlawful provision’. For instance, when a thief steals something, this means that he gets benefit through an unlawful way. Had he been patient, he would have obtained what he wanted without resorting to such unlawful act. Another possible definition for the term ar-rizq is that it refers to the provision which Allah has judged lawful. Here, scholars differed over which of the two aforementioned definitions is more accurate. In this verse, He the Almighty says, ‘but eat the lawful and good things that Allah provides for you.’ (al-Ma’ida: 88) Now, it is of great importance to differentiate between the following two styles; that is, ‘eat what Allah grants you’ and ‘eat the lawful and good things that Allah provides for you’. The first sentence means that we are to eat all the provision given to us by Allah, which is not right; that is because reality tells that we cannot eat it all, for we eat only some and use the other to get more of it. We should take into account that food is of two kinds: that which can be used to make more of itself and that from which no more can be made. If we, for example, apply this to flour, we will find that it cannot produce an ear of wheat, so we cannot get more of it. Moreover, if we apply this to wheat itself, we will find that if man eats all the wheat he has, he will be no longer able to get more of it, which is why we must eat some of it while keeping some. In this verse, we are clearly ordered to eat some of the provision which Allah gives us so that we can save the sources of our sustenance. If man were to eat all the wheat he had, what would happen when he wanted to farm again? Therefore, the preservation of life necessitates that we save some of our provisions so that we can use them to make more and, thereby, sustain our lives.

We can deduce from the aforementioned example that’ lawful provision’ is of two kinds: that from which we can get more, and thus a portion of it must be kept to use it later; and that from which we cannot get more, such as flour. In the latter case, we can eat some and save some for our future use. Illustrating this fact, Allah the Almighty tells us in the chapter of Yusuf about the King’s dream. He Glorified is He says: ‘Indeed, I have seen (in a dream) seven fat cows being eaten by seven (that were) lean, and seven green spikes (of grain) and others (that were) dry. O eminent ones, explains to me my vision, if you should interpret visions.’ (Yusuf: 43) However, the dream interpreters were unable to do so and said to him: 'They said, "(It is but) a mixture of false dreams, and we are not learned in the interpretation of dreams."' (Yusuf: 44) As a matter of fact, the answer given by the king's dream interpreters indicates that they were very confused because if it was a confusing dream, then this would imply that it was meaningless, a point which was negated when they said that they had no deep knowledge of the real meaning of dreams. That is to say, the dream was eligible to be interpreted; yet, they were unable to do so. Here, we should stress a very important point that is, it is not a condition that the person who sees a dream must be righteous, a point which is proved by the fact that the one who sees the dream here is the king. A very good question arises: Why did Allah the Almighty inform the king of such topics? We say that Allah Glorified is He might allow a person to see a dream as a way of honouring him or as a way of honouring the person who interprets it. In our case, Allah wanted to honour Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him by enabling him to interpret the king's dream. What was unusual about the dream is that the emaciated cows ate the fat ones which was interpreted by Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him as an indication that they would sow for seven consecutive years as usual. He followed it by instructing them to store all that they reap, left in the ear apart from the little they would eat. 'Yusuf (Joseph) said, "You will plant for seven years consecutively; and what you harvest leave in its spikes, except a little from which you will eat."' (Yusuf: 47) That is to say that Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him ordered them to eat a very little portion of the wheat, and not to take too much of it so that they would be able to benefit from it during the seven hard years, i.e. the years of drought. This interpretation from Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him instructed them that they should keep some of the wheat to get more of it in the future. By the way, today's scientific discoveries definitively prove that the best way to preserve wheat grains is to leave them in their ears—likewise, to leave the seeds in the pod. In truth, the interpretation given by Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him was precise because he aimed at preserving people's and livestock's lives during the years of famine; people would eat the grain, whilst the livestock would eat the leftover straw. Allah the Almighty guided them through Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him to the essential means through which their lives would be preserved. The verse indicates that Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him instructed them to eat a very little amount of the wheat and to store the greater portion in their ears during the years of ease. However, what about the years of drought and hardship? Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him told them that, after the good years, seven years of hardship would come which would consume all but a little of what they stored up for them. ‘Then will come after that seven difficult (years) which will consume what you saved for them, except a little from which you will store’ (Yusuf: 48).

That is to say that the people of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) would eat during the seven years of famine a lot of the grain they had put in the stores and, meanwhile, keep a little so that they could use it in farming and, consequently, get more of it. Thus, the particle min (translated as ‘of’) in Allah’s words: ‘And eat min what Allah has provided for you (which is) lawful and good. And fear Allah, in whom you are believers’ (al-Ma’ida: 88) conveys the meaning of ‘some’; that is, that we are ordered to eat ‘some’ of the lawful things which Allah granted us. However, if these things are of the kind which can produce more of themselves, then their species will be preserved. Let us suppose that there is a man who has some melon seeds and he plants them. When the fruits come, he eats them all together with the seeds; then, what will he plant for the following year? As a matter of fact, this man should have saved some of the seeds to plant, and as well saved some of the melons to give to his neighbour or to the needy.

Therefore, this particular part of the verse could be explained to mean that we should consider the preservation of the species and that we should give the extra amount of our lawful provision to the needy. Allah the Almighty concludes the verse, ‘Be mindful of Allah, in whom you believe.’ (al-Ma’ida: 88) This means that one will not be blamed if he is conscious and fearful of Allah the Almighty in whom he firmly believes. That is because when one believes in Him, it means that he entrusts his affairs to a Powerful God. It is shameful to capitulate to the command of someone who is your equal, but to obey and yield to the command of the One Who is Higher than you is nothing to be ashamed of; rather, it is a source of honour and dignity.

This point is also explained clearly in the story of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him with the sorcerers. When Prophet Musa (Moses) cast down his staff, the sorcerers saw that it turned into a snake moving quickly. Here, we should stress a very important point that is, when a sorcerer practises sorcery, he is fully aware of the fact that the item he used in his practise, does not change; rather, it is people's sights that are deceived by that. So, when the sorcerers of Pharaoh saw that Prophet Musa's staff had actually turned into a snake, they fully realised that this matter was beyond human capacity. Consequently, they declared their belief in Allah, Lord of all the worlds, and Lord of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron): 'They said, "We have believed in the Lord of the worlds"' (ash-Shu'ara': 47-48). That is to say they knew perfectly well that what Prophet Musa (Moses) did was beyond any human power. Finally, we reach the conclusion that all what the sorcerers of Pharaoh had done with people was an act of deceiving of their sights (an illusion). This point is proved by the saying of Allah in which He the Almighty says: 'He said, "Rather, you throw." And suddenly their ropes and staffs seemed to him from their magic that they were moving (like snakes)."' (Ta Ha: 66) In another verse, Allah the Almighty says: 'He said, "Throw," and when they threw, they bewitched the eyes of the people and struck terror into them, and they presented a great (feat of) magic.' (al-A'raf: 116) As for Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he threw down the staff for the first time, he was afraid when he realised that the staff has actually turned into a snake, moving quickly. When the sorcerers threw down their ropes and cords, they did not turn into real snake, but what they did was but an act of deceiving people's eyes.

Let us offer another example to illustrate this point. Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him sent a message to the Queen of Sheba, Bilqis, ordering her and her people not to exalt themselves before him and to come to him in submission, 'Be not haughty with me but come to me in submission (as Muslims).' (an-Naml: 31) The answer to this was: 'She said, "O eminent ones, advise me in my affair. I would not decide a matter until you witness (for) me."' (an-Naml: 32)

It is, at that point, that the leaders were fully aware of the fact that the issue was political in all. Then, Allah says: 'They said, "We are men of strength and of great military might, but the command is yours, so see what you will command."' (an-Naml: 33) The statement of those leaders indicates clearly that political opinions must be given by astute and experienced politicians who are able to take into account all the circumstances, including the action and the reaction. That is why we find that Bilqis handled the matter from a political perspective. Thus, she sent Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him a very precious gift to examine him, believing that if he accepted her gift, this would mean that he was a man who sought only the desires and finery of this worldly life. But when her messengers came to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him with the gift, he rejected it and said: 'Do you people mean to add to my wealth?' Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him added that what Allah has given him was so much better than all that Allah has given them adding that they rejoice in this gift of theirs. Then Sulaiman (Solomon) asked Bilqis's messengers to go back to the people who have sent them because he, Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him would most certainly come upon them with forces which they would never be able to withstand and would, most certainly, cause them to be driven from that land of theirs disgraced and humbled. 'Return to them, for we will surely come to them with soldiers that they will be powerless to encounter, and we will surely expel them therefrom in humiliation, and they will be debased' (an-Naml: 36-37). At this point, Bilqis became fully aware that she had to surrender to Allah the Almighty.

Lastly, we reach the conclusion that one might feel humiliation if he receives the order from someone who is equal to him; however, if the order is from another who is of higher rank or authority, there will be no humiliation at all. Here, we should emphasise that Bilqis had turned to faith with dignity: 'She said, "My Lord, indeed I have wronged myself, and I submit with Solomon to Allah, Lord of the worlds."' (an-Naml: 44)

We notice that she did not say that she had surrendered herself to Sulaiman (Solomon), but rather, she said that she had done so with Sulaiman, to Allah, Lord of all the worlds; there was no shame in her faith, so her people did not think that she had humiliated herself by allowing another human being to rule her; rather, both, she and Sulaiman (Solomon), were ruled by Allah, Lord of all the worlds which brings no shame at all.

Back to the saying of Allah the Almighty, 'But eat the lawful and good things that Allah provides for you. Be mindful of Allah, in whom you believe.' (al-Ma'ida: 88)

That is to say that you, believers, are supposed to accept all of the divine teachings and rulings by virtue of your belief. In other words, as long as you have faith and obey the command from Him, in whom you have faith, this means clearly that you are fully aware of the fact that you entrust your affairs to the Only One Who is worthy. We notice that this verse opens with highlighting the quality of belief in the believers. Also, it is concluded with casting light on the same attribute; what is the wisdom behind that? In the beginning of the verse, Allah addresses them with this quality as to encourage them to act upon the Divine Order given to them, whilst the conclusion of the verse bears witness to their firm belief. He the Almighty then says:

لَا يُؤَاخِذُكُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِٱللَّغۡوِ فِيٓ أَيۡمَٰنِكُمۡ وَلَٰكِن يُؤَاخِذُكُم بِمَا عَقَّدتُّمُ ٱلۡأَيۡمَٰنَۖ
فَكَفَّٰرَتُهُۥٓ إِطۡعَامُ عَشَرَةِ مَسَٰكِينَ مِنۡ أَوۡسَطِ مَا تُطۡعِمُونَ أَهۡلِيكُمۡ أَوۡ كِسۡوَتُهُمۡ
أَوۡ تَحۡرِيرُ رَقَبَةٖۖ فَمَن لَّمۡ يَجِدۡ فَصِيَامُ ثَلَٰثَةِ أَيَّامٖۚ ذَٰلِكَ كَفَّٰرَةُ أَيۡمَٰنِكُمۡ إِذَا
حَلَفۡتُمۡۚ وَٱحۡفَظُوٓاْ أَيۡمَٰنَكُمۡۚ كَذَٰلِكَ يُبَيِّنُ ٱللَّهُ لَكُمۡ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَشۡكُرُونَ ٨٩

God does not take you [to task] for what is thoughtless in your oaths, only for your binding oaths: the atonement for breaking an oath is to feed ten poor people with food equivalent to what you would normally give your own families, or to clothe them, or to set free a slave – if a person cannot find the means, he should fast for three days. This is the atonement for breaking your oaths – keep your oaths. In this way God makes clear His revelations to you, so that you may be thankful [89] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 89)

Allah's verse Allah does not take you (to task) for what is thoughtless in your oaths…' (al-Ma'ida: 89) indicates that the Arabic word yu'akhidh (translated as 'take to task') derives from the word aakhadha which means 'to take to task'. We should explain that there is a difference between akhadha and aakhadha. If you say, 'I took him to task,' using the word akhadha, this means that you punished him severely because he had not entered into any kind of good pact with you; but if you use the word aakhadha, this suggests that there is some kind of interaction, which is why Allah the Almighty takes the disbelievers to task severely. But the question to be asked here is why would Allah the Almighty take the believers to task? It is because the believers are part of the covenant, while the disbelievers are not; therefore, He Glorified is He takes them to task in the manner of a Mighty, Powerful One. Further, it is clear that there is a difference between the act of al-mu'aakhadha and that of al-akhdh. Al-mu'aakhadha means to punish someone for violating the pact between you and him by committing a crime which is forbidden under such pact; that is, he will not be punished unless he commits a crime which is forbidden under this pact. In addition, a prior warning must be issued before the meting out of the punishment. Therefore, the civil law states: 'There shall be no crime or penalty except by virtue of the law.' So, before issuing the punishment, there has to be a law which clearly states the crime and its punishment because to legally stipulate that an action is a crime, makes a person think twice about doing it. But if there is no law stating that the action is a crime, the person will be free to do it or not do it because it is permissible.

The saying of Allah the Almighty 'Allah does not take you (to task) for what is thoughtless in your oaths…' (al-Ma'ida: 89) clearly indicates the covenant made between Allah and the believers. As for the Arabic word al-laghw (translated as 'thoughtless'), we find that it means to utter something with the tongue without the heart having firmly intended it. For example, people in Egypt, by virtue of their vernacular language, used to swear to Allah to do something or not. For example, if a person asks someone to have lunch with him, he might say: 'By Allah, you must come to have launch with us', and so on. This is the meaning of al-laghaw. That is speaking without the heart firmly intending what has been said. Allah the Almighty is the One Who created us, and thus He knows us best; He Glorified is He out of His Eternal Knowledge, knows that sometimes we say things we do not mean. This is also proved when a mother supplicates against her only son, but she does so only with her tongue, while her heart rejects it; that is why we say in a popular proverb: 'I might supplicate against my son, but I hate those who say, Amen!'

So, out of the fact that He the Almighty knows us best, He knows that sometimes the tongue utters words without the heart having intended them, which is why He the Almighty says, 'Allah does not take you (to task) for what is thoughtless in your oaths…' (al-Ma'ida: 89). Yet, He the Almighty adds that He will take us to task for our binding oath. When we see the word 'yet', we know that it indicates al-istidrak which means the affirmation of what is suspected to be wrong or the negation of what is suspected to be right. As for the word 'aqqadtum (translated as 'binding'), it indicates that the action is done with the firm resolve of the heart and that, before speaking the oath, the person has deliberated the matter in his mind and made the decision to take such position.

Hence, al-laghaw means to speak with your tongue what your heart dos not intend. We gave an example of the woman who supplicates against her only son. As a matter of fact, we, in our daily life, may thoughtlessly say words and statements which may apparently indicate disbelief, but Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him tells us that the actions must be based on sincere intentions. That is why he peace and blessings be upon him when commenting about that man who said, 'O Allah, you are my slave and I am your Lord, 'said: 'He commits this mistake out of extreme joy.'(1)

Out of Allah's Infinite Mercy, He Glorified is He pardons our thoughtless oaths—point proved by the verse under discussion. As for the word 'aqqadtum (translated as 'binding') it indicates that someone is utterly determined to do a particular act. When we want to exaggerate an action, we use a word which gives its perfect meaning very clearly. Bear in mind that we realise that the word 'aqqada is not the same as 'aqada (they both mean 'to swear', but ('aqqada) is stronger); the word 'aqqada means that a person has sworn a firm, binding and solemn oath. Another example of this kind of linguistic emphasis is found in the saying of Allah the Almighty in the chapter of Yusuf, wherein He Glorified is He says that she, Egypt's Chief's wife, ghallaqat (bolted) the doors.' She closed the doors and said, "Come, you."' (Yusuf: 23) Someone might ask, 'would it not have been enough for Allah the Almighty just to say ghalaqat instead of ghallaqat?' We say: No, because He Glorified is He used the verb which strongly emphasised how firmly the door was bolted, since a door could be bolted in several different ways; it could be simply closed with the latch or with a bolt. However, using this verb in this context, indicates plainly that Egypt's Chief's wife bolted the doors very firmly and securely. The same applies to the Allah's words in this context; that is, the use of the phrase' aqqadtum al-ayman' means that you made your oaths and you mean it sincerely in your hearts. The particular meaning given by this verse is identical to that in a verse in the chapter of al-Baqara when Allah says: ‘Allah does not impose blame upon you for what is unintentional in your oaths, but He imposes blame upon you for what your hearts have earned. And Allah is Forgiving and Forbearing.’ (al-Baqara: 225)

(1) Narrated by Muslim

Concerning this particular verse of the chapter of al-Baqara, we notice that the hearts are said to have ‘conceived’ (kasabat which literally means ‘acquired’); so, what do hearts acquire in such a situation? We know that the word al-kasb may indicate several meanings; it may give the meaning of earning money and adding it to one’s capital and it may also indicate that someone has made a solemn and firm oath; that means he affirms with his heart what he swears. In other words, the oath is made by the tongue and the heart together.

As for the cause of revelation for this verse, it is narrated that when Allah’s words were revealed, ‘you, who believe, do not forbid the good things Allah has made lawful to you- do not exceed the limits: Allah does not love those who exceed the limits. But eat the lawful and good things that Allah provides for you. Be mindful of Allah, in whom you believe’ (al-Ma’ida: 87-88), those Companions of Messenger Muhammad, who forswore good food, clothing, as well as marriage, and swore oaths to that effect, wondered how they could expiate their oaths; thus, this verse was revealed. This verse indicates that the forswearing of what is lawful is a thoughtless oath which does not need to be expiated. Nevertheless, we stress that one is not allowed to swear to do or not do something while he does not have the right to make such oath. For example, if one says: ‘By Allah, I will not pray’, this kind of oath cannot be judged as binding and thus needs no expiation. But if he says: ‘By Allah, I will drink wine’, we tell him to follow what the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says: ‘When you swear an oath and consider something else to be better than it, make expiation for your oath and do the thing that is better.’(1) In this verse under discussion, Allah the Almighty says: ‘…but He will impose blame upon you for (breaking) what you intended of oaths…’ (al-Ma’ida: 89). Therefore, the ruling on binding oaths is totally different from that on those made thoughtlessly. As for binding oaths, Allah the Almighty states that He will take to task those who make them and do not keep them. Yet, here arises a very good question: how would Allah the Almighty take them to task, although He does not explicitly state the details of the punishment? We say that Allah the Almighty out of His Infinite Mercy has concealed the punishment. In addition, He the Almighty has given us a way to avoid punishment by means of expiation; a point which is clear in the saying of Allah, '…the atonement for breaking an oath is to feed ten poor people with food equivalent to what you would normally give your own families or to clothe them, or to set free a slave– if a person cannot find the means, he should fast for three days…' (al-Ma'ida: 89). Thus, the atonement is a way of removing the punishment. Here, another good question arises which is: does this mean that one must make expiation as long as he has sworn an oath? The answer is definitely no, because the expiation is only required from those who break their oaths and fail to honour them. The expiation includes feeding ten needy persons with more or less the same food as you are wont to give to your own families, or clothing them, or freeing a slave or fasting three days for those who cannot afford to do the rest.

(1) Narrated by Muslim

Scholars believe that defining the suitable kind of atonement for breaking an oath differs according to the condition of the one who breaks it. That is, it differs from one person to another. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. It is narrated that the caliph of Andalusia broke an oath and wanted to make expiation, so he went to the judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id and asked him how he could expiate it, whereupon the judge said to him: 'You must fast for three days.' Another man was sitting there at that particular time and gestured to the judge, but Mundhir ignored his gesture. When the session ended, the judge went out along with that man who asked him, 'O father of Sa'id, I have a problem with the judgement you gave. Why did not you tell the caliph that the expiation for an oath is to free a slave or to feed ten poor people?' In response to this question, Mundhir replied: 'Do you think that the Commander of the Faithful would be deterred by asking him to free a slave or feed ten poor people?'

This shows us that Judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id had thought hard to choose the expiation which would be the best deterrent; a matter which teaches us that the expiation is meant to rebuke the soul and, at the same time, efface the sin. That is why Judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id felt that the rebuke was more crucial than the effacement of the sin because the caliph would not have been inconvenienced by feeding or clothing ten poor people, or even by freeing even more than one slave. Here, we should stress that the majority of scholars are of the opinion that one can choose fasting only when either feeding, clothing or freeing slaves is not possible.

As for feeding ten needy people, with more or less the same food we usually give to our own families, someone might ask if the equivalence refers to the quantity or the kind or food. We say that it should be considered both the quantity and the kind; if a man eats a single piece of bread for a meal, but he knows that someone else in his family eats three pieces, the average here is two pieces of bread, along with whatever is eaten with the bread, such as meat and fat. The same is true for clothing; the man who expiates his oath must clothe ten needy people with clothes that cover their private parts and can be used for prayer, such as a sarong and robe, or a long shirt and turban, or any other clothes which cover them properly. Finally, we find that the expiation of freeing a slave comes in the second-to-last position. Allah the Almighty then says: 'If a person cannot find the means, he should fast for three days.' (al-Ma'ida: 89) This obviously indicates that Allah Glorified is He did not arrange these means of expiation in order of preference, but rather, we should choose from among them that which well suit our conditions.

Allah the Almighty instructs us, '…keep our oaths.' (al-Ma'ida: 89) Thus, we must not break our oaths; but how can we keep them? We say that, first of all, one should not let an oath pass his lips rashly; secondly, one must try his best to fulfil his oath. This means that one should not swear an oath with his tongue and affirm it with his heart unless he is sure that he will make every effort to fulfil what he has sworn to do; this is the meaning of Allah's words, 'and keep your oaths.' (al-Ma'ida: 89)

Then, He Glorified is He concludes the verse with, 'In this way Allah makes clear His Revelations to you, so that you may be thankful.' To be grateful or thankful means that the one who receives blessings should praise the one who gave them to him. It is as though these rulings deserve thanks from us because they mean that thoughtless oaths are not punished. In addition, it allows the expiation for those oaths which are sworn in earnest; two matters for which we should be thankful to Allah the Almighty since they relieve our hardships. The True Lord Glorified is He and then says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوٓاْ إِنَّمَا ٱلۡخَمۡرُ وَٱلۡمَيۡسِرُ وَٱلۡأَنصَابُ وَٱلۡأَزۡلَٰمُ رِجۡسٞ
مِّنۡ عَمَلِ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنِ فَٱجۡتَنِبُوهُ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تُفۡلِحُونَ ٩٠

You who believe intoxicants and gambling, idolatrous practices, and [divining with] arrows are repugnant acts – Satan’s doing – shun them so that you may prosper [90]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 90)

‘Restriction’, such as when we say, ‘Zayd is nothing but hard working.’ This means that we have restricted Zayd’s character to that of hard working. But if we say, ‘None but Zayd is hard-working’, this means that we have restricted the attribute of hard working to Zayd alone. When you restrict a person to a particular attribute, they call this ‘restricting the described to a description’. When you say ‘Zayd is nothing but a poet’, this means that Zayd is a poet only; he is not a writer or an orator. But if you say, ‘No one is a poet but Zayd’, this means that there are no poets except Zayd; it is as if you are denying that all the others are poets and saying that Zayd alone is a poet; and he might also be a writer, an orator and a scholar alongside being a poet. So, when you see the word innama, know that it is a way of expressing restriction.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘O you who have believed, indeed, intoxicants, gambling, (sacrificing on) stone altars (to other than Allah), and divining arrows are but defilement from the work of Satan, so avoid it that you may be successful.’ (al-Ma’ida: 90) This means that intoxicants, gambling, stone altars and the divining arrows are all —defilement, repugnant acts from the works of Satan, and a ‘loathsome thing’ is something which is vile, foul and impure. Foulness and impurity are things which can be physical, such as the intoxicants, or intangible, such as stone altars and the divining arrows. In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He groups the two things together. He does not specify whether’ intoxicants’ means wine made of grapes or cider made of apples, but rather, He says ‘intoxicants’ to mean everything which intoxicates and clouds the mind. Some scholars are confused by how this verse was revealed in a place where grape wine did not exist because they imagined that only wine intoxicates the mind, but the True Lord Glorified is He here announces absolute prohibition of all that intoxicates the mind. Why, then, are intoxicants, gambling, stone altars and the divining arrows are all repugnant acts from the works of Satan?

The True Lord Glorified is He created man and made him His vicegerent on earth and subjected everything in existence to him; then, Allah asked him to exclusively worship Him and to thrive on this earth. He Glorified is He wanted to ensure the safety of several things for man: the safety of his life so that no one would violate it by killing him or anything else; the safety of his mind so that he would not veil the tool by which he chooses between alternatives; the safety of his dignity so that no one would damage his reputation, and the offspring that thrived on earth would be pure; and the safety of his wealth so the fruits of his labours would be preserved, and no one else would take them such that workers would not be discouraged from working, and others would not take without doing any work, then becoming lazy and reliant on others. If a man used to earn money without working, work will become hard for him. Therefore, the preservation of wealth ensures that energy is not wasted, nor are rights violated, and that no one claims the rights of others, lest artificial incapacity spread throughout the world. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Who is it that would loan Allah a goodly loan so He may multiply it for him many times over? And it is Allah who withholds and grants abundance, and to Him you will be returned.’ (al-Baqara: 245) That is, although Allah Glorified is He is the Giver of all, He respects man’s labours, so no one may be happy to be unemployed. When unemployment spreads, Islam deals with the issue with great wisdom, asking the ruler to provide jobs for people so that they may not become accustomed to earning without working, lest society be harmed by this. With His magnanimous Sacred Law, Allah Glorified is He wants to protect man from everything that threatens his existence; hence, when He forbade intoxicants, prohibiting man from veiling his mind, this was because the intelligent mind is what makes man different from the animals.

Man is superior to animals in that he preserves his life with his mind, whereas animals preserve their lives with their instincts. Therefore, the animal only has one possible response if it is attacked—the dog bites the attacker, and the cat scratches the attacker, while man, on the other hand, can choose between many alternative ways of responding to the aggression; he might strike back, he might kill or he might forgive.

An example of this is what we see in the countryside when someone rides a donkey and tries to make it jump over a little stream, but the donkey refuses to do so, and no matter how much the rider beats it, it refuses to jump because its instinct prevents it from doing that. As for man, he might be filled with delusion and imagine that he can jump over the stream; so, he jumps, but he might end up falling in the water. Boldness is a human trait, but not an animal one because of its instinct.

Another example from the animal world: the male buffalo approaches the female to smell her, and if he finds that it is pregnant, it does not come any closer. This is true for animals, but not for man. When the donkey eats his clover, for example, it stops when it is full and does not eat more, no matter how much his owner beats it because it is ruled by instinct. As for man, he might eat more than what he can manage.

Thus, we find that instinct is what protects animals, and mind is what protects man. That is why animals do not possess the ability to choose, but their instinct-based judgement is flawless. As for man's instinct-based judgement, it might well be flawed.

Allah Glorified is He has given preference to man over animals by giving him the ability to choose between alternatives through using his intellect; therefore, it is not right or proper for man to impair this ability by using intoxicants. If he impairs his ability to choose, his instincts will be of no help to him because they are not fit to protect him. Therefore, we find that he one who impairs his mind puts himself in a lower position than animals because the animal is protected by instinct, while man is protected by his intellect and, in this situation, he has impaired and veiled it. Allah forbade intoxicants because they veil the mind, and everything which veils the mind is an intoxicant, even if it is made from something which is lawful; this is because intelligence is the anchor of moral responsibility.

Allah has also prohibited games of chance, so let us reflect on the precision of the word which Allah chose to name gambling: maysir which is derived from the word yusr which means ‘ease’. He did not call it ma’sar derived from ‘usr meaning ‘difficult’ because no one decides to gamble while realising that he will lose, and everyone who gambles does so because they hope to win. Therefore, He used the word which expresses the state of the gambler which is that he gambles because he dreams of winning; and if he does win, this will tempt him to gamble even more. Losing will also tempt the gambler to gamble more in the hope that he will win back what he has lost. The one who gambles might sell all that he owns to make up for his losses. Yet, despite this, the gains a gambler makes are trivial to him, and he spends them and fritters them away on things which bring no benefit; he might even spend them on things which cause him harm. So, what he wins does not count for him, and what he loses counts against him. Those who gamble with each other are not bonded by friendship or love, and each one of them is keen to get what is in the pocket of the other. In fact, this kind of game wastes energy which could be used to make a lawful income because to make a lawful income, one must work in life. Gambling wastes the energy of the one who wins because he does not have the desire to work; and loss wastes the energy of the loser because no matter how much he works in life, he is unable to pay back his debts.

So, the True Lord Glorified is He wants to ensure that people receive no benefits from anything except the fruits of his hard work and labour; thus, Allah Glorified is He wants every person to support himself and his dependants by working in a lawful endeavour.

Allah Glorified is He also told us that al-azlam are repugnant acts —the work of Satan. Al-azlam were three arrows which the soothsayers possessed, one arrow with’ My Lord commanded me’ written on it, a second with’ My Lord forbade me’, and a third with nothing written on it. If a person wanted to travel, marry or conduct business, he would go to the soothsayer and ask him to draw these arrows for him; if the arrow came with’ My Lord commanded me’, he would go ahead with his plans. If’ My Lord forbade me’ arrow came out, he would not go ahead with his plans. If the unmarked arrow came out, he would draw the arrows again, until one of the two other arrows came out, either confirming the action or not confirming it. None of them could explain why, when’ the unmarked arrow’ came out; it was not considered a command beyond the bounds of prohibition and the permission for the individual to choose whether to go ahead with his plan or not. The True Lord Glorified is He made them forget this in order to show us that this was a false commandment, which the soothsayers had invented themselves. If anyone asked them, 'Who is the God that commands and forbids?' they would say, 'It is Allah who commands and forbids me.' Allah knew that they indeed were liars.

When Allah Glorified is He forbade us from these things, He wanted man to develop his ability to choose between alternatives. A man must deduce, solve, and study the information that he has in order to extract the conclusions; he must not neglect the power of perception which chooses between alternatives. Intoxicants veil the mind; gambling causes man to be ensnared in the clutches of delusion, while the stone altars impair the ability of a man to work and make him subjected to the soothsayers. If you ask a man who drinks alcohol why he does it, he will say, 'I want to drown my sorrows.' But to drown one's sorrows is not to end them; the only way to end them is to face these sorrows, using the means at one's disposal. If your means are not strong enough, then seek the assistance of the One Who created all means, as the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Is He (not best) who responds to the desperate one when he calls upon Him and removes evil and makes you inheritors of the earth? Is there a deity with Allah? Little do you remember?' (an-Naml: 62)

Yet, when your means are exhausted and you turn to Allah, He aids you to overcome the difficulty which causes your woes. We have the best role model in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for when someone vexed him, he would stand and pray. When we say that something' vexes' us, this means that it is beyond the means at one's disposal; therefore, he peace and blessings be upon him would turn to the Lord of all means.

We find some people say, 'I often call upon Allah, but He does not answer me.' We would say to such a person that it must be either that you call upon Him for assistance in a matter which is not distressing or you have not tried to utilise the means at your disposal. When you decline to use the means, you thereby reject Allah's Outstretched Hand, which offers the means to you. I affirm that there will never be a distressed person who uses up all the means at his disposal, but then is not given a relief. When you supplicate for a need, but it is late in coming to you, then you have supplicated without being utterly distressed.

I always like to give this example – and Allah is beyond compare and has no likeness; suppose that a successful merchant sits by his warehouse when the trucks arrive carrying boxes full of his wares, and the workers carry the boxes into the warehouse; then, suddenly, he sees that one of his workers is about to fall under the weight of the box, he is carrying. At this moment, the merchant will automatically rush to aid the worker. So, what about the True Lord Glorified is He who created the means for us? If you have used up all your means, Allah will help you, as He says: ‘Is He (not best) who responds to the desperate one when he calls upon Him and removes evil and makes you inheritors of the earth? Is there a deity with Allah? Little do you remember’ (an-Naml: 62).

So, intoxicants, gambling, stone altars and the divining of arrows are repugnant acts—Satan’s doing. Divining arrows (al-azlam) were a kind of gambling. They would take a male or female camel, slaughter it, and then divide it into twenty-eight portions. They would give a share to a person; two shares to another person; a third man took three shares; a fourth man took four shares; a fifth man took five shares; a sixth man took six shares, and a seventh man took seven shares. They would take seven arrows with different names: the one who drew the one named al-fadh would be given a single share; the one who drew the one named at-taw’am would be given two shares; the one who drew the one named ar-raqib would be given three shares; the one who drew the one named al-hils would be given four shares; the one who drew the one named an-nafir would be given five shares; the one who drew the one named al-masbal would be given give six shares, and the one who drew the one named al-mu’alli would be given seven shares. There were three more arrows named al-munih, as-safih, and al-waghd, and the ones who drew these three would get nothing, but they would have to pay for the slaughtered animal. This was a defilement—repugnant acts from the works of Satan.

The intelligent mind does not accept this kind of action, but rather, someone else must inspire and incite these kinds of desires. All sins come from two things, either from the soul or from Satan. The sin which comes from the soul is the one which satiates a particular desire so that if the soul is denied this desire, it continues to crave it. The sin which comes from Satan’s incitement is different, for Satan might incite a man to steal, but if he refuses, then Satan knows that this man has immunity against this particular sin, so he incites him to commit another sin; if he again finds immunity, he moves on to a third sin, and so on. This is because the whispered temptations of Satan aim to make a man sinful whatever the sin may be.

Therefore, if you have a desire to commit a particular sin, it means that the desire is coming from your own soul; and if your temptation moves away from a sin, which was difficult for Satan to tempt you with, to another, this means that the desire comes from Satan, not from your soul. The sane person, who restrains himself from all of these forbidden things, sees intoxicants, gambling, stone altars and the divining the arrows are matters which do not appeal to the soul unless it is under Satan's influence. True Lord Glorified is He says: 'O you who have believed, indeed, intoxicants, gambling, (sacrificing on) stone altars (to other than Allah) and divining arrows are but defilement from the work of Satan' (al-Ma'ida: 90) indicating that the sane person cannot do these things.

The True Lord Glorified is He ends the verse by saying, 'so avoid it that you may be successful.' (al-Ma'ida: 90) He Glorified is He commands us to avoid the defilement of intoxicants, gambling, stone altars and the divining the arrows; 'to avoid something' means to keep away from it, abstaining from the things which lead to it and closing all the doors which lead to it because if you do not avoid it, then by being close, you might be tempted to indulge. Some people may think that intoxicants were not clearly prohibited, but rather, we were only commanded to avoid them. We say to them that prohibition would be a law which stated that we must not imbibe them; as for avoiding, this is even stronger than prohibition because it commands us not to even be in the same place as them. When the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'So avoid the uncleanliness of idols and avoid false statement.' (al-Hajj: 30)

He told us here to avoid the defilement of intoxicants, gambling, stone altars, and the divining the arrows. The True Lord Glorified is He dealt with those customs which were prevalent before Islam in a way which uprooted those who were corrupt; and He did not do away with them all at once because souls were attached and accustomed to them, but rather, He prohibited them in gradual stages. Islam first pronounced a firm judgement on all doctrinal matters and then gradually prohibited those things which were a matter of custom.

When the True Lord Glorified is He says that something is' defilement', this is the judgement of the True Lord the Glorified and Exalted which cannot be assailed by falsehood from any direction. We must accept this judgement, even if we do not exactly understand the meaning of 'defilement' or we have not yet ascertained on the empirical and material levels as to whether the prohibited thing is evil or not. It is enough that this is the judgement of Allah Glorified is He to whom the believing servant submits himself, accepting all the responsibilities which his Lord gives him because he trusts that his Lord knows what is best for him; as long as the True Lord Glorified is He declares that something is defilement, it is indisputably a loathsome evil. This is because some people keep on looking for an excuse to contrive for themselves, saying, 'How can that action, or that thing, be a defilement?' We say that we must submit to Allah's Judgement and obey His Commandments, for He knows what is best for His creatures; the passage of time is always affirming the truth about the things which the True Lord Glorified is He called' defilement' showing us that, indeed, they are evil. So, when He Glorified is He says to His creatures, 'Do this, 'we should not ask about the reason for this injunction. Rather, we must obey the True Lord's Commandment, and in our depths, we will find the fruits of this commandment.

When a human gives another a command, he may ask' Why?', and all humans must offer reasons for whatever they ask others to do. But we do not ask Allah for the reasons behind His orders for us to do things because we believe that He is the All-Wise; time will surely show us that what Allah has said was right. For example, we find that the man, who refrains from drinking alcohol solely because Allah forbade it, is a well-behaved person with pure intentions who does not cause trouble in the community, but the one who drinks alcohol is badly behaved, has impure intentions, and causes trouble in the community. Experience has proved that the one who drinks alcohol is prone to liver diseases and also suffers from confusion in leading his life and even in his speech. We read that Allah Glorified is He says: 'And fear Allah. And Allah teaches you. And Allah is Knowing of all things.' (al-Baqara: 282) Being conscious of Allah, as we know it, means placing a barrier between Allah's Wrath and ourselves; we do this by following all that He commands us to do. When we obey the commands of Allah Glorified is He we know about Allah's Wisdom in doing so.

For example, He Glorified is He says: 'Prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing, and the remembrance of Allah is greater.' (al-'Ankabut: 45) We know how prayer restrains us from defilement and irrational deeds because we submit our souls and our hearts to Allah and do what He commands us. Likewise, we find that the obligatory alms are a source of increase and that the pilgrimage cleanses the soul from arrogance and washes away sins. For every action which the True Lord Glorified is He commands us to do, we find that it exerts an effect on our souls after we do it. But if you only obey the command because of its rational purpose, you distance yourself from the attitude of true faith.

The doctor takes a picture of the liver of the one who drinks alcohol by use of ultrasound and finds that the liver is full of lacerations and has become prone to many serious illnesses; perhaps the liver might become inoperative at times, so the doctor tells the patient to stop drinking alcohol. If the patient stops drinking alcohol in such situation, does he do so for religious reasons or medical ones? He stops for medical reasons; thus, the sinful believer and the disbeliever are alike in this respect. But the believer who refrains from drinking alcohol from the beginning does not do so because of the reason behind the command, but because it is Allah's Command and he obeys it without asking about the reasons. The believer accepts Allah's Commandments without asking Him to explain the practical reason for them. The True Lord Glorified is He has clarified, as aforementioned, that intoxicants, gambling, (sacrificing on) stone altars (to other than Allah) and divining arrows are but defilement— Satan's doing—so avoid them that you may be successful. Satan long ago declared his enmity to our father Adam peace be upon him as Allah Glorified is He says: 'And (mention) when we said to the angels, "Prostrate before Adam"; so they prostrated, except for Satan. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 34) Satan was present with the angels, and it was fitting that he prostrated with them because if the command was given to the higher class of beings, the angels, it also applied to the lower class of beings (like Satan). But he disobeyed and said, 'Should I prostrate to one you created from clay?' (al-Isra': 61)

Thus, the enmity between Satan and Adam peace be upon him is from old times, so how could we, as sons of Adam, assent to listen to Satan's whispers?

How could we accept his insinuations? How could we accept his temptations? Therefore, we must avoid it all because it is a loathsome evil and the work of Satan; we must avoid it in order to escape from all evil and attain all success. The True Lord Glorified is He then says:

إِنَّمَا يُرِيدُ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ أَن يُوقِعَ بَيۡنَكُمُ ٱلۡعَدَٰوَةَ وَٱلۡبَغۡضَآءَ فِي ٱلۡخَمۡرِ
وَٱلۡمَيۡسِرِ وَيَصُدَّكُمۡ عَن ذِكۡرِ ٱللَّهِ وَعَنِ ٱلصَّلَوٰةِۖ فَهَلۡ أَنتُم مُّنتَهُونَ ٩١

With intoxicants and gambling, Satan seeks only to incite enmity and hatred among you, and to stop you remembering God and prayer. Will you not give them up? [91] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 91)

The True Lord Glorified is He did not mention stone altars and the divining of the arrows here because the believers no longer believe in such things and have given them up, and such words are addressed to the believers. So, why did the True Lord Glorified is He link the ruling about intoxicants and gambling, (sacrificing on) stone altars (to other than Allah) and divining arrows before? He said this in order to show us how vile these things are; linking intoxicants and gambling, (sacrificing on) stone altars (to other than Allah) and divining arrows allow us to understand that the prohibition of intoxicants and gambling is just as firm as the prohibition of stone altars and the divining of the arrows; since they were believers, they had already forsaken stone altars and the divining of the arrows.

He Glorified is He says, '…Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred…' (al-Ma'ida: 91), and the word yurid (translated as 'seeks', but literally meaning 'wills') means to intend to do something which is possible, and it is linked to something which is willed; so, does he have the ability to do what he wills or not? If he has the ability to do what he seeks, then this ability comes after the will.

When Allah Glorified is He wills something, His omnipotent power causes His will to be manifested instantly; neither His will nor His power is ever held back because everything obeys His will. It is different for human beings and for Satan, though, because a man might will something, but does he have the power to do it? Sometimes he has the power to do what he wills, and sometimes he does not.

Satan also wills things, but does he have the power to do what he wills? He has this power as long as man obeys him, and this is the nature of Satan's will. He is happy when human beings sin, and he hopes for this and plans for it, but the action only comes into existence if the person agrees to obey Satan.

Hence, if something is willed by someone who has the power to compel and force it to occur, then it occurs instantly; and absolute power belongs to Allah; He ordains whatever He wills;, therefore, He says: 'His command is only when He intends a thing that He says to it, "Be," and it is.' (Ya Sin: 82) But when His creatures will, things do not respond to them as they respond to their Creator because the will of the created beings is restricted by his power which is limited even if it is a big one. The will of Satan is to trick man into doing what he hopes him to do, and Satan cannot force man to do anything, but he makes certain actions seem alluring to him. Satan does not have the authority to force man to do something, and he does not have the power to convince or produce arguments. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And Satan will say when the matter has been concluded, "Indeed, Allah had promised you the promise of truth. And I promised you, but I betrayed you. But I had no authority over you except that I invited you and you responded to me"' (Ibrahim: 22).

Thus, Satan will announce that he has no power over humankind, neither to compel them, nor to convince them; all he can do is make things seem alluring, and if someone has a desire, then Satan makes it alluring to him so that he commits sin. Allah Glorified is He says: 'So do not blame me; but blame yourselves. I cannot be called to your aid, nor can you be called to my aid' (Ibrahim: 22) Satan will admit that however he cries for aid on the Day of Resurrection, no one will aid him; and likewise those who committed sins and followed him will cry out, but Satan will not help or save them from the suffering which awaits them. To respond to someone's cries means to go to them to stop their crying and aid them. So, the True Lord's words 'Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred' (al-Ma'ida: 91) explain to us that Satan's will is only a will to make things seem alluring and not a will which is capable of compelling or convincing. When you hear the word 'cause' (yuqi') here, understand that there are two things which are usually connected, and someone wants to put something between them to break this connection. Therefore, the word waqi'a can be used to express the action of someone who tried to cause a split and division between two people who are usually very close.

The words 'between you' here indicate separation, and this separation is where the enmity can be sown; why? Because the believers are brothers and because the relationship of the believers is like that of a tightly packed building wherein each part holds up the other. Hence, Satan uses intoxicants and gambling to cause enmity between the believers. We find that this is the case in gatherings where intoxicants are imbibed, for fights often break out between drinkers, in addition to insulting one another. Furthermore, those who gamble take each another's money. In this way, they go from being united, like a single building, to being divided, and enmity and hatred are sown among them.

What is the difference between enmity and hatred? Enmity means that two close people are divided in such a way that they become enemies; hatred means the heart's aversion to something it dislikes. It is as if hatred develops in the hearts after enmity has arisen, and as if enmity is the middle point which has placed distance between these two people —after they fell into Satan's incitements—when, before that, they had been united by purity, affection, love, and spiritual brotherhood.

In such situation, enmity involves the emotions of both parties; if the enmity is one-sided, it does not last long; it lasts long if it involves both parties. Therefore, the battle becomes fierce between two people who bear enmity for each other, and it will be a prolonged and bitter enmity if no third party intervenes to resolve the conflict, opposing the side which is in the wrong and restoring the rights of the other side. When this happens, the side which is in the right will feel that someone is there to support him; thus, the enmity will be curbed and brought to an end. But if there is no one to rebut or restrain the two sides, then enmity will last long. Therefore, when the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And the family of Pharaoh picked him up (out of the river) so that he would become to them an enemy and a (cause of) grief. Indeed, Pharaoh and Haman and their soldiers were deliberate sinners.' (al-Qasas: 8)

Did they know from the start that he was their enemy? No, they took him in so that he would give them joy, but Allah spoiled their plans. So the word 'for 'in the expression '... For (We had willed) that he become…' (al-Qasas: 8) is meant to express the end result and the consequence, not the conscious intent of the action. Allah Glorified is He proved by this that Pharaoh was not a god and that his followers were ignorant, lacking in sagacity because if Pharaoh was a god, he would have known that the child whom he planned to raise would one day become his enemy.

Was the enmity here solely directed from Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to Pharaoh? No, it was an enmity between Allah Glorified is He and Moses peace be upon him on one side, and Pharaoh on the other side. Therefore Allah Glorified is He says: '(Saying), "Cast him into the chest and cast it into the river, and the river will throw it onto the bank; there will take him an enemy to me and an enemy to him."' (Ta Ha: 39)

This enmity only came to an end when Pharaoh drowned. The True Lord Glorified is He warns us, 'Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred through intoxicants and gambling.' (al-Ma'ida: 91) The Arabic preposition fi here means 'through'; it is akin to the use of the same proposition in the Prophet Muhammad's words, 'A woman got into hellfire because of a cat whom she had tied, and thus it could not eat, and she did not let it free so that it could devour the vermin of the earth, until it died.'(1)

In our daily lives, we say, 'So-and-so was sent to prison for years for (fi) possessing drugs.' That is, he got himself into trouble because of what he did. Allah's words, 'Through intoxicants and gambling,' (al-Ma'ida: 91) indicate that enmity and hatred are the concomitants of intoxicants and gambling. He says: 'Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred through intoxicants and gambling and to avert you from the remembrance of Allah and from prayer.' (al-Ma'ida: 91) To 'remember' something means to keep this thing in the forefront of one's consciousness; every fact which a person remembers is at the forefront of his consciousness, and then it moves to make way for another fact. When a person's mind is occupied by something, this thing is only moved from the forefront to the margins of the consciousness when something else comes to occupy the mind.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Therefore, we say that you should know that the mind understands things from the first time, or the second time, or the third time; no, the mind understands things the first time like a camera, and what is important is that when it takes in the information it is empty of everything else. Therefore, we found that those of our blind fellow students were better at recalling information than those who could see because the one who could see would be in the middle of something and then be distracted by something he saw so that the forefront of his consciousness was muddled. The consciousness of the blind person, on the other hand, would only remember what he heard. So, this is what we understand 'remembrance' to mean. Intoxicants cloud and veil the mind, so how could one remember Allah in such case? The same is true for prayer which is the best form of remembrance—intoxicants veil us from it. The same is true of gambling in which the gambler is taken by the illusionary desire of winning—just like a mirage, and thus chases after it with the hope that he wins; and then, he loses his ability to remember Allah and to pray.

Since the enmity between Satan and man is long established, we find that Allah Glorified is He tells us that Satan said, 'By Your might, I will surely mislead them all.' (Sad: 82) Satan knew how to swear an oath, and he swore by Allah's might that he would beguile His creatures; and had Allah wanted His servants, then Satan could not have taken them.

The True Lord Glorified is He brings an end to the matter of intoxicants and gambling by saying 'So will you not desist?' (al-Ma'ida: 91) This is a question which means to seek to understand something; this is what we know about the questions which human beings ask. But when Allah directs a question to us, it is actually a command from Him Glorified and Exalted is He; in what way? A command can be given in a direct and binding way, and Allah can also give a command in such way that the one being commanded must command his own self; this is a sign that the Supreme Commander trusts the believer who receives this kind of command.

An example to illustrate this – and Allah is beyond any comparison – a father says to one of his sons, 'Your continued negligence of your studies will make me angry with you, make your classmates despise you and make you fall behind others. So, are you going to stop messing around or not?' He does not say, 'Stop messing around' because the father wants to give his son reasons to control himself so that he can weigh the options in his mind. He will find nothing to say but 'I will stop messing around from now on.'

The way it happens here is the same, since, instead of the ruling coming directly from Allah, it comes from the servant himself. This is the strongest way to impart a ruling because the speaker gives the command in the form of a question so that the one who is asked can think of every possible answer and find only the answer which the questioner wants to hear.

Another example of this was when the Revelation ceased to come to the Noble Prophet for a while, and the people of Quraysh said, 'Muhammad's Lord has forsaken him, hated him, and scorned him!' The Revelation then returned to the Prophet, Allah says: 'Your Lord has not taken leave of you, (O Muhammad), nor has He detested (you).' (ad-Duha: 3) The Revelation continued: 'Did He not find you an orphan and give (you) refuge?' (ad-Duha: 6)

When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him thought about this, he would surely reply, 'Indeed yes, O Lord, You found me an orphan and gave me shelter.' This is what they call 'involving the commanded in the cause of the command', and it is the strongest form of command.

When the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'So will you not desist?' (al-Ma'ida: 91), those addressed know what Allah wants, so they say, 'Yes Lord, we will desist.' They were very emphatic in desisting, and 'Ali may Allah be pleased with him said, 'Even if a drop of it fell into the sea, and the sea dried and herbage grew there, and my tongue was lolling from hunger, I would not go near it.' This is not actually what was commanded, but it is the most extreme way of desisting.

'Umar ibn Al-Khattab may Allah be pleased with him said, 'If a drop of it landed on my hand, I would deny myself it.' This was the reaction to the True Lord's words, '…Will you not, then, desist?' (al-Ma'ida: 91) And this was the end of the issue of intoxicants. We know that the prohibition of intoxicants came in stages, and that spiritual responsibilities are only ordained on the tongue of messengers; messengers only come forth when corruption has overwhelmed both society and the souls of the people at the same time so that no one reproaches himself or prevents others from indulging in corruption. At this point, Allah Glorified is He intervenes by sending a messenger; and Allah does not send down all of its laws at once in the beginning, but rather, He uses the medium of the Messenger to call the people to faith in the One God so that they will then accept what He ordains. Faith in Allah's Oneness is the pinnacle of doctrine and can never be mitigated.

But in the case of legal rulings, they change social customs and traditions which are commonly shared by the people, and if Allah wills to change a custom with a ruling, He does so gradually because He Glorified is He is mercifully kind to His creatures. For example, in the past, a man did not leave any of his wealth to his parents, but only to his children because he knew that his father would die soon, while his son would live longer; therefore, the son would inherit everything. But the True Lord Glorified is He says no, you might die before your father, and so you should leave him something: 'if he leaves wealth (is that he should make) a bequest for the parents.' (al-Baqara: 180) He wanted them to stop leaving out the parents in the bequests they would leave. Once this ruling had settled, the True Lord Glorified is He chose to appoint a certain part of the legal inheritance to the parents. At first, the commandment was given in a partial way in order to bring an end to the usual custom and established practice, but in a way that they would not be made to end it in too abruptly. The True Lord Glorified is He does not want wealth to be passed around by the rich only and not by any others. Rather, He wants to make wealth circulate amongst all the people; therefore, He made laws for inheritance.

When we examine the laws of inheritance which apply to one thousand acre, we find that over three generations it shrinks and diminishes to acres; this is a change which takes place gradually over generations, not all at once, so that man can arrange the affairs of his life and the lives of his children and can leave his children inheritance and wealth which they can use to aid them in their own work. As for the one who does not own anything, he passes on a skill or a job to his children. In this way, the religion causes the affairs of finances and estates to be dispersed in a way which is not abrupt so that society is not marred by crises of envy or stress. If the person who earns his wealth by hard work and effort sees wealth going to someone who did not work or strive, he will feel envious. The True Lord Glorified is He says: '(This) worldly life is only amusement and diversion. And if you believe and fear Allah, He will give you your rewards and not ask you for your properties, If He should ask you for them and press you, you would withhold, and He would expose your unwillingness.' (Muhammad: 36-37) When the moral failing of jealousy emerges in society, all stability, and love comes to an end. So Allah Glorified is He deals with customs with the utmost delicacy. The taking of intoxicants, and the gatherings dedicated to it, was an Arab custom; it would have been difficult for them to leave it all at once; therefore, it was prohibited in stages. The sane person who hears the following verse will recognise that Allah had subtle plans for the outright ban of intoxicants. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And from the fruits of the palm trees and grapevines you take intoxicant and good provision. Indeed in that is a sign for a people who reason.' (an-Nahl: 67)

He Glorified is He said 'good provision', but He did not describe intoxicants as being 'good'; this implies that taking this provision, fermenting it and producing intoxicants mean to waste what is wholesome. The True Lord Glorified is He has said 'intoxicants' first to tell us that they would use the first part of the sustenance to make intoxicants. After that, Allah presents the issue as a piece of advice being given from an advisor—and advice is not an obligatory commandment—but only an opinion given by someone wise to someone else; this was the first stage of the subtle plan to prohibit intoxicants. The True Lord Glorified is He has said, 'They ask you about wine and gambling. Say, "In them is great sin and (yet, some) benefit for people. But their sin is greater than their benefit." And they ask you what they should spend. Say, "The excess (beyond needs)." Thus Allah makes clear to you the verses (of revelation) that you might give thought.' (al-Baqara: 219)

So, the True Lord Glorified is He made it clear that the evil was more than the benefit. Then, He turned to the matter of prayer; at the time, there was no clear ruling which forbade the imbibing of intoxicants before prayer; and someone actually prayed while drunk and said – and we seek Allah's refuge from what he said – 'Say: O ye disbelievers, I worship that which you worship.' The intoxicants made him utter something which contradicted the very pinnacle of doctrine. Allah says: 'O you, who have believed, do not approach prayer while you are intoxicated until you know what you are saying.’ (an-Nisa’: 43)

We know that the Muslim prays five obligatory prayers every day; for a man not to pray when drunk, it would mean that he must spend the whole day sober, not drinking alcohol until after the night prayer. In this way, the True Lord Glorified is He extended the period of time wherein intoxicants could not be consumed, and this restricted the soul from doing what it was accustomed to doing so that the habituated person could become used to forsaking his habit. After that, Allah Glorified is He commanded the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to proclaim His final verdict about intoxicants and revealed His words: ‘Satan only wants to cause between you animosity and hatred through intoxicants and gambling and to avert you from the remembrance of Allah and from prayer. So will you not desist? (al-Ma’ida: 91) It was this gradual approach which took them away from their customs and habits. By the time the prohibition came, it was almost as if they had proclaimed it themselves. After the True Lord Glorified is He issued this specific ruling concerning intoxicants and gambling; it was as if He has said to us: ‘As long as you are aware that I have declared these things to be defilement and a work of Satan, then do not help Satan to harm you, and sincerely worship the True Lord Alone.’

Allah Glorified is He then says:

وَأَطِيعُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَأَطِيعُوا۟ ٱلرَّسُولَ وَٱحْذَرُوا۟ ۚ فَإِن تَوَلَّيْتُمْ فَٱعْلَمُوٓا۟
أَنَّمَا عَلَىٰ رَسُولِنَا ٱلْبَلَٰغُ ٱلْمُبِينُ ﴿٩٢﴾

Obey God, obey the Messenger, and always be on your guard: if you pay no heed, bear in mind that the sole duty of Our Messenger is to deliver the message clearly [92]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 92)

After declaring this specific rule, Allah Glorified is He, moves to a general rule which is the obedience to Allah and the obedience to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. When you examine the way in which Allah commands us to obey Him, you find that He does so in several different ways; Allah says: ‘And obey Allah and obey the Messenger and beware.’ (al-Ma’ida: 92) So, He repeats the command to pay heed to Allah and to the Messenger; obedience to Allah is the general rule, and obedience to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him gives the details of this rule. Elsewhere, He Glorified is He says: 'Say, 'Obey Allah and the Messenger.' (Al-'Imran: 32) He does not repeat the command to obey here; there is a command to obey; there is one who is obeyed and there are those who obey, namely those who are addressed. So, He gives only one command to obey here, and the One to be obeyed is Allah; the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is then added to the Divine Name. Elsewhere, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…And obey the Messenger…' (an-Nur: 56).

Hence, we have several different forms of obedience: the first is, '…obey Allah and obey the Messenger…' (an-Nur: 92), the second is, '…obey Allah and the Messenger…' (Al-'Imran: 32) and the third is, '…obey the Messenger.' (an-Nur: 56) In just one other instance, He the Almighty says: 'O you, who have believed, obey Allah and obey the Messenger and those in authority among you.' (an-Nisa': 59)

When the True Lord Glorified is He ordered us to obey Allah and obey the Messenger, He repeats the command to obey Allah and then the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but when He speaks of the people of authority, he does not say 'and obey' because to obey those who have been entrusted with authority is an aspect of the other two forms of obedience: obedience to Allah and obedience to the Messenger because it is never right to obey a creature if this means disobeying the Creator. When the True Lord Glorified is He orders us, 'obey Allah and obey the Messenger,' (an-Nisa': 59) obedience to Allah is a general rule and obedience to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him gives the details of this rule.

For example, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And (due) to Allah from the people is a pilgrimage to the House.' (Al-'Imran: 97) We obey Allah Glorified is He in the general rule here, and we obey the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in the details of the pilgrimage because these details are not given in the Quran; the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Learn your rites from me'. When the two commands are combined thus, '…obey Allah and the Messenger,' (Al-'Imran: 32), this means that there is a single command which has been issued by Allah; the proclamation and application of the action are given by the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him since he provides a model, an example and a confirmation of the ruling.

If Allah Glorified is He has commanded the general ruling, the Messenger commanded the specifics. He Glorified is He says, 'obey Allah and obey the Messenger…' (al-Ma'ida: 92), and if the commandment was given by the Messenger alone, and nothing came directly from Allah, this means it is a command for which Allah Glorified is He says: 'And whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from' (al-Hashr: 7)

Thus, we find that none of these forms of obedience confuse or contradict the other. Here, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And obey Allah and obey the Messenger and beware.' (al-Ma'ida: 92) What is the purpose of this warning? Allah Glorified is He is teaching us that Satan will never leave us free to obey Allah and obey the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him; he will try his best to confuse things for us. Whenever Satan sees that the human soul inclines to a particular passion, he tries to tempt him to sin; if a man blocks some of the paths of Satan so that he is unable, for example, to tempt him to steal or drink wine, he will not leave him alone, but rather, he will attempt to spoil his obedience. That is, Satan might come to a man as he performs the ablution and make him forget whether he washed this hand or whether he performed the ablution with enough water or not; or Satan might come to the believer as he prays and make him forget how many rak'as (units) he has prayed, or how many sajdas (prostrations) he has made. In this way, Satan tries to affect the believer at the times when he is obedient.

The meaning of His words 'and beware' is: beware lest Satan tricks you, for he will try to get to you by whatever means he can. He gets to the sinful person by means of sin, but the worst thing that Satan can do to the believers is to come to them when they are trying to obey Allah. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'beware'; and we often find that one of us forgets something, and then when he starts praying, he suddenly remembers that thing; Satan does not leave a man alone when he is in this kind of state—for Satan swore an oath, 'Satan said, "By Your might, I will surely mislead them all (Sad: 82). The True Lord Glorified is He tells us that Satan said, 'I will surely sit in wait for them on your straight path.' (al-A'raf: 16) He swore that he would sit in ambush on the straightway, not the crooked way; and this is manifested, for example, when a man gives charity and then announces it, saying, 'I gave more than so-and-so', thus his reward is squandered.

Satan tries to come to us at a time we would not expect, namely when we are being obedient to Allah. I shall tell you this story so that you see just how much Satan can interfere. It happened to Imam Abu Hanifa may Allah be pleased with him; a man came to him to ask his legal opinion about a strange matter. The questioner said: 'I lost my money. I buried it in a certain place, but then the rain came and washed away the stone I put down to mark the place where the money was. Imam Abu Hanifa said: 'Go tonight after the evening prayer and stand before your Lord in prayer until dawn, and then tell me what happens.' When the dawn prayer came, the man came joyously to Abu Hanifa and said, 'I found my money!' Abu Hanifa asked him how and he said: 'While I was standing in prayer, I remembered where my money was, how the rain has fallen and how the water had flowed; so I measured the distance and estimated it until I found my money.' The Imam laughed and said, 'By Allah, I knew that Satan would not let you spend all night with your Lord.'

Thus, you can see how Satan comes to a man while he is trying to obey Allah; therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'And obey Allah and obey the Messenger and beware. And if you turn away, then know that upon Our Messenger is only (the responsibility for) clear notification.' (al-Ma'ida: 92) That is, 'If you turn away from what I have imparted unto you, know that by turning away and leaving, you do not harm the Messenger; for the Messenger was only commanded to clearly deliver the message. You only harm yourselves by turning away from what I have imparted unto you.' The True Lord Glorified is He knew from before eternity that some of His servants would say, 'This commandment was not mentioned in the Quran', and therefore He commanded us to obey the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; thus, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him must be obeyed in his own right, and Allah willed this in order to pre-emptively respond to those who ask about all the details of a ruling. Examples of this are the number of rak'as (units) in each prayer; they are not given in the Quran, but we learned the details of them from the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. The True Lord

Glorified is He gave His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him permission to establish laws when He says: ‘Whatever the Messenger has given you - take; and what he has forbidden you - refrain from’ (al-Hashr: 7)

He Glorified is He knew from before eternity that people would one day claim to follow nothing but the Quran; therefore, the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘Yet, the time is coming where a man reclining on his couch will say, “Keep to this Quran: what you find in it to be permissible treat as permissible; and what you find prohibited treat as prohibited.” But what Allah’s Messenger has prohibited is like what Allah has prohibited.’ That is, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him only conveys his Lord’s Message.

We must beware lest Satan comes to us when we are trying to obey Allah; but why did the True Lord Glorified is He say ‘and if you turn away’, and what is the thing that is turned away from? Allah Glorified is He said this to explain that a man has the freedom to choose to obey and the freedom to choose to disobey; if a man turns from obedience to disobedience and turns from faith in what the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him brought from Allah to continued disbelief, he should know that the Messenger has carried out his mission and fulfilled it; the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is required to convey the message, and, indeed, he conveyed it clearly, fully, plainly and in a way which covered all the aspects of life.

He peace and blessings be upon him conveyed unto us that it is our duty to believe in the One God Allah, Who is All-Powerful and All-Wise, and Who possesses all the attributes of perfection; this is the primary article of doctrine. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him conveyed unto us that we must avoid all the old Arab practices of paganism and idol-worship. Once Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has conveyed the message, we are required to have faith and act; action is of two kinds, positive and negative. Positive action is centred on Allah’s injunction, ‘Do this’, if you are not already doing it; as for negative action, it is to abstain from those things which Allah forbade you, and those things which the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him forbade you. So, the first requirement of faith is to believe in the One God and stop worshipping idols and false gods. To request, as we know, means to speak words which express your desire for the one you address to do something which he was not doing before you requested it. Hence, if the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Do not worship idols, 'this is a request for action which is that we stop worshipping idols. When the True Lord Glorified is He commands us to pray, fast, give the obligatory alms to the poor, and perform the pilgrimage, these are requests for actions. A request for action is called a 'commandment', and a request for the ceasing of an action is called a 'prohibition.'

When you look at all the responsibilities which Islam enjoins, you will find that they did not come all at once, but rather, they came over a period of twenty-three years. When Islam came, people believed in it, and they had not yet been told to implement any of the rulings which were subsequently revealed during the years in which the message was conveyed. All they were required to observe at that time were a few of these rulings, and they indeed observed them. Some of them only heard of the essential importance of having faith in One God (Allah), and they believed in this and then died, but still they earned paradise. There were others who lived longer and heard new rulings and obeyed them; thus, their submission to Allah was complete.

Complete surrender means that the Muslim obeys all the laws of which he is aware; even if the Muslim is only aware of one single law and obeys it, and then he will attain all that the True Lord Glorified is He has promised. An example of this is Mukhayriq may Allah be pleased with him, the Jew who embraced Islam and left all his possessions to the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. When the battle of Uhud was near, he said to his people: 'O Jews, by Allah I know that it is your duty to support Muhammad', but they did not answer him, so he took up his sword and his battle array and said, 'If I am slain, then my wealth belongs to Muhammad to use as he pleases.' Then, he went out to the battle and fought until he was martyred; he had not yet implemented any of the laws of Islam. Yet, because he fought, he attained the rank of martyrdom. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said about him: ''Mukhayriq(1) is the best of the Jews'(2).

(1) Mukhayriq was a rabbi who lived in Medina and fought together with Muhammad in the Battle of Uhud on March 19, 625 (3rd of Shawwal in 3rd AH in the Islamic calendar) at the valley located in front of Mount Uhud, in what is now north-western Arabia.

(2) Narrated by Ibn Sa'd in 'Major Classes' and Abu Nu`aym in' The Signs and Proofs of Prophet hood', Ibn Kathir in the 'The Beginning and the End' and finally Ibn Asakir in 'History of Damascus'

We should always make the distinction between the ‘Pillars of Islam’ and the other things which are required of the Muslim. We all know that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: ‘(The superstructure of) Islam is raised on five (pillars), testifying the fact that there is no god but Allah, that Muhammad is His slave and messenger, the establishment of prayer, payment of zakat, Pilgrimage to the House (Ka’ba) and the fast of Ramadan.’(1) These are the Pillars of Islam, but what is required from a Muslim differs from one person to another. The Muslim is required to testify once in his life that there is no deity but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah. He is required to always offer the prayer, no matter what his state is. Different from this is the obligation of paying obligatory alms to the needy which he might be excused from offering if he does not have enough money. Likewise, he might be excused from fasting if he cannot fast due to terminal illness or being old, in which case he must feed the needy instead. If a person is ill and likely to get better, or on a journey, then he must make up the fasting days he misses once his excuse is no more; the same is true for women at times of menstruation or post-natal discharge. A Muslim might be excused from the pilgrimage if he cannot afford to do it. Thus, we see that the Pillars of Islam differ from one Muslim to another; hence, we can see that those who lived in the early days of Islam and obeyed the few rulings which had been revealed thus far until they died or were martyred thereby fulfilled all that Islam required of them.

When the prohibition of intoxicants and gambling (engagement in games of chance or bets that have uncertain outcomes for financial gains) was revealed, people went to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask him about the fate of their fellow believers who died or were martyred before the law prohibiting intoxicants and gambling was revealed. The very fact that they would ask this question showed that they possessed the alertness of faith, for a man is not truly a believer until he loves for his brother what he loves for himself. At that time, the True Lord Glorified is He revealed His noble words:

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

لَيۡسَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ جُنَاحٞ فِيمَا طَعِمُوٓاْ إِذَا مَا ٱتَّقَواْ وَّءَامَنُواْ
وَعَمِلُواْ ٱلصَّٰلِحَٰتِ ثُمَّ ٱتَّقَواْ وَّءَامَنُواْ ثُمَّ ٱتَّقَواْ وَّأَحۡسَنُواْۚ وَٱللَّهُ يُحِبُّ ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿٩٣﴾

Those who believe and do good deeds will not be blamed for what they may have consumed [in the past] as long as they are mindful of God, believe and do good deeds, then are mindful of God and believe, then are mindful of God and do good deeds: God loves those who do good deeds [93] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 93)

The True Lord revealed this verse to reassure those believers who asked about the fate of their fellow believers who died or were martyred and had drunk alcohol before it was prohibited. ‘There is not upon those who believe and do good deeds (any) blame for what they may have consumed (in the past)…’ (al-Ma’ida: 93). The word ta’amu (consumed) does not only refer to food, but it refers to drink too; for, the True Lord says: ‘Allah will test you with a river. Anyone who drinks from it will not belong with me, but anyone who refrains from tasting it will belong with me…’ (al-Baqara: 249). This means that water is also ta’am (food) because it is tasted in the mouth. So, the Muslims who asked about their brethren who died or were martyred discovered that their Islam was based only on those rulings which were revealed during their lives, and they did what was required of them by forsaking idol-worship. Some of them might have died before the prayer was made obligatory or before the laws concerning the obligatory alms or fasting were revealed, and so they did not do them. Therefore, their righteous deeds were that they implemented the teachings which were revealed to them. They were conscious of Allah Glorified is He and so lived up to all those requirements of faith which the True Lord had asked of them thus far: they believed in the Law-Giving Allah Glorified is He and placed a protective shield between themselves and Allah’s wrath, by doing all that He has asked of them, whether by commandments or prohibitions.

Faith has a pinnacle which is that man believes in Allah Glorified is He, His angels, His Scriptures and His Messengers peace be upon them, then, that he believes in the laws which were sent down from Heaven. The scholars have differed over the question of whether faith increases or decreases: some scholars say that it does not, and others say that it does. Those who say that faith does not increase or decrease see faith as being connected to the pinnacle of faith which is faith in Allah Glorified is He. Those who say that faith increases and decreases see faith as being connected to the laws which Allah Glorified is He revealed, and they base this on the True Lord's words: 'When a chapter is revealed, some (hypocrites) say, "Have any of you been strengthened in faith by it?" It certainly does strengthen the faith of those who believe and they rejoice.' (at-Tawba: 124)

Hence, every verse which reveals a new ruling causes faith to increase. When the law of the obligatory alms was revealed, the Muslims believed in it and implemented it; and some of them did not have enough money, so they did not implement the law even though they believed in it.

A Muslim believes in the law, and he obeys it if he is able to do so, but if he is not able to do so, he does not. Therefore, early Muslims rejoiced in the new rulings which the verses conveyed; thus the disagreement of the scholars on this issue is a matter of perspective. We may observe that the True Lord says: 'There is not upon those who believe and do good deeds (any) blame for what they may have consumed (in the past) as long as they are mindful of Allah, believe and do good deeds, then are mindful of Allah and believe, then are mindful of Allah and persevere in doing good: Allah loves those who persevere in doing good.' (al-Ma'ida: 93)

Thence, there are three stages: there were those who were aware of a ruling and were conscious of Allah Glorified is He believed and did righteous deeds, then died and passed on to their Lord; therefore, they incurred no sin. Further, there were those who lived to see other rulings, believed in them and obeyed them. And then, there were those who lived to see even more rulings added, and who obeyed them, too. The first stage of faith is linked to righteous deeds, as is the second stage of faith mentioned in the verse; then, the third stage of faith is linked to ihsan (doing things with perseverance, proficiency).

Ihsan, as we know, has two aspects. The first is that the believer worships Allah Glorified is He as though he could see Him, and that every time a commandment is revealed, the believer performs it well as though he can see Allah Glorified is He; for if he cannot see Him, he can sense that He sees him. If the Muslim is aware of all the rulings of Allah which encompass all the aspects of life, he must adhere to them in a good way. The second aspect of ihsan (doing things with perseverance, proficiency) is that the believer does even more of these responsibilities than Allah Glorified is He has obliged him to do, meaning that he does supererogatory works. In this way, the believer does not only honour the rulings which have been revealed, but he actually does even more deeds of the same kind. The True Lord says: 'The righteous will be in Gardens with (flowing) springs. Taking what their Lord gives them; surely they were before that, the doers of good.' (adh-Dhariyat: 15-16) The True Lord explains why this is, saying: '…surely they were before that, the doers of good.' (adh-Dhariyat: 16) The nature of their ihsan (doing things with perseverance, proficiency) was that one of them would not only do that which Allah Glorified is He obliged him to do, but he would do even more of the same kind of deed. Allah Glorified is He has obliged the Muslim to offer five daily prayers, but a good doer is one who increases and draws nearer to Allah Glorified is He by offering extra supererogatory prayers. Allah Glorified is He has obliged the Muslim to fast Ramadan, but the doer of good is the one who fasts Ramadan properly, then fasts on other days of the year, too. Allah Glorified is He obliged the Muslim to give 2.5% (one fortieth) of his standing wealth as obligatory alms, and the doer of good gives even more than this. Allah Glorified is He obliged the Muslim to perform the pilgrimage once he is able, but the doer of good might do it several times.

Therefore, the good doer is the one who is devoted to performing Allah's obligations, who knows the credit in drawing close to Allah Glorified is He and has thus found that Allah has commanded him to do less than He actually deserves from us, and as a doer of good, he increases his performance of those actions which cause him to come nearer to Allah. The True Lord Glorified is He then, adds this description of the doers of good: 'They used to sleep but little in the night.' (adh-Dhariyat: 17) Allah Glorified is He did not command us to sleep only a little at night. He only commanded us to offer the evening prayer after which we may sleep until we rise to offer the dawn prayer. As for the doer of good who has tasted the sweetness of being alone with Allah, he sleeps only a little at night. The True Lord says of the doers of good: 'And in the hours before dawn they would ask forgiveness.' (adh-Dhariyat: 18)

Allah Glorified is He did not command the believer to pray for forgiveness in the hours before dawn, but the doer of good does so. The True Lord, then, adds: ‘And from their properties was (given) the right of the (needy) petitioner and the deprived.’ (adh-Dhariyat: 19) In this verse, He does not call it a ‘known right’ because the known right is the obligatory alms. So, these three stages are what make the believer reach the status of ihsan. Therefore, we find that in the final stage of the verse which we are examining, the True Lord speaks about ihsan (doing things with perseverance, proficiency): ‘…then are mindful of Allah and persevere in doing good: Allah loves those who persevere in doing good.’ (al-Ma’ida: 93) The word Ahsanu describes believers who offer extra deeds of the kind that Allah has obliged him to do. When the responsibilities of Islam were still being revealed, every new ruling which came was accepted by the believers with faith and action. As for those who lived to receive all of the responsibilities during the twenty-three years since the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, had started receiving revelations until he passed away; all of these responsibilities were equal to them, and when they wanted to reach the status of ihsan (doing things with perseverance, proficiency), they had to do more than that which they were obliged to do.

The True Lord, then, says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَيَبۡلُوَنَّكُمُ ٱللَّهُ بِشَيۡءٖ مِّنَ ٱلصَّيۡدِ تَنَالُهُۥٓ أَيۡدِيكُمۡ وَرِمَاحُكُمۡ
لِيَعۡلَمَ ٱللَّهُ مَن يَخَافُهُۥ بِٱلۡغَيۡبِۚ فَمَنِ ٱعۡتَدَىٰ بَعۡدَ ذَٰلِكَ فَلَهُۥ عَذَابٌ أَلِيمٞ ﴿٩٤﴾

You who believe, God is sure to test you with game within reach of your hands and spears, to find out who fears Him even though they cannot see Him: from now on, anyone who transgresses will have a painful punishment [94] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 94)

This leads to a new ruling; after the True Lord speaks about what He has made lawful in a previous verse: ‘…Lawful for you are the animals of grazing livestock…’ (al-Ma’ida: 1), and after He mentions what He has made unlawful unto us, namely carrion, blood and the flesh of swine, and that over which any name other than Allah’s has been invoked, and the animal that has been strangled, or beaten to death, or killed by a fall, or gored to death, or savaged by a beast of prey, save that which is slaughtered while it is still alive, and all that is slaughtered as a devotion to idols, all that is shared out by use of divining arrows and also intoxicants and gambling. Here, He mentions special kinds of things that are prohibited. In order for us to understand this, we must first be aware that there are some things which are forbidden at all times and in all places, such as intoxicants, games of chance, adultery and other firmly prohibited things such as idol-worship, divining the future, or the consumption of carrion, blood and pork. There are also things which are only forbidden at specific times or in specific places; and every action must have a time and a place.

We are commanded to pray at the appointed times in any place which is clean and suitable for prayer. Likewise, fasting has its appointed time; Hajj (the major pilgrimage) has both an appointed time and an appointed place, whilst 'Umra (the minor pilgrimage) has an appointed place only because one may perform it at almost any time. Allah Glorified is He speaks here about a prohibition which refers to a specific place and a specific time; for hunting is only forbidden when a person is hurum (in a state of consecration).

We know that the word hurum (in a state of consecration) is the plural of the word haram (forbidden), and hunting becomes forbidden when a person reaches the place where ihram (the consecration) begins, such as the place called Rabigh, where the consecration begins for those coming from Egypt. When you get to this place and begin the rites of Hajj (the major pilgrimage) or 'Umra (the minor pilgrimage), the first thing you do is to enter the state of consecration. From the moment you enter consecration, even if you do so in your own country or in your own house before setting out, hunting becomes unlawful to you. The word haram also applies to the area of the Sanctuary of the Sacred Mosque (in Mecca), even if a person is not on the pilgrimage. It is forbidden to hunt in the Sacred Mosque, and the limits of the Sanctuary have been set out by the Divine Law; to hunt therein is forbidden for both the pilgrim and the non-pilgrim.

We know that the True Lord made the entire earth a purified place and a mosque for the community of Muhammad, which means that we can pray in any place, read to gain knowledge, build a factory or farm. Therefore, any piece of land could be a masjid (mosque) because it is a place for sujud (prostration). The word ‘mosque’ in its technical sense means a place which is devoted solely to prayer. As for Al-Masjid Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque) its centre is the Ka’ba, and the believers circumambulate it; the walls of Al-Haram (the Sanctuary) are around the Ka’ba. So, the Sacred Mosque lies within the Sanctuary which begins at the following points: At-Tan’im, Al-Ju’rana, Al-Hudaybiyya, Al-Jahfa, and others besides them. These are the boundaries of the Sanctuary. When a person arrives at a pilgrimage station such as Rabigh (in Egypt), he may not hunt from then on because he is now within the Sanctuary and hunting is forbidden unto him even if he is not performing the major or minor pilgrimage.

The pilgrimage, as we know, is a journey which Allah Glorified is He commands the Muslim to perform once in his lifetime; the Muslim who is surrounded by the favours of Allah where he lives, sets out to the pilgrimage and leaves behind all the favours which distinguish him and becomes equal with all of Allah’s creatures. The first thing which distinguishes a man from his peers is his clothes. Therefore, the pilgrims take off their regular clothes and wear an identical costume which makes them all equal in appearance. The Muslim leaves behind all the favours because he is going to the Giver of all favours and blessings; the Most Granter.

After that, the True Lord wants to give us a faith-based disciplinary lesson which applies to the whole of existence. Allah Glorified is He makes all this completely clear at the pilgrimage. All are equal, wearing clothes which are virtually identical, and all are dishevelled and dusty from travel and all say, ‘labbayka Allahuma labbayk’ (At Your service, Lord, at Your service). In this way, the state of consecration eliminates all the inequalities among people.

Then, we consider the species which are lower than we are, namely animals; and the True Lord teaches us to behave respectfully towards them by forbidding hunting. He teaches us to respect crops which are below animals, by forbidding the Muslims from cutting down trees which grow in the Sanctuary. Thus, all distinctions are put aside, and a sense of worshipful reverence pervades throughout all.

During the pilgrimage, all matters of rank and title are dropped as soon as the pilgrims approach the Ka'ba, where a security guard might see a minister weeping, and all experience a sense of equality. The True Lord says: '…And whoever enters it is secure…' (Al-'Imran: 97). Animals are secure as are plants, and this is what the True Lord ordains for everything that is inside the Sanctuary because this trains man to leave aside all favours and blessings and turn to the Giver of blessings. Then, he enters the Mosque and circumambulates the Ka'ba. We see that man – the master of the universe – takes a completely different position towards all those beings which serve him so that both animals and plants are given their dignity. Even inanimate objects are also given their dignity, for the seven circuits of the Ka'ba begin at the Black Stone.

At the pilgrimage, man puts aside all his pride and becomes equal to all people; and he also puts aside his pride towards those species which are lower than him and refrain from hunting animals and cutting plants which both nourish him. The True Lord also extinguishes man's pride towards inanimate objects which are the lowliest of beings, for the True Lord commands him to greet the Black Stone or to kiss it, and if the place is too crowded to allow him to reach it, he should at least gesture towards it. If someone is unable to greet the Black Stone or kiss it, he might feel as though he has not really made the pilgrimage; and this is because he is so attached to the rituals and is eager to perform them with the utmost care.

The reason for all this is so that Allah Glorified is He instils a sense of worshipful reverence in all; and we always find people who ask: 'Why should we kiss the Stone, when Allah Glorified is He forbade us from paganism and idolatry?' We say that the nature of the Stone has no value here, but rather, it is the Lord of man, animals, plants, and inanimate objects who commands us to do this—and this kind of obedience is confirmed by the fact that we throw pebbles at another stone which symbolizes Satan. When he carries out these sacred rituals, the servant goes from following his own will to following the will of his Lord, so he kisses one stone and honours it and pelts another stone. In this way, a sense of worshipful reverence pervades all the people and is passed down to animals, plants, and inanimate objects.

Prophet Muhammad's Companion, 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him taught us that when he said to the Black Stone: 'I know that you are but a stone and that you cannot cause benefit or harm; were it not that I saw the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him kiss you, I would not have kissed you.'

It is as though 'Umar may Allah be pleased with him was teaching us this so that no one would say that kissing the Stone is a pagan ritual; for paganism means to worship a stone by your own will, whilst we honour the Black Stone by Allah's will.

'O you who believe, Allah is sure to test you with game within reach of your hands and spears, that Allah may make evident those who fear Him even though they cannot see Him: from now on, anyone who transgresses will have a painful punishment.' (al-Ma'ida: 94) What is the difference between what the hands reach and what the spears reach? What the hands reach is the little chicks and things which are easy to catch, and what the spears reach are those things which must be hunted with effort, by the skilful use and aiming of spears. The True Lord says: 'Allah is sure to test you' (al-Ma'ida: 94) because there is a difference between a person being tempted to sin and thus sinning, and a person reaching a place where he is not tempted to sin, but where a sin might present itself to him; and if the sin indeed does present itself to him, he must not commit it.

It is as though Allah Glorified is He tests us at those times when we are not tempted to sin, and He wants to see how we will act if the sin actually comes to us, and whether we will do it or not. If faith is strong, no one will approach sin; so, Allah Glorified is He will try you by means of the game which is forbidden to you by placing it within your reach. This happened at Hudaybiyya where the game placed itself between the hands of the believers, yet they did not approach it; this was a test. We know that a trial is not a bad thing in itself, but what can be bad is its outcome because a trial is a test which one person might pass, whilst another might fail. It is as though the True Lord tested the believers by making the game appear before them in droves in order to strengthen the faith in their hearts so that they would not be keen to commit sin and so that they would gain immunity from it; this was so '...that Allah may make evident those who fear Him even though they cannot see Him…' (al-Ma'ida: 94).

Allah Glorified is He is the Most Knowing of everything even before it happens. There are different kinds of knowledge. Allah's knowledge is eternal, having neither beginning nor end, and it never errs. But this knowledge cannot be an argument against people because the argument against people must be based on what they actually do; that is why trials occur. Let me give an example – and Allah Glorified is He is beyond compare. A father might look at one of his sons and say, 'He plays all the year round, and it is best that we do not let him take the exam because he will only fail.' So, the son does not take the exam, but this son is so impudent that he says, 'If I had taken the exam, I would have passed it.' If his father had actually permitted him to take the exam and he had failed it, this failure would have been an argument against him.

So, the True Lord's knowledge is not an argument which binds us, but the practical manifestation of this knowledge is what binds us. These kinds of trials based on forbidden things occurred often. An example of this is the trial which the True Lord sent to the Jews by forbidding all hunting and fishing on the Sabbath; the fish came in great numbers on this day, as if tempting them to fish; on the other days, no fish came. So they devised a way to disobey the commandment by making nets to catch the fish which would remain alive and trapped until Sunday when they could take them. Yet, this ruse of theirs only proved their foolishness because the act of catching the fish was completed when the intention was made; the work was done and the preparations were made to catch them. The trial given in Islam was by means of the game which was within man's hands, so '... that Allah may make evident those who fear Him even though they cannot see Him: from now on, anyone who transgresses will have a painful punishment.' (al-Ma'ida: 94)

We saw in a former verse that the True Lord says: '…These are the bounds set by Allah; do not, then, transgress them…' (al-Baqara: 229). Thus, if something is enjoined, then we must do it; and if it is prohibited, then we must not come near it, lest we fall into it and then provide an argument against our own selves—because the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, said: 'That which is lawful is plain, and that which is unlawful is plain; between them are matters that are not clear, about which not many people know. Thus, he who guards against the unclear matters, he clears himself with regard to his religion and his honour, but he who falls into the unclear matters, he falls into that which is unlawful. Like the shepherd who pastures around a sanctuary, all but grazing therein. Every king has a sanctuary. And beware! Allah's sanctuary is His prohibitions.'(1) The True Lord then says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ لَا تَقْتُلُوا۟ ٱلصَّيْدَ وَأَنتُمْ حُرُمٌۚ وَمَن قَتَلَهُۥ مِنكُم مُّتَعَمِّدًا فَجَزَآءٌ مِّثْلُ مَا قَتَلَ مِنَ ٱلنَّعَمِ
يَحْكُمُ بِهِۦ ذَوَا عَدْلٍ مِّنكُمْ هَدْيًۢا بَٰلِغَ ٱلْكَعْبَةِ أَوْ كَفَّٰرَةٌ طَعَامُ مَسَٰكِينَ أَوْ عَدْلُ ذَٰلِكَ صِيَامًا
لِّيَذُوقَ وَبَالَ أَمْرِهِۦۗ عَفَا ٱللَّهُ عَمَّا سَلَفَۚ وَمَنْ عَادَ فَيَنتَقِمُ ٱللَّهُ مِنْهُۚ وَٱللَّهُ عَزِيزٌ ذُو ٱنتِقَامٍ ﴿٩٥﴾

You, who believe, do not kill game while you are in the state of consecration [for pilgrimage]. If some- one does so intentionally the penalty is an offering of a domestic animal brought to the Ka'ba, equivalent – as judged by two just men among you – to the one he has killed; alternatively, he may atone by feeding the needy or by fasting an equivalent number of days, so that he may taste the full gravity of his deed. God forgives what is past, but if anyone re-offends, God will exact the penalty from him: God is mighty and capable of exacting the penalty [95] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 95)

That is, do not kill game when you have entered consecration for either the major or the minor pilgrimages, or for both of them; and even if you are not on pilgrimage, then you are forbidden from hunting, whilst you are within the bounds of the Sanctuary. Allah has therefore made a sanctuary of time and a sanctuary of place; it is a place where people can go to escape being humiliated by others who have delusions of grandeur. In the past, they would fight wars against each other, so the True Lord made four months sacred, wherein no fighting was allowed; that gave a breather those who were tired of fighting, and gave a way out for those who were fearful of losing their dignity. It gave all a chance to taste the sweetness of peace and security which might cause them to prefer to continue to live in peace and security thereafter. Allah Glorified is He also made the Sanctuary a place of security, wherein no one was allowed to harm another. All of this was to preserve people's dignity, lest it might be harmed before others. For example, if two parties are in conflict, and each one desires to make peace with the other, if any neutral person intermediates, he will be successful because both sides want peace and both sides want to end the war, but their vainglorious delusions of grandeur make each of them too proud to be the first to ask the other for peace.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, Abu Dawud and Ibn Majah on the authority of An-Nu' man ibn Al-Bashir

The True Lord willed that these four sacred months give people an opportunity for truce and reconciliation. Thus, people headed for Al-Bayt Al-Haram (the Sacred Mosque), where they could relinquish their hatred and spend time away from fighting, so that things could be resolved in an atmosphere of tranquillity, balance and calm. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'O you, who believe, do not kill game while you are in the state of consecration (for pilgrimage). If some— one does so intentionally the penalty is an offering of a domestic animal brought to the Ka'ba, equivalent— as judged by two people of probity among you— to the one he has killed; alternatively, he may atone by feeding the needy or by fasting an equivalent number of days so that he may taste the full gravity of his deed. Allah forgives what is past, but if anyone re-offends, Allah will exact the penalty from him: Allah is mighty, and the Lord of Retribution.' (al-Ma'ida: 95)

A creature is not considered to be' game' unless it is something that can be eaten; as for hunted animals that cannot be eaten such as lions or the like, some of the scholars say that it is not forbidden to kill them. But we say that everything which is hunted should be considered' game' whether it can be eaten or not so that we may teach ourselves, our bodies and our limbs how to have good conduct, whilst we are in a state of consecration. The meaning of hurum is either in the consecrated state of the pilgrim or presence in the Sanctuary. The Sanctuary's boundaries are well known; the one who is inside it is not allowed to hunt anything from the moment he passes the appointed stations for the beginning of the major or minor pilgrimages.

Therefore, hunting is prohibited for everyone who enters the Blessed Sanctuary of Mecca, whether they are pilgrims or not; and for those who intend to make the major or minor pilgrimage, the prohibition against hunting is even broader because it begins from the moment they enter consecration, whether it is major, minor or both. But what is the ruling if a person breaks this law and hunts? '... If someone does so intentionally….' (al-Ma'ida: 95) Yet, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him added the case of accidental killing of animals to that of intentional killing; this is in order to let every Muslim know that he must pay close attention to what he does when he is in a state of consecration or when he is inside the Sanctuary.

Suppose you want to scratch your head with your fingernails whilst you are in a state of consecration, some of your hair might fall out, and if you are sure this has happened, you must make an offering (sacrificial animals) to the Ka'ba, fast or feed the needy. This is because the True Lord Glorified is He wants you to be fully aware, when you are on the pilgrimage that every move you make will be recorded and judged; therefore, you must have the utmost spiritual vigilance, and even the least error for which must be made amends. Therefore, those who kill game must make amends for indulging in something Allah Glorified is He forbade, and the True Lord specified what amends must be made when He says, '…the penalty is an offering of a domestic animal brought to the Ka'ba, equivalent….' (al-Ma'ida: 95) The scholars have made much discussion of the 'equivalence' meant here; does it mean equivalent value or equivalent form? Equivalent value means that the value of the animal must be ascertained, and then one must purchase any kind of cattle with this value and slaughter it. Equivalent form means that one must find a similar animal to the one killed, as close to its form as one can find. The proof of this is that when a Muslim killed a hyena, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him commanded him to slaughter a sheep. Companions, including 'Ali, 'Umar, 'Uthman and 'Abdullah ibn 'Umar may Allah be pleased with them commanded a man(1) who killed an ostrich to make amends for it by offering a male or female camel because they resemble ostriches in their height. When a man killed a male gazelle, he made amends by offering a ram; when someone killed a female gazelle, he was ordered to make amends by offering a goat. When someone killed a jerboa (a rodent somewhat larger than a mouse), he was ordered to make amends by offering a baby goat; that is, a young goat which has just begun to eat and do without its mother's milk.

(1) The story of the Muslim man who killed an ostrich in the Haram

Here, the equivalence is of form, and Abu Hanifa said that equivalence of value can be used if no equivalent form of animal can be found. So, the person who hunts to feed himself must pay the price of this error by feeding other needy people; and if equivalence is based on value, then the value is determined by people of insight, specifically two people of probity: '…the penalty is an offering of a domestic animal brought to the Ka'ba, equivalent— as judged by two people of probity among you…' (al-Ma'ida: 95). This means people who do not shy away from the truth and who observe the measure strictly and with justice.

The True Lord Glorified is He commands us to be fair-minded so that we can be people of probity. That is, when a person deals with two rivals, he devotes half his attention to one rival and the other half to the other without capriciously inclining towards either one of them and without turning his face to one of them more than to the other. If someone asks how we get hold of these two people of probity, we tell him to look at how fair they are with themselves, look to see if their behaviour is upright or not, see whether they are wasteful or temperate in the way they eat or the way they deal with their anger, or any other aspect of their behaviour. If a person deals with himself in an honest way, he will deal with others in an honest way. Moreover, the person chosen should also have experience in these matters. People must be aware of these things because we see that there is a wave of hypocrisy running through the youth and overtaking some societies in a way that we hear voices saying, 'The youth must take control.'

We say to those who advance such ideas: Take a moment to examine these notions carefully because a young person must go about his work while he is still young, and we must observe him and see if he succeeds in his work; if he proves to be trustworthy in his actions, and treats himself justly and if he does not harm himself, and if this is the case, then, we nominate him to serve his people since he has proved that he can be trusted to treat himself fairly. It is not right for us to experimentally place our community in the hands of someone who does not have any previous experience to call on. It is not right for us to give authority in any sphere to those whom they call 'wunderkinds'. Those who wish to experiment should experiment on themselves and their possessions not on communities and people. A young person must begin his life with serious activity for his own sake so that he can derive immediate benefits from it, and he must not cheat. If he succeeds in doing so, then we may allow him to devote some or all of his time to serving his people once he has proved to us the following: he has sufficient mental maturity, he has adequate experience, he has lost the desire for personal ambition and small pleasures and he has attained the ability to devote all his attention to arbitrating between people.

If the True Lord Glorified is He commands us to choose people of probity to make decisions about the slaughter of rams, then what about the decisions concerning the life of people and their interests? So, we are required to identify people of probity by watching how people behave towards themselves and towards their families. When we find that they can be trusted to deal with themselves fairly, we can trust them with the affairs of others through public service so that the community does not fail since communities only fail because of the poor decisions they make when choosing leaders for various positions of authority.

We may observe here the precision of the concepts which the Noble Quran puts forth because we are faced with the issue of a ram or other animal which must be decided by two persons of probity: '…the penalty is an offering of a domestic animal brought to the Ka'ba, equivalent— as judged by two people of probity among you— to the one he has killed…' (al-Ma'ida: 95). All that the persons of probity decree must be taken to the Ka'ba and there to be eaten by those who gather in the Sacred Mosque to worship the Most Merciful. Allah Glorified is He wanted to secure the nourishment of those who live in a valley where no crops grew, even by means of the errors of those who disobeyed Allah's ban of hunting animals.

But what is to be done if the erring person does not have the ability to make an offering and bring it to the Ka'ba? The True Lord Glorified is He does not leave these kinds of matters unexplained. Thus, He set an alternative expiation by feeding the needy whose number is again determined by two persons of probity. The person who is unable to feed the needy must fast a number of days equal to the number of poor people whom he would have fed if he were able. 'Alternatively, he may atone by feeding the needy or by fasting an equivalent number of days so that he may taste the full gravity of his deed' (al-Ma'ida: 95). The word wabal (gravity) means weight and consequence. Why this gravity? Because when a person spends his money on an animal equal to that which he killed, it will be difficult for him to give up his wealth; and if he feeds needy people, he will have to buy food with money which is also difficult for him to give up; likewise, fasting will exhaust him. This kind of expiation makes a person taste the full gravity of what he has done; in doing so, the True Lord wants to make sure that this awareness was not a mere formality, and that the offence was not a mere formality. He the Exalted wants to link benefit to good deeds and harm to bad deeds so that the affairs of the world would be set straight. We have a clear example of this in the story of Dhu Al-Qarnayn: 'And they ask you, (O Muhammad), about Dhul-Qarnayn. Say, "I will recite to you about him a report. (83) Indeed we established him upon the earth, and we gave him to everything a way (84)' (al-Kahf: 83-84).

The True Lord established Dhu Al-Qarnayn's power securely on earth and gave him the means to achieve anything; yet, he did not simply rely on what he had been given and was not idle or lazy, but rather, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us: 'With these he followed a road' (al-Kahf: 85).

Dhu Al-Qarnayn(1) made the most of the security which Allah Glorified is He had given him on earth; he made the most of the means which Allah gave him; he derived from them energy and a sense of responsibility to carry on executing his mission, 'Until when he reached the setting of the sun, he found it (as if) setting in a spring of dark mud, and he found near it a people. Allah said, "O Dhul-Qarnayn, either you punish (them) or else adopt among them (a way of) goodness." (al-Kahf: 86) He reached the place where, in his eyes, it appeared that the sun set because when a person stands in an empty place at sunset, he can see the sun setting before his eyes as though it is falling behind the horizon although the truth is that this is the range of vision. The assignment was given to Dhu Al-Qarnayn: either punish the people or adopt among them (a way of) goodness; and he had to judge the deeds of each of them and requite them accordingly. He did not do this capriciously because the Allah Glorified is He had established his power on earth. Therefore, the True Lord says: ‘He answered, “We shall punish those who have done evil, and when they are returned to their Lord, He will punish them (even more) severely….”’ (al-Kahf: 87)

---

(1) The story of Dhu Al-Qarnayn

When any man – even an opportunist – sees that those who do bad deeds are afflicted by woes and loss, he will abstain from them, even if he does not believe in the Last Day. As for those who believe in Allah Glorified is He and the Last Day, how will they be treated? The True Lord says: ‘while those who believed and did good deeds will have the best of rewards: we shall command them to do what is easy for them.’ (al-Kahf: 88)

They will attain honour and encouragement, which should only be attained by those who adhere to the truth not by hypocrites or licentious people; this is the constitution of all those who are firmly established on earth and how Allah’s Commandments and Prohibitions are observed. When the True Lord Glorified is He enjoins upon us the prohibition of hunting in the Sacred Mosque, or for those in the consecrated state, and ordained a punishment for those who err in this, He is just with us because there can be no punishment without a crime and no crime without a law. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘…Allah forgives what is past, but if anyone re-offends, Allah will exact the penalty from him: Allah is mighty, and the Lord of Retribution.’ (al-Ma’ida: 95) So, He forgives all that is past, but all who again violate Allah’s prohibition in this regard will be punished for it by the True Lord Who will not accept any offering, feeding of the needy or fasting from them—because repeating a sin means to persist in it. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He will inflict his retribution on them, for He is the Almighty Who cannot be overcome.

After speaking about hunting on land and its ruling, the True Lord wants to clarify that such ruling does not apply to all game. He has forbidden us the game of the land if we are pilgrims or within the Sanctuary, and He then says:

أُحِلَّ لَكُمْ صَيْدُ ٱلْبَحْرِ وَطَعَامُهُۥ مَتَـٰعًا لَّكُمْ وَلِلسَّيَّارَةِ ۖ وَحُرِّمَ عَلَيْكُمْ
صَيْدُ ٱلْبَرِّ مَا دُمْتُمْ حُرُمًا ۗ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ ٱلَّذِىٓ إِلَيْهِ تُحْشَرُونَ ﴿٩٦﴾

It is permitted for you to catch and eat seafood – an enjoyment for you and the traveller – but hunting game is forbidden while you are in the state of consecration [for pilgrimage].
Be mindful of God to whom you will be gathered [96]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 96)

This is a precise statement which makes clear that all sea game and seafood are lawful, whilst the land game is forbidden for the pilgrim in consecration and for all those present in the Sanctuary whether pilgrims or not. That is, it is not a case of fixed allowance or fixed prohibition; rather, it is a matter of leaving the will of the self and embracing the will of Allah Glorified is He. Sayd al-bahr (sea game) is that which we catch by artifice and eat fresh. Ta’aam al-bahr (seafood) means what we prepare to be food by salting. So, the True Lord says: ‘…an enjoyment for you and the traveller…’ (al-Ma’ida: 96). Therefore, the True Lord adds ‘its food’ to ‘sea game’ by the word ‘and’. Something cannot be added to itself; rather, when we add one thing to another, this means they are different.

So, a resident person in a town eats fresh fish, and the traveller takes fish and dries and salts it so he can take it with him to eat on his journey. This is what Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did with his fish. But there are some things which are fished from the sea but not eaten such as pearls, and the animals we take from the sea for their bones and teeth and so on. So, what about them? Allah has allowed us to enjoy everything which we take from the sea; and here this permission is given in the form of the Arabic rhetorical device known as laff wa nashr (involution and evolution) such as when the True Lord says: ‘And out of His mercy He made for you the night and the day that you may rest therein and (by day) seek from His bounty and (that) perhaps you will be grateful….’ (al-Qasas: 73)

We all know that night is for rest and day is for toil, and that night and day follow each other; so the rest here refers to night, and the seeking from his bounty through toil refers to day. Therefore, the statement is a form of 'involution and evolution.' I have mentioned this before with how the Arab poet did this when he said:

My heart, my eye, my tongue, and my Creator
Content, weeping, thankful, and forgiving

The heart is content, the eye weeps, the tongue gives thanks and the Creator is forgiving; but he unfolded each predicate after having gathered the four subjects together. That is, he gathered all the subjects together and then listed all their predicates afterwards. In our daily life, when we travel we buy gifts for our children; then, we organize them according to the sequence in which the children entered our lives. That is, we gather all the gifts together, and then we distribute them afterwards.

After declaring sea game lawful, the True Lord Glorified is He declares hunting on land unlawful for those who are pilgrims. This is a further affirmation of the unlawfulness of hunting on land when one is in consecration for the pilgrimage or presence in the Sanctuary.

The True Lord ends the verse by saying: '…Be mindful of Allah to whom you will be gathered.' (al-Ma'ida: 96) That is, place a shield between yourselves and Allah's punishment because you could not endure the suffering of hell. As we said before, the True Lord has attributes of beauty which bring ease and benefit such as Abundance of Provision, Forgiveness and Mercy; and He also has attributes of power, such as Compeller, Severe in punishment and so on. Each one of Allah's attributes has its purpose. Therefore, when a man sins, he has to take into consideration Allah's attributes of Majesty, and one of the hosts of the attributes of Majesty is hell.

So, beware of imagining that you can flee from Allah Glorified is He for the sphere of freedom which is given to every man has two boundaries: birth and death. No one can choose how he is born or how he dies. So, beware, O man, of becoming a prisoner of delusion because all your free will is hemmed in by two boundaries, and governed by two unavoidable facts: one is that He created you in the beginning, and the other is that you shall return to Him in the end.

The True Lord then says:

جَعَلَ ٱللَّهُ ٱلۡكَعۡبَةَ ٱلۡبَيۡتَ ٱلۡحَرَامَ قِيَٰمٗا لِّلنَّاسِ وَٱلشَّهۡرَ ٱلۡحَرَامَ
وَٱلۡهَدۡيَ وَٱلۡقَلَٰٓئِدَۚ ذَٰلِكَ لِتَعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ يَعۡلَمُ مَا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَمَا
فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَأَنَّ ٱللَّهَ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٩٧﴾

God has made the Ka'ba – the Sacred House – a means of support for people, and the Sacred Months, the animals for sacrifice and their garlands: all this. Know that God has knowledge of all that is in the heavens and earth and that He is fully aware of all things [97] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 97)

Here, the verb 'has made' means 'made clear' and 'explained'. He says that the Ka'ba is inviolable and has a sanctity which decrees that the believer must be secure inside it; or ja'ala (has made) means to make attributes for things which already exist in material form such as when the True Lord says: '…He has endowed you with hearing, and sight, and minds, so that you might have cause to be grateful' (an-Nahl: 78), so Ja'ala means 'has endowed'. That is, He specified that a certain group of cells in man's body would form an eye, another group would form a nose and a third group would form a tongue. Here, the True Lord says: 'Allah has made the Ka'ba— the Sacred House— a means of support for people….' (al-Ma'ida: 97) We know that all abstract concepts are derived from concrete ones.

The word ka'b means something which rises from a flat surface; for example, the Arabic word for ankle is ka'b because of how it is raised from the foot; and when a young girl reaches physical maturity and develops breasts she is called ka'ab or ka'ib, meaning that her breasts have risen. The Ka'ba stands out; it is elevated, and this elevation is one of the signs of the Sacred House; it is an area of land, but its height is what determines its volume.

For example, when we want to measure an area of a land, we measure the length and breadth, and then multiply one by the other to work out the surface area. But if there is also height, this means we are dealing not with an area but with volume or size. The True Lord says: 'And (mention) when Abraham was raising the foundations of the House and (with him) Ishmael…' (al-Baqara: 127).

That is, Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him wanted to give the Sacred House height and volume, and this building indicates that a volume was being made for an area of land. So, the House became the Ka'ba after it was given height. The word for 'Temple' here is bayt which literally means 'house' or a dwelling place. When a person keeps moving to several places all day and wants to rest, he goes to his house.

So, Allah Glorified is He made the Ka'ba a house for people where they can rest from the toil of their lives and their woes; for it is the house of their Lord by their Lord's own choosing, not by their choosing. Every mosque is a house of Allah, but only by Allah's creatures' choice; as for the Ka'ba, it is the House of Allah Glorified is He by His choosing, and it is the focal point for all the houses of Allah Glorified is He which were chosen by His creatures.

'Ja'al Allahu-l Ka'bata-l Baita-l Haraama qiyaama-l linnaasi' (Allah has made the Ka'ba— the Sacred House— a mean of support for people…)' (al-Ma'ida: 97). The Arabic words Al Baita-l Haraama, 'the Sacred House, 'imply that there are many sacred laws of inviolability pertaining to it. Now, the word qiyaama-l, literally, means, in Arabic, 'to stand', and 'to stand 'can also mean' to be in charge of something', and to be in charge of something means to give it everything it needs to live and exist.

Thus, we understand that He wanted the Ka'ba to be the Inviolable House in order to preserve for man the essentials of life such as food, drink, the preservation of the species and the avoidance of harm; beyond those, his dominion, leadership, nobility, and stability. Faith gives man a more elevated life because life is something which believers and nonbelievers share, and it begins with the presence of the spirit in the body which makes the body move and have sensation; the believer is the one who elevates his life, allowing it to enjoy the benefits of faith, and keeps it from harm. By doing so, he attains leadership, and his worldly life is connected to his Afterlife in a way that his life never ends.

The True Lord made the Ka'ba, the Sacred House, the means for all mankind that is, a way to put their lives in order, whether in this world or in the Hereafter—in the material life which ends in death, and the next life which begins in the Hereafter. The True Lord Glorified is He says about this: 'Believers, respond to Allah and His Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life…' (al-Anfal: 24).

Thus, we see that faith in Allah Glorified is He is a way to connect the two lives: the material life of this world and the life of the Hereafter. With this, the True Lord wants to ward off harm and bring the believers benefit, honour, and power. We know that the Inviolable House was the first temple ever set up for mankind: 'The first House (of worship) to be established for people was the one at Mecca. It is a blessed place; a source of guidance for all people.' (Al-'Imran: 96)

We also know that it was Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him who raised the foundations of the Sacred House; as for the temple itself, it had already been established before that. As long as the True Lord says, '…established for people…' (Al-'Imran: 96), this means that Allah Glorified is He did not deny the people who lived before Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him from having a temple as' people' means all human beings, from Adam peace be upon him until the end of time. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him the Friend of the Most Merciful, built the third dimension—height—by raising the foundations of the Inviolable House. The True Lord says: 'We showed Ibrahim (Abraham) the site of the House…' (al-Hajj: 26). That is, the True Lord showed the site of the Temple to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. We know that Ibrahim's son Ismael (Ishmael) peace be upon him helped his father to raise the foundations of the Sacred House, and we know that he first came to this place with his mother(1) when he was still a baby. After the foundations had been raised, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him made this supplication to his Lord, 'Our Lord, I have established some of my offspring in an uncultivated valley, close to Your Sacred House…' (Ibrahim: 37). Ibrahim (Abraham) knew where the Sacred House was, and that it was in a valley bereft of arable land, without water or crops. Allah Glorified is He uses this description to tell us that there is no life without crops, and that crops need water. With this, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him had responded to Allah's call by coming to a place which contained none of the blessings which life needs, but there was the Giver of all blessings. Therefore,(2) we see that when Hajar may Allah be pleased with her heard Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him tell her to go to that place with her son, she called to him, ‘O Ibrahim, with whom will you leave us?’ He replied, ‘With Allah’, and she said, ‘I am content with Allah.’ Then, Hajar let him go where he pleased, for she knew that Allah Glorified is He would not abandon her or her son because she had said, ‘I am content with Allah’.

(1) Hajar may Allah be pleased with her

(2) The story of Hajar pacing back and forth

The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, told us her story, and how she rushed between As-Safa and Al-Marwah, and that she trusted that the Supreme Creator would not abandon her or her son, but He would provide for them, and so she rushed between As-Safa and Al-Marwah in the hope that she would see a bird which would indicate the presence of water; she would return to Al-Marwah in the hopes of seeing a passing caravan. She utilised the means at her disposal, whilst also knowing that she was in the presence of Allah. She rushed back and forth seven times, although she was a female of advanced age all because of keenness to find water for her child to drink.

Running, as we know, is a tiring activity; and had Allah Glorified is He given her water at As-Safa or Al-Marwah, her words ‘Allah will not abandon us’ would not have been confirmed; but the True Lord gave her water at the very feet of her baby. By doing this, He alerted and guided us to two things: firstly, a person must strive as hard as he can; secondly, it is not striving alone which brings results, but rather, all results are given by Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He used the running between As-Safa and Al-Marwah to teach us the practical lesson that we must utilise the means, but not forget the Creator of all means because people fall into grave error when they become infatuated with material means.”No! (But) indeed, man transgresses (6) because he sees himself self-sufficient (7)” (al-’Alaq: 6-7)

The means must never isolate you from the Creator of all means, and neither must you say, ‘I shall remain with the Creator of means until the means come to me’; rather, you must always utilise the means and always remember their Creator. Therefore, we say, ‘Bodies work, but hearts trust in Allah Glorified is He.’ This is the importance of how the True Lord gave water to Hajar may Allah be pleased with her at the very feet of her son; thus, the prayer of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was answered after he had called unto

Allah, 'Our Lord, I have established some of my offspring in an uncultivated valley, close to Your Sacred House, Lord, so that they may keep up the prayer. Make people's hearts turn to them, and provide them with produce, so that they may be thankful.' (Ibrahim: 37)

Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him prayed for fruitful sustenance because the valley was bereft of arable land; therefore, the True Lord made people's hearts incline towards the Ka'ba and the Sacred House. He says, '…Have We not established for them a secure sanctuary where every kind of produce is brought, as a provision from Us?' (al-Qasas: 57)

The word 'established' tells us that the people would not bring these fruits to the Sacred House which Allah Glorified is He made as a source of life to all who dwelled within it, of their own free will, but rather, they would be compelled to bring them. There are people who own large farms and fruitful orchards in Ta'if and other cities. When someone wants to buy their produce they say to him, 'It is reserved for Mecca, so if you wish to buy it you must go to Mecca.'

The True Lord answered the prayer of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him, 'Make people's hearts turn to them...' (Ibrahim: 37), and here, the word tahwi (turn) literally means 'to fall from a great height.' It is as though the yearning for the Ka'ba makes a person throw himself at it; therefore, we find that some people are besotted with the pilgrimage, and their spirits yearn for it.

There is a difference between yahwa which means 'to love to go somewhere', and yahwi which means 'to reach a place by momentum.' If a person falls from a high place, he cannot say, 'I will stop here' when he reaches a particular spot halfway down—he is falling, he does not have the power to stop himself from moving. Therefore, the True Lord says: 'Make people's hearts turn to them...' (Ibrahim: 37).

This shows that it is not the body which inclines here, but the heart, and hearts are in the Hand of Allah Glorified is He and He causes them to incline. The Ka'ba is the Sacred House, and it is a means of support for man's life; Allah Glorified is He says: '…And whoever enters it is secure…' (Al-'Imran: 97).

So, the one who enters the Ka'ba is secure (safe) even if he is a murderer. A man could find the killer of his father in the Ka'ba, but he would not harm him. So, the True Lord Glorified is He gave them all the beneficial constituents of life, and protected them against any harm.

And as for supremacy and honour, we know that Quraysh were the chiefs of the Arabs, and their men were custodians and servants of the House of Allah, and everyone would come to them; so no one would harm their caravans on their way to the Levant or Yemen. If anyone assaulted the caravans of Quraysh, its members could exact vengeance upon them when they came to them. And this was the pinnacle of supremacy. So, the constituents of life consist in benefits which are brought, and harm which is averted – and this was attained by the security which was afforded to all who entered it. And there was also the position of supremacy which Quraysh enjoyed over all the Arabs. And Allah Glorified is He gave an example to Quraysh of how He protected the Ka'ba when Abraha came to destroy it: 'Have you not considered, (O Muhammad), how your Lord dealt with the companions of the elephant?' (al-Fil: 1)

And Allah Glorified is He thwarted the plans of the Army of the Elephant because had they destroyed the Ka'ba, the supremacy of Quraysh would have ended; and therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He said: 'And He made them like eaten straw.' (al-Fil: 5) 'For the protection of Quraysh; their protection during their trading caravans in the winter and the summer.' (Quraysh: 1-2)

The True Lord Glorified is He made the Army of the Elephant like eaten straw, i.e. which cattle have eaten and expelled as manure. Allah Glorified is He did this so that Quraysh would be assured and confident that the Ka'ba would never be harmed, and that their winter and summer journeys were protected because of how all the tribes needed to perform the pilgrimage. Allah Glorified is He then said: 'Let them worship the Lord of this House, Who has fed them, (saving them) from hunger and made them safe, (saving them) from fear. (Quraysh: 3-4)

That is, He bestowed upon them the blessing of food and protected them from the harm of fear, and preserved their supremacy and the prestige of serving the Ka'ba which Allah made as a source of support and security for mankind; for He Glorified is He expiates the sins of those who go on pilgrimage to the House, and their sins fall away and leave them as pure as they were the day their mothers bore them; and this fortifies their lives in the Hereafter, as well.

So Allah has made the Inviolable House a symbol of support for all aspects of life; and as we know, the Sacred House is a place. And the True Lord Glorified is He also has assigned the sacred months symbols of support for life. As we know, the sacred months are times. There are four sacred months, one of which stands alone, namely Rajab – which is why it is known as 'Rajab the Solitary' – and the other three of which are connected and follow each other, namely Dhul Qa`da, Dhul Hijja and Muharram. And the meaning of 'the sacred month' is any one of the four sacred months.

We know that every action requires a doer, and the doer needs time in which to do the action, and a place to do it, and a motive for doing it, and the power to do it. Therefore, let us all remember that the True Lord Glorified is He said, 'Never say of anything, "Indeed, I will do that tomorrow," except (when adding), "If Allah wills."' (al-Kahf: 23-24) So, do not say, 'I shall do this tomorrow' without following it by saying insha`allah (if Allah wills). This does not prevent us from planning for our futures, for as long as we defer to Allah's will we have the right to plan for our lives, and say, 'If Allah wills'. For the components of an action are a subject, an object, a time, a place, a cause and the power to do the action; no one possesses any of these components. For as a man, you do not have the power to ensure that you will be alive tomorrow, nor that the object of your action will exist tomorrow, and you do not possess the time, or the place, or the cause because it might change; and you do not possess the power to do the action because this power might be taken from you before you do it.

So, you do not possess any of the components of the action, and therefore you must not be so bold as to say, 'I shall do this tomorrow.' Rather, you must defer it to the One Who possesses all these components, and say, 'If Allah wills'; and by doing this, you will not be lying.

In this verse, we find that there are two components: place and time. The place is the Sacred House, and the time is the sacred month. The thing in which an action occurs is called in Arabic the maf`ul fih (an object wherein action is done), and it can be either a place or a time. The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to affirm to us those things which are a source of security to mankind, both in space and in time. And had Allah Glorified is He not done that for time by means of the sacred months, and for space by means of the Sacred House, then the wars of the Arab tribes would never have stopped. Therefore, He intended form legislating the sacred months to give an opportunity for reflection on the causes of the war, and to give all the Arabs a break from fighting. At that time, every Arab considered his preparations for war as having the same level of importance as his food and drink, and they were all taught riding, fighting, spear throwing, and sword fighting.

And when the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to spread the call throughout earth, many of his Companions had no experience of warfare because almost everyone was already prepared to fight. It is as if Allah wanted Islam to bring an end to tribal animosities and cycles of violence, and also for Islam to benefit from the battle experience which every Arab had. And Islam also benefitted from the fact that the Arabs were generally a nomadic people who lived in the saddle, travelling and pitching their tents wherever they slept; for people only become attached to homelands when they build houses there, and when someone builds a house for himself somewhere, he grows to love what he has built.

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He had prepared them to go out and spread Allah's word throughout the earth without being sad to leave one place for another; rather, each one of them would go somewhere and settle there to establish an Islamic presence, and they were all good examples for the communities to whom they went. One of them might go to the Levant and settle there, and he would not miss Arabia; and the same was true for those who went to Egypt, and everywhere else.

So, by defining the sacred months and the Sacred House, the True Lord Glorified is He wanted Arabs to have a respite from fighting instead of allowing war to destroy their civilisation; and the True Lord Glorified is He wanted this to be a symbol of security and preservation for mankind.

Likewise, Allah Glorified is He made 'the sacrificial animals and garlanding' inviolable. The sacrificial animals were the animals which were offered to the Sanctuary for the people there to eat because the Sanctuary existed in a place where there was no arable land. 'The sacrificial animal' (hady) is an animal which someone offers and places around its neck a garland of leaves or the like; and when people saw the garland, they knew that this animal had been offered to the Sanctuary, so no one would go near it, even its owner, even if he was sorely hungry. And this was a symbol of security for the people.

And the verse continues, 'that is so you may know that Allah knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth and that Allah knows of all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 97). This refers to everything that has gone before, and that is so you may know that Allah knows what is in the heavens and what is in theearth. This means that Allah Glorified is He arranges for them all the things which protect their lives from all of life's vicissitudes. He arranged for them the preservation of their lives, and He protected them from hunger, and He gave them security, and He persevered for them their supremacy; and He did all this by His arrangement, and He is the All-Wise. He arranged everything from pre-eternity, and everything happened just as He had arranged it, in the best and most beneficial way; and if He Glorified is He did all of this, it is because He is the All Knowing and the All-Wise.

All of this happened according to His knowledge and His wisdom. We believe that there are other things unknown to us which He also did with this absolute wisdom and absolute knowledge. 'That is so you may know that Allah knows what is in the heavens and what is in the earth and that Allah knows of all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 97) He arranged people's lives in Arabia and around the Sacred House even though they worshipped idols before the message was sent to them; yet He guided them with the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him. Therefore, He then says, 'Know that Allah is severe in penalty and that Allah is Forgiving and Merciful' (al-Ma'ida: 98); for He Glorified is He made the House secure and safe, and this was a sacred law, not a natural law.

The difference between a natural law and a sacred law is that the natural law will inevitably occur because it requires no human interference, but the sacred law, on the other hand, is a commandment which people must obey. So if they obey the commandment, Allah has revealed to them, they will make the House secure; and if they sin, they will make it unsecure.

Recently, when a young man named Juhayman(1) attacked the Sanctuary, people wondered, 'How could anyone attack the Sanctuary, when Allah wanted it to be secure?' Our reply is that when Allah ordained that the House be a secure Sanctuary, this was a commandment which the believer must obey, and if they do not obey it, then they will not be secure therein. To illustrate the difference between natural laws and sacred laws, consider that the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…good women are for good men…' (an-Nur: 26). In life, we find that a corrupt man might marry a good woman, and that a good man might marry a corrupt woman; and this confirms for us that the True Lord's words '...good women are for good men…' (an-Nur: 26) is a sacred commandment that a good man should marry a good woman like him, as we must obey this if we truly believe in Allah's way of guidance, but if we reject this guidance, then we will allow good men to marry bad women, and bad men to marry good women, and this will throw the family structure out of balance, and societal life will become hellish. In order to preserve the balance of society, we must make sure that good men marry good women, and we must leave the corrupt men and women to each other so that our lives will not be ruined. And Allah Glorified is He alerts us to the essential importance of obeying His commandments of Sacred Law by saying:

(1) The story of Jahyman's attacking the sacred house in recent time

ٱعْلَمُوٓا۟ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ شَدِيدُ ٱلْعِقَابِ وَأَنَّ ٱللَّهَ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿٩٨﴾

Know too that God is severe in punishment yet most forgiving and merciful [98] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 98)

That is, be fully aware of Allah's laws, and obey His will; and those who disobey Allah should be aware that He Glorified is He is severe in retribution, while those who obey Allah should know that He Glorified is He is forgiving and merciful. And He Glorified is He contrasts one attribute of majesty with two attributes of beauty: the attribute '...severe in penalty…' (al-Ma'ida: 98), is contrasted with the two attributes: '…Forgiving and Merciful.' (al-Ma'ida: 98) This is because not all people are good, and not all people are evil, and therefore, He refers to the good people with the forgiveness and grace which they merit, and to the evil people with the severe penalty they merit; and His forgiveness and merciful grace dominate His wrath and retribution which we can see by how He contrasts one single attribute of majesty, '…severe in penalty…' (al-Ma'ida: 98), with two attributes of beauty, '…Forgiving and Merciful.' (al-Ma'ida: 98) And the True Lord Glorified is He then says:

مَّا عَلَى ٱلرَّسُولِ إِلَّا ٱلْبَلَٰغُ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ يَعْلَمُ مَا تُبْدُونَ وَمَا تَكْتُمُونَ ﴿٩٩﴾

The Messenger's duty is only to deliver the message: God knows what you reveal and what you conceal [99] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 99)

The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was sent by the True Lord Glorified is He to us. The True Lord Glorified is He is the first and absolute doer whose deeds cannot be challenged by any other doer; and the first object of the message is Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the second object of it is us. In Arabic grammar, there is also what is called the mafʿul ma'ah (object of accompaniment), the mafʿul lah (object of reason), the mafʿul fih (object of content), the mafʿul bih (through object) and the mafʿul ilayhi (indirect object); an example of an indirect object is found when Allah Glorified is He says: 'By Allah, We did certainly send (messengers) to nations before you, but Satan made their deeds attractive to them. And he is the disbelievers' ally today (as well), and they will have a painful punishment.' (an-Nahl: 63). There is also the mafʿul minh (object of membership), such as when the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And Moses chose from his people seventy men for our appointment…' (al-A'raf: 155).

The words 'his people' here is the 'within object' (in Arabic, the words 'out of' are not used because they are implied by this grammatical function which does not exist in English) because he chose seventy members of his people who had not worshipped the calf to pray for forgiveness for those who had worshipped it, and to ask Allah to give them relief from their trials.

The mission of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is to deliver the message: 'Not upon the Messenger is (responsibility) except (for) notification.' (al-Ma'ida: 99) As for implementing the message, this is the role of those who believe in the message of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; if they do it, they will enter paradise, but if they do not, they will be punished. And the True Lord Glorified is He wanted the message that His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him delivered to be accompanied by the good example of His own conduct. So, the Messenger delivers and then implements what he delivers before our eyes, so that we can follow him.

The True Lord Glorified is He said, ‘There has certainly been for you in the Messenger of Allah, an excellent example...’ (al-Ahzab: 21). This nullifies any ascription of divinity to a human being; for if any messenger was a God, the people would have said, ‘How can we follow this messenger, whereas his attributes and characteristic are different from those of humans?’ The Messenger cannot be a God because he is the role model and example for those to whom he is sent: he prays, fasts, gives charity, makes pilgrimages, and he commands those to whom he is sent to follow his example. If he was a God, then those to whom he was sent – human beings – would not be able to do what he did, because – being a god– his nature would be different from theirs, and therefore, they would not be able to imitate him and follow him. The example cannot be made unless the Messenger is the same race as those to whom he is sent; that is, he must be of the human race, and be subject to all human vicissitudes. The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And what prevented the people from believing when guidance came to them except that they said, “Has Allah sent a human messenger?” (al-Isra’: 94) That is, the people ignorantly wondered what kept Allah Glorified is He from sending them a messenger who was not human, and they wondered why He sent them a messenger from their own human race. Allah Glorified is He Himself gives the response saying: ‘If there were upon the earth angels walking securely, He would have sent down to them from the heaven an angel (as a) messenger.’ (al-Isra’: 95) In this way, the True Lord Glorified is He conveys unto His messenger the importance of telling the people that the messenger sent to them must be of the human race because the angels do not walk about on earth as their natural abode, and if an angel was sent as a messenger the people would have said, ‘We cannot follow what the angels have brought, because they cannot be role models for us since they are not from the human race’. Moreover, the angels are invisible beings, so how could Allah send invisible beings to men as messengers? Even if this were to happen, the True Lord Glorified is He would inevitably clothe the angel in human form, as He says in another verse, ‘If He had made him an angel, He would have made him appear as a man, and He would have covered them with that in which they cover themselves.’ (al-An’am: 9) They asked Allah to send them an angel, but if Allah had answered them and sent an angel as a messenger, the angel would have come in a human form, and they would have persisted in their disbelief and refused to believe; and then they would deserve nothing but Allah's punishment, so He would have destroyed them. The mission of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is to deliver the message and be a role model for us. The verse continues, 'Allah knows whatever you reveal and whatever you conceal.' (al-Ma'ida: 99)

It is as if Allah Glorified is He warns us not to accept faith superficially without truly believing in it; for humans might be fooled by superficial things, but Allah can see us with His infinite self-sustaining Power, and He is not taken by slumber or sleep. And these words are a challenge to the hypocrites that Allah Glorified is He will judge them; and if a man conceals unbelief in his heart and displays superficial faith, he will be punished by Allah. In addition, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the believers who follow him must act according to appearances and leave the essence of the matter to Allah.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him forbade us ascribing unbelief to anyone who claims to have faith, even if he is a hypocrite. He peace and blessings be upon him told us that he was a human being, and he knew that human beings have limited powers; and therefore, he peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Verily, I am only a human and the claimants bring to me their disputes. Some of them are more eloquent than others. I judge per what I hear from them. So, he whom I, by my judgment, (give the undue share) out of the right of a Muslim, I in fact give him a portion of (hell) fire.'(1) So, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him warned us not to imagine that he had super-human powers; and when a Companion killed a man who had claimed to have faith, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, 'Why did you not cut open his belly and find out what was in his heart?' So, we must follow outward appearances, and consign knowledge of secret truths to Allah. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says, 'He knows whatever you reveal and whatever you conceal.' (al-Ma'ida: 99) We know that the act of hypocrisy gives the hypocrite the outward rights of a Muslim for as long as he lives in this temporal life; but his life in the Hereafter is long, and he will be requited therein for the unbelief he concealed. And to conceal is not the same as to suppress; to conceal an action means that it is actually done, but the one who does it conceals it from others; as for what is suppressed, this is what exists in the thoughts alone. And a person might be able to suppress something for a while, but as time passes, he will be unable to keep it suppressed, as the Arab poet said:

(1) Muslim

> If a man has a trait, no matter how much
> he hides it from the people, it will be known anyway.

And it is said, ‘The secret almost shouts, here I am!’

Since the True Lord Glorified is He knows all that men do openly and all that they conceal, and He is severe in penalty as well as forgiving and merciful, and He rewards good deeds tenfold and punishes bad deeds as they merit, then what are we to do? The answer comes in the form of a command from Allah Glorified is He to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to tell us:

قُل لَّا يَسْتَوِى ٱلْخَبِيثُ وَٱلطَّيِّبُ وَلَوْ أَعْجَبَكَ كَثْرَةُ ٱلْخَبِيثِ ۚ
فَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ يَـٰٓأُو۟لِى ٱلْأَلْبَـٰبِ لَعَلَّكُمْ تُفْلِحُونَ ﴿١٠٠﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘Bad cannot be likened to good, though you may be dazzled by how abundant the bad is. Be mindful of God, people of understanding, so that you may prosper’ [100]
(The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 100)

Therefore, bad things are never equal to good things, and this is shown by the way when one of us goes to buy something, he inspects the wares and chooses the good ones and leaves the bad ones. This is a natural phenomenon which is just like the lack of equality between those who are blind and those who can see, and between darkness and light. And the True Lord Glorified is He reminds us of concrete concepts to explain abstract concepts to us, and thus He warns us not to be fooled by the quantities and sizes of things; for a little of something good is far more beneficial and better than a lot of something bad. And one might see the goodness of a good thing in this worldly life, but of course its goodness in the Hereafter is far greater than one can imagine, because the Hereafter lasts forever, while the life of this world is limited.

When many people attend any kind of division, each of them desires to take the biggest share for himself because people are deluded by quantity but this greed spoils everything that the greedy person takes. For example, the person who desires to take more wheat than he deserves, it will spoil his life with this bad thing that he has taken. It is like mixing pure water with filthy water so that all the water becomes filthy. So we should not judge things by their quantity and size, but rather, by their quality and kind, and by how long their goodness will last.

The example which I never tire of repeating is that of the pupil who works hard for twenty years, and finally graduates and becomes a person of good standing. As for the pupil who spends twenty years playing and fooling around, he ends up with a failed and painful future. So we must all judge benefit according to its endurance, and not be deluded by a large amount of a bad thing.

These examples are repeated in our daily lives, and we must place them before our eyes so we can keep Allah in mind and not go willingly to our own ruin as so many people do. Some people are not content with the division Allah ordained for their inheritance, and so they give everything to their male relatives and nothing to their female relatives, or they reduce the female relatives' share. We say to those who do this, 'You do not know what you are doing, and if your son knew that Allah's hand influences things, he would say to you, "Have mercy on me and do not harm me"!' The True Lord Glorified is He says, '…your parents or your children, you know not which of them are nearest to you in benefit...' (an-Nisa': 11).

Therefore, a man must know that Allah's distribution is the most just one; and beware of over giving of a son or a relative more than what Allah has allotted him because this is the very essence of injustice. If the one who leaves this inheritance does not come to realise this before he dies, then we say to the one who takes the inheritance, 'Beware, and do not take more than what Allah's Law gives you, and return all that you took beyond your right; do this with the chivalry of faith. And do not think that this unjust increase will protect your children, for this increase will only sever their family ties and plant the seeds of hatred and enmity'.

But if you decide to arrange this matter in the way Allah’s Law ordains, you will find that provision will come to you from all directions, as long as you respect Allah’s Right by adhering to the rules He has willed so that families are united and divine justice is fulfilled. Therefore, no one must dare to challenge Allah’s division, and I say to all those who read these words and still want to challenge Allah’s division; ‘Repent to Allah, and do not spoil your spiritual standing.’ No father should imagine that he can guarantee the success of his children in the future; for how often we have seen people leave their families rich, yet they have fallen into penury and destitution; and we have seen people leave their families poor, yet Allah showered them with His provision. And He Glorified is He says, ‘Let those executors and guardians fear injustice as if they themselves had left weak offspring behind and feared for them. So, let them fear Allah and speak words of appropriate justice.’ (an-Nisa’: 9)

So, the believer must beware of the plenty if it contains bad things; and we may learn much from the story that happened to Abu Ja`far Al-Mansur when he assumed the Caliphate and the people went to congratulate him for becoming the Commander of the Faithful, and he was visited by Muqatil ibn Sulaiman who was a man of wise counsel. Abu Ja`far said to himself, ‘He has come to spoil our day! I will speak to him first before he speaks to me.’ So, he said to him, ‘Counsel us, Muqatil!’ Muqatil replied, ‘Shall I counsel you about something I have seen, or something I have heard?’ This is because hearing is more extensive than seeing, since seeing is limited to what the eye perceives, while hearing has many forms because a person can also hear the experiences of others. Abu Ja`far replied, ‘Speak to me of what you have seen.’ He replied, ‘O Commander of the Faithful, ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd Al- ‘Aziz died and left behind eleven children, and he left eighteen dinars, of which five were used to buy his burial shroud and four to buy his grave, and the rest was shared amongst his children. Hisham ibn ‘Abdul Malik died, and the inheritance of one of his four wives was eighty thousand dinars, in addition to some estates and palaces; and the total share of the four wives was three hundred and twenty thousand dinars, and this was only the value of the money he left. By Allah, O Commander of the Faithful, I saw with my own eye these two things in a single day. One of ‘Umar ibn `Abd Al-`Aziz’s sons led one hundred cavalries in Allah’s Cause, and one of the sons of Hisham ibn’ ‘Abd Al-Malik begged in the street.’

So we should all be aware that none of us entered the world rich, and we must all have good etiquette with Allah and respect His Rights, and we must not interfere with Allah's ordained division.' Say, "Not equal are the evil and the good, although the abundance of evil might impress you."So, fear Allah, O you of understanding, that you may be successful!' (al-Ma'ida: 100)

The Muslim, then, must utilise all his mental faculties in order to distinguish the bad from the good, and he must reject all that is bad because if we examine the matter with our intelligence we will conclude that Allah's law is the true and just law.

Allah says, '…so that you may be successful!' (al-Ma'ida: 100) The word for successful in Arabic is falah which, as we know, is derived from a concrete concept, namely' to farm (falaha) the earth.' A man takes a grain of wheat and plants it, and it gives him seven ears which each contains a hundred grains. The True Lord Glorified is He calls all the deeds of the Hereafter (falah) because the word has a beautiful origin. For if the earth, which is one of Allah's creations along with all the constituents essential for farming and for life which it contains, gives us seven ears in return for one grain, each ear containing one hundred grains, then how much will the Creator of the earth give us? So, fear Allah, O Muslim, and do not interfere with Allah's division, and keep in mind the wise advice given in the traditional saying, 'The worst of you is the one who leaves his dependants with good, and goes to meet Allah with evil'. And the sons who are tested with this should consider the matter with spiritual high-mindedness; for when a father loves one of his sons and gives him a share of more inheritance than he is due, this is the most foolish kind of love; and the son should respect the emotion of love and forgive the father for this and have mercy on him by returning his share and giving everyone their proper rights, so that his father is not tormented in hell for interfering with Allah's division for the benefit of his son.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ لَا تَسۡـَٔلُواْ عَنۡ أَشۡيَآءَ إِن تُبۡدَ لَكُمۡ تَسُؤۡكُمۡ وَإِن تَسۡـَٔلُواْ
عَنۡهَا حِينَ يُنَزَّلُ ٱلۡقُرۡءَانُ تُبۡدَ لَكُمۡ عَفَا ٱللَّهُ عَنۡهَاۗ وَٱللَّهُ غَفُورٌ حَلِيمٞ ١٠١

You who believe, do not ask about matters which, if made known to you, might make things difficult for you – if you ask about them while the Quran is being revealed, they will be made known to you – for God has kept silent about them: God is most forgiving and forbearing [101]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 101)

This is a prohibition against asking questions, and the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Leave me as I have left you (Do not ask me the minor things that I have avoided to tell you). For those who came before you were doomed because of their questions and differences with their prophets. If I commanded you to do something, and then do as much of it as you can, and if I forbid you from doing something, then refrain from it.'(1)

We know that the children of Israel made things difficult for themselves when they kept procrastinating about slaughtering the cow and asking about its colour; they made things difficult for themselves that Allah made things difficult for them. And when the required cow was finally found, it was owned by an orphan boy, and this orphan's father was a righteous man who owned a cow which he took to a place full of verdure and pasture and said, 'O Allah, I ask You to look after it for my son until he grows up.' When they bargained with the orphan for the cow, he sold it to them for gold which would fill its hide.

Some people were excessive in their questioning of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him such as' 'Abdullah ibn Hudhayfa ibn Qays As-Sahmi who asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him' Who is my father?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him replied, 'Your father is Hudhayfa.' But if it had been the case that this questioner's father was actually someone else than what was thought, would this not have disgraced his mother? And his mother said to him, 'I never saw a worse son than you! Did you hope that your mother had been tempted to indulge in what the people of pagan ignorance indulged in, that you might expose her to the people?'

(1) Muslim

The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to make the people decrease their questioning about things which might cause them difficulty and woe and offend them. The True Lord Glorified is He accepted the questions the believers addressed to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him concerning Sacred Law such as their questions about intoxicants, new moons, menstruation, the sacred months and so on; as for other questions, the True Lord Glorified is He said about them that He has pardoned that which is past; and Allah is Forgiving and Forbearing.

This is because some people were wont to ask questions as though they were testing the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and therefore the commandment was issued that the believers should not intentionally ask about things which Allah Glorified is He had hidden from them so that their honour would not be tarnished.' But if you ask about them while the Quran is being revealed, they will be shown to you' (al-Ma'ida: 101). Therefore, if the Quran revealed the answer, that would be well; and if no answer came, no one had the right to say, 'The Prophet does not know the answer.' Or, this refers to questions about the things they had invented which they claimed proved that someone was truly a prophet, of which the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'And they say, "We will not believe you until you break open for us from the ground a spring. Or (until) you have a garden of palm trees and grapes and make rivers gush forth within them in force (and abundance). Or you make the heaven fall upon us in fragments as you have claimed or you bring Allah and the angels before (us). Or you have a house of gold or you ascend into the sky. And (even then), we will not believe in your ascension until you bring down to us a book we may read. "Say, "Exalted is my Lord! Was I ever but a human messenger"' (al-Isra': 90-93).

These words betrayed their impure intention because the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him does not bring signs, but rather, signs come to him to convey the laws he is obliged to convey; for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him does not choose the signs he brings, but rather, the True Lord Glorified is He sends the appropriate signs to him. And the True Lord Glorified is He then says:

قَدْ سَأَلَهَا قَوْمٌ مِّن قَبْلِكُمْ ثُمَّ أَصْبَحُوا۟ بِهَا كَـٰفِرِينَ ﴿١٠٢﴾

Before you, some people asked about things, then ignored (The answers] [102] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 102)

The fact that the True Lord Glorified is He did not send down these signs was a mercy to those who asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for them; for people asked for a she-camel and then they restricted it, so Allah annihilated them; and the people of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him asked for a laden table and it was sent down to them, then the True Lord Glorified is He warned them of what would happen if they did not believe after that. And the unchanging way of Allah with His creatures is that if they ask for a sign and then fail to believe in it, the True Lord Glorified is He destroys them or punishes them. And He Glorified is He gave the followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a guarantee that He would not punish them, while he is among them, and He would not punish them, while they seek forgiveness. 'But Allah would not punish them while you, (O Muhammad), are among them, and Allah would not punish them while they seek forgiveness.' (al-Anfal: 33)

So, He did not answer the questions they had asked because Allah Glorified is He absolved them; and the word for absolution is (`afw) which, as we know, is derived from the word (`affa) that means to wipe away tracks so they are no longer visible; and Allah's absolution is an aspect of His forgiveness and mercy.

Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

مَا جَعَلَ ٱللَّهُ مِنۢ بَحِيرَةٍ وَلَا سَآئِبَةٍ وَلَا وَصِيلَةٍ وَلَا حَامٍ ۙ وَلَـٰكِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ
كَفَرُوا۟ يَفْتَرُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ٱلْكَذِبَ ۖ وَأَكْثَرُهُمْ لَا يَعْقِلُونَ ﴿١٠٣﴾

God did not institute the dedication of such things as bahira, sa' iba, wasila, or ham to idols; but the disbelievers invent lies about God. Most of them do not use reason [103] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 103)

This verse comes in the chapter where Allah declares cattle to be lawful, apart from those exceptions which are unlawful. He is the One Who created man, and created the nourishment which sustains man's life and the means of procreation which sustain his species; and since the True Lord Glorified is He made man His vicegerent on earth, He prepared for him all these constituents of life before He created Adam peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He prepared for His creatures the earth, sky, air, water and all the nutrients He stored and made on the earth which will last until the Day of Resurrection.

We should be aware of the difference between khalaqa (creating) and ja`ala (making) which could also be translated as ordaining or laying down. They denote different things. To create is to bring something into existence out of nothing, whilst to make is to direct a creation of Allah to its purpose in life. Allah's creatures cannot create anything, for only Allah Glorified is He can create and bring things into existence. Our role as created beings is to recognise everything's purpose in life which Allah intended for it; that is, we should leave making to Allah and not interfere with it. For example, this means that the Creator Glorified is He created pigs to eat waste and protect man from many illnesses and harms; and therefore, man must recognise that the pig has this purpose, and not turn it to another purpose by eating it; for to turn one of God's creatures into a purpose other than its own, is something which harms man whom Allah intended to be the vicegerent of the universe.

And Allah Glorified is He told the people that He permitted some things and forbade others, and man must yield to what Allah has permitted by taking it, and yield to what Allah has forbidden by abstaining from it. The Creator Glorified is He is the One who creates and the one who makes; and He says that He has made the Ka'ba, the Sacred House, maintenance for the people. He created the heavens and the earth and made the darkness and the light. Further, the True Lord Glorified is He forbids us from ascribing partners to Him, whilst it is He Who created us and those before them, and made for us the earth a bed (spread out) and the sky a ceiling and sent down from the sky, rain and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for us.

Allah Glorified is He is the Ever-Present, and He is Indivisibly One and Unique, so it is not right to attribute rivals to Him since this is futile. And Allah Glorified is He affirms that corruption on earth occurs when people take Allah's creatures and presume to make them into a different state than that in which Allah created them.

In their daily lives, men are keen to use things for their proper purposes. For example, you buy a block of cheese from the cheese-maker and a block of soap from the soap-maker, and you take the cheese and the soap home and tell your family that the cheese is for eating and the soap is for washing, and everyone follows these instructions. Were someone to use the soap for eating and the cheese for washing, the health of the family would be damaged. In the same way, the True Lord Glorified is He has given us children from our own loins; so how can we take children who came from the loins of others and make them our own? This is a misapplication of ja`l (making).

Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…and He has not made your adopted sons your truesons…' (al-Ahzab: 4). Your adopted son is really from the loins of another man, and your wife is not really his mother, so how can you make him your son and allow him to sit in the lap of a woman who is not his mother and grow up accustomed to this, and allow him to look at women who are not his unmarriageable kin as though this is perfectly lawful for him? This will cause him to lose the power to distinguish between the lawful and the unlawful; and therefore adoption is a form of corruption.

All the corruption in the world begins when we make one of Allah's Creatures do something which Allah did not mean for it to do. The True Lord Glorified is He informs us that He created man and created for him what nourishes him and what preserves his species; we must follow the commands of the True Lord Glorified is He by taking what is lawful and staying clear of what is unlawful. And if someone says, 'Why did Allah forbid some of the things He created?', we say that He created these things for a different purpose than that for which man wants to use them, and an example of this is the prohibition of eating pork.

If one of us sees how animals live in the forest, he will be amazed, for the waste excreted by some animals is food for other animals, and the poison of a snake can be used for protection and medicine. We know that people take the venom of snakes and extract from it cures for certain diseases, and to kill certain germs.

The True Lord Glorified is He explains, 'Say, "Have you seen what Allah has sent down to you of provision of which you have made (some) lawful and (some) unlawful?" Say, "Has Allah permitted you (to do so), or do you invent (something) about Allah?"' (Yunus: 59) How can we then make ourselves lawgivers by permitting the unlawful and forbidding the lawful? God who created all things did not give us leave to do this. We must accept that everything was created for a purpose, and that we do not have the right to direct it to any other purpose than its own. And directing things to purposes for which they were not made has had harmful consequences; an example of this is how we use pesticides on fields which not only killed what we felt to be harmful but killed what was beneficial, too. Therefore, man should be very careful, and should not see the lawful and the unlawful as being equal; and he should be very careful not to transgress against Allah's creations by altering their purpose.

The verse under discussion mentions several kinds of cattle by name as follows: bahirah, sa`ibah, wasilah and hami. The bahira was the she-camel whose ear was clipped as a sign that she was inviolable so that no one could harm her, turn her away from a pasture or from water, drink her milk, ride her or shear her wool; they did this because they said she gave birth to five litters, the last of which contained a male. The sa`iba was a she-camel which a man vowed to set free when he recovered from illness or returned from a journey, so he would not tie her up, and she would eat and drink what she liked and slept where she liked, and no one would ever harm her. The name sa`iba is derived from the verb saba, which means 'to flow' as water flows, and we know that the chief attribute of water is that it flows, and when rain falls onto a mountaintop it first fills the valley and then rises. This is how water flows as long as man does not intervene in any way by making dams, pumps, and water distribution networks. And the wasila was the she-camel which was born alongside a twin brother; when a she-camel bore its young, the owners of the camel would check the sex of the offspring, and if it was male they would eat it, whilst if it was female they would keep it for breeding, since a single stud is enough to breed with ten females. And if in a single litter a she-camel bore a male and a female, they would not slaughter either of them and would say, 'She came alongside wasalat (its brother)', and therefore made it inviolable to us.

In our Egyptian countryside, we find that the children hope that the offspring of a buffalo or cow will be male so that they can eat its meat and drink as much milk of the mother as they please. This is because children look to their immediate benefit. The adults, on the other hand, always hope that an animal will bear female offspring because females can be used to produce more stock. And the hami was the stud which was not allowed to be ridden and which they would leave to roam where he pleased after he had been bred with ten generations of females, or had sired ten litters of offspring. And one of the conditions of this process was to make sure that the stud's grandson – the son of his son – was fertile. Those, the bahira, the sa`iba, the wasila and the hami, were concoctions of the people of disbelief who invented lies about Allah; for the True Lord Glorified is He created these cattle so that people could enjoy eating them, drinking their milk, and employing them however they wished.

The meaning of 'inventing a lie' is to concoct a falsehood and then claim it in order to conceal something which is true; to lie is to cover over a truth which was previously established. And the established truth ever since Allah created man is that these cattle are all subdued to serve man. Allah Glorified is He conveyed His guidance to Adam peace be upon him and each generation was supposed to convey this guidance to the generation which followed it, but the passage of time and heedlessness caused people to forget certain laws. And therefore, Allah sent messengers to remind the people of His guidance and to uproot disbelief from their consciousness. So the disbelievers are people who have covered up Allah Guidance and His Message, and in doing this they attribute their own lying inventions to Allah.

An example of this is the story of how the idols were brought into the Ka'ba. A man named `Amr ibn Luhayy travelled to the Levant and found idols and statues there, so he brought a statue named Hubal to Mecca, and he was the first person ever to bring an idol to Mecca. And just as `Amr ibn Luhayy did that, other people made laws and rules which were not from Allah such as the bahira, the sa`iba, the wasila and the hami, and in doing so they attributed their own lying inventions to Allah's Guidance, and altered His Guidance. And even if no guidance had yet reached them from Allah, was it not nevertheless essential for them to consider these innovations and errors from a standpoint of logic and reason?! The True Lord Glorified is He does not prevent reason from deducing sound universal truths, but the mind might strive and toil through long experiences before arriving at a given truth. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He wants to protect people from the woes of difficult experiences, and so He sent down His way of guidance to declare what is lawful and what is unlawful. And He Glorified is He clarifies that He sent down Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with guidance and the religion of truth to prevail over all false religions.

Someone might say, 'So why are there other religions in the world, such as Judaism and Christianity? And why are there atheists, so long as Allah decreed that there would be no other religion than Islam?' We say, the True Lord Glorified is He declares that the religion will prevail even if the idolaters hate it, and this means that there must be disbelievers, idolaters and followers of other religions over which Islam will prevail; and Allah will cause it to triumph by means of arguments and proofs, and by the testimony of the disbelievers, atheists and idolaters themselves because life's affairs will give them grief in every aspect of their lives and they will not find any solutions to these problems except by resorting to the teachings of Islam – not because it is Islam, but because the teachings and laws of Islam will offer solutions to their problems. Resorting to things which agree with Islam – even though they do not believe in Islam –is a strong testimony that Islam is the religion of natural disposition, and the religion of reason, and that everyone will come to need it whether they like it or not; and those who do not accept it as a religion, will find that they need to accept it as a system.

And the True Lord Glorified is He ends the noble verse by declaring, '…and most people do not understand.' (al-Ma'ida: 103) This is because Allah Glorified is He wishes to alert us to the fact that if they had applied reason to the matter, they would never have made the bahira, sa`iba, wasila and hami forbidden to themselves. We might ask, 'Did you make these things forbidden as a way of honouring them, or as a way of abstaining from them ascetically'? If it was a matter of asceticism this means that they took them away from the purpose for which Allah created them because He created them so we could eat their meat and benefit from them. And if it was meant to honour them, then is it an honour for a man to leave an animal which has served him without any protection from wolves, and without feeding it himself, and allowing it to eat from the land of others? This is disloyal to the animals which have served one, and this kind of behaviour does not preserve the life of this animal but rather exposes it to danger. Therefore, the sound mind rejects both this asceticism and this honouring. And if `Amr ibn Luhayy or anyone else brought ideas and traditions which Allah did not make, then we must give thanks to the True Lord Glorified is He for bringing Islam to amend these things.

And the one who examines the verses of the Quran closely finds that they represent a secure program for man's life on earth, as though they are a computer which programs man's motions on earth with a precision beyond that of any computer made by man. There is a divine' computer' which guides man so that he neither strays nor is led astray; for Allah corrects man's behaviour if he strays far from the straight path. And no one should say, 'I will only follow what my forefathers did', for the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَإِذَا قِيلَ لَهُمْ تَعَالَوْا۟ إِلَىٰ مَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ وَإِلَى ٱلرَّسُولِ قَالُوا۟ حَسْبُنَا مَا
وَجَدْنَا عَلَيْهِ ءَابَآءَنَآ ۚ أَوَلَوْ كَانَ ءَابَآؤُهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ شَيْـًٔا وَلَا يَهْتَدُونَ ﴿١٠٤﴾

when it is said to them, 'Come to what God has sent down, and to the Messenger,' they say, 'What we inherited from our forefathers is good enough for us,' even though their forefathers knew nothing and were not guided [104]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 104)

Rather a man must be aware that the first change made to Allah's way of guidance was the work of one of those of his forefathers who were overcome by heedlessness. And for a person to say, 'I will only follow what my forefathers did' is contradictory since clearly the first person who changed Allah's way of guidance did not say the same because he did not follow his father's example; and moreover, it is possible that the forefathers were not aware of the changes they made to Allah's Way of guidance, and were not guided to the truth. And elsewhere in the Quran Allah Glorified is He asserts the same fact of their adhering to the way of their forefathers in denunciation of Divine Guidance.

In the verse under discussion Allah does not say, 'follow', but rather 'come', which in Arabic is ta'alow derived from the word `uluw (height); it is as though they lowered themselves and went downwards when they said that it would suffice for them to follow that which their forefathers believed; for by saying this they rejected and denied everything which came to them in any way other than imitation of their forefathers, and therefore they barred and blocked themselves from the straight path.

As for the verse (170) in the chapter of al-Baqara, it indicates that it is possible that they could have added, 'and we shall also follow what the religion teaches'; and therefore, the condemnation is stronger for those who said that it is enough for them to follow their forefathers, as in verse (104) of the chapter of al-Ma'ida. This shows us that the response from Allah in each of the two verses was appropriate for their positions. Why? Because the one who does not use his reason might learn from someone else who had engaged in thought and deliberation; if he does not use his own reason, he might still be able to learn from someone else. As for the person who knows nothing, he has nothing but ignorance, for he has not attained knowledge by his own accord, nor has he learned from anyone else. And the True Lord Glorified is He uses the word 'why' as a way of censuring the practice of following forefathers instead of Allah's religion. And we may also observe that the True Lord Glorified is He refers to guidance in both verses because guidance comes from Allah; as for reason and knowledge, they are two human faculties. Afterwards, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

يَٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُواْ عَلَيۡكُمۡ أَنفُسَكُمۡۖ لَا يَضُرُّكُم مَّن ضَلَّ إِذَا ٱهۡتَدَيۡتُمۡۚ
إِلَى ٱللَّهِ مَرۡجِعُكُمۡ جَمِيعٗا فَيُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ ١٠٥

You who believe, you are responsible for your own souls; if anyone else goes astray it will not harm you so long as you follow the guidance; you will all return to God, and He will make you realize what you have done [105] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 105)

The True Lord Glorified is He said before: 'and when it is said to them, "Come to what Allah has revealed and to the Messenger," they say, "Sufficient for us is that upon which we found our fathers." Even though their fathers knew nothing, nor were they guided.' (al-Ma'ida: 104) These two verses indicate that there are two groups: One group which is astray, and another group which is guided; and a battle is raging between these two groups. Will this battle then last a long time? Indeed this battle will last for a long time because the people who are astray do not like to see the believer loving for his brother what he loves for himself, and they also benefit from the corruption in the world.

The believer loves obedience, and he tries to make his fellow believer love obedience too, and if he sees him doing something wrong, he tells him to stop and encourages him to do what is right. When good comes from a person, it benefits others, and the benefit it brings the one who does it might be delayed until the Hereafter. The believer's goodness, integrity, and honesty benefit society and harm those who are astray. And if all of society is corrupt, then the believer suffers from the corruption of this society. So it is in the interest of the believer to do good for others, so that goodness will spread and in turn benefit the believer as it moves through society. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says, '…upon you is the responsibility for yourselves…' (al-Ma'ida: 105), that is, 'Take care of yourselves', as though the believers are a single unit. This expresses the essential importance of the spreading of mutual spiritual norms; and an example of this can be found in the instructions Allah gives for the management of the possessions of those who are weak of judgement. The True Lord Glorified is He directs us not to entrust the weak-minded with our property.

This is because the person who is not of sound mind, does not have the right to manage his wealth until he becomes sane; for this wealth belongs to all the Muslims, and they must manage it so that all the Muslims can benefit from it. And the first way this management is done is by advice; and if the person of weak judgement does not heed this advice, then whoever is closest to him must have him declared legally incompetent. This is because any evil caused by the incompetent person's management of his wealth, will harm society, and therefore the wealth must be considered as belonging to the people, and they must manage it until the incompetent person regains his sanity, whereupon he will be allowed to do what he wants with his wealth. So, the True Lord Glorified is He does not say, 'Hand over to them your possessions' because the person of sound mind can now be trusted with his possessions; therefore, as soon as the weak-minded person becomes sane, his possessions are returned to him. And in the same way, the True Lord Glorified is He states that upon us is the responsibility for ourselves, as mentioned in the verse, i.e. 'O believers, each one of you is responsible for himself and for the rest of the believers, and part of the responsibility of guidance is to rectify those who are corrupt; and no believer should say, "And what about me?"' And the verse further provides that those who go astray will do us no harm if we are guided, as in the verse. As long as you try to rectify corruption, you have done what you are responsible for doing.

As Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Whoever observes an objectionable evil deed; he should change it with his hand, if he can. If he cannot, then he should change it with his tongue (by speaking out). If he cannot, then he should change it within his heart (by hating it and feeling that it is wrong) – and that is the weakest degree of faith.'(1)

How can the person change the evil within his heart? The believer should cut off those evildoers who went astray from Allah's right path. Changing evil within one's heart means that the believer should make the outward behaviour corresponding to the heart's feelings, so that the evildoer feels that others disapprove of him. If all believers cut off the strayed person even if they do not physically restrain him, he will surely be deterred. The believer should not greet the deviant person with a warm welcome or praise because he might trivialise evil when he is hypocritically favoured by others to win affection. As Allah the Almighty says: 'Whenever you come across people who speak with scorn about Our revelations, turn away from them until they move on to another topic…' (al-An'am: 68).

When all people turn their back on those who contravene the right path, this will hurt them. The root of all evil is the respect of society to evildoers; thus, this encourages them to increasingly sink into evil and do escalating irreparable harm. In villages, the person having a gun gains respect and favours. This matter leads him to be tyrannical with his weapon. If the people were to turn their backs on him, he would not be held in awe by the community and would be obliged to behave properly once again. However, what is the basis upon which is founded the principle of changing evil within the person's heart, i.e. discouraging and cutting off evildoers?

On being asked about this verse, '…It is (but) for your own souls that you are responsible…' (al-Ma'ida: 105), Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Rather, enjoin upon one another the good, and stay away from (and prohibit) the evil, until you see that avarice obeyed, lust followed, the worldly desires preferred and that everyone is amazed with his opinion. Then you should be worried about yourself and do not bother yourself of the common folk. Ahead of you are the days in which patience is like holding onto a burning ember, for the reward of righteous deeds during that time is like the reward of fifty men doing the same deeds.'(1) When you do not show love, mercy, or kindness towards the evildoer deviating from Allah's right path, you are, in this manner, bound to positivity.

(1) Muslim, Ahmad, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nisa'i and Ibn Majah

When a believer asked the scholars, 'How should a man resist evil?' They answered, 'In a confrontation, the person who escapes from two people is guilty of fleeing, but the one who flees from three is not guilty'. In other words, if a man, in a battle, is faced by two enemies and runs off, he is guilty of desertion; but if he flees from three, he is considered to be reasonably protecting himself. The scholars derived this ruling from the promise that Allah makes to succour the believers if their enemies are double in number. He the Almighty says: 'But Allah has lightened your burden for now, knowing that there is weakness in you– a hundred steadfast of you will defeat two hundred and a thousand steadfast of you will defeat two thousand, by Allah's permission: Allah is with the steadfast.' (al-Anfal: 66)

Therefore, this is the admissible ratio of one to two; if the believer flees from two enemies in a battle, he thereby does not deserve Allah's promise of succour. Accordingly, he is considered a deserter who incurs Allah's wrath, and is condemned to the hell-fire. As per the previous verse, Allah Glorified is He promises the persevering faithful warrior facing two unbelievers with victory, whereas if the believer flees from facing three enemies, he will justifiably evade risks by saving his life. Islam does not ask people to throw themselves to suicide. Those who want to face the evils of this world should not cast themselves into destruction or fight an enemy who will surely defeat them due to superior strength in terms of numbers. Moreover, they should follow the tradition of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him whose followers will continue in safety as long as they adhere to Allah's path.

As aforementioned, the concept of changing evil within one's heart means cutting off those who are deviant, echoed Allah's saying: 'You who believe, you are responsible for your own souls; if anyone else goes astray it will not harm you so long as you follow the guidance…' (al-Ma'ida: 105). The verse implies that everyone should look after and protect himself; the matter which represents a sort of guidance that is to know how to settle the issue with faithful belief. It should be taken into consideration the numbers of both the guided and the misguided; if they are equal, the former should confront the latter to resolve disputed matters. Correspondingly, if the number of the misguided people is as twice as the number of believers, the believers should still confront the, whereas, if the number of the misguided people is more than twice that of the believers, the believers are excused for protecting themselves by refusing to be engaged in confrontation, but rather they should cut off all sins and evildoers.

(1) Abu Dawud and At-Tirmidhi

It is well known that every individual wants to enhance his stature amongst society. If he perceives that prestige and high standing are given to the righteous and the honest, he will endeavour to be alike. However, if he realises that good positions in society are granted to liars and deviants, he will endeavour to be the same. Therefore, the believers should only honour and highly regard the followers of the right path. Imam Ahmad Allah rest his soul narrated that Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him stood and praised and glorified Allah and then said, 'O people, although you recite this verse, "You who believe, you are responsible for your own souls; if anyone else goes astray it will not harm you so long as you follow the guidance…" (al-Ma'ida: 105); however, you inappropriately grasp its meaning. I heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, "If people see an evil deed but do not change it, then Allah will soon send His punishment upon them all."

In the verse under discussion, Allah Glorified is He reassures the believers that if they encounter any harm in their lives, they should recognise that this life is not the end, but there will be the Hereafter wherein we shall be granted the eternal bliss for being on Allah's path, whereas those who opposed His way will be tormented in the hell-fire. Allah the Almighty mentions this because the believer cannot be sure of his attitude in many situations; he might fight in a battle with a pure intention, but then he may go astray. Therefore, he will encounter penalty commensurate to his deviation.

Those who follow Allah's path should always keep this concept in the forefront of their consciousness. At the Battle of Uhud, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave the best example when he commanded the archers not to leave their positions even if they saw that the believers were victorious and that the enemies were routing. Nevertheless, the archers disremembered his command and went after the spoils as soon as they saw that the believers were winning. Accordingly, Allah denied them victory because they disobeyed the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, the believers have been taught to duly obey Allah and His Messenger at all times.

But for Allah's saying: '…You will all return to Allah, and He will make you realise what you have done (in life)' (al-Ma'ida: 105), those who did not encounter Allah's victory during their lifetimes because they fought in the early battles and were martyred, they would not have known their eternal recompense. They primarily recognised that they would return to Allah and that He will reward and honour them in the Hereafter. As Allah the Almighty directs and manages the worldly life of the believer, He also directs his life in the Hereafter by rewarding him with eternal bliss in the paradise. Therefore, Allah says:

يَـٰٓأَيُّهَا ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ شَهَـٰدَةُ بَيْنِكُمْ إِذَا حَضَرَ أَحَدَكُمُ ٱلْمَوْتُ حِينَ ٱلْوَصِيَّةِ ٱثْنَانِ ذَوَا
عَدْلٍ مِّنكُمْ أَوْ ءَاخَرَانِ مِنْ غَيْرِكُمْ إِنْ أَنتُمْ ضَرَبْتُمْ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ فَأَصَـٰبَتْكُم مُّصِيبَةُ
ٱلْمَوْتِ ۚ تَحْبِسُونَهُمَا مِنۢ بَعْدِ ٱلصَّلَوٰةِ فَيُقْسِمَانِ بِٱللَّهِ إِنِ ٱرْتَبْتُمْ لَا نَشْتَرِى بِهِۦ ثَمَنًا
وَلَوْ كَانَ ذَا قُرْبَىٰ ۙ وَلَا نَكْتُمُ شَهَـٰدَةَ ٱللَّهِ إِنَّآ إِذًا لَّمِنَ ٱلْـَٔاثِمِينَ ﴿١٠٦﴾

You who believe, when death approaches any of you, let two just men from among you act as witnesses to the making of a bequest, or two men from another people if you are journeying in the land when death approaches. Keep the two witnesses back after prayer, if you have any doubts, and make them both swear by God, 'We will not sell our testimony for any price, even if a close relative is involved. We will not hide God's testimony, for then we should be doing wrong' [106]
(The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 106)

Allah the Exalted notifies the believer to the fact that he should not only wait for the immediate recompense in this worldly life; but rather, he should also prepare himself for what awaits him in the Hereafter. In the agony of death, the believer should not disregard making bequests if he owes anyone or vice versa. Likewise, if a man travels abroad, he should also make bequests to reserve the rights of his heirs and to pay off any debts to discharge his obligation. He should appeal for two Muslims to act as witnesses to his bequest; however, if he is accompanied on his travels by non-Muslims, he should also appeal for them to act as witnesses to his bequest. Allah the Almighty has not given the believers any excuse in this concern, but the bequest should be testified by two witnesses. The verb'witness' as a word means that something is testified to as taking place at present. As Allah Glorified is He says: '…So any one of you who is present to witness that month, should fast…' (al-Baqara: 185). This means that if the month comes and the Muslim witnesses that it has begun, he should fast.' To witness' can also mean that someone takes the stand to eyewitness an event such as when Allah the Exalted says: 'Flog the adulteress and the adulterer one hundred stripes. Do not let compassion for them keep you from carrying out Allah's law—if you believe in Allah and the Last Day—and ensure that a group of believers witnesses their chastisement.' (an-Nur: 2) The verse indicates that a group of believers should witness the flogging.

Moreover, 'to witness' can also mean 'to reach judgement' as per Allah's saying: 'But he said, "She tried to seduce me." A member of her household reached a judgment (saying), "If his shirt is torn at the front, then it is she who is telling the truth and he who is lying, but if it is torn at the back, then she is lying and he is telling the truth."' (Yusuf: 26-27) Hence, 'to witness' has many meanings; yet, the root meaning is 'to testify at present'.

It is known that 'bequest' means that the benefactor gives or bequeaths something good and important to someone else. The 'bequest' is granted to others who are not lawful heirs; that is, those who are assigned no lawful share of the inheritance, but to whom the benefactor might have cause to leave something of his. Nevertheless, the witness hearing the bequest should absolve himself of suspicion by telling the heirs what he has heard; for the bequest is the choice of the benefactor. It is probably that neither the witness nor the receiver of the bequest knows the reason behind it; only the benefactor does. Therefore, Allah mentions bequests before debts in His saying, '…After payment of any bequests or debts, with no harm done to anyone…' (an-Nisa': 12). Bequests are mentioned first even though debts must be settled before bequests are fulfilled because the debt is an obligatory right while the bequest is a donation. Allah decrees this because debts will always be sought by those to whom they are owed, whilst the receiver of the bequest might not have any right to claim, as being a gift, or his right to the bequest might not be confirmed by a written will or testimony. Therefore, Allah mentions bequests at first to draw the attention to the importance of bequests. Similarly, the benefactor may owe the receiver of the bequest educational, ethical, moral, or social favour; therefore, Allah stipulates on the benefactor to pay him back with gratitude for his good deeds influenced him in his life. This matter might not an issue of concern to the heirs; but rather, they might object to it; however, the benefactor is the one who knows the merits of the bequest.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He wills to confirm the validity of bequests even if it is difficult to be confirmed; accordingly, He commanded the benefactor to make his bequest whether he is amongst his family or during his travels on feeling that death is close to him. In such case, he may call upon any two Muslims, if found, or even any two non-Muslim witnesses and declare the bequest to them. There is a story behind this: There was a Muslim man named Badil ibn Abu Maryam, the freed slave of Al-`As ibn Wa`il As-Sahmi who was travelling in the company of non-Muslims. He felt the pangs of death, so he wrote a note and placed it with his belongings, as a precautionary measure. Then, he called for two non-Muslims in his company named Tamim Ad-Dari and `Adi ibn Bada` and asked them, just before his death, to deliver the belongings to his family. But the two men opened his pack and found a valuable jug lined with silver and gold, so they sold it for one thousand dirhams shared between them. They handled the rest of the belongings to the deceased man's family who found the note, upon which was written all the details of the belongings, including the valuable jug. The family asked the two men about the jug, but they denied all knowledge of it and denied that they had seen the deceased selling it. After a while, the family found the jug on sale and acknowledged that it had been purchased from the two men who were present at the death of its original owner. So, the deceased family went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and complained that the bequest had been betrayed. In a little while, Allah's verse under discussion was then revealed, where He the Almighty sets His Commandment to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that these two betrayers should be summoned after having offered the prayers of their religion, and swear an oath by Allah to tell the truth. The family of the deceased was told to bring forth the paper and the Messenger unveiled the truth. Later, Tamim Ad-Dari embraced Islam and retold the true story, and paid the five-hundred-dirham share of the selling price and brought the share of `Adi, presenting then the whole price of the jug to the family of the deceased. Allah Glorified is He sets His Commandment to take hold of them after the prayer because as the person prays even if he is from another religion, as his soul is usually ready to say the truth after his stand before Allah. Moreover, Allah says: ‘You who believe, let two just men…act as witnesses…’ (al-Ma’ida: 106) because the testimonies differ from a person to another; thus, Allah obligates the testimonies sworn should be given by two separated individual witnesses.

The testimony requires the separation of the two points of view, and the person who determines this separation is the one who interviews the two persons of probity, whether Muslims or non-Muslims. This questioning should take place after the performance of prayer to verify truthfulness. If their testimonies clarify the bequest, it is effected, whereas if there is any doubt about their testimonies, then the two witnesses must swear that they will not sell the covenants of Allah for any price, fearing that they are counted among the evildoers. Afterwards, Allah says:

فَإِنْ عُثِرَ عَلَىٰٓ أَنَّهُمَا ٱسْتَحَقَّآ إِثْمًا فَـَٔاخَرَانِ يَقُومَانِ مَقَامَهُمَا مِنَ ٱلَّذِينَ
ٱسْتَحَقَّ عَلَيْهِمُ ٱلْأَوْلَيَـٰنِ فَيُقْسِمَانِ بِٱللَّهِ لَشَهَـٰدَتُنَآ أَحَقُّ مِن
شَهَـٰدَتِهِمَا وَمَا ٱعْتَدَيْنَآ إِنَّآ إِذًا لَّمِنَ ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ ﴿١٠٧﴾

If it is discovered that these two are guilty [of perjury], two of those whose rights have been usurped have a better right to bear witness in their place. Let them swear by God, ‘Our testimony is truer than theirs. We have said nothing but the truth, for that would make us wrongdoers’ [107] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 107)

If it comes to light that the witnesses have forged the bequest of the deceased, or that they have dishonestly concealed some details; thus, two close relatives of the deceased may be summoned to swear by Allah that the two witnesses have lied, and that their accusation of lying is completely true. Additionally, they should swear that if it comes to light that their testimony is false, they deserve the punishment meted out to all evildoers. In this manner, Allah the Exalted gives ample means to enable people to establish justice by seeking out the truth as best as they can. Allah’s saying, ‘If it is discovered that’ means ‘if it incidentally comes to light without having been looked for’. If there is evidence that comes to light that the two witnesses who attended the death of the benefactor, are obviously lying, then two witnesses from the family of the deceased should be instead summoned to seek the truth.

In the event that reasoned the revelation of this verse, `Amr ibn Al-`As and Al-Muttalib ibn Wada`ah As-Sahmi Allah be pleased with them swore by Allah that the other two witnesses lied and that their own testimony was true and was not an unjust attack on the ones who gave the first testimony. The aim is to make sure that testimonies are given properly, as Allah the Almighty says afterwards:

ذَٰلِكَ أَدْنَىٰٓ أَن يَأْتُوا۟ بِٱلشَّهَٰدَةِ عَلَىٰ وَجْهِهَآ أَوْ يَخَافُوٓا۟ أَن تُرَدَّ أَيْمَٰنٌۢ بَعْدَ
أَيْمَٰنِهِمْ ۗ وَٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ وَٱسْمَعُوا۟ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ لَا يَهْدِى ٱلْقَوْمَ ٱلْفَٰسِقِينَ ﴿١٠٨﴾

that will make it more likely they will give true and proper testimony, or fear that their oaths might be refuted by others afterwards. Be mindful of God and listen; God does not guide those who break His laws [108] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 108)

The first two witnesses, who testified the bequest of the deceased person at the time of his death, give their testimony after praying and after swearing that they say the truth. They should be careful to tell the truth for fear that their lies may be exposed later. As previously mentioned, the word ‘giving testimony’ or ‘be a witness’ can be used to refer to anything at which someone is present or attending; such as when Allah Glorified is He says: ‘(O Muhammad,) proclaim the Pilgrimage to all people. They will come to you on foot and on every kind of swift mount, emerging from every deep mountain pass; to be a witness for attaining benefits….’ (al-Hajj: 27-28) The verse indicates that when the people hear the call for the pilgrimage, they will come from every direction and by every means of transport, the matter which may be difficult. However, they will strive to witness attaining benefits. Furthermore, Allah the Almighty says, 'Allah bears witness that there is no god but Him…' (Al-'Imran: 18). Allah's witness is a proclamation, whereas the angels' witness is recognition of His deity. Thus, the witness testifies attending an account at present.

If the witness, who is taking the stand in the courtroom, is interrogated by the prosecutor, the plaintiff's lawyer, or the defendant's lawyer, he would recount everything he has seen. As long as the witness is telling the truth, he is not afraid of which party examines him. No matter how many questions are asked and how many different approaches are used by the parties interrogating the witness, but as long as the event really happened, his testimony will be identically unchanged. The truthful witness is recounting an actual unchanged event; whereas, the dishonest witness will keep on making mistakes, getting confused and changing his testimony. Therefore, the skilful prosecutor stirs up the witness's memory for the most exact and meticulous details. As previously mentioned, the word 'witness' implies the notion of presence and attendance; but if the one who bears witness is the one who gives the verdict as well, then his testimony is a judgement in itself. This is the case when Allah the Exalted says, 'Allah bears witness…' (Al-'Imran: 18).

The story of Prophet Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him unfolds how Allah Glorified is He detained the step of brothers of Yusuf (Joseph) when they took his younger brother with them to Egypt, and how Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him arranged things so that he could keep his younger brother with him. As the story progressed, the stepbrothers of Yusuf (Joseph) discorded, as they were afraid of any harm might afflict their father on knowing the news that their younger brother is detained in Egypt. The Quran conveys that the elder stepbrother said: 'So go back to your father and say, "Your son stole. We can only tell you what we bear witness to. How could we guard against the unforeseen? Ask in the town where we have been; ask the people of the caravan we travelled with: we are telling the truth"' (Yusuf: 81-82).

The stepbrothers of Yusuf (Joseph) had firstly lied when they did their evil deed with him, but they told the truth the second time when the younger brother of Yusuf (Joseph) was detained. Thus, they told their father to ask either the people in the town where they were, or their companions in the caravan about the authenticity of their story. They were told that the cup used by the King for measurement had been found in their younger brother's pack. Therefore, their testimony this time was authentic and reflected what they had been told

In view of that, the testimony is the authentication that settles the dispute. For that reason, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him instructed that a man should not give a testimony on something unless he saw it with his own eyes as clear as the sun, 'Give witness in a similar case (which is as clear as the sun), or leave it'.(1) Allah says: 'O People of the Book, why do you deny Allah's revelations when you bear witness they are true?' (Al-'Imran: 70).

Testimony has two requirements; the first is the presence of the witness as the incident occurs and the second is the authenticity in transmission of information. Therefore, Allah decrees that the testimony of two women, in certain rulings, is equal to that of one man. Someone might ask, 'How does Islam make the testimony of an ignorant or illiterate man equal to that of two women even if they are well-educated?' To answer this question, people should know that bearing witness is not an intellectual endeavour, but it is an issue of authenticity in transmission of information; the matter which has nothing to do with education. Testimony requires that the witness is present and rushes to the event, yet the woman cannot rush to the event due to her feminine features. Thus, she should be defended, protected from any danger that may harm her; accordingly, she should not mix with men or rush into any scene that may be full of men. If an incident takes place and a woman is present right there, she would not naturally get in on the act to ask about all the details, whereas, the man who witnesses the event will strive to find out all that has gone on. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He does not decree that the testimony should be taken from two women because they are less trustworthy or less educated than men are; but rather because bearing witness is a matter of being present at and involved in an event to accurately transmit information about the incident.

(1) It is narrated by Ad-Daylami and At-Tabarani on the authority of Ibn 'Umar Allah be pleased with him. An-Najm said that Ar-Rafi`i related that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about giving witness, he said, 'Do you see the sun?' The questioner replied, 'yes'. The Prophet said, 'Give witness in a similar case (which is as clear as the sun), or leave it.'

Some people like to make a fuss about these issues and use them as a means of attacking those preachers who call to Allah's path. Yet, they should recognise that there is a difference between being at odds with someone who calls to Allah's right path and going so far to declare his enmity against Allah Himself as this does not merely reject the rule of the preacher, but it rejects the rule of Allah.

Allah Glorified is He sets His decree that the two witnesses should first offer the prayer and then be held back for a while, and summoned to give testimony. If the family of the deceased rejects their testimony about the bequest, then two of the family of the deceased should be summoned to testify about the bequest. All these measures are necessary so that the testimony can be authentically and properly given.

Allah the Almighty ends this noble verse by saying, '…Be mindful of Allah and listen; Allah does not guide those who break His laws.' (al-Ma'ida: 108) This is directed to all believers in particular and all mankind in general because Allah only guides those people who are willing to follow His way of guidance, whereas He will not help disbelievers or evildoers to follow the right path.

It is noticeable that Allah the Exalted first recounts the events of the story and ends up with the ruling afterwards. When the ruling is given in an event upholding it, the person will be convinced with and cling to it more. Similarly, it is like the cup of water which is presented to a thirsty person, he drinks with desire and longing. The same as the medicine prescribed to a sick person during his worst throes of sickness, he accepts to swallow it longingly no matter how bitter it tastes. This is the reason that some rulings of the Quran followed the events which called for them so that the believer would be eager to apply them. Allah then says:

يَوْمَ يَجْمَعُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلرُّسُلَ فَيَقُولُ مَاذَآ أُجِبْتُمْ ۖ قَالُوا۟ لَا عِلْمَ لَنَآ ۖ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ عَلَّٰمُ ٱلْغُيُوبِ ١٠٩

On the Day when God assembles all the messengers and asks, 'What response did you receive?' they will say, 'We do not have that knowledge: You alone know things that cannot be seen' [109] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 109)

Allah Glorified is He draws the attention to the importance of getting ready for the Day of Resurrection when Allah gathers all the messengers to ask them, '…What response did you receive?' (al-Ma'ida: 109) That is, 'how did the people respond to the way of guidance to which you called'? Thus, people should obey the responsibilities ordained by Allah in every aspect of their lives. This question implies an admonition to those who disobey the messengers; as Allah the Almighty says: 'What will they do when We bring a witness from each community, with you (Muhammad) as a witness against these people?' (an-Nisa': 41)

It is known that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him will come, on the Day of Resurrection, as a witness for his followers and for all those messengers who preceded him. An example of this from our daily life, surely to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection, is the scene of a family waiting for the son outside the examination hall to ask him, 'What answers did you give'? The family here asks the son to describe how well he did in the exam in general; but if he is asked what responses did he give, this means that that he is requested to give the details of every answer. Allah's question to His messengers: '…What response did you receive?' (al-Ma'ida: 109), superficially seems to be an interrogation to the messengers; but it is a question for those who disobeyed. This is an admonition for all disbelievers in the Divine Messages because the mission of the messengers is to deliver Allah's Message.

How will the messengers answer Allah on that Day? Their answer will precisely encapsulate all articles of faith, '…We do not have that knowledge. You alone know things that cannot be seen (that are beyond the reach of a created being's perception).' (al-Ma'ida: 109) However, how did the messengers say, 'We have no knowledge', even though they witnessed that some people indeed had faith, while others did not? The messengers only had knowledge of apparent matters such as people's words and conduct, but Allah the All-Knower Who knows best what hearts and souls conceal, reckons people per their intentions and conduct. Moreover, the messengers might have contemporarily known about the persons who believed in their teachings, but they did not know about who turned to be believers or disbelievers after their times. The answer which the messengers delivered expresses the utmost respect to Allah; they all know that Allah's knowledge is perfect and encompasses everything. Subsequently, Allah says:

إِذْ قَالَ ٱللَّهُ يَٰعِيسَى ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ ٱذْكُرْ نِعْمَتِي عَلَيْكَ وَعَلَىٰ وَٰلِدَتِكَ إِذْ أَيَّدتُّكَ بِرُوحِ ٱلْقُدُسِ
تُكَلِّمُ ٱلنَّاسَ فِي ٱلْمَهْدِ وَكَهْلًا ۖ وَإِذْ عَلَّمْتُكَ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ وَٱلْحِكْمَةَ وَٱلتَّوْرَىٰةَ
وَٱلْإِنجِيلَ ۖ وَإِذْ تَخْلُقُ مِنَ ٱلطِّينِ كَهَيْـَٔةِ ٱلطَّيْرِ بِإِذْنِي فَتَنفُخُ فِيهَا فَتَكُونُ طَيْرًۢا بِإِذْنِي ۖ وَتُبْرِئُ
ٱلْأَكْمَهَ وَٱلْأَبْرَصَ بِإِذْنِي ۖ وَإِذْ تُخْرِجُ ٱلْمَوْتَىٰ بِإِذْنِي ۖ وَإِذْ كَفَفْتُ بَنِيٓ إِسْرَٰٓءِيلَ
عَنكَ إِذْ جِئْتَهُم بِٱلْبَيِّنَٰتِ فَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ مِنْهُمْ إِنْ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا سِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١١٠﴾

Then God will say, ‘Jesus, son of Mary! Remember My favour to you and to your mother: how I strengthened you with the holy spirit, so that you spoke to people in your infancy and as a grown man; how I taught you the Scripture and wisdom, the Torah and the Gospel; how, by My leave, you fashioned the shape of a bird out of clay, breathed into it, and it became, by My leave, a bird; how, by My leave, you healed the blind person and the leper; how, by My leave, you brought the dead back to life; how I restrained the Children of Israel from [harming] you when you brought them clear signs, and those of them who disbelieved said, “This is clearly nothing but sorcery” [110] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 110)

Allah the Almighty asks all messengers a general question; whereas, He asks `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him a specific question about a particular event. Allah Glorified is He intends to show us the politeness of the messengers with Him, and, on the other hand, the rebuked impoliteness of the disbelievers in rejecting His way of guidance. The specific question asked by Allah the Almighty to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is attributable to the fact that some followers believed in his divinity or partial divinity; the matter which is an affront to the absolute transcendence of Allah the Exalted. The utmost aberration done by previous nations was that some of which disbelieved in the messengers and others gave the lie to the messengers, but none of them ever assumed the divinity of the messenger. No one claimed this aberration except a certain sect of the Jews who alleged that `Uzair (Ezra) peace be upon him is the son of Allah; however, this sect had been vanished, and no Jew any longer claims this. Conclusively, Allah the Almighty declares that associating partners with Him is the utmost unforgivable sin.

Allah Glorified is He asks `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him this question after firstly reminding him of some blessings bestowed upon him and his mother

Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her. Allah the Exalted lists several blessings conferred upon `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him namely; the support of Allah to him with the holy inspiration of Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him his miracle of speaking in the cradle to acquit Maryam (Mary) peace be upon her of the charges laid against her chastity. Moreover, Allah has taught `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him the Scripture, wisdom, the Torah and Gospel. Also, He bestows upon him the ability to make a clay bird and to blow into it to become a living being by His leave. As well as, He gives him the ability to restore the sight of the blind, to cure the leper and to bring the dead back to life again by His leave. Furthermore, Allah the Exalted protected `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him from the conspiracies of the Jews who wanted to crucify and kill him even though he had brought them these miracles. Some of them believed, but still many others disbelieved, alleging that these miracles were only deceptive sorcery.

In considering a mere single miracle, the Might of Allah the Exalted is obviously clear. The discourse of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, while he was a baby in the cradle is a miracle in itself. It is known that the cradle is a comfortable bed prepared for a new born that does not have the strength to protect itself from any un-comfortableness. Thus, the baby possesses sensations, but does not have the power to react to those sensations.

For example, the newborn cannot remove a pebble from under it, so the family makes a cradle and places the baby inside. It is merely a spirit within a tiny body with no strength at all, except having enough power to preserve its life by clinging to the breast of its mother. If a baby could speak in a cradle, then it possesses a will by which it could control its whole body to the extent that allowed it to speak; a matter which is impossible to take place. The only way that the baby can communicate is to cry, if a tiny insect, a gnat, or mosquito bites it, the baby will only be able to cry.

However, `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him spoke in the cradle because Allah the Almighty gave him the power to do so. Allah made the baby speak as an adult. This contrasts the cradle wherein he sleeps. If he miraculously spoke in the cradle to absolve his virgin mother, he would further go on to speak as a grown man to convey the Message of Allah. `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him spoke in the cradle what Allah Glorified is He tells us in the Quran:' (But) he said: "I am a servant of Allah. He has granted me the Scripture, made me a prophet, and made me blessed wherever I may be. He commanded me to pray, to give alms as long as I live, and to cherish my mother. He did not make me domineering or graceless. Peace was on me the day I was born, and will be on me the day I die and the day I am raised to life again."' (Maryam: 30-33) The discourse of`Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him in his cradle aims to verify that his mother is virtuous and upright because as they offended her chastity, since nothing she could have said would have availed. Defending her chastity, Allah the Almighty reveals to her through Jibril (Gabriel) or `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon them to convey unto the people, '…I have vowed to the Lord of Mercy to abstain from conversation, and I will not talk to anyone today.' (Maryam: 26) As Allah Glorified is He makes `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him a fatherless child born to a virgin woman outside the norms of creation, therefore, He has breached the norms of nature by the speaking of the new born child in his cradle to be a significant miracle.

Afterwards, Allah mentions that He the Exalted has taught him the Scripture and the Torah, and has revealed unto him the Gospel and has inspired him with wisdom: '…How I have taught you the Scripture and wisdom, the Torah and the Gospel…' (al-Ma'ida: 110). 'Wisdom' means the perfect and exact speech per the inspiration of Allah – in Islam, this corresponds to Hadith (the sayings) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

The precision of the Quranic discourse prevents any misapprehension that may arise that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was directly involved in any matter related to creation to prevent confusion in faith principles. Allah Glorified is He says: '…How, by My leave, you fashioned the biomimicry of a bird out of clay, breathed into it, and it became, by My leave, a bird…' (al-Ma'ida: 110). Hence, `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him did not create the bird, he only shaped a biomimicry of a bird out of clay because genuine real living beings are only created by Allah the Exalted.

This imitation is obvious in the statues carved by the sculptures from rocks, or in the clay mould having the shape of camels or birds; but they cannot breathe spirits into them. A man might make an inanimate object such as a cup of smelted sand, but it is impossible to have male and female cups being created and can then reproduce to give cup offspring! It is noticeable that when a man creates something, it always remains as it is; it does not reproduce, grow, or have sensations. Allah, the Supreme Creator, creates from nothing; whereas, man can only make things from existing matters originally created by Allah, buried either inside the earth or on its surface. Yet, Allah was not unkind to people; but rather, He let them allege that they have created something, but they must be aware that He the Almighty is the best of all creators.

The power of man, as a contingent being, differs from the power of the Lord, the Eternal, and the Omnipotent. When Allah decrees something with His Omnipotent Power, He can ascribe to one of His creatures to carry it out; yet, man cannot ascribe to another man something identical to what he makes.

An example to clarify this issue is that an infant cannot pick up a chair, yet a strong young man can easily pick the chair up for him. This young man does not provide the child with power or transfer it to him; but rather, he supplies him with the consequence of his power, and the child remains as weak as he was before. However, Allah the Exalted supplies whomever He wills to do whatever He wills; due to His awesome might, He may provide powerless people with some of His power to make them powerful. Therefore, Allah supplies `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him by His leave with His power to give life to the bird by blowing into the clay to be turned to a living being. Earlier, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did this when he requested from Allah the Exalted '…My Lord, show me how You give life to the dead…' (al-Baqara: 260). Hence, Allah asked him, '…Do you not believe, then?' (al-Baqara: 260). He replied, '…'Yes', said Abraham, 'but just to put my heart at rest...' (al-Baqara: 260).

This verse unveils a certain point of view because Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him indeed had faith, which means that his heart is at peace with a certain doctrine. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not ask Allah, 'Do you raise the dead to life?' He first acknowledged that Allah the Almighty has the power to raise the dead, but he wanted to be more certain by knowing the method of doing this. Asking about the method of doing something has nothing to do with faith, but it rather requires a practical application. Accordingly, Allah commanded him to take four birds, train them to come back to him so that he could become well acquainted with them, then to cut them up into pieces, place each piece on a hilltop and then call them back. When Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him called the pieces, they recollected to be the same four birds as they had been before and came back to him.

In the same way, Allah sets His will that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him makes a clay bird and then blows into it to become a living being by Allah's leave. Allah provides`Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him with the power of healing a man born blind. Some people might allege that, in modern times, corneal transplants have been developed, and some of those who were born blind have been allowed to see. This ophthalmological progress is based on scientific experimentation, whereas, the power that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was endowed to heal a man born blind represented a breaching of the laws of nature, and intended to be a miracle. Similarly, Allah the Exalted provides `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him with the power to cure the leper; i.e. the person whose skin has become paper-white due to this illness. Furthermore, Allah saved him from the conspiracies of the children of Israel as they wanted to harm and kill him. Witnessing all these miracles, some people believed, while others disbelieved and accused `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him of being a sorcerer. This represented a blatant lie against him, for he is a prophet sent with obvious miracles.

In the verse under discussion, Allah Glorified is He enumerates the blessings granted to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him not to draw his attention to these blessings, for he knows them well; but rather, they represent a reproach to those who witness these miracles and yet still did not have faith in Allah afterwards. Allah Glorified is He has provided and supported `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him with all these blessings to strengthen the message. `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is primarily merited such blessings because he is elected, chosen and aided by Allah. It is observable that the miracles and blessings provided by Allah to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him are of two kinds; those targeting to convince people who possess sound minds, hearts and consciences, and those targeting to convince materialistic people who do not believe in the dominion of Allah over the unseen realm. The first kind represents the knowledge that Allah the Almighty provides him with; i.e. the Scripture, wisdom, the Torah and Gospel.

The second kind represents the materially and tangibly witnessed miracles that could not be the work of a human being. Examples on this kind are numerous, such as the biomimicry of a bird shaped out of clay and turned into a living being, the dead brought back to life, the healed blind and the cured leprous. As these miracles breached natural and material laws; therefore, Allah finishes each phrase speaking about one of them by saying, ‘by My leave’. This means that such miracles would not have happened but for Allah’s permission. Whereas, Allah the Exalted does not say ‘by My leave’ in other miracles because it is clear and obvious in other cases that they are done by Allah’s leave, but He specifically adds this phrase to such miracles to clarify to everyone who dignifies and raises `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to a level higher than that of a prophet, that he is a mere messenger aided by Allah. Moreover, this phrase draws the attention of the followers of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him not to be misled by these signs or consider them as distinctions for him alone; but rather, they are nothing but miraculous signs to verify Allah’s Message.

All such miracles breached the materialistic laws of nature; accordingly, Allah repeats that these were done by His leave. This shows that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him did not have absolute use of Allah’s power; but rather, it was exclusively limited to those miracles for which Allah gave permission.

Every time natural law is breached by prophets, pious respected holy people or anyone whom Allah provides with illumination is only meant to honour them. Allah does not supply anyone with the power to have absolute knowledge of the unseen; but rather, He sometimes gifts some of His creatures with partial knowledge of certain secrets. Certainly, Allah has the complete ownership over the unseen, ‘He has the keys to the unseen, no one knows them but Him…’ (al-An’am: 59).

There is no person who has full knowledge of the unseen due to his own power; but rather, Allah teaches him the elements of His unseen knowledge. There are certain impermanent occasions when Allah manifests His grace to authenticate a matter, and then the venerated person goes back to live within the natural laws of Allah’s universe. The natural laws of the universe are the conditions and rules which Allah has established in His universe to serve the believer, the disbeliever, the righteous, and the sinful. Examples on such laws governing the universe are; the rising and the setting of the sun, the movement of rain-bearing clouds and the availability of the cultivable agrarian plots on earth. Natural laws are breached by Allah's leave to provide Messengers, Prophets and pious venerated men with miracles. These signs from Allah are meant to authenticate the conveyable message of the messenger. This authentication granted by Allah is conditioned by two stipulations. The first is that the authenticated people should have reached a high level of skill in the field wherein the miracle takes place; for example, Allah breaches the natural laws for the staff of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him which was originally a tree-branch, and orders him to cast it down, whereupon it turned into a slithering snake. What has been done to the staff was not an act of sorcery, but Allah the Almighty transformed it from one being into another at the time when people excelled in sorcery. It is noticeable that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him felt at peace and attracted to his Lord's company, so he elongated his speech to Him, using a lot of words to enumerate the uses of the staff to make this intimacy last longer, 'It is my staff,' he said, 'I lean on it, restrain my sheep with it…' (Ta Ha: 18). Afterwards, he consciously transferred to the style of paying due attention to reverence and respect, so he summarised his words, saying, '…I also have other uses for it.' (Ta Ha: 18) Subsequently, the command came to cast down the staff, '…Throw it down, Musa (Moses)!' (Ta Ha: 19) Upon this, the staff breached the governing natural laws known by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and was no longer an object used for leaning upon or restraining sheep, but transformed from its wooden state into the animal state and became a snake, 'He threw it down and– lo and behold! – it became a fast-moving snake.' (Ta Ha: 20)

Therefore, it was appropriate that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was astonished and stricken with fear; however, when he knew the secret of his staff, he became no longer terrified, but challenged the sorcerers brought forth by the Pharaoh on the day of the festival. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him acknowledged that he was not a sorcerer like them, but that he had a miracle granted by Allah which would also astonish the sorcerers. The sorcerers recognised that their magic was only an illusion, on the contrary to the miracle brought by Musa (Moses) peace be upon him where Allah the Almighty transforms things. Therefore, the sorcerers came forth on the day of the festival in obedience to the Pharaoh's command. The Quran alludes that the forced labour system was then applied; thus, the sorcerers asked for a reward if they win over Musa (Moses) peace be upon him 'The sorcerers came to Pharaoh and said, "Shall we be rewarded if we win?"' (al-A'raf: 113)

Despite the different talents of the sorcerers and their skill in miscellaneous forms of sorcery, they all admitted the truth and fell prostrate to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him on casting down his staff. The Quran quoted their saying, '…"We believe in the Lord of the Worlds, the Lord of Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron)."' (ash-Shu'ara': 47-48) Thus, they realised that what Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did was not a result of human power; but rather, out of a supernatural power. This was one of the miracles that Allah provides His messengers with to authenticate their messages. Likewise, the people of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him excelled in medicine, but none of them could dare to claim that they could cure the blind and leprous with a single word, or to return the dead back to life. Allah Glorified is He makes miracles easy for His messengers; in Islam, the Night Journey of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from Mecca to Jerusalem took place in the blink of an eye. In modern times, the technological and technical progress has led to inventing rockets traversing quickly a distance such as that between Mecca and Jerusalem; however, such progress has been achieved after painstaking experiments. Conversely, when Allah has ordained this, He only said a mere word and the miracle instantaneously occurred. It should be highlighted that the miracle is not a previously planned-for innovation; but rather, a divinely determined supernatural event. The miracle is a disruption of a natural cosmic law which is determined by Allah the Almighty rather than a result of any innovation, invention, or discovery.

Allah the Almighty consoles `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him by mentioning these miracles, but the disbelievers of his people alleged that they were only works of deceptive sorcery, '…Those of them who disbelieved said, "This is clearly nothing but sorcery."' (al-Ma'ida: 110) It is known that Allah the Exalted created the human being and made faith to be his natural disposition; thus, the more man becomes heedless, the more the faith is lost. This heedlessness led to the state of hardened encrusted hearts (not accepting guidance) due to recurrent committed sins: 'No indeed! Their hearts are encrusted with what they have done.' (al-Mutaffifin: 14) It was narrated that Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with him said: 'Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him narrated to us two Hadiths (Prophetic sayings). I have seen one (become reality), and I am waiting for the other. He told us, "Trustworthiness descended in the innermost (root) of the hearts of people. Then the Quran was revealed and they learnt from the Quran and they learnt from the Sunnah." Then he peace and blessings be upon him told us about the removal of trustworthiness. He said, "Man would have a wink of sleep and trustworthiness would be taken away from his heart leaving the impression of a faint mark. He would again sleep and trustworthiness would be taken away from his heart leaving an impression of a blister, as if you rolled down an ember on your feet, it causes pain, and you see it swollen, while it contains nothing." He peace and blessings be upon him then took up a pebble and rolled it down over his foot and said, "The people would enter into transactions amongst one another and hardly a person would be left who would return things entrusted to him." And there would be a scarcity of honest people till it would be said, "In such and such tribe there is a trustworthy man." And they would also talk about how prudent a person he is, how broad-minded and intelligent he is, whereas in his heart there would not be faith even to the weight of a mustard seed. I have passed through a time in which I did not care with whom amongst you I entered a transaction, for if he were a Muslim his faith would compel him to discharge his obligations to me and if he was a Christian or a Jew, the ruler would compel him to discharge his obligations to me. But today I would not enter into a transaction with you except for so-and-so.'(1)

There is another Hadith narrated by Hudhayfa Allah be pleased with him about the end of trust and the coming of tribulations and ordeals, in which he said, 'We were sitting in the company of 'Umar Allah be pleased with him and he said, "Who amongst you has heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him talking about turmoil?" Some people said, "It is we who heard it." Upon this he remarked, "Perhaps by turmoil you presume the unrest of man regarding his household or neighbour", they replied, "Yes". 'Umar observed and said, “Such (an unrest) would be done away with by prayer, fasting, and charity. But who amongst you has heard from the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him describing that turmoil which would come like the wave of the ocean?” The people hushed into silence, and I replied, “It is I.” He (‘Umar) said, “Ye, well, your father was also very pious. Hudhayfa said,” I heard Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, Temptations will be presented to men’s hearts as reed mat is woven stick by stick, and any heart which is impregnated by them will have a black mark put into it, but any heart which rejects them will have a white mark put in it. The result is that there will become two types of hearts; one white like a white stone which will not be harmed by any turmoil or temptation so long as the heavens and the earth endure; and the other black and dust-coloured like a vessel which is upset, not recognizing what is good or rejecting what is abominable, but being impregnated with passion.” Hudhayfa said, “I narrated to him (‘Umar), “There is between you and that (turmoil) a closed door, but there is likelihood of its being broken.”’ Umar said, “Would it be broken? You have been rendered fatherless. Had it been opened; it would have been perhaps closed also.”(1)

(1) Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi, Ibn Majah and Ahmad

This is how Prophet Muhammad spoke about the ending of trustworthiness and the lack of spiritual immunity in the human soul. Allah Glorified is He wants His servants to have spiritual immunity constantly; therefore, Allah sent messengers to develop this immunity and to help the society restrain every individual’s tendency towards causing temptation.

When corruption spread on earth, we find that Allah sent a messenger to restore the self-reproaching soul and to revive society’s ability to harmonise the conduct of people in the light of Allah’s religion. Therefore, we find that those who resisted the messengers benefited from corruption and its effects. As Allah’s religion gives support to the oppressed, it incurs the wrath of the tyrannical oppressors causing them to attack and resist the messengers and the teachings they conveyed from Allah. The religious teachings would end this corruption which brought benefits and yields to tyrannical and deluded people that they considered tremendous.

(1) Muslim

The leaders of Quraysh opposed Prophet Muhammad's da`wah (call to Allah) because he called for equality among people, and they knew that declaring that there is no deity but Allah and Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah meant that they would lose their power to terrify people and the tribes. If the testimony of faith had been merely a matter of saying the words without any change, they would have said it, but this testimony changed life politically, economically and socially. In addition, no one would oppress any other person, as all people are equal. Therefore, the leaders of Quraysh resisted the Islamic da`wah (call to Allah). Hence, we see that whenever a messenger came, he was opposed and resisted by corrupt and tyrannical people who uphold corruption and tyranny on earth, just as Allah Glorified is He says: 'And thus We have made for every prophet an enemy - devils from mankind and jinn…' (al-An'am: 112). The evidence on this point is Allah's will to start the call to faith during the pre-Islamic era amidst the leaders of all the Arabs, Quraysh whom no one would dare to challenge. However, Muhammad's da'wah (call to Allah) did not gain victory when he was in Mecca, the centre of power. If victory had been gained in the first stage of the da'wah (call to Allah) while Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was still living among his people in Mecca, some people would have said that he gained it by means of people who were accustomed to mastery and desired to rule the whole world, not just the Arabian Peninsula. In addition, Quraysh helped Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only to keep hold of this power and to extend their influence on other people. However, Allah caused the victory of the da`wah (call to Allah) to be achieved in Medina. The earlier Islamic da`wah (call to Allah) was first received by the masters, then it was advocated by the weak and the downtrodden people who could not protect themselves, then they emigrated and Allah made them strong enough to face the powerful people.

We find that everyone who calls to Allah wants to preserve the goodness of prophetic teachings so that hearts do not become corroded; yet, this approach angers the tyrants and deviants who wish to rule the world with their ideas. If the one who calls to Allah does not have any enemies, this means that his share of the prophetic legacy is slight; while if he has many enemies, this means that he has inherited a large share of the prophetic legacy.

When those who disbelieved in `Isa (Jesus) realised the greatness of miracles that occurred to him, they said, '…This is not but obvious magic!' (al-Ma'ida: 110) This means that the miracles of `Isa (Jesus) angered and enraged them and filled them with woe. The saying mentioned in the previous verse was said by people who hated Allah's guidance, so disbelief of the disbelievers is a blessing by which Allah supports the one who calls to Him because this motivates him and encourages him to defend Allah's religion. Accordingly, objection to and resistance of faith highlights the believer's strong belief in the creed in which he believes. Then Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَإِذۡ أَوۡحَيۡتُ إِلَى ٱلۡحَوَارِيِّـۧنَ أَنۡ ءَامِنُواْ بِي وَبِرَسُولِي قَالُوٓاْ ءَامَنَّا وَٱشۡهَدۡ بِأَنَّنَا مُسۡلِمُونَ ١١١

and how I inspired the disciples to believe in Me and My messengers – they said, "We believe and bear witness that we devote ourselves [to God]" [111] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 111)

The word hawari (literally, a person in white clothes) and the intended meaning is a disciple of Prophet `Isa (Jesus) is derived from a concrete concept, as it also literally means plain white flour. In addition, it refers to everything that is extremely pure, and in this verse, it means a sincere person who loves of the religion that enjoins goodness. Allah Glorified is He says in this verse, 'And how I inspired…' (al-Ma'ida: 111). The word awha' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means to inspire and notify discretely, i.e. Allah inspired them to believe in the message which Prophet `Isa (Jesus) conveyed from Allah in the way He inspired Prophet Musa's mother to cast her son into the river so that it would bring him safely to shore. However, this inspiration differs from the revelation received by Allah's messengers, as this revelation is Jibril (Gabriel) who conveyed to the messengers Allah's Law. As for the inspiration received by the mother of Musa (Moses) and the disciples, it was a spiritual notion proven to be true by the person who received it. When the spiritual notion is not contradicted by reality and finds no objection in the human soul, this is a form of inspiration. An example of this case is when a person expects his friend to arrive from a journey or expects a certain kind of food he likes and then finds it on the table.

Inspiration that Allah gives to His living beings does not contradict with the soul or the real world, otherwise, it is not received from Allah, as devils from mankind, and jinn inspire to one another decorative speech in delusion.

Allah inspired the disciples to believe in the message of `Isa (Jesus); therefore, as soon as `Isa (Jesus) came with the message and they heard that he was a messenger from Allah, they declared their belief in him and became his devoted disciples. The Arabic word idh refers to the time of remembering the incident in which the disciples said that they believed in `Isa (Jesus) as a prophet sent by Allah and called him to bear witness that they surrendered themselves to Allah. Then Allah says:

إِذْ قَالَ ٱلْحَوَارِيُّونَ يَٰعِيسَى ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ هَلْ يَسْتَطِيعُ رَبُّكَ أَن يُنَزِّلَ
عَلَيْنَا مَآئِدَةً مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ ۖ قَالَ ٱتَّقُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ إِن كُنتُم مُّؤْمِنِينَ ﴿١١٢﴾

When the disciples said, 'Jesus, son of Mary, can your Lord send down a feast to us from heaven?' he said, 'Beware of God if you are true believers' [112] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 112)

It seems that `Isa (Jesus) told them to fear Allah and not to ask Him for this sign because if they declared faith, they should not ask Allah to show them any sign to prove the truthfulness of His messenger. In addition, they should be satisfied with the signs, which Allah gave `Isa (Jesus) to prove that his message was truly from Him. They also must abide by the instructions of the message that they claimed to believe.

Scholars scrutinised the meaning of Allah's saying, 'hal yastati` rabbuka' (al-Ma'ida: 112), as its apparent meaning is 'can your Lord', and wondered how the disciples could say this although they testified to `Isa (Jesus) that they surrendered to Allah. The scholars also said that if someone wishes to handle language, he must be aware of the words etymologies, different uses, and characteristics. The Arabic word yastati` in this context means yuti` (obey), just as the word `istajaba means ajab (respond). Therefore, they meant to ask, 'Will your Lord respond to us by sending down a feast from Heaven?' So, yastati` (obey) corresponds to yastajib (respond) in this verse. Allah Glorified is He can do all things, and all creatures obey Him and yield to

His decree; in addition, He does not request, rather, He commands, as He says, ‘His command is only when He intends a thing that He says to it, ‘Be, and it is.’ (Ya Sin: 82)

When Allah Glorified is He says to a thing ‘Be’, He knows that it will obey Him, and He will not command it to obey unless it is prepared to respond and come into existence as soon as it hears Allah say, ‘Be’. An example on this meaning is when Allah Glorified is He says, ‘When the sky has split (open, and has responded to its Lord and was obligated (to do so).’ (al-Inshiqaq: 1-2) It waits to hear Allah’s Command which it responds to and obeys. Everything in this universe obeys its Creator.

The meaning of yastati` in this verse may mean ‘will He do’ in which case the purpose is expressed by the means leading to it because ability is how an action is carried out. It was said that the meaning is, ‘Could you ask your Lord to do this without having any impediment?’ Al-Kasa`i and others read the verse as, ‘hal tastati’ rabbaka’ with the word ‘rabbaka’ in the accusative case, meaning ‘Can you ask your Lord’ omitting ‘su`al’ (ask) and putting the word ‘rabbaka’ (Lord) in the accusative case. Az-Zamakhshari said, Allah does not describe them as having sincere faith, but He says that they claim to do, as their saying, “…can your Lord…” (al-Ma’ida: 112), is not supposed to be uttered by any true believers who glorify their Lord.’

The disciples said, as the Quran tells us:

قَالُوا۟ نُرِيدُ أَن نَّأْكُلَ مِنْهَا وَتَطْمَئِنَّ قُلُوبُنَا وَنَعْلَمَ أَن قَدْ
صَدَقْتَنَا وَنَكُونَ عَلَيْهَا مِنَ ٱلشَّٰهِدِينَ ﴿١١٣﴾

They said, ‘We wish to eat from it; to have our hearts reassured; to know that you have told us the truth; and to be witnesses of it’ [113] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 113)

It seems that they wanted to imitate Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him when he asked Allah how He resurrects the dead to reassure his heart. Their faith was based on certain knowledge, but they now wanted to have certainty, so they asked for the feast, which afterwards became a plain reality. Accordingly, we have known that there is a difference between a person believing on his own and bearing witness to his faith before others, as the person who bears witness to faith before others needs deeper certainty.

Allah informs us about what the saying of `Isa (Jesus), which was different from what they said about this feast. Allah Glorified is He says:

قَالَ عِيسَى ٱبْنُ مَرْيَمَ ٱللَّهُمَّ رَبَّنَآ أَنزِلْ عَلَيْنَا مَآئِدَةً مِّنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ تَكُونُ لَنَا
عِيدًا لِّأَوَّلِنَا وَءَاخِرِنَا وَءَايَةً مِّنكَ ۖ وَٱرْزُقْنَا وَأَنتَ خَيْرُ ٱلرَّٰزِقِينَ ﴿١١٤﴾

Jesus, son of Mary, said, 'Lord, send down to us a feast from heaven so that we can have a festival –the first and last of us– and a sign from You. Provide for us: You are the best provider' [114] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 114)

Allah's saying, '…a feast from heaven…' (al-Ma'ida: 114) means that Allah has given many feasts on earth, and certainly the whole world is like a table laden with many bounties which man can attain if he works and strives hard. When a person works and strives to harvest crops from the land and grazes livestock, he may bring his spouse an abundance of flour, rice, honey, sugar and oil which may provide for the family for a whole year and his wife may slaughter a fowl and cook it along with bread and vegetables.

Therefore, the whole world is considered a banqueting table prepared by Allah, from which every person can take per how much he works. The word ma`idah, which is mentioned in the Arabic version of the verse, means a table spread with food. If it contains no food, it is called khawan in Arabic. The root of the word ma`idah is made up of the letters mim, `alif and dal. The verb yamid (shake due to the abundance of food on it) is derived from it. It also refers to the food which it serves, for the word ma`id means 'the person who is given something'. The saying of `Isa (Jesus) is full of worthy values, as he asked Allah to grant them a feast fit for a festival that delights the first and last of them, and to be considered a sign from Him. `Isa (Jesus) also asked the All-Provider to provide for them and he gratefully acknowledged that Allah is the best of providers.

When we compare the saying of `Isa (Jesus) to that of the disciples, we notice the difference between the faith of the person who delivers Allah's message and that of the people who received this message from `Isa (Jesus). The faith of `Isa (Jesus) was strong and mature, while the faith of the disciples was incomplete. The strength of `Isa's (Jesus's) faith came from the fact that he received the message directly from Allah, while this is not the case with the disciples although they believed in the message they received from Allah by means of their messenger. Therefore, the messenger's faith is stronger and greater than that of the believers. Therefore, `Isa (Jesus) corrected their request when he supplicated to his Lord.

`Isa (Jesus) is a chosen and elected messenger. Therefore, he adjusts matters appropriately, saying, 'allahumma rabbana' (O our Lord). The Arabic word allahumma (O Allah) is derived from 'ya Allah', but due to the frequent use of the vocative 'ya', it is dropped and a letter mim is added at the end of the word, forming the word allahumma. This word prepares the human soul for silent supplication to Allah in reverence and confidence that He will answer it. This way of supplication comes from the servant's love for his Lord, as he does not place any vocative particle between himself and his Lord's Name.

We can observe that `Isa (Jesus) began his supplication to Allah by mentioning the attribute of divinity allahumma, as he was a prophet who knew well the manifestations of Allah's attributes, which are manifestations of worship from the worshipped deity to the worshipping person. As for the manifestations of the word rabb (Lord), they are manifestations of sustenance from the Lord to His servants. The difference between Allah's divine bestowal to the living beings and His lordly bestowal is that the divine bestowal is an obligation enjoined by the Worshipped Deity to the worshipping person who obeys all the commands of the Worshipped Deity and avoids all that He forbids. However, the lordly bestowal means that Lord undertakes to sustain bodies, minds, talents and hearts, and He is the Lord of both the believer and the disbeliever, as He sustains the disbelievers even though they deny His divinity; He provides them with the material things on which their lives depend.

Therefore, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says about these disbelievers: 'And if you asked them, "Who created the heavens and earth?" they would surely say, "Allah." Say, "All praise is due to Allah"; but most of them do not know.' (Luqman: 25)

Allah tells His prophet to ask the disbelievers who created the heavens and the earth, and they found no answer other than to say that Allah is the Creator, an answer which is given instinctively. There are many examples on this point in our daily life – to Allah belongs the utmost example of perfection – when children ask who made something, the answers revert to Allah Who bestows in people all bounties. If a child asks his mother, 'What are we going to eat?' And the mother tells him that they are going to eat okra. The child asks' From where?', and the mother says, 'Your father bought it from the vender.' Then the child asks, 'Where did the vender get it from?' And the mother says, 'From the wholesaler.' The child asks, 'Where did the wholesaler get it from?' The mother replies, 'From the farmer who ploughed the earth and planted the okra seeds.' The child asks, 'And who created the earth and made the plants grow?' The mother replies, 'Allah, our Lord, who created everything.'

In her conversation with the child, the mother has reached the answer clarifying our Lord's bestowal which is gained by both the believer and disbeliever. However, the believer gains the divine bestowal in the form of his religious responsibilities, in addition to lordly bestowal. The divine bestowal gives the believers an additional grace which will never run out, as it grants them a time in which they will never die and will never leave the blessings. By adhering to religion, the believer attains the brightness of certainty and interest in doing righteous deeds in accordance with Allah's religion.

`Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), said, supplicating to Allah, '…send down to us a feast from heaven….' (al-Ma'ida: 114) He invoked Allah's divinity first, acknowledging that worship is owed to Allah, and abiding by the obligations He ordains. Then He invoked Allah as Lord, Who sends down religious obligations to them and undertakes their sustenance, to send down to them a feast from Heaven. His invocation dealt with the spiritual values first then the material ones, but the disciples gave precedence to material needs, as they asked for a feast full of different types of food, '…We wish to eat from it, to have our hearts reassured, to know that you have told us the truth and to be witnesses of it.' (al-Ma'ida: 113) Due to the spirituality of `Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), represented in him being selected as a messenger, he gave precedence to spiritual values over food, saying, '…Lord, send down to us a feast from heaven so that we can have a festival – the first and last of us – and a sign from You. Provide for us; You are the best provider.' (al-Ma'ida: 114)

Actually, food represents part of provision, but provision is not only represented in food, as it includes everything one needs and benefits from, as food, drink, clothes, knowledge and forbearance are different types of provision. Therefore, `Isa (Jesus) used a general word which included both food and other things.

Allah answers the supplication of `Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary), saying:

قَالَ ٱللَّهُ إِنِّى مُنَزِّلُهَا عَلَيْكُمْ ۖ فَمَن يَكْفُرْ بَعْدُ مِنكُمْ فَإِنِّىٓ أُعَذِّبُهُۥ
عَذَابًا لَّآ أُعَذِّبُهُۥٓ أَحَدًا مِّنَ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿١١٥﴾

God said, 'I will send it down to you, but anyone who disbelieves after this will be punished with a punishment that I will not inflict on anyone else in the world' [115] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 115)

When Allah uses the Arabic word inny (I), He uses what is called in Arabic nun al-ifrad (singular pronoun). We know that there are two ways in which Allah Glorified is He refers to Himself. When He speaks about His Oneness, He uses the singular pronoun, saying, 'innany ana Allah (Verily, I am Allah)' (Ta Ha: 14).

When Allah Glorified is He speaks about how His Infinite Power encompasses all the attributes of Perfection which are required to bring things into existence, He uses nun al-ta`zhim (plural pronoun), 'Indeed, it is We who sent down the Quran and indeed, We will be its guardian…' (al-Hijr: 9).

Allah Glorified is He wants here to impart the notion of His Oneness; therefore, He says, '…I will send it down to you…' (al-Ma'ida: 115). This means that the feast would come down from Heaven, an action which could not be done by anyone but Allah Glorified is He.

Then Allah says: but anyone who disbelieves after this will be punished with a punishment by which I have not punished anyone among the worlds." (al-Ma'ida: 115) He selects His messengers then sends them, and no servant should say that such-and-such messenger is superior to any other because Allah knows His messengers best: '…Allah is most knowing of where He places His message.…' (al-An'am: 124) And we must follow the messengers. The Noble Quran informs us that some of the people of the pre-Islamic era tried to express their wonder at the Quran which was revealed to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. And they said, "Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from (one of) the two cities?" Do they distribute the mercy of your Lord? It is We who have apportioned among them their livelihood in the life of this world and have raised some of them above others in degrees (of rank) that they may make use of one another for service. But the mercy of your Lord is better than whatever they accumulate.' (az-Zukhruf: 31-32)

The people of the pre-Islamic era wondered why the Quran was not revealed to a great man from Mecca or Ta'if with the intention of mocking Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He gave the final word to rebut this, as no one has the right to choose a messenger from among the people of power or prestige because the messenger is elected by Allah.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He gives each messenger the preparation he requires for his mission and the station of a prophet and messenger is the highest rank in both this life and the Hereafter. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He Who arranges the life affairs of His creatures, has divided talents among His servants out of His Mercy so that they support and aid one another and need the work done by each other. When Allah sent a messenger, He chose a sign appropriate for him and for the time when he was sent. Whenever a people asked for a sign and Allah gave it to them then they disbelieved, Allah inflicted on them painful torment. When the followers of a messenger ask him for specific signs, this implies that they attempt to evade adhering to Allah's religion. In addition, they insist on disbelieving in the messenger although they ask him for signs; therefore, Allah Glorified is He says, 'And nothing has prevented Us from sending signs except that the former peoples denied them. And We gave Thamud the she-camel as a visible sign, but they wronged her. And We send not the signs except as a warning.' (al-Isra': 59)

Likewise, the people of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked him to bring them signs apart from the verses of the Quran even though the verses of the Quran can convince anyone who has a sensible mind and a sensitive heart. Allah’s clear and constant method of dealing with those who ask for signs then disbelieve is to inflict grievous suffering on them. An example of this is the people of Thamud who asked for a she-camel to prove the veracity of the message of Prophet Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him then disbelieved after the miracle occurred, so Allah punished them severely.

Some of the people around Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went too far in requesting strange signs: ‘And they say, “We will not believe you until you break open for us from the ground a spring. Or (until) you have a garden of palm trees and grapes and make rivers gush forth within them in force (and abundance). Or you make the heaven fall upon us in fragments as you have claimed or you bring Allah and the angels before us. Or you have a house of gold or you ascend into the sky. And (even then), we will not believe in your ascension until you bring down to us a book we may read.” Say, “Exalted is my Lord! Was I ever but a human messenger?”’ (al-Isra’: 90-93)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was merciful with his family and kinsfolk, so he did not ask Allah for any signs other than the ones which Allah sent to him. Prophet `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him supplicated Allah in a polite manner appropriate for messengers to send a feast down. The scholars differ concerning whether Allah Glorified and Exalted is He sent this feast down or not. Some of them stayed with Allah’s saying, ‘Allah said, “I will send it down to you…”’ (al-Ma’ida: 115), while others say that Allah Glorified is He set a condition for sending down the feast inflicting torment on them if they did not believe thereafter, so they retracted their request for the feast. Those who agree that the feast was sent down disagree regarding its description. Some of them say that the feast consisted of a grilled fish that had neither scales nor lateral line. Other scholars said that the feast consisted of five loaves of bread, on each of which there was something known to them; the fist had honey, the second had olives, the third had butter, the fourth had cheese and the fifth had dried meat.

Then Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِذْ قَالَ ٱللَّهُ يَٰعِيسَى ٱبْنَ مَرْيَمَ ءَأَنتَ قُلْتَ لِلنَّاسِ ٱتَّخِذُونِى وَأُمِّىَ إِلَٰهَيْنِ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ
قَالَ سُبْحَٰنَكَ مَا يَكُونُ لِىٓ أَنْ أَقُولَ مَا لَيْسَ لِى بِحَقٍّ ۚ إِن كُنتُ قُلْتُهُۥ فَقَدْ عَلِمْتَهُۥ ۚ تَعْلَمُ مَا
فِى نَفْسِى وَلَآ أَعْلَمُ مَا فِى نَفْسِكَ ۚ إِنَّكَ أَنتَ عَلَّٰمُ ٱلْغُيُوبِ ﴿١١٦﴾

When God says, 'Jesus, son of Mary, did you say to people, "Take me and my mother as two gods alongside God"?' he will say, 'May You be exalted! I would never say what I had no right to say – if I had said such a thing You would have known it: You know all that is within me, though I do not know what is within You, You alone have full knowledge of things unseen [116] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 116)

We know that this is the dialogue which will take place between Allah Glorified is He and `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary), on the day when Allah will gather all the messengers:' (Be warned of) the Day when Allah will assemble the messengers and say, "What was the response you received?" They will say, "We have no knowledge. Indeed, it is You who is Knower of the unseen."' (al-Ma'ida: 109)

Someone may ask why Allah Glorified and Exalted is He speaks about this dialogue in the past tense, although it will take place in the future. 'And (beware the Day) when Allah will say, "O `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary), did you say to the people, "Take me and my mother as deities besides Allah?"' (al-Ma'ida: 116)

We know that every event has a certain time and place, and the time of this event will be on the Day of Judgement and the place will be on the plain of which all creatures will be gathered. Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of all times and places, so He can speak about any event in any tense He likes, as He created the past, the present and the future, and everyone and everything He created is under His control. Allah is Eternal beyond the measure of time, and Self-Subsistent. However, the matter differs for them regarding time, since all our actions take place within one of three times. The past tense which means that the event ended before the time of speaking such as 'Zayd met me' means that the action is finished and completed. The second tense is the present which means that the action is still underway and happening now such as 'Zayd is meeting me' which means that the action is taking place now. This means that the eye is seeing Zayd right now; and the eye is the best witness. The third tense is the future which means that an action will happen, such as ‘Zayd will meet me’. In this case, a person cannot be completely sure that he will do the action, nor can he be sure that nothing will happen to the person he wants to meet preventing the meeting, and nor can he be sure that the reason for the meeting will continue to exist. Therefore, when the future is concerned, one cannot be certain of anything because he does not possess the necessary means to ensure that the action will occur, but only Allah Glorified and Exalted is He possesses them. Accordingly, the Quran teaches us to be honest when we speak of the future, saying, ‘And never say of anything, “Indeed, I will do that tomorrow” Except (when adding), “If Allah wills…”’ (al-Kahf: 23-24).

Man must consider his limited power and always remember the infinite power Allah has over him. This does not mean that Allah forbids us from planning for the future, rather, He orders us to plan and consider all the possibilities, and to say, ‘If Allah wills’ because by doing this, we defer to the will of the One Who has dominion over all things.

Some of the orientalists who oppose Islam have tried to arouse the Muslims ‘suspicions regarding their religion, asking why certain verbs in the verses of the Quran are not placed in the tenses which reflect their temporal occurrence, such as when Allah Glorified is He says, ‘Allah’s Judgement is coming, so do not ask to bring it on sooner. Exalted is He and high above what they associate with Him.’ (an-Nahl: 1)

They say that this statement is about the Day of Resurrection, so why does Allah refer to it using the past tense (in the Arabic text of the verse), especially when He says afterwards, ‘…so do not ask to bring it on sooner…’ (an-Nahl: 1). Asking to bring something on sooner means that it has not happened yet. Therefore, they say that it seems that there is a contradiction in this verse. We say in response that this saying has been said by Allah Glorified and Exalted is He not man whose actions are subject to certain tenses; the One speaking is the Master of all times and places. When Allah Glorified is He says, ‘`ata `amr Allah’ (Allah’s Judgement is coming…) (an-Nahl: 1), this means that Allah’s judgement is bound to come without any doubt because there is no power which can prevent it from coming. Allah’s actions are free from the restraints of time and place. For example, in Allah's saying, 'kana Allah ghafuran rahima' (And ever is Allah Forgiving and Merciful) (an-Nisa': 100), Allah uses the past tense, but this does not mean that the time of Allah's forgiveness and grace has elapsed, rather, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful in all times even before the existence of any person; therefore, He will remain Forgiving and Merciful after the creation of those who deserve forgiveness and mercy. Allah is Extermely Exalted to be subject to events or to be changed by them because time is created by Allah. Therefore, when Allah is concerned, we should not ask about the time or the place. Allah uses the past tense when referring to some events that have not occurred to affirm that they will happen because when Allah informs us that something will happen, it will inevitably take place.

Whenever Allah speaks about Prophet 'Isa, (Jesus) peace be upon him He emphasises that he is the son of Maryam (Mary). In this verse, Allah asks `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him saying, '…did you say to the people, "Take me and my mother as deities besides Allah?"' (al-Ma'ida: 116) We know that questions are always asked for one of two reasons: there are questions which one asks to learn something he does not know such as if he says, 'Did so-and-so meet you yesterday?' and there are questions which one does not ask to learn something, but rather to make the one he questions affirm something. For example – and the utmost example belongs to Allah – the pupil asks his teacher questions to learn from him so that the teacher gives him new information. The teacher also asks the pupil questions to induce the correct answer from him and to affirm that he is right so that the pupil retains the information. Allah's question to `Isa (Jesus) is of the latter kind; this may be proof against those who say that `Isa (Jesus) is a god or the son of Allah. Some of the orientalists tried to raise doubts about the Quran by saying it contains contradictions – we seek refuge with Allah – and they support their opinion by quoting Allah's saying, 'And stop them; indeed, they are to be questioned.' (as-Saffat: 24) In this verse, Allah affirms that everyone will be asked about his deeds and his beliefs. But in another verse in the Noble Quran, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Then on that Day none will be asked about his sin among men or jinn.' (ar-Rahman: 39)

Does this mean that they will not be asked? No, they indeed will be asked so that they will acknowledge what they have done, not for Allah to know what they have done, as He knows all things. Those orientalists do not know that in Arabic a question may have one of two purposes: For the questioner to attain knowledge or for the one questioned to acknowledge a certain matter. When Allah asks the people on the Day of Resurrection, He intends to make them acknowledge and confess what they have done, as confession is the strongest evidence. Allah will not ask them to gain knowledge, as He is All Knowing. Every person must not trespass his limits regarding Allah, an action which was followed by `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary). Therefore, the question which Allah poses in this verse to `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is meant as a rebuke and an admonition for those who fabricated lies and sayings which `Isa (Jesus) never told them.

`Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him never asked them to take him and his mother as gods beside Allah because `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) only conveyed what his Lord revealed to him. Therefore, `Isa's response will refute his followers, '…He will say, "Exalted are You! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right...."' (al-Ma'ida: 116) The saying, '…Exalted are You…' (al-Ma'ida: 116) means that Allah is so Exalted as to resemble any of the created beings. Man should know that Allah's existence differs from his existence, as Allah's existence is intrinsic, while man is created by Allah Who has given everything to him. Therefore, Allah is Free of need and dispenses with all creatures in a manner unparalleled by man, and the source of man's richness and bounties is Allah. In addition, man's attributes do not resemble Allah's Attributes, as He has absolute Omnipotence; therefore, man must understand everything related to Allah in the light of the fact that He is Extremely Exalted and there is nothing like unto Him.

This is the nature of the exaltation which `Isa (Jesus) proclaims for his Lord and Creator. '...It was not for me to say that to which I have no right...' (al-Ma'ida: 116) as he knows that no messenger chosen by Allah has the right to call himself a deity and adds an undisputable fact, '…If I had said it, You would have known it…' (al-Ma'ida: 116) because everyone agrees that Allah knows all the words and deeds of His servants as in: 'He knows the most furtive of glances, and of all that hearts conceal.' (Ghafir: 19) Everyone knows that Allah is so highly Exalted to receive new information which he has not known before, and that He knows the secrets of the heart. Therefore, `Isa (Jesus) says, '…You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself…' (al-Ma'ida: 116) affirming that Allah Who knows everything, knows that claiming that he and his mother are deities never crossed his mind; therefore, three different ideas are given in this verse. The first idea is found in His saying, '…Exalted are You! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right…' (al-Ma'ida: 116) in which `Isa (Jesus) declares his Lord's exaltation. The second idea is found in `Isa's (Jesus's) words, '…If I had said it, You would have known it…' (al-Ma'ida: 116). The third idea is, '…You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself…' (al-Ma'ida: 116). Therefore, Isa (Jesus) did not say the fabricated saying which his followers said. A person may ask, 'What is within the self'? It is the matters which are kept secret because sometimes the Arabic word nafs means the entire self, comprising both soul and body; when it is used to refer to Allah's Self, we regard it so highly Exalted to be divided into parts, and we know that His Self must be understood in the light of His Exaltation. For example, Allah says, '…He has decreed upon Himself mercy…' (al-An'am: 54).

When the word nafs (self) is used in connection with Allah, we should understand that it is so highly Exalted to be like that of human beings. In addition, Allah's Face is not like a human face, as we must understand it in the light of '...There is nothing like unto Him…' (ash-Shura: 11). The same is true of Allah's Hand and all His Attributes. We also know that Allah has Names, some of which He has taught us while He has taught some of His servants other Names and has not taught some of them to any of His servants. There are certain attributes which are applied to Allah simply for the sake of rhetoric, such as Allah's saying: 'Indeed, the hypocrites (think to) deceive Allah, but it is Allah Who causes them to be deceived…' (an-Nisa': 142). We can never say that Allah is a deceiver, but this attribute is used here in a rhetorical sense because it corresponds with the words, '…seek to deceive Allah…' (an-Nisa': 142). Therefore, we cannot derive a Name of Allah from it; rather, it is only used to respond to what was done by the enemies of Allah.

`Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them ends his statement saying, '…it is You who is All Knowing of the unseen.' (al-Ma'ida: 116) The word `allam (All Knowing) is a hyperbolic adjective which implies the frequency of an action. Allah Glorified is He knows the hidden secrets of everyone and everything in His creation. The Quran tells us the response of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him which comprehensively denies the claims of those who said such fabrications.

The Quran continues to inform us about what `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him said to refute the claims made by some of his followers, saying:

مَا قُلْتُ لَهُمْ إِلَّا مَآ أَمَرْتَنِى بِهِۦٓ أَنِ ٱعْبُدُوا۟ ٱللَّهَ رَبِّى وَرَبَّكُمْ ۚ وَكُنتُ عَلَيْهِمْ شَهِيدًا مَّا
دُمْتُ فِيهِمْ ۖ فَلَمَّا تَوَفَّيْتَنِى كُنتَ أَنتَ ٱلرَّقِيبَ عَلَيْهِمْ ۚ وَأَنتَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ شَهِيدٌ ﴿١١٧﴾

I told them only what You commanded me to: "Worship God, my Lord and your Lord." I was a witness over them during my time among them. Ever since You took my soul, You alone have been the watcher over them: You are witness to all things [117] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 117)

While speaking to his Lord Glorified and Exalted is He, `Isa (Jesus) presents the teachings which he brought to all people and fully conveyed; he informed them that he was the servant and messenger of Allah. Since Allah has full knowledge of all things, even that which one keeps secret within himself, this affirms that none of these thoughts ever crossed `Isa's (Jesus's) mind, as he announced that he only conveyed what Allah commanded him to convey.

'I said not to them except what You commanded me; to worship Allah, my Lord and your Lord. And I was a witness over them as long as I was among them; but when You took me up, You were the Observer over them, and You are, over all things, Witness.' (al-Ma'ida: 117) The witness is the one who sees something without influencing it in any way. `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) peace be upon them says, '…but when You took me up, You were the Observer over them...' (al-Ma'ida: 117). We have already tackled how Allah took `Isa's (Jesus's) soul and raised him to Himself. However, I will add some more thoughts about this now because I view that anyone who reads or receives these thoughts has the right to find a sufficient summary that enables him to dispense of referring to what was said previously. Therefore, these notions can be connected in the reader's mind.

The way in which `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was born caused a lot of clamour, as did the way in which he died. Allah caused those who intended to kill `Isa (Jesus) to think that they actually killed him. When they wanted to kill him, he entered through a small door set into a larger one, which was the way the doors of houses were designed. There was a main door for bringing large things into the house, another smaller door set into the main door which was large enough for people to enter, and an opening in the ceiling of this house. When a man named Titianus entered the house in search of `Isa (Jesus), `Isa (Jesus) looked up and found himself being raised upward. The people felt Titianus delayed; when he came out they said, 'If this is Titianus, then where is `Isa (Jesus)? If this is `Isa (Jesus), then where is Titianus?'

They became confused when Allah made Titianus resemble `Isa (Jesus), or when those people went to get `Isa (Jesus), he was accompanied by his disciples to whom he said, 'Which of you will accept to resemble me and will be admitted to paradise?' Each of the disciples knew that they did not have a message to convey as `Isa (Jesus) did, and so what could any of them wish for himself more than paradise? Judas Iscariot came forward and the appearance of the Messiah was cast onto him, then the Jews killed him. Perhaps the people who wanted to kill `Isa (Jesus) knew that he had been raised up and feared that the story of how he was raised up would spread among the people and they would believe in him, so they got someone else and killed him. Another probable suggestion is that the one they killed was one of those who betrayed `Isa (Jesus), then he felt remorse at what he had done, so he sacrificed his own life for the messenger.

As we know, when Allah takes someone's soul, this means that He takes it as a whole without allowing his body to be destroyed by an act of killing. As Muslims, we know that Allah raised Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him during the Night Journey and Ascension up to the heavens, then he returned afterwards to complete his message. Therefore, we can easily believe that Allah raised up `Isa (Jesus) and took his soul, i.e. He took him as a whole without causing his body to be destroyed, and he will return to pray behind a person who believes in Allah and Muhammad, His Messenger.

In Islam, the raising up of a person can be accepted and believed, as Allah raised up His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him during the Ascension Journey. He conversed with Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him, Yahya (John) peace be upon him, Adam peace be upon him and other prophets. During this journey, Allah made the prayer obligatory for Muslims. Therefore, we completely accept and believe that a person may be raised wholly to the heavens; as for the question of whether he spends a long or short time up there, this does not contradict the principle.

As for the notion that Jesus's descent back to earth will be tied to the coming of the Last Hour, the texts of the Noble Quran regarding this matter suggest it without definite declaration. In addition, this matter is mentioned in the Sunnah, but it is not among the well-established and known Islamic principles, so we cannot say that those who refuse to understand it are regarded disbelievers. Allah is merciful with mankind. Therefore, if something is difficult for the mind to understand and does not add any new religious ruling, Allah presents it in a form which cannot cause any temptation. Believing that `Isa (Jesus) was raised up will not add or disprove any ruling. Therefore, Allah has tackled the event of the Night Journey with a decisive and clear Quranic text, while the Ascension Journey is not explicitly mentioned in the Quran as it is only alluded to when Allah Glorified is He says, 'And he certainly saw him in another descent. At the Lote Tree of the Utmost Boundary. Near it is the Garden of Refuge.' (an-Najm: 13-15)

The Night Journey took place on earth, whereas the Ascension Journey took place in the heavens. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him could prove the Night Journey as it took place on earth, as he described Jerusalem for his people when he returned. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Exalted is He who took His Servant by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa, whose surroundings We have blessed, to show him of Our signs. Indeed, He is the Hearing, the Seeing…' (al-Isra': 1). Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him described the caravans which he saw on the way back.

As for the raising up of `Isa (Jesus), it is alluded to in the Quran without a clear statement about the way it took place. Those who see that it was the work of Allah's Omnipotent Power believe it; as for those who find it hard to believe, this does not take them out of the fist of Islam and faith. When we reflect on literal meaning of the word tawaffaitany which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse, we will find that it means 'cause to die'. Allah Glorified is He says, '…Say, "The angel of death will take you who has been entrusted with you. Then to your Lord you will be returned.…"' (as-Sajda: 11) Allah Glorified and Exalted is He also says, 'Allah takes the souls at the time of their death, and those that do not die (He takes) during their sleep. Then He keeps those for which He has decreed death and releases the others for a specified term…' (az-Zumar: 42). In this verse Allah calls sleep wafah and mawt (literally death), which involve releasing and withholding. Death in some aspects involves the absence of sensation, and the person who sleeps is absent from sensation; this means that wafah may refer to sleep. The same word means repaying a debt in full. As for the matter of the murder of `Isa (Jesus), Allah Glorified and Exalted is He, gave the final word on the matter, '…and they did not kill him, nor did they crucify him; but (another) was made to resemble him to them….' (an-Nisa': 157)

We also know that death is different from killing, as Allah says, '…So if he was to die or be killed…' (Al-'Imran: 144). Death means the exit of the soul from the body, while the physical body remains intact; on the other hand, killing means destroying the body so that the soul leaves it. Allah mentions in the Quran that `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him said, 'falamma tawaffaytanti' (when you took my soul) (al-Ma'ida: 117). This means that he was taken as a whole, a matter which does not contradict the fact that he was raised up. This matter will be discussed by `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) and Allah on the Day of Resurrection; and the Quran states it in this verse to affirm the sincerity of faith. `Isa (Jesus) says about himself that he was only a witness over his people during the time in which he lived among them, but after Allah raised him up to Himself, Allah is the only watcher over them, as He can constantly witness, watch, change and prevent matters, while `Isa (Jesus), as a human being, can only witness. Allah informs us what `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary), will say next:

إِن تُعَذِّبۡهُمۡ فَإِنَّهُمۡ عِبَادُكَۖ وَإِن تَغۡفِرۡ لَهُمۡ فَإِنَّكَ أَنتَ ٱلۡعَزِيزُ ٱلۡحَكِيمُ ﴿١١٨﴾

and if You punish them, they are Your servants; if You forgive them, You are the Almighty, the Wise' [118] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 118)

Someone may say that some of the followers of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him claimed that he had told them to take him and his mother as deities beside Allah, so how could `Isa (Jesus) ask Allah to forgive them in this verse? The answer is that `Isa (Jesus) does not say, 'O Lord, forgive them', but he says, 'If You should punish them - indeed they are Your servants; but if You forgive them, indeed it is You who is the Exalted in Might, the Wise.' (al-Ma'ida: 118) This means that `Isa (Jesus) leaves the matter up to the omnipotent Will of Allah; as a messenger of Allah, he knows that His Mercy has preceded His Wrath, and that He possesses Omnipotent Power which cannot be restrained because His Will is Omnipotent.

We know that all of Allah's creatures are His `abid (slaves) as they are compelled by His Omnipotence, but only those who obey and believe in Allah are His `ibad (servants). We also know that even the disbeliever does not disbelieve in Allah against Allah's Will, but he disbelieves by means of his freed will, that Allah gives him to choose whether to have faith or not. Allah can create living beings that never disobey His commands and do whatever He orders them to do; this is what He did when He created the angels.

But Allah's Omnipotence proves His attribute 'the All Compelling', but is not relevant to love, as love only comes when the creature is free to choose whether to believe or disbelieve, then chooses to believe. Accordingly, he believes out of love, not by compulsion; this is what Allah wants from His believing servants. Everything in the universe apart from man is compelled and cannot disobey Allah such as the sun, the moon, the rain, the wind, the clouds and everything else.

Therefore, if Allah wants creatures that are compelled to have faith in Him, none of His creatures will be able to disbelieve in him. However, Allah wants to prove His attribute of compulsion on all beings apart from man, while He has given man the freedom to choose between disbelief and faith so that some of His servants do what Allah loves and pleases Him by following

His religion. They know that Allah does not hold them responsible for anything which is beyond their capability such as death and sickness. He does not hold the one who has lost his mind accountable for his deeds, nor does He hold the person who has not yet reached adullthood accountable for his deeds. Religious obligations apply under three conditions: having a sound mind, having a mature mind which is attained after adulthood and the absence of any power that threatens his life and forces him to do a certain act. Thus, we know that there are three kinds of people who are not held legally accountable for their deeds: insane people, children who have not reached adulthood and those who are compelled to a certain action. Along with legal accountability, Allah has given rewards for obedience and punishment for disobedience; therefore, no one has the right to argue with Allah. Those who obey Allah and perform their religious obligations are `ibad (servants) of Allah and those who disobey Allah and do not perform their religious obligations are `abid (slaves) who are compelled to do all things except for the religious obligations for which they have been given choice.

The 'ibad (servants) of Allah are those who give preponderance to faith over disbelief; i.e. they give preponderance to Allah's Commands. Therefore, why did `Isa (Jesus) son of Maryam (Mary) say, 'If You should punish them - indeed they are Your servants…' (al-Ma'ida: 118), although He knows that they are disbelievers? The meanings of `ibad (servants) and `abid' (slaves), which we have just explained, applies to man's situation in this worldly life and his obligations therein, but the dialogue we are now tackling will take place between `Isa (Jesus) and Allah Glorified and Exalted is He in the Hereafter in which all people will be servants obeying Allah.

The word `ibad (servants) refers to the elected elite who have preferred obedience to Allah's Commands to their own desire so that they have become completely submissive to Allah. For example, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'And the servants of the Beneficent Allah are they who walk on the earth in humbleness…' (al-Furqan: 63). In this verse, Allah states the praiseworthy characteristics of these elite servants that Satan himself announces his inablity to tempt the sincere servants, as the Noble Quran states: 'Except, among them, Your devoted servants.' (Sad: 83) However, in the Hereafter all people will be `ibad (servants). Allah will address those who led others astray saying, '…Did you mislead these, My servants…'? (al-Furqan: 17)

All people will be subject to Allah's will. No one will have any control even over his own body parts. The eye which was under the control of Allah's servant in the worldly life, obeying his will to look at what is lawful or unlawful, will not be subject to Allah's slave on the Day of Resurrection. The same is true of the hand, the tongue, the skin, the feet and the rest of the body. In this worldly life, man controls his body parts as they obey his commands whether good or evil and whether they involve obedience or disobedience. However, on the Day of Resurrection, these body parts will be set free to bear witness to all that their owner has done with them, and none will have any will except Allah: '…To whom belongs (all) sovereignty this Day? To Allah, the One, the All-Compelling.' (Ghafir: 16)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah will persist; with this all men will become Allah's servants. Consequently, there is nothing strange about `Isa's (Jesus's) words: '…if You punish them, they are Your servants…' (al-Ma'ida: 118). We also know that this 'slavery' signifies us all when associated with involuntary actions such as breathing, birth, and death. But the believers rise from this state of 'slavery' to a state of 'servant-hood' just by following Allah's path. On the other hand, the disbelievers and sinners disobey Allah using their 'free will', where they choose to willingly disobey Allah's path. Allah afflicts the disbelievers with illnesses, poverty and deep-seated psychological pains, and none of them have the least ability to contravene Allah's will in those things which afflict them; this proves that we are all nothing but 'helpless slaves' of Allah. That is why the believers thank the True Lord Glorified is He for their free choice since by means of this free choice, Allah safeguards our existence, our maturity and our freedom.

As we have said before, we need to be aware that on the Day of Resurrection, we shall all become servants of Allah, and none of us will have a will of his own, and Allah's will shall prevail. The True Lord Glorified is He conveys to us the words of `Isa (Jesus), son of Mary peace be upon them '…and if You punish them, they are Your servants; if You forgive them, You are the Almighty, the Wise' (al-Ma'ida: 118) not as an apology from `Isa (Jesus), or as an attempt to ask mercy for those who disbelieved in Allah and ascribed partners to Him. Allah the Almighty and All-Wise is the One Who cannot be overcome, and whom no power can dominate, hence no power can protect these people from the All-Powerful and Almighty Allah. Likewise, if He wills to forgive them, nothing can forestall His will.

Some of the superficial people who look for mistakes in the Quran say, 'Would it not have been more appropriate for `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to just say, 'If You forgive them, then You alone are forgiving and merciful?' To them we say; every word in the Quran has a specific meaning, and hence every meaning in the Quran recalls a specific word. Therefore, the closing part of the verse had to use words to highlight Allah's absolute power in choosing whether to punish them or forgive them; for if He chooses to punish them, then no other power could protect them from His punishment, and if He chooses to forgive them, then no power could question Him about forgiving them despite being disbelievers. Allah cannot be questioned about what He does because He is Almighty and Wise.

As for the claim that it would have been more appropriate to say, 'You alone are forgiving and merciful', we say that these attributes could well address '...and if You forgive them…' (al-Ma'ida: 118), but not 'and if You punish them…' (al-Ma'ida: 118). That is why the verse had to come with the attributes which address both, 'and if You punish them…' (al-Ma'ida: 118) and '...and if You forgive them…' (al-Ma'ida: 118).

The True Lord Glorified is He then says:

قَالَ ٱللَّهُ هَٰذَا يَوْمُ يَنفَعُ ٱلصَّٰدِقِينَ صِدْقُهُمْ ۚ لَهُمْ جَنَّٰتٌ تَجْرِى مِن تَحْتِهَا
ٱلْأَنْهَٰرُ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَآ أَبَدًا ۚ رَّضِىَ ٱللَّهُ عَنْهُمْ وَرَضُوا۟ عَنْهُ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ ٱلْفَوْزُ ٱلْعَظِيمُ ﴿١١٩﴾

God will say, 'This is a Day when the truthful will benefit from their truthfulness. They will have Gardens graced with flowing streams, there to remain for ever. God is pleased with them and they with Him: that is the supreme triumph' [119] (The Quran, al-Ma'ida: 119)

We know that there will be two types of truthfulness on Judgment Day; a type which brings benefit since it comes in continuation to the truthfulness of this life; and a type which will bring no benefit like the type which Iblis, the accursed, describes as being' a false promise' by contrast with the 'truthful' promise Allah made. This latter type of truthfulness will not benefit anyone because the Hereafter is not an abode of moral responsibility. As for the truthfulness of this life, it is embodied by the words of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him '...if I had said such a thing You would have known it...' (al-Ma'ida: 116). Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says of this kind of truthfulness, '…This is a Day when the truthful will benefit from their truthfulness….' (al-Ma'ida: 119) On Judgment Day, the truthfulness of those who have been true to their word during this mundane life, that is to say in the time of moral responsibility, will help them attain unto Allah's goodly acceptance where '...They will have gardens graced with flowing streams, there to remain for ever. Allah is pleased with them and they with Him…' (al-Ma'ida: 119).

But someone might ask, 'How can the servant be well-pleased with his Lord'? We say that when the believing servants see the reward prepared for them in the Hereafter, they will be filled with joy and will send all due praise to Allah Who has made His promise to them come true, and Who has bestowed upon them all this bliss so that they may dwell in paradise as they please.

This verse describes the day in which the truthfulness shall benefit all who have been true to their word by saying, '…that is the supreme triumph.' (al-Ma'ida: 119) It is as though there is a superficial triumph, and a supreme triumph. The superficial triumph is the fleeting pleasure which a man gives to himself in the abode of moral responsibility. It makes him feel as though he has triumphed when in fact he has not. The supreme triumph is one that is not followed by regret because any pleasure followed by regret is not a triumph. All the delights of the world are measured per the scale of each person's potentials and imagination. Two things impend such joys: their loss – and we saw many people losing their joy that they used to enjoy – or the death of the one enjoying them, and we also see this the whole time. As for the joys associated with the supreme triumph, they persist perpetually without any interruption.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the chapter of al-Ma'ida by saying:

لِّلَّهِ مُلْكُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَمَا فِيهِنَّ ۚ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ قَدِيرٌۢ ﴿١٢٠﴾

Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to God: He has power over all things [120] (The Quran, al-Ma’ida: 120)

The heavens and the earth are the two containers of existence for all beings; constellations, planets, the sun, moons, stars, air, clouds, water, animals and men. The earth which is the lower dominion we see before us comprises all nourishment, and the heavens and all that they comprise is in the higher dominion. Allah has ownership and dominion over both since He has dominion over all things, and He has dominion over all those who own the things. The True Lord’s words, ‘Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to Allah…’ (al-Ma’ida: 120) compliment the words which `Isa (Jesus) son of Mary peace be upon them spoke before, ‘and if you punish them, they are your servants; if you forgive them, you are the Almighty*,* the Wise.’ (al-Ma’ida: 118). This means that none of Allah’s creatures can escape His will. As for this life, Allah has placed its means in the hands of mankind so that the provision of one man can be in the hand of another; and He has placed the affairs of some of us in the possession of others; so some of us possess food and others possess clothes etc. But not every maalik (owner) is a sovereign malik, as the sovereign is the one who has dominion over those who own things, and such are the laws which Allah laid in the universe. In the Hereafter, there will be only one owner; the Owner of Judgement Day. So, it is as though the True Lord Glorified is He ends this chapter by telling us about the end of life since He started it by telling us about His rulings: ‘…fulfil your obligations. Livestock animals are lawful as food for you…’ (al-Ma’ida: 1).

He tells us first about the laws of hunting on land and in the sea, about the beasts which are lawful to eat, about marriage and about all that is connected to the affairs of life; and He placed the affairs of some of us in the possession of others. But on Judgement Day, everything will be different. He begins the chapter with a commandment, ‘…fulfil your obligations...’ (al-Ma’ida: 1), and when a commandment is issued by the Supreme Commander, the one who receives this commandment can either obey it or disobey it, for there are people who believe and others who disbelieve. This means that those who receive the command have a free will, and had the commandment been intended to be obeyed without choice; the Commander would have created mankind with the natural disposition of obeying, thus compelling them. But the Supreme Commander left these commandments up to mankind's free will; they can obey and be true to their covenant, or they can disobey.

Allah Glorified is He starts the chapter in the context of the human race's free will, which Allah created giving way to moral responsibility. He then affirms that this free will has a limited life span and that it will come to an end, where Allah will gather all mankind on a Day when the truthfulness shall benefit all who have been true to their word; and hence all will belong to Allah.

Allah Glorified is He ends the chapter by saying, 'Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to Allah...' (al-Ma'ida: 120). That is, He has dominion over the whole universe; and as we know, the universe is composed of several types of creations. The first type in the universe is the one which serves and is not served such as the elements or inanimate objects like water, mountains, iron, the sun, the moon, or the stars; these are all inanimate objects which have no senses. These inanimate objects mainly serve the plants, and the plants serve the animals and the animals serve man. Hence, all these beings which serve man have no free will and are all compelled to serve man. The sun has never refused to give mankind its heat despite their aggression, nor do the beasts which carry our burdens rebel against their masters.

Man, on the other hand, has two aspects. One aspect of him is compelled by the True Lord Glorified is He; so we can neither influence nor control this aspect such as our propensity to sickness or death which is something we have in common with plants and animals. Then there is the aspect in which man has a free will, namely whether to follow Allah's religion or not. If we consider the side wherein the True Lord Glorified is He compels man, we find that it is for man's own good. A person does not choose to breathe, nor drive the blood in his veins, and nor does he compel his kidneys to work. He is compelled when it comes to these things. It is an act of mercy from Allah to compel and control His creatures in these aspects, rather than grant them control over their own breathing or heartbeats. So, man is only free in matters related to moral responsibility. It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He were reminding man that free will is a covenant between the believer and his Lord because the free will of man will be taken from him on Judgement Day, and all of Allah's servants will be compelled, and the 'will' of mankind will be reduced to that of plants and animals. There then 'Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to Allah: He has power over all things.' (al-Ma'ida: 120)

On Judgement Day, man will lose his free will. The True Lord Glorified is He uses the Arabic word ma (everything) here which literally means 'whatever' and is used for non-sentient beings that do not have free will. (In the case of sentient beings, it would mean 'whoever'.) It is as though intelligence has a role to play in this worldly life, namely the ability to choose between alternatives, but in the Hereafter all will be equal before the Creator. We spoke before about the difference between the words mulk and malakut; we can also read the words of Allah when He said that He gave Ibrahim (Abraham) insight into His mighty malakut (dominion) over the heavens and the earth: 'And thus did we show Ibrahim (Abraham) the realm of the heavens and the earth that he would be among the certain (in faith).' (al-An'am: 75) It is as though the True Lord Glorified is He were alerting us to the fact that the world contains things which fall under the cognisance of sensory perception, and those which do not. All that falls under the cognisance of sensory perception is the dominion of mulk, whilst all that which does not is the dominion of malakut. We know nothing of the dominion of malakut save that which Allah tells us, and there are also things in the dominion of mulk which Allah conceals from us; and He Alone has the power to do all things. The True Lord Glorified is He asks us to reflect on the singularity of the hidden dominion, and He tells us that He has complete knowledge of it, i.e. the hidden things beyond the occult. Both the mulk and malakut exist in this life and the Hereafter, but the mulk is visible, whilst the malakut is occult.

The True Lord Glorified is He provides the means of domination and possession (also mulk)) in this life to some of His creatures, but still He maintains domination over all that is in our hands and all that is hidden from us. The True Lord Glorified is He also terminates any justification for man's status of vicegerent over man by saying, ‘Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to Allah...’ (al-Ma’ida: 120). So, Allah has the ultimate control, and the servants of Allah have been given some control which materializes in the ostensible attribution of things to their causes in this life. But on Judgement Day, everything will be in the Hands of Allah.

But why does the True Lord Glorified is He say, ‘and everything in them’ (using the word ma which literally means ‘whatever’ and not ‘whoever’) even though the True Lord Glorified is He made man His vicegerent on earth, and man is a sentient being who would usually therefore be given priority over non-sentient beings? Why did He not say ‘wa man fihinna’ (‘and whoever is in them’)? The True Lord Glorified is He wants to affirm to us by this that everyone will lose their free will and become compelled to His will, and thus, all will become equal even if they used to be sentient in this life. So, He says to us: ‘…and everything in them belongs to Allah, He has power over all things’ (al-Ma’ida: 120).

With this verse, the chapter of al-Ma’ida comes to an end; this chapter was revealed in Medina, and was one of the final revelations of the Noble Quran. It contains legislations, moral responsibilities, and laws. As all the chapters revealed in Medina, it shows the deviation of the people of the Scripture.

The Chapter of

al-An’am

In the Name of God, the Most Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy

The chapter of al-An`am which was revealed in Mecca comes right after a chapter revealed in Medina in the arrangement of the Quran per the instructions given on the final review of the Quran which took place during the last Ramadan in the life of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and in the presence of Jibril. We know that the Quran has two arrangements; one which follows the chronological order of revelation, and another which follows the already existing written arrangement. The chronological order tells us whether a given chapter was revealed in Mecca or Medina. Someone might say, ‘The True Lord Glorified is He revealed these noble words on Mount ‘Arafat: ‘…Today I have perfected your religion for you, and completed My blessing upon you…’ (al-Ma‘ida: 3), so how could it be said that it is a revelation from Medina’? This question means that we need to properly understand the terms ‘Meccan’ and ‘Medinan’. There are certain verses of the Quran which were revealed in Medina and others which were revealed in Mecca, and there are others which were revealed between both locations, in addition to others which were revealed between the Heavens and Earth. The term ‘Meccan’ refers to the verses which were revealed before the emigration, and the term ‘Medinan’ refers to the verses which were revealed after the emigration, even if they were revealed in Mecca.

The True Lord Glorified is He wanted the Quran to have a chronological order that follows the revelation and another for the written form. He wanted the Quran to restore the balance of human life after it went chaotic. The balance of human life went chaotic because of people who did not believe in Allah, or people who believed in Allah but associated partners with Him and worshipped idols with the pretext that they worshiped these idols so they would bring them nearer to the true God. Allah says, ‘…And those who take protectors besides Him [say], “We only worship them so that they may bring us nearer to Allah in position.”’ (az-Zumar: 3) Others worshipped fire, or followed a revealed religion after they altered it a bit or a lot.

The ones who were nearest to believing in Allah were those who believed in the messages which were revealed before Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Their messengers came to them bearing miracles and scriptures of guidance; and logically such people would be closer to believing than others. Therefore, we first had to deal with the idolaters, and we only engage the people of the Scripture at a later stage, since the latter were familiar with revealed religions sent from a deity by means of messengers.

The parts of the Quran which were revealed first in Mecca came with the essential postulates of doctrine so prominent, namely establishing the existence of One Deity who resides over all existence. In Medina, however, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him spoke with the people of the Scripture about all the affairs of religion, after the principle of monotheism had been firmly engrained.

This arrangement was therefore logical for there were two waves in the world at the time: a wave of atheism and a wave of distortion seeking to distort the way of Allah. Therefore, the believers as well as Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him were, in essence, with the people of the Scripture because at least they believed in a Deity, and they believed that a Deity would send messengers bearing guidance and miracles to prove the truth of their messages. Even those of them who went astray continued to refer to the scriptures, which were revealed to them, even though they had altered them.

We know that prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was on the side of the Byzantines when they fought the Persians; and when the Byzantines were defeated, the believers grieved, whereas the disbelievers rejoiced. Being Christians, the Byzantines were People of the Scripture, and their defeat meant that the followers of the Divine revelation had been defeated by the followers of atheism. Allah Glorified is He wanted to portray this for us, and He wanted to incline our hearts towards those who believed in Him, even if their image of Him and His message was flawed, or their understanding of what the messengers had brought was flawed as well. So, Allah revealed, 'Alif Lam Mim. The Byzantines have been defeated. In a near land, and they, after being vanquished, shall overcome within a few years. Allah's is the command before and after; and on that day, the believers shall rejoice, with the help of Allah…' (ar-Rum: 1-5). The believers rejoiced to see the Byzantines defeat the Persians because the Byzantines had a connection to Divinity, to messengers, to religious guidance and revelation. Allah clarified it as thus to show our position, and to make it a miracle for His Book and Messenger, bearing in mind that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was present at the headquarters of the call of Islam, Arabia, and he did not have embassies, spies or a 'war office' to give him news or tell him of the Byzantine preparations for the counter-attack.

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him predicted the results of a battle which would take place (seven or nine years later) between the Byzantines and Persians, and in which the Byzantines would triumph, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him made a wager with the idolaters about this. He stated that the Byzantines would defeat Persia within five years, and he told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about this, so the Prophet said to him, 'A bid` (few) means something between three to nine, so increase the stakes and lengthen the time.' The wager was thus settled for one hundred camels with a nine-year deadline.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was speaking so confidently, for he was conveying Allah's message, and Allah had placed this news in the Quran which would be read and recited in prayer and preserved until the end of time; and the One Who spoke these words could not lie, for He has domination over the entire universe. No man of military expertise in our time can predict the exact result of any future battle, despite all the intelligence that can be gathered about the strength and preparations of its parties. But Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was conveying what Allah Himself said on the matter, and so he was fully confident.

Whilst Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was facing the atheist rivals, his heart was with the people of the Scripture; and we may also observe that the people of the Scripture used to predict the advent of a messenger. Did some of the people of the Scripture in Medina, namely the Jews, not say to the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj, ‘Time is nigh for the advent of a prophet whom we shall follow, and slay you (fighting by his side) as ‘Ad and Iram were slain’? But they disbelieved in him, once he came because he threatened their authority and historical power.

So, the revelation of the Quran began in Mecca and later moved to Medina. But in the written order of the Quran, as we know, the Medinan chapters came first, and then the Meccan. This is what Allah willed when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him reviewed the Quran with Jibril peace be upon him in the last Ramadan in Prophet Muhammad’s life.

The concept of faith is always the same: believing in Allah, the revelation, the messengers and religion. The benefit of all of this is that it leads to the establishment of order in life, an order which is essential to life’s proper functioning, whether the people believe or disbelieve. This order which governs life was revealed first in the Medinan chapters, yet Allah did not completely leave it out of the Meccan chapters. The True Lord Glorified is He wanted His Messenger to capture the hearts of the believers first to face the forces of atheism; but some of them differed and rejected the route of the messengers.

So, this is all we have to say about the chapter of al-Ma`ida; and although it was revealed in Medina and the chapter of al-An`am in Mecca, yet the ending of al-Ma`ida is perfectly aligned with the beginning of al-An`am. Allah Glorified is He closes the chapter of al-Ma`ida saying, ‘Control of the heavens and earth and everything in them belongs to Allah; He has power over all things.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 120) And He opens the chapter of al-An`am saying, ‘Praise belongs to Allah who created the heavens and the earth and made darkness and light…’ (al-An‘am: 1).

Allah Glorified is He is All-powerful and has Domination over everything. He did not seize this domination from anyone nor did He stake a claim to it, but rather, He is the One Who created the heavens and the earth, and brought darkness and light into being.

Allah Glorified is He begins the chapter of al-An`am saying:

ٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ وَجَعَلَ ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ
وَٱلنُّورَ ۖ ثُمَّ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوا۟ بِرَبِّهِمْ يَعْدِلُونَ ﴿١﴾

Praise belongs to God who created the heavens and the earth and made darkness and light; yet the disbelievers set up equals to their Lord! [1] (The Quran, al-An’am: 1)

When you hear the word al-hamd (all praise), then you must understand that it is a word of praise, glorification and gratitude. Praise is present within one’s natural disposition and we direct it towards Allah because He has clarified and explained to us that praise is for Him so that we may not differ about where to direct it. This is because Allah Glorified is He is the One Who has empowered every man with some of His means.

Ask about anything and the natural sequence of events will always lead to the sole doer; Allah. Hence, all praise must be directed towards Allah.

Let me give you an example. Imagine a man landing with a plane on some deserted place in which there are no means of sustenance whatsoever. He wants to eat, drink, and cover himself to sleep, but he cannot find anything to do any of these. He falls asleep for a while and then wakes up, and is surprised to find a table laid with the finest food and drinks. Next to it, he finds a tent with a bed, covers, and a tap for washing. When he sees all of this, he cannot help using any of it before wondering about its origin. He surely wants to thank whoever blessed him with all these abundant blessings. Just as with us when we first came face to face with the universe and we found things that benefit us without having anything to do about providing them, neither us and nor the ones who preceded us. This is because no one claimed this role for himself, so you find a sun rising, wind blowing, water flowing, land green with verdure and flora, all of which serve you. Now the True Lord Glorified is He informs us that He is the One Who has granted us all of this, so should we not thank Him?

When humanity benefited from the electric lamp, they clamoured in honour of Edison, the inventor, so how about the Creator of the sun which illuminates the entire universe? Human inventions immortalize the inventors and we go through great lengths to honour them, but what about the Creator of the entire universe? Why do we honour the maker of the lamp which only illuminates limited parts of the earth, while some of us are heedless of the transcendence of the sun's Creator which illuminates the earth in the daytime and is hidden for half the day so that we can rest? This is because the earth is constantly moving, then when the sun sets for you, it rises over somewhere else; and thus, it stays in its orbit.

Therefore, all praise is for Allah when man came into existence, and found all the essentials of his life that cannot be subjected to human power, or to human claims. Indeed, praise is something that must exist, even if mankind differed over whom to praise. We direct it towards Allah because He is the One Who grants the blessings.

The chapters of the Quran in which the Creator begins with praise for Allah are five: al-Fatiha, al-An`am, al-Kahf, Saba`, and Fatir. They are focused on two things: concrete edification related to strengthening our bodies through nourishment, or procreation by means of marriage or the spiritual and value-based edification. Hence, Allah provides us with the heavenly method. In one instance, He says, 'Praise be to Allah, Lord of all the worlds' and the word rabb (Lord) means that He is educating humanity towards an objective and a mission, and this tarbiyah (education) requires abstract and concrete components; spiritual and systematic. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He uses it about the entire universe, as in the opening of the Quran, when He says that all praise is due to Him alone, the Lord of all words. 'All praise is due to Allah, Lord of the Worlds.' (al-Fatiha: 2)

He is thus, the Master of all the worlds, and He is their Owner and their Educator. He is the One Who raises us in such a way that we can carry on our tasks in life with the help of our strong bodies, with procreation by means of marriage and with our set of solid values. In another instance the True Lord Glorified is He brings to focus the method only such as when He says that all praise is due to Him for sending down the Scripture to His servant and making it unerringly straight. 'All praise is due to Allah, who has sent down upon His servant the Book and has not made therein any deviance.' (al-Kahf: 1) In another instance, He uses it regarding the tangible or perceived things and says, 'Praise belongs to Allah who created the heavens and the earth and made darkness and light…' (al-An'am: 1). Here He is specifying tangible things which can be perceived like the heavens and the earth, darkness and light, and these are things that we can clearly see. Another instance the True Lord Glorified is He associates things that are unseen along with tangible things, as when He tells us, 'All praise is due to Allah, Creator of the heavens and the earth, who made the angel messengers having wings; two, three or four. He increases in creation what He wills. Indeed, Allah is over all things competent.' (Fatir: 1)

He mentions all of it in its entirety in the opening chapter of the Quran (al-Fatiha), and He mentions the method only in al-Kahf, and mentions the perceived universe in al-An`am, and both the unseen and tangible in Fatir.

Therefore, praise is deserved and deserving, and it is directed towards Allah, even if it ostensibly seems to come from other than Allah because all means in the life of this universe go to Allah in the end. Here, in al-An`am, the True Lord Glorified is He singles out the praise of Allah, who created the heavens and the earth and everything that exists in them. After that, He mentions darkness and light. As you know, khalq (creation) is the bringing of something into existence from naught, while ja`al (making) is creating something then directing it towards its purpose. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He used 'made' with 'darkness and light'. Darkness is the default while light is created; light dispels darkness.

Therefore, the original state is that of darkness which has different shades, such as the darkness of a cave, the darkness of an ocean and the darkness of a well. In another verse the True Lord Glorified is He tells us, 'Or like utter darkness in the deep sea: there covers it a wave above which is another wave, above which is a cloud, (layers of) utter darkness one above another; when he holds out his hand, he is almost unable to see it; and to whomsoever Allah does not give light, he has no light' (an-Nur: 40).

Even though we know the direction of our hand, yet from the layers of darkness, we cannot see it. Hence, the True Lord Glorified is He specifies praise here for the creation of the heavens and the earth because they are the vessels for all existence. The scholars say, 'Do not assume that this is a concrete darkness where things are just concealed, and nor assume that this is a concrete light where things can just be perceived! Rather, you should assume that the darkness and light are both concrete and abstract'. That is why, Allah Glorified is He brings darkness in the plural, and light in the singular because darkness has various causes, whereas light has only one cause.

In another verse Allah tells us, 'And, [moreover], this is My path, which is straight, so follow it; and do not follow [other] ways, for you will be separated from His way. This He has instructed you so that you may become righteous.' (al-An'am: 153) The subul (other ways) come in the plural, while Allah's Sabil (way) comes in the singular because it is just one, as if the ways of Satan are numerous and the ways of people's whims are numerous. But the way that leads to Allah's path is one, and therefore, Allah caused light to be 'guidance' and zhulumat (darkness) to be misguidance. '...and made darkness and light; yet the disbelievers set up equals to their Lord!' (al-An'am: 1) We say – and to Allah belongs the highest similitude – that when Allah gives man in abundance and He bestows upon him that which he passes on in courtesy to someone else saying, 'I made such-and-such for so-and-so!' and he denies Allah's role.' So, the word thumma (yet) is used here to indicate time lapse. Thumma is a conjunction like fa` which is used to indicate two events without a time lapse between them. As when the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'Then He causes him to die, then assigns to him a grave.' ('Abasa: 21)

Whoever loves someone and this person dies, he buries him quickly before his body rots in front of him. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He tells us that after brining man to the grave, 'then' He will rise him again to life (for judgment), 'Then when He wills, He will resurrect him.' ('Abasa: 22)

This indicates the time lapse extended until the Day of Resurrection, where the True Lord Glorified is He will resurrect His creation. The time lapse could also be a gap in rank or status. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He uses thumma here as a separator between the creation of the heavens and earth and the making of darkness and light, and between those who disbelieve in their Lord, '...yet the disbelievers set up equals to their Lord!' (al-An'am: 1) These are the ones who equate Allah with others. We can regard, 'set up equals to their Lord' as their subject of disbelief, i.e. because of their disbelief they equate others with Allah. Or, it could mean that they turn away from the True Lord to other than Him, or that they ascribe partners to Him. This statement applies to atheists or those who ascribe partners to Allah. He is indeed the One Who brought the heavens and earth into existence from naught and no one can dare ask Him, 'How did You create the heavens and earth'? This is because Allah tells us in another verse, 'I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves, and I would not have taken those who lead others astray as assistants.' (al-Kahf: 51)

He brought the heavens and earth into existence from naught, and the heavens and earth became the vessel of the whole being. He created them before man and before the rest of creation. No one from His creation witnessed Him creating them. Thus, we cannot ask Allah 'how'. He created the heavens and earth; rather, we should take our information about the creation from the Creator, Allah. Some people have claimed that the earth was separated from the sun and then it cooled down, but this is just a mere hypothesis. We can never be sure because none of us saw the creation of the heavens and earth. To such people I say, '…I would not have taken those who lead others astray as assistants.' (al-Kahf: 51)

The Quran provides the answer even before these people came to existence. It is as if Allah is telling us that these misleading people will come at some point in history even before they existed. They did not witness creation; they just 'happened unexpectedly' upon the heavens and earth, like all of us. So, they should not have made facts from mere guesses about things they neither know nor have witnessed. It is Just like the ones who claim that man was first created an ape, although they were not with Allah when He created the universe and man, and, nor were they His partners. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He teaches us to have etiquette with Him, and tells us not to follow blindly what we do not know to be true, for the ears, eyes, and heart will be questioned about all these: 'And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge. Indeed, the hearing, the sight and the heart - about all those, [one] will be questioned' (al-Isra': 36) It is upon us to learn about the creation from Allah Glorified is He who says:

هُوَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَكُم مِّن طِينٍ ثُمَّ قَضَىٰٓ أَجَلًا ۖ وَأَجَلٌ مُّسَمًّى عِندَهُۥ ۖ ثُمَّ أَنتُمْ تَمْتَرُونَ ﴿٢﴾

He is the one who created you from clay and specified a term [for you] and another fixed time, known only to Him; yet still you doubt! [2] (The Quran, al-An’am: 2)

He brings before us the matter of creation and He has made it clear that He created us from clay after talking about the creation of the heavens and earth. Before that, He informed us that He created us from dust, moulded mud, and dry clay. These are all complementary and not contradictory elements. Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He has made it clear to us that He created everything from water. Thus, we understand that water was mixed with dust to become clay, then moulded mud and then dry clay, and all of them are complementary parts of a sequence. We did not witness the creation, but we have learned about the matter of creation from Allah Glorified is He and we know that clay is a substance for cultivation and fertilization.

When scientists analysed the earth, they found that clay is comprised of several elements, and the largest proportion of these elements is oxygen, then carbon, then hydrogen, then fluorine, then chlorine, then sodium, then magnesium, then potassium, then iron, then cellulose and then manganese and other elements.

The elements in the universe are more than one hundred, but not all of them are part of the composition of man. Man is only composed from those elements that benefit him in terms of structure, adornment and other things. Allah tells us that He shall show us His signs in every region of the earth and in ourselves until it becomes clear to us that this is the Truth. Allah says, ‘We will show them Our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth. But is it not sufficient concerning your Lord that He is, over all things, a Witness?’ (Fussilat: 53)

The scientist disbelievers who analysed the earth mentioned the results which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us of in conveying the inimitable and everlasting Quran that is preserved by Allah’s Command as a confirming proof. The True Lord Glorified is He kept this proof for us till a non-believing scientist came along to discover some of the realities that were revealed in the Quran.

None of us witnessed the moment of creation, but we witness death which is the demolition of life, and the demolition of something is the reverse of its formation. We see how building demolishers start their work by first demolishing the external parts – which were added last; they remove the glass sheets first, then the wood planks, then the bricks, much so like death in reverse of life. Man's ruh (spirit) departs first, and then his body dries till it becomes like dry clay. Then it becomes moulded mud, i.e. stinking and decaying. Then the remaining moisture evaporates and the body turns into dust. Therefore, we believe our Creator when He tells us about our creation and when He tells us about creating the heavens and earth. When someone says other than this, we tell him, 'I did not make them witness to the creation of the heavens and the earth or to the creation of themselves, and I would not have taken those who lead others astray as assistants.' (al-Kahf: 51) Then the True Lord Glorified is He informs us here of the decreed term, '…and specified a term [for you] and another fixed time, known only to Him; yet still you doubt!' (al-An'am: 2)

Not even one of us knows his decreed term, no matter how often he visits the doctor. The specified term is the decreed term that has been determined for each of us. The fixed term (known only to Allah) is our term in the interstice between the physical and spiritual worlds (barzakh) and our resurrection from the graves. Hence, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'They ask you, [O Muhammad], about the Hour and when is its arrival. Say, "Its knowledge is only with my Lord. None will reveal its time except Him. It lies heavily upon the heavens and the earth. It will not come upon you except unexpectedly." They ask you as if you are familiar with it. Say, "Its knowledge is only with Allah, but most of the people do not know." (al-A'raf: 187)

The initial steps leading to someone's end and the approach of death could be revealed by way of what Allah unveils, i.e. by means of science. Yet, this is not of the occult because in some cases a person may regain health and recovers fully. People around him might even say that 'A miracle has happened'. As for the fixed term, it is known only to Him; we cannot know anything about it. The True Lord Glorified is He determines five things to be only known to Him. He is the One Who has the Knowledge of the Hour of Resurrection; it is He Who sends down the relieving rain; He knows what is hidden in the wombs; no soul knows what it will reap tomorrow, and no soul knows in what land it will die; it is Allah Who is All Knowing and All-Aware. Allah says, ‘Indeed, Allah [alone] has knowledge of the Hour and sends down the rain and knows what is in the wombs. And no soul perceives what it will earn tomorrow, and no soul perceives in what land it will die. Indeed, Allah is Knowing and Acquainted.’ (Luqman: 34)

The True Lord Glorified is He has indeed spoken about the place but He has not spoken about the time. ‘...and specified a term [for you]...’ (al-An‘am: 2). He decreed a specified time for every individual, and then He decreed another fixed term for everything. The specified terms of individuals succeed one another until the fixed term of all comes which is Resurrection Day, ‘...yet still you doubt!’ (al-An‘am: 2) The proofs conveyed by Allah are enough to block any doubt, but still there are those who doubt after all these signs. After this, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَهُوَ ٱللَّهُ فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَفِي ٱلْأَرْضِ يَعْلَمُ سِرَّكُمْ وَجَهْرَكُمْ وَيَعْلَمُ مَا تَكْسِبُونَ ③

He is God in the heavens and on earth, He knows your secrets and what you reveal, and He knows what you do [3] (The Quran, al-An’am: 3)

The noun ‘Allah’ is a proper noun indicating the One Who is Necessarily Existent ‘wajib al-wujud’. It is the name that Allah has chosen for Himself and it comprises all the attributes of perfection. We call the other attributes the ‘beautiful names’ such as al-Qadir (The Fully Capable), as-Sami` (The All-Hearing), al-Basir (The All-Seeing), al-Hayy (The Ever-Living), al-Qayyum (The All-Sustaining), al-Qahhar (The All-Vanquisher). All of them are attributes that became names because they are absolute with respect to Allah. When these attributes are applied in their absolute sense then they belong to Allah, but when (some of them) are applied to other than Allah, they come in their relative sense. As for the name Allah, it can only apply to the True Lord Glorified is He.

Allah challenges the disbelievers, to name anything other than Him Allah, and He asks them if they know of anyone carrying the same name!

Allah says, 'Lord of the heavens and the earth and whatever is between them - so worship Him and have patience for His worship. Do you know of any similarity to Him?' (Maryam: 65)

The disbelievers heard this and none of them dared to call anything Allah, and this is the type of challenge that sustains until the Final Hour. No one dares to say its opposite or to give it to a thing or a being that is other than Allah. We do not know of anything that existed in its essence in pre-eternity before the universe came into existence besides Allah.

As for the lesser things in life which are considered non-essentials, they did not bring themselves in existence but required a maker. A cup of water, for example, does not perform an essential task in life because man can drink water with his hand or directly using his mouth. This cup requires the knowledge, capabilities, power, and wisdom of man. Knowledge comes to man with the power that Allah has granted him, so man searched the universe, found sand, and discovered a means for melting it and blowing it into a vessel. Then he discovered a way for clarifying the molten glass using chemicals and finally he managed to 'make' a cup.

The scientific and manufacturing process that the cup goes through at the hands of man is massive even though it is not one of the absolute necessities of life. It is a luxury. So, how about the necessities such as the sun, the moon, air, and water? These things too must have a maker! If the makers of non-essential things, apply for 'patents' for their inventions to reap their benefit, then how about the One Who made everything, not for His own benefit but solely for the benefit of His creation?

We all know the inventor of the lamp and his history, where he was born, where he lived, where he studied. So what about the One Who made the sun, the stars, the earth, and man? Out of His utter mercy, the True Lord Glorified is He informed us that He is the Creator, and no one challenged Him and claimed that they created the universe. Since there is nothing in existence that influences without an influencing factor, then we must know that because Allah said that He created and originated, and no one challenged Him, then surely what He says is true. If there is another maker of the universe, and he does not know what Allah has informed us then this forgetful, slumbering maker does not deserve to be a Deity. And if he knows what Allah has informed us, and yet he dares not speak out the truth about himself, then this imposter has no right to divinity.

As the True Lord Glorified is He has taught us and informed us with decisive proofs that He is the One Who created the universe, and so long as that is the case, then we must listen to Him. The practical implementation for this would be to obey Him in what He commanded and prohibited. Indeed, the world of the malakut that we do not see, worships Him and everything in existence carries out His command and glorifies and praises Him. The seven heavens and the earth and everyone in them glorify Him. There is not a single thing that does not celebrate His praise, though we do not understand their praise; He is most forbearing, most forgiving. Allah says, ‘The seven heavens and the earth and whatever is in them exalt Him. And there is not a thing except that it exalts [Allah] by His praise, but you do not understand their [way of] exalting. Indeed, He is ever Forbearing and Forgiving.’ (al-Isra’: 44)

The seven heavens and the earth and all the created things they contain indicate the precision to the Maker and His kingship. He is transcendent and sanctified above having any partner, and everything has a means of glorifying and affirming His transcendence, but we do not see it or comprehend it. The True Lord Glorified is He tells us here that He is worshipped and existent in all of existence. ‘He is Allah in the heavens and on earth; He knows your secrets and what you reveal…’ (al-An‘am: 3). Since He is worshipped, then He must be obeyed in His commands and prohibitions; but some of us obey and some of us do not. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He has made a recompense for obedience: either bliss or punishment. There is a difference between the existence of something and its realisation, so never confuse realising existence and existence itself. Not being able to realise the existence of one thing, does not mean it is not in existence.

Examples of this can be seen throughout history. The Creator has left for His creation secrets in existence that they can deduce to unravel the benefits beyond them. These things were there carrying out their tasks in existence even before man knew about them, things like the force of gravity, for instance. It existed before man discovered it and it carried out its role before man knew of it. Such things are mentioned in the Quran in a way that did not cause confusion at the time of its revelation. Ponder Allah's saying, 'Indeed, Allah holds the heavens and the earth, lest they cease. And if they should cease, no one could hold them [in place] after Him. Indeed, He is Forbearing and Forgiving.' (Fatir: 41)

The True Lord Glorified is He brought into existence gravity so that the heavens and earth can carry out their tasks, and from gravity, He has created a unique system that protects the universe from collapsing by His Power. Hence, gravity existed the whole time, but man did not know about it until recently; this is the difference between existence and the realisation of existence.

So, when Allah tells us, 'Vision perceives Him not, but He perceives [all] vision; and He is the Subtle, the Acquainted' (al-An'am: 103), does this not affirm that the essence of the True Lord cannot be seen by the eyes whereas He knows everything that is hidden from our limited vision? In the universe, there are things that we might not encompass even though He created them and placed them at our service, and after we understand them they remain acting in our service. If the True Lord Glorified is He relates something to us that we do not comprehend, we cannot say, 'Since I cannot understand it, then it does not exist'. For example, we cannot fully fathom electricity or gravity or the epitome of life's secrets (ruh [the spirit]) that endows us with the secret of life, and keeps all our limbs under its influence. When the spirit departs, the body becomes a stiff corpse. No one knows where the spirit is and no one understands it. No one has ever heard it, smelt it, tasted it, or touched it. Indeed, the spirit is present in our essence and we do not realise it. So, that is how we truly are unable to realise only one thing that is created by Allah; so how can you realise the Creator, and that He is Allah? Indeed, even if you were to realise Him, you would not become a deity still. This is because, when you realise something, your extremities will have power over it, and it will be subordinated to your eyes, your hands and so on. But the All-Powerful, whose power is absolute, will never become realised or subordinated, and it is from His Utter Magnitude that He remains as such.

Another example is the dreams which we see when we sleep; are these dreams found inside our bodies, or what? Hilm (forbearance) is a type of restraint which you extend towards people to endure and show sympathy; it is an emotional reaction, but do you realise what this sentiment is? Indeed, it is one of the abstract emotions you have within you that keeps you in motion without you realizing them. Like the courage that you use to attack or evade, but you never see or touch. You do not know its shape, colour, or taste. Likewise, the Most Exalted Who conducts this universe is not grasped by human vision. What bears a lot on people is that they try to associate the realised with the existing; but if we looked profoundly into the universe, we will surely deduct that there is a difference between realisation and existence.

We know that the name Allah itself is an utterance that we articulate in full comprehension that He is the Creator the Most Exalted and that He claims it resolutely. By way of example – man invented the television, but before it was brought into existence it was non-existent and had no name. It came to have a name only from the time man brought it into existence, a name that suits its specific task. As for the name Allah, it is existent and eternal before our time and before the messengers informed us of it. Allah has a name in every language, and the existence of this name in all languages, in a different pronunciation, is a proof on the precedence of Allah's existence. Then disbelief came, and we know that disbelief is an attempt to conceal the First Existence. This means that the word 'disbelief' indicates faith, and what really bears on man is his attempt to put a shape for the Most Exalted Existence, a shape that is defined by the capacities and limitation of humanity. But no one can restrict His Existence in a specific shape because it is from His Magnitude that we cannot picture Him. Faith in Him is a proof of Him, and He says whatever He wills about Himself; and I would love for you to remember this following example and to say it to your young ones.

Let us suppose that a man is sitting with his family in an apartment, and there is a knock on the door. Everyone sitting in the apartment is confident that someone knocked on the door and none of them differ about this. One of the children says, 'The one knocking is Mohammad'. The second one says, 'It is Mahmoud'. The third one says, 'No, it is Ibrahim'. The wife says, 'I am sure it is a woman'. However, one of the children says, 'No, it is a man'. The father says, 'Maybe it is a police officer who came to ask me something'. The wife responds, 'Expect goodness. You only do goodness, so only goodness would come knocking at your door'. Here the family differed not over the existence of a knocker, but over realising his essence. The father says, 'Instead of all the confusion, let us ask him who he is'. The one knocking responds, 'I am so-and-so'.

The same goes for the universe. Man comes across it and asks who created it. This is because heedlessness overtook us after Adam peace be upon him knew his Lord and after the True Lord Glorified is He made Adam's offspring bear witness that He is their Lord. Then Allah sent messengers to convey to the creation His way, His name and His attributes. With that, Allah did not want to fatigue His creation, and by way of the messengers, mankind was informed that He is the Most Praiseworthy Creator.

The plight of the philosophers is that they were not content with rationalising Allah; they wanted to picture Him as well. This is an impossible matter. Therefore, we say that it is upon us to listen to the True Lord Glorified is He when He says whatever He wills about Himself ending any real need for conflict over the issue. He tells us, 'He is Allah in the heavens and on earth' (al-An'am: 3). Beware, O Muslim, of thinking that the heavens and the earth here are a finite vessel. If you do not know the place of your spirit in your body, then how can you know the place of Allah? (1) Allah wants to tell us that He is worshipped in the heavens and on earth.

We should keep in consideration that some of the verses of the Quran baffle us so that we would always be occupied with the words of Allah. Had the Quran been revealed with over-simplified ideas and words, the meanings of His Noble Book would not have been renewed with every age. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He had intended this so that the people could be reassured of their faith in every age. Some of the first people who tried to delve into the Quran wondered a lot about Allah's statement, 'And it is Allah who is [the only] deity in the heaven, and on the earth [the only] deity. And He is the Wise, the Knowing.' (az-Zukhruf: 84)

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

They questioned the repetition that He is Allah in the heaven and Allah on earth. Some superficial people thought the repetition meant that there is a God in the heavens and another God on earth. They did not understand that the intended meaning is; He is Allah who is worshipped in the heavens and Allah who is worshipped on earth, and He possesses absolute wisdom in all His actions and encompasses His entire universe. All that the True Lord Glorified is He intends by this statement is to grasp the human minds and keep them busy with His remembrance. To those who did not understand the meaning we say, ‘There is a rule in the language about the definite and indefinite’. When we say, ‘the man came to me’, this man is known to both the speaker and the listener. However, when we say ‘a man came to me’, this man is not known to the listener and might be known to the speaker. If we say ‘a man came to me and I honoured a man’, then the speaker is talking about two men; one of them came and the other was honoured. When the speaker says ‘a man came to me and then I honoured the man’, then the speech here is about one man. Therefore, when the indefinite is repeated as an indefinite, we are talking about two different entities, but when the indefinite is repeated as a definite, and then they are the same entity. So, when the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘And it is Allah who is [the only] deity in the heaven, and on the earth [the only] deity. And He is the Wise, the Knowing.’ (az-Zukhruf: 84) Some people thought that ‘Allah’ is indefinite, and when it was repeated, this meant they are two different entities. Had this been the case, the whole being would have been ruined. But the dominant rule came from the scholars who realised the essence of the text. Scholars of monotheism said, ‘We must not forget that the word alladhi (it is He) here is a relative pronoun which indicates to us that the True Lord’s connection to the heaven and the earth is one’. Therefore, we say to the ones who reflect on this verse, ‘Do not stop at the repeated indefinite and forget about the relative pronoun because the relative pronoun is definite’.

‘He is Allah in the heavens and on earth, He knows your secrets and what you reveal …’ (al-An‘am: 3). This means that Allah Glorified is He is one God and He knows what you keep secret and what you do openly. So, Allah Glorified is He rewards and punishes you per your actions. Do not think then, O man, that you will escape being brought to task by your Lord Glorified is He. Since He knows what you keep secret, He knows with greater reason what you do openly. If Allah Glorified is He had said that He only knows what is kept secret, then some people would have thought that He only knows that which is concealed because He is unseen. We may say, 'No'. Though Allah Glorified is He is unseen, He knows what is unseen and what is witnessed. In other words, He Glorified is He has such Infinite Knowledge that He does not wait until something becomes manifest; He, with His Perfect Knowledge and His Absolute Awareness knows such a thing from the beginning when it is secret and He knows and encompasses it after it becomes existent and manifest. It is as if Allah Glorified is He records the history of knowledge within the same person, '...He knows your secrets and what you reveal …' (al-An'am: 3).

Allah Glorified is He informs us that He does not stop at what is hidden: 'Whatever you may say aloud, He knows what you keep secret and what is even more hidden.' (Ta Ha: 7) Indeed, Allah Glorified is He knows what is secret before it becomes secret. All matters are secret before they are known; and before matters become secret, they are even more hidden.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He concludes this verse by saying, '...and He knows that which you earn.' (al-An'am: 3) Kasb in Arabic originally means 'earning profits' which occurs when someone invests their capital. Kasb can be good or evil; the one who earns through evil means is the one who goes beyond what Allah Glorified is He has permitted. On the other hand, the one who earns it through good is the one who wins. So, if a man does one good deed, he earns the reward of ten good deeds. The speaker is Allah Glorified is He Who deserves all praise because He is the Creator of the heavens and the earth, and darkness and light. However, the disbelievers at the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stood in opposition of the Oneness of Allah Glorified is He. Though they were told that the True Lord Glorified is He created man from clay and He knows what is secret and what is even more hidden as well as the good and evil deeds we earn, none of them came to believe in the Call of the Truth and the Straight Path and follow Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَمَا تَأۡتِيهِم مِّنۡ ءَايَةٖ مِّنۡ ءَايَٰتِ رَبِّهِمۡ إِلَّا كَانُواْ عَنۡهَا مُعۡرِضِينَ ﴿٤﴾

But every time revelation comes to them from their Lord, they turn their backs on it [4] (The Quran, al-An'am: 4)

Those disbelievers were not convinced of the signs that proved the truth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Though he was truthful about what he conveyed from his Lord, they turned away and rejected faith. They must have listened to the guidance that showed them the reality of the worldly life. We still witness the same opposition and aversion in our time. We are now able to learn how longsome man-made things such as electric lamps and other devices can be used before they should be replaced with others. Meanwhile, we know nothing about the life span of the sun, for instance, which has never needed maintenance. We should ask ourselves, 'How do such wonders happen?'

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to make it clear to us that the One Who created all creatures advises us of what He wants and shows us His signs in this universe; but man turns away and does not care for all this.

The first mistake committed by man is that he has turned away from the signs he has received from the Creator, which explain to him the facts of existence, how the universe was administered before the coming of man, and how man can make use of this universe to sustain his life and maintain his species. However, he turns away from hearing any of this. The disbelievers have not just turned away, but they have moved on to another stage: denial. They not only deserted faith, but also reached a more degrading stage outlined in the next verse. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

فَقَدۡ كَذَّبُواْ بِٱلۡحَقِّ لَمَّا جَآءَهُمۡۖ فَسَوۡفَ يَأۡتِيهِمۡ أَنۢبَـٰٓؤُاْ مَا كَانُواْ بِهِۦ يَسۡتَهۡزِءُونَ ﴿٥﴾

So they denied the truth when it came to them, but the very thing they laughed at will be brought home to them [5] (The Quran, al-An'am: 5)

This is a shift from turning away to denial. Turning away is just a negative behaviour, while denial is aimed at strongly opposing and obstructing

Allah's Path. Then there comes the third stage which is ridicule. Thus, we have here three stages: turning away, denial, and ridicule. The disbelievers did all of this so that they could take people away from following guidance. An example of this is what the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says concerning Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him: 'And build the Ark under Our [Watchful] Eyes and with Our Inspiration. Do not plead with Me for those who have done evil—they will be drowned. So, he began to build the Ark, and whenever the leaders of his people passed by, they laughed at him. He said, "You may scorn us now, but we will come to scorn you."' (Hud: 37-38)

Allah Glorified is He revealed to Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him the most truthful words and commanded him to build the Ark under His Providence and not to intercede with Him on behalf of the wrongdoing disbelievers who had not responded to Allah's Call. Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him embarked on constructing the Ark, but the disbelievers mocked him because of their ignorance and suspicions. In return, Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him made fun of everyone who laughed at him.

Let us see another example during the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him showing how Islam emerged victorious after the people of disbelief had been powerful. The arrogant transgressors amongst them came to be humiliated. Some of them were killed, while others were captured and suffered the bitterness of humiliation. Those people who had been mocking Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him included Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughirah, their chief who is mentioned in the True Lord's Statement: 'When Our Revelations are recited to him, he says, "These are just ancient fables." We shall brand him on the snout!' (al-Qalam: 15-16) Al-Walid was a man of great wealth, and power. He also had many children. Since he turned away from the Quran and made fun of it, Allah Glorified is He has made an example of him and branded his nose with a mark which exposed him; such a mark is regarded as a disgrace and shame that is never separated from him whenever he is mentioned.

These Quranic verses were revealed when the Muslims were weak. Such verses told the Muslims that that disbeliever will be struck on the nose which is the symbol of pride and arrogance. When the Battle of Badr occurred, the Muslims saw the reality of what the Quran had stated. Indeed, it is miraculous Divine Speech whose recitation is an act of worship. Thus, every issue revealed by Allah Glorified is He turns to be true. After that, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

أَلَمْ يَرَوْا۟ كَمْ أَهْلَكْنَا مِن قَبْلِهِم مِّن قَرْنٍ مَّكَّنَّـٰهُمْ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ مَا لَمْ
نُمَكِّن لَّكُمْ وَأَرْسَلْنَا ٱلسَّمَآءَ عَلَيْهِم مِّدْرَارًا وَجَعَلْنَا ٱلْأَنْهَـٰرَ تَجْرِى
مِن تَحْتِهِمْ فَأَهْلَكْنَـٰهُم بِذُنُوبِهِمْ وَأَنشَأْنَا مِنۢ بَعْدِهِمْ قَرْنًا ءَاخَرِينَ ﴿٦﴾

Do they not realize how many generations We destroyed before them? We established them in the earth more firmly than you, sent down abundant rain on them from the sky and made running rivers flow at their feet, yet We destroyed them for their misdeeds and raised other generations after them [6]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 6)

This is what Quraysh witnessed in its winter and summer trade journeys. They saw the ruins of `Ad, the people of Hud (Eber) peace be upon him and the remnants of Thamud, the people of Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him. The power of `Ad and Thamud were much greater than that of Quraysh who got their supremacy only from the Ka`ba. If the True Lord Glorified is He had left Abraha to destroy the Ka`ba, they would not have been established on earth. The True Lord Glorified is He destroyed many nations with great civilizations as narrated clearly by the Quran, 'Have you [Prophet Muhammad] considered how your Lord dealt with [the people] of `Ad, of Iram, [the city] of lofty pillars, whose like has never been made in any land, and Thamud, who hewed into the rocks in the valley, and the mighty and powerful Pharaoh? All of them committed excesses in their lands, and spread corruption there: your Lord let a scourge of punishment loose on them.' (al-Fajr: 6-13) Indeed, they were great civilizations that acquired fame and status in this worldly life, such as the civilization of the Pharaohs. However, the power and glory of those nations could not protect any of them from Allah's Decree of Destruction. They were utterly ruined as if they never existed. Here are the Words of the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He: 'And We punished each one of them for their sins. Some We struck with a violent storm, some were overcome by a sudden blast, some We made the earth swallow and some We drowned. It was not Allah who wronged them; they wronged themselves.' (al-'Ankabut: 40)

The True Lord Glorified is He repays every disbeliever in full. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed his people of what happened to the previous nations, 'Do they not realize how many generations We destroyed before them...?' (al-An'am: 6) A qarn (generation) is usually governed by a fixed time or certain conditions. As for time, a qarn is equal, at maximum, to one hundred years. The members of a generation who live this period may see their grandchildren during the stage of manhood. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'We sent Nuh (Noah) out to his people. He lived among them for fifty years short of a thousand...' (al-'Ankabut: 14). Though long, Nuh's (Noah's) life is called 'qarn'. Therefore, qarn is a generation that is determined by a time frame or an intangible frame. Qarn of time is a period of one hundred years as we have said, whereas an intangible qarn could be the life span of a message or a kingdom.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells the people of disbelief that He defeated and destroyed the previous nations after He had established them on earth in different ways, '...sent down abundant rain on them from the sky and made running rivers flow at their feet, yet We destroyed them for their misdeeds and raised other generations after them.' (al-An'am: 6) This news comes from Allah regarding what happened to the previous peoples such as the people of Sheba. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says about those people: 'There was a sign for the people of Sheba too, in their dwelling place; two gardens, one on the right and one on the left. Eat from what your Lord has provided for you and give Him thanks, for your land is good, and your Lord, Most Forgiving.' (Saba': 15)

The dwelling place of Sheba in Yemen is a sign of Allah's Power. Two flourishing gardens on the right and on the left, so that the people of Sheba can eat from Allah's Provision and thank Allah Glorified is He for His Blessings. Allah Glorified is He granted them the power to build the famous Marib Dam. They cut rugged mountains down to retain rainwater. Everything they did was only done because Allah Glorified is He had willed it. However, they turned away from the abundant provision that Allah Glorified is He had granted them since they wanted to rely on themselves just as Qarun (Korah) did when he said, '... "This wealth was given to me because the knowledge I possess...' (an-Naml: 28). They thought they were capable of providing for themselves; hence, they did not thank Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He let loose on them a flood from the dam. It was a punishment that matched their misdeeds. This is how punishment is inflicted on those who disbelieve in Allah's Blessings and turn away from His Path. Allah Glorified is He let one of the weakest and tiniest animals, the mouse, penetrate the dam, to have their wealth drowned and their houses buried.

The True Lord Glorified is He tells His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about all these stories to draw the attention of his people who saw the ruins of the civilizations of `Ad and Thamud since vision has the greatest impact. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him informed them of those stories to realise the consequences of aversion, denial and ridicule. The True Lord Glorified is He asked His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to just convey the Message clearly since he is not responsible for the faith of his people. Those disbelievers were always in fear of the supremacy of 'there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah' because they were the ones who made gods from amongst themselves and put some of them in control of others. The strong played God for the weak; the rich played God for the poor and the learned played God for the ignorant. Meanwhile, 'there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah' makes all people equal, which was refused by those people since they wanted supremacy. Allah Glorified is He gives us an example of this when He says, 'And they said, "Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?"' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

They did not dare defame the Quran; they rather demanded that supremacy be for a rich man from amongst the wealthy people of the two towns, Mecca and Ta'if. This statement contradicted their actions and conduct towards Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him since they used to entrust their valuable belongings with him. If one of them had seen the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him doing anything bad or shameful, they would not have done such an act. He was the only one who gained their confidence despite their disbelief and denial of his Message. Thus, those people sought their own interests, even through those whom they disbelieved, and attacked.

The True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear that those people are quite wrong and oppressive in regards to their aversion, denial, and ridicule of the Prophet's noble Message and the Glorious Quran. They are only driven by stubbornness just like the people of Pharaoh who rejected Allah's Signs after seeing them with their own eyes, though they were sure that they had been sent by Him: 'They denied them, in their wickedness and their pride, even though their souls acknowledged them as true. See how those who spread corruption met their end!' (an-Naml: 14) The people of Pharaoh denied the message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him though they were certain of its truth; but they denied it out of arrogance, pride and oppression. Thus, they faced a most desperate end; this is the destiny of those who always deny Allah's signs.

Here, we are faced with new deniers of the Message of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Concerning those disbelievers, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَلَوْ نَزَّلْنَا عَلَيْكَ كِتَٰبًا فِى قِرْطَاسٍ فَلَمَسُوهُ بِأَيْدِيهِمْ لَقَالَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓا۟ إِنْ هَٰذَآ إِلَّا سِحْرٌ مُّبِينٌ ﴿٧﴾

Even if We had sent down to you [Prophet] a book inscribed on parchment, and they had touched it with their own hands, the disbelievers would still say, 'This is nothing but blatant sorcery'[7] (The Quran, al-An'am: 7)

Had this Book–the Quran–been revealed to those deniers in a written form that can be felt and seen; and had they touched it with their own hands, they would have said what every disbeliever says, 'This is obvious magic'. As one of their conditions, the deniers demanded Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that he send down to them a book from heaven to read it. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He outlines their rejection by saying: 'They say, "We will not believe you [Muhammad] until you make a spring gush out of the ground for us, or until you have a garden of date palms and vines, and make rivers pour through them, or make the sky fall on us in pieces, as you claimed will happen; or bring Allah and the angels before us face to face, or have a house made of gold or ascend into the sky– even then, we will not believe in your ascension until you send a real book down for us to read.’ Say, “Glory be to my Lord! Am I anything but a mortal, a messenger?”’ (al-Isra’: 90: 93)

After the inimitability of the Quran became clear to them, they made false demands and suggested that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him bring to them one of the following signs in order that they could believe: break open a spring in the land of Mecca, the water of which would never be cut off; have a garden of palm trees and grapes in Mecca and make rivers gush forth within them; supplicate that the sky fall upon them in fragments as a severe punishment; bring Allah and the angels to be seen by them; have a house made of gold or ascend into the sky and bring them a book from Allah affirming the veracity of his Message. However, Allah the Most Merciful, the Most Compassionate exalts His Essence above all His creatures that they can neither control Him, and nor can they have a share of His Omnipotence. So, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He commanded His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say in the Glorious Quran: ‘...Say, “Glory be to my Lord! Am I anything but a mortal, a messenger?”’ (al-Isra’: 93) This is because the One Who sends signs, is the Lord of all the worlds. No one dares to impose signs upon Him. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who receives Allah’s Signs; he does not propose them. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knows well that whoever suggests a sign to be revealed by Allah Glorified is He and then denies it, he will be punished and destroyed. This is the Way that Allah Glorified is He has imposed. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him learns that he is the Seal of the Prophets; thus, he will never request a sign from Allah Glorified is He lest Allah’s Punishment befall them if they deny it. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He tells His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the insolence and arrogance of those disbelieving haughty people: ‘Even if We had sent down to you [Prophet Muhammad] a book inscribed on parchment, and they had touched it with their own hands, the disbelievers would still say, “This is nothing but blatant sorcery.”’ (al-An‘am: 7)

The True Lord Glorified is He knows that the hearts of some of these deniers have indeed become heedless in regards to their faith. Allah Glorified is He wants such people to be believers. However, if Allah Glorified is He had sent down to them a book written on parchment and they had seen it with their eyes and touched it with their hands, they would not have believed. Allah Glorified is He mentions touching the book with hands because touching is a sense joined by everyone, even the blind; but they will deny this fact saying, 'This is nothing but blatant sorcery.' Such a response has nothing to do with reason, good thinking, or wisdom. Moreover, it does not come in harmony with those people who are known for rhetoric, eloquence and beautiful speech and composition. Sorcery is intended to change people's vision of reality. Since they accused Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of practising sorcery, why did he not bewitch them and why did they resist sorcery? We know that a sorcerer deprives his victims of their will and ability to act; and if Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had been a sorcerer, he would have used sorcery to make them believe.

Those deniers were known for their language and discourse skills that could distinguish between good and false statements, as well as their wide experience that could differentiate between the various forms of speech: oratory, writing, prose, poetry, rhymed speech, and non-rhymed speech. Nevertheless, it is astonishing that they stood fully bewildered and shackled before the inimitability of the Quran, saying, 'It is sorcery' at one time, 'It is the speech of a soothsayer' another time and 'It is the speech of mad person' at a third time.

The Quran is not sorcery because it has eloquence that cannot be matched by that of the Arab disbelievers. Though Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was one of the Arabs, he did not do anything to make them believe against their will. Likewise, the Quran is not the speech of soothsaying because the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was raised amongst them and known as the most truthful and trustworthy person who did not get knowledge from others. In addition, the speech of soothsayers has a specific mode and rhyme scheme which has nothing to do with the Quran. Those disbelievers learned that it was the speech of a sane man since the speech of a madman is neither coherent nor cohesive. In this regard, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says the following words about His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: 'Your Lord's Grace does not make you [Prophet Muhammad] a madman. You will have a never-ending reward—truly you have a great moral character' (al-Qalam: 24).

Allah Glorified is He prepared His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to receive prophecy with good thinking that is far away from foolishness of opinion. He will have a reward that is neither cut off, nor withheld for conveying the Message of his Lord. He is of a great moral character who wisely deals with events via compatible faculties that never conflict each other. Those old deniers themselves bore witness to the good character of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. So, how could this exalted character be attributed to a madman and how could such sound and good behaviour come from a madman? Thus, all their accusations levelled to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came because of their insistence on disbelief, not due to concrete facts. They learned well that they had seen and witnessed the very opposite of what they attributed to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Insisting on disbelief, they started to demand another sign:

وَقَالُوا۟ لَوْلَآ أُنزِلَ عَلَيْهِ مَلَكٌ ۖ وَلَوْ أَنزَلْنَا مَلَكًا لَّقُضِىَ ٱلْأَمْرُ ثُمَّ لَا يُنظَرُونَ ﴿٨﴾

They say, 'Why was no angel sent down to [support] him?' But had We sent down an angel, their judgement would have come at once with no respite given [8] (The Quran, al-An'am: 8)

What are angels? Angels are a species that Allah Glorified is He has made a part of the unseen world. We believe in them because Allah Glorified is He Who we believe in, says that He has angels, just as He says that there are jinn. Angels belong to the unseen as we have said, and the jinn are concealed from us too. Those stubborn deniers demanded that an angel be sent down so that they could believe. Thus, they knew that there is an invisible world and that their original disposition has something in common with the heaven, but they continued to deny. Their mentioning of an angel is evidence that they still had traces of the religion of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them in the depths of their hearts. Those traces remained in their souls because they were not related to sovereignty. Had the True Lord Glorified is He sent down an angel to them, they would not still have believed because they were deniers. The True Lord Glorified is He did not want to apply His Established Practice to them by sending down the sign that they had demanded in order not to punish them in case they deny it. Had the True Lord Glorified is He sent down an angel to them as they had requested and had they disbelieved afterwards, the matter would have been decided and they would have been destroyed without any respite. Thus, if an angel had made himself apparent and manifest to them in its real state, their human nature would not have been able to tolerate such an experience.

Indeed, the Angel Jibril (Gabriel) that belongs to the invisible world came down in his overwhelming nature with Allah's Revelation to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Though the coming down of this noble angel had a tremendous impact on the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him only traces remained in the wake of their meeting. In this context, the moment that Jibril (Gabriel) came to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for the first time in the Cave of Hira` was related as follows: 'Jibril (Gabriel) came to me and told me to read. I replied, "I do not know how to read." Jibril (Gabriel) then held me (forcibly) and pressed me so hard that I felt distressed. Then he released me and again told me to read, and I replied, "I do not know how to read." Thereupon he held me again and pressed me for the second time till I felt distressed. He then released me and asked me to read, but I replied again, "I do not know how to read." Thereupon he held me for the third time and pressed me till I got distressed, and then he released me and said, "Read! In the name of your Lord who created. He created man from a clinging clot. Read! Your Lord is the Most Bountiful One Who taught by [means of] the pen, Who taught man what he did not know." (al-'Alaq: 1-5) Then Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him returned with that experience; and his heart beating severely till he came upon Khadijah (his wife) Allah be pleased with her and said, "Wrap me up! Wrap me up!" She wrapped him, and when the state of fear was over, he said to Khadijah, "O Khadijah! What is wrong with me? I was afraid that something bad might happen to me." Then he told her the story. Khadijah said, "Never! But be glad with the good tidings! By Allah, Allah will never disgrace you, for by Allah, you keep good relations with your relatives, help the poor and the destitute, serve your guests generously and assist those who are stricken with calamities.”’(1)

Thus, Khadijah Allah be pleased with her was the first person to have faith immediately after she knew about the Revelation. Then, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He relieved to the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: ‘Did We not relieve your heart for you [Prophet Muhammad], and remove the burden that weighed so heavily on your back, and raise your reputation high?’ (ash-Sharh: 1-4) Allah Glorified is He relieved the heart of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to receive the Divine Secrets and Knowledge. Allah Glorified is He further removed from His Noble Messenger the burdens that had weighed heavily upon his back. Allah Glorified is He connected the name of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to the core of faith and religion to the extent that his name is joined to that of the Holy Essence in the Testimony, the first pillar of Islam: ‘I bear witness that there is no deity worthy of worship except Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah.’

We have seen how the situation was extremely difficult for Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when the Jibril (Gabriel) was shown to him in his true form, but Allah Glorified is He helped His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to receive Jibril (Gabriel) in this form. We may know that there is a difference between the human physique and the angelic physique. The human physique is associated with material elements that suit its formation. So, if it is exposed to a higher power, it cannot bear it unless Allah Glorified is He prepares and shapes the Angel in a way that makes him qualified to be sent, and in the meantime, prepares the messenger to be qualified to receive the Revelation. This is the case when messengers receive angels, then what about their seeing the Holy Essence. We learn the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when he came to meet his Lord. In this context, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘When Musa (Moses) came for the appointment, and his Lord spoke to him, he said, “My Lord, show Yourself to me: let me see You!” He said, “You will never see Me, but look at that mountain: if it remains standing firm, you will see Me", and when his Lord revealed Himself to the mountain, He made it crumble. Musa (Moses) fell down unconscious. When he recovered, he said, "Glory be to You! To You I turn in repentance! I am the first to believe!"" (al-A'raf: 143)

(1) Al-Bukhari

What prevents man from seeing Allah Glorified is He is man's inability to visually encompass Him. When Allah Glorified is He appeared to the firm and solid mountain it was levelled to the ground and became dust. On his part, Musa (Moses) peace be upon him fell down unconscious because of the tremendous scene he had just witnessed. When he awoke, he repented to Allah Glorified is He and declared himself to be the first to believe in Him. Thus, if man is made unconscious by the True Lord Glorified is He showing Himself to the mountain, then how could he stand the True Lord Glorified is He showing Himself to him?

We may know that every creature has a certain capacity that qualifies it to get the elements it needs; we give an example of this from our everyday life —Allah has the highest image and He is Exalted above every likeness. When a person gets a house, he intends to provide it with the electricity required to obtain light as well as the power necessary to operate different devices. When this person goes to bed, he dispenses with light and seeks darkness. He turns the lights off and uses a small lamp that cannot take power directly from the main source of electricity. So, he brings a power transformer which reduces the high electric energy of the source to be suitable for the small lamp. Thus, he maintains a dim light at night so that he can benefit from darkness and get to sleep.

The True Lord Glorified is He has indeed blessed us with the creation of light and darkness; each has its mission. While the creation of light, illumination, and electricity has allowed man to develop civilisations, darkness has allowed man to find rest and tranquillity so that he can regain his energy and vitality. We maintain little light that does not disturb us at night in order not to collide with things or break them when we get up to relieve ourselves.

Similarly, man, still a weak creature, is incapable of receiving the Revelation from Allah Glorified is He in a direct way. It is from the True Lord's Mercy towards His creation that He placed a link between Him and mankind. As a link, Jibril (Gabriel) learns the Revelation from Allah Glorified is He to convey it to the chosen messenger; and in turn the chosen messenger becomes another link. The disbelievers were foolish enough to demand that an angel be sent down as a messenger. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He responds to them in another verse in the Glorious Quran, saying: ‘The only thing that kept these people from believing, when Guidance came to them, was that they said, “How could Allah have sent a human being as a messenger?” Say, “If there were angels walking about on earth, feeling at home, We would have sent them an angel from Heaven as a messenger.”’ (al-Isra’: 94-95)

Being ignorant people, they asked that an angel be sent down with Guidance as a messenger. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He commanded His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to answer them by saying that if there had been angels amongst human beings, i.e. if there had been angels walking on the earth, and then an angel would have been sent to them as a messenger. As this was not the case, then the True Lord Glorified is He sent a messenger from amongst human beings. A messenger must convey Allah's Message to his people and be an example for them by adopting as a person his religion's way of life. If an angel had been sent down as a messenger and adopted the religion's way of life in person, the human beings concerned would have said to him, ‘You are an angel and you can do things that we cannot do; so, you are not a good example for us’. For this reason, a messenger must be of the same species of the targeted people so that he can be an example and model for them.

Indeed, this nullifies the claims that 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is God or son of God because 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him demanded his people to act as he did. The True Lord Glorified is He sent humans only as messengers to underscore that they are models and examples with their nations. Thus, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘...But had We sent down an angel’, their judgement would have come at once...’ (al-An‘am: 8) because humans cannot receive an angel’s rays of illumination and radiance since they are not prepared to have these rays of illumination and radiance. Therefore, the True Lord the Glorified and Exalted says:

وَلَوْ جَعَلْنَٰهُ مَلَكًا لَّجَعَلْنَٰهُ رَجُلًا وَلَلَبَسْنَا عَلَيْهِم مَّا يَلْبِسُونَ ﴿٩﴾

Indeed, if We had sent an angel as messenger, We would still have sent him in the form of a man, so increasing their confusion [9] (The Quran, al-An'am: 9)

Hence, if Allah Glorified is He had intended to send a messenger from amongst the angels, He would have made him in the form of a human because of people's inability to see an angel in his original shape; they may even be destroyed when witnessing him, '...so increasing their confusion.' This means that We confuse them by making the angel resemble a man, thus adding to their original confusion. Encountering this situation, they would say, 'You are only a man, not an angel'. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He sent down an angel in the form of a man as in the case of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. In this regard, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'Tell them too about Ibrahim's [Abraham's] guests; when they came to him and said, "Peace," he said, "We are afraid of you." "Do not be afraid", they said, "We bring you good news of a son who will have great knowledge."' (al-Hijr: 51-53)

When Allah Glorified is He sent angels as guests to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him he was afraid of them after he had seen them not eating from the calf he had served them. They told him to be at ease by telling him the good news sent from Allah Glorified is He that he would be granted a child named Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him from his wife Sarah after Allah Glorified is He had given him Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him from Hajar at an earlier time.

Likewise, the True Lord Glorified is He sent an angel to the Virgin Maryam (Mary), peace be upon her; and he appeared before her in the form of a perfected man and informed her that she would get pregnant with 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him. Thus, an angel is embodied in the form of a man when Allah Glorified is He sends him on a mission to human beings because an angel does not come to humans in his original form. It is Allah's Grace towards His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that He permitted him to see Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him in his original form once in the Cave of Hira` and another at the Lote Tree of the utmost boundary. Meanwhile, he saw Jibril (Gabriel) as a man when he appeared in the form of Dehyah Al-Kalbi and when he came as a traveller to Messenger

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask him about Islam and faith. This last incident was related to us by ‘Abdullah ibn ‘Umar Allah be pleased with him who said, ‘My father, ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him told me, “Once we were sitting in the company of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him when there appeared a man dressed in very white clothes and having extraordinary black hair. No signs of fatigue of a journey appeared on him and he was known to none of us. He sat down facing the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him putting his knees against the knees of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and placing both of his palms over his two thighs and said, “O Muhammad! Tell me about Islam”. He peace and blessings be upon him replied, “Islam is to testify that none has the right to be worshipped but Allah, and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah; that you observe salat (prayers), give zakat (alms), observe sawm (fasting) of Ramadan and perform Hajj (pilgrimage) at the Sacred House (Ka`ba), provided you have resources of making a journey to it.” He replied, “You have spoken the truth.” We were surprised to see that he had asked him and confirmed the correctness of the answers. He then enquired, “Tell me about faith.” The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, “It is to believe in Allah, His Angels, His Books, His Messengers, and the Last Day and that you believe in preordainment (destiny), its bad and good consequences.” He said, “You have spoken the truth.” He then enquired, “Tell me about ihsan (doing the most perfect deed).” He peace and blessings be upon him said, “It is to worship Allah as if you are seeing Him; and although you do not see Him, He sees you.” He enquired, “Inform me about the Hour (i.e., the Day of Resurrection).” He peace and blessings be upon him replied, “I have no more knowledge thereof than you.” He said, “Inform me about some of its signs.” He peace and blessings be upon him said, “They are that a slave will give birth to her own master, and that you will find the barefooted, naked, poor shepherds competing one another in the construction of higher buildings.” Then he departed. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him kept silent for a while, and then he said to me, “O ‘Umar! Do you know who the questioner was?” I replied, “Allah and His Messenger know best.” The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said, “He was Jibril (Gabriel); he came to you to teach you your religion.”’(1)

(1) This Hadith was narrated by Muslim in the Book of Faith and was not mentioned in=

Thus, we as humans are incapable of seeing angels unless Allah Glorified is He sends them in the form of men. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'Indeed, if We had sent an angel as messenger, We would still have sent him in the form of a man, so increasing their confusion.' (al-An'am: 9) So, sending angels in the form of humans is there all the time as Allah Glorified is He sent angels as men to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him Maryam (Mary), the daughter of 'Imran peace be upon her and Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was sitting among his people.

Afterwards, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He comforts His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying:

وَلَقَدِ ٱسۡتُهۡزِئَ بِرُسُلٖ مِّن قَبۡلِكَ فَحَاقَ بِٱلَّذِينَ
سَخِرُواْ مِنۡهُم مَّا كَانُواْ بِهِۦ يَسۡتَهۡزِءُونَ ١٠

Messengers have been mocked before you [Muhammad], and those who mocked them were engulfed by the very punishment they had mocked [10] (The Quran, al-An'am: 10)

Here, Allah Glorified is He tells His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the people of disbelief always made fun of the previous messengers; so Allah Glorified is He humiliated them with the same punishment He prepares for the deniers of the messengers' guidance. Those who mock the news coming from the heavens will be severely punished by Allah Glorified is He because of their ridicule and mocking.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He then says:

= Al-Bukhari. Ibn Hibban also narrated the same Hadith in his Sahih (collection of Ahadith) based on the narration of Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said, 'One day The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him was preaching to the people when a man came to him and said, "What is faith?" He peace and blessings be upon him said, "Faith is to believe in Allah, His Angels, His Books, His Messengers and believe in the resurrection…" Moreover, Ahmad narrated the Hadith in his Musnad (collection of Ahadith), while At-Tirmidhi narrated it, with the question about faith being the start of the Hadith.

قُلْ سِيرُوا۟ فِى ٱلْأَرْضِ ثُمَّ ٱنظُرُوا۟ كَيْفَ كَانَ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلْمُكَذِّبِينَ ﴿١١﴾

Say, ‘Travel throughout the earth and see what fate befell those who rejected the truth’ [11]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 11)

You should know that the True Lord Glorified is He never says, ‘Travel on the earth’ because the earth is a container in which man can walk as he is placed within this container. Allah Glorified is He had told man about this piece of knowledge before science proved that the earth is spherical and hanging in the air, and that it is encompassed by the air which is considered the source of nourishment for man through oxygen and for plants through carbon dioxide. We may learn that man can live without food for weeks and without water for days; but he cannot live if the air is prevented from him for a few moments. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He never allows anyone to take possession of the air. Thus, we have learned that the air belongs to the earth. Wherever we go, we are surrounded by the air; so, we travel throughout the earth. This is a bit of the scientific inimitability manifested in the Quran. In another similar place, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘...So travel through the earth and see what was the fate of those who denied the Truth!’ (an-Nahl: 36)

Here in the chapter of al-An`am (Livestock), the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘Say, “Travel throughout the earth; then see what fate befell those who rejected the Truth.”’ (al-An‘am: 11)

What is the difference between the two verses? Per Arabic, both fa' (and) and thumma (then) are particles of conjunctions that indicate sequence. However, fa’ denotes sequence with succession, i.e. without any delay or passing of time. For example, we may say, ‘We welcomed Zaid and (fa’) ‘Amr’, i.e. we welcomed ‘Amr after we welcomed Zaid without any delay. On the other hand, thumma refers to a long period of time separating two events. Hence, when the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘...So travel through the earth and see what was the fate of those who denied the Truth!’ (an-Nahl: 36), it is as if observation and contemplation are the goal of travelling; people travel through the land to learn lessons.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'Say, "Travel throughout the earth; then see what fate befell those who rejected the Truth."' (al-An'am: 11) This means that a man may go through the earth for the sake of trade, cultivation or any other business. During this journey, he must think and contemplate. So, travelling may be for drawing lessons or for doing business. When travelling for learning lessons, man gains experience directly, but when travelling for doing business, he derives lessons during conducting such business. When Quraysh went on their trade caravans to Syria and Yemen, they could see the ruins of the old deniers, whether they belonged to Thamud, `Ad or others. The travellers of Quraysh had to learn lessons during their journeys which were made for the sake of trade. Afterwards, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him:

قُل لِّمَن مَّا فِي ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۖ قُل لِّلَّهِۚ كَتَبَ عَلَىٰ نَفۡسِهِ ٱلرَّحۡمَةَۚ لَيَجۡمَعَنَّكُمۡ
إِلَىٰ يَوۡمِ ٱلۡقِيَٰمَةِ لَا رَيۡبَ فِيهِۚ ٱلَّذِينَ خَسِرُوٓاْ أَنفُسَهُمۡ فَهُمۡ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ١٢

Say, 'To whom belongs all that is in the heavens and earth?'
Say, 'To God. He has taken it upon Himself to be merciful.
He will certainly gather you on the Day of Resurrection, which is beyond all doubt. Those who deceive themselves will not believe [12] (The Quran, al-An'am: 12)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He teaches His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him how to ask and how to answer so that people learn through this dialogue that the entire Dominion is Allah's. Had people, including the deniers, searched for an owner of this universe, they would have found none except Allah. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says about those disbelievers: 'If you ask the disbelievers who created the heavens and the earth and who harnessed the sun and the moon, they are sure to say, "Allah." Then why do they turn away from Him?' (al-'Ankabut: 61)

Despite their associating of partners with Allah Glorified is He they cannot keep themselves from recognizing that Allah Glorified is He is the Creator of everything. Man may be deluded by his will of choice; but when he finds himself forced to do certain things, he immediately acknowledges the Truth.

Man may have the choice to do some actions, while he has no choice concerning other events that may happen to him. This is because the True Lord Glorified is He wants to alert His creation that He does whatever He wills and that He governs the entire universe. Allah Glorified is He grants man free will in order that he may test himself in regards to obeying Allah's Commands.

Generally speaking, events are of three kinds: an event that happens to you, an event that happens within yourself, and an event that comes from you. You have no choice regarding the events which occur to you as well as those occurring within yourself. All that is left for you is a third the events; that third which comes from you. You are thus placed inside two brackets in which you have no choice: the bracket of birth and the bracket of death. Hence, Allah Glorified is He controls everything.

The True Lord Glorified is He comforts His creation when saying, '...He has taken it upon Himself to be Merciful...' (al-An'am: 12). The True Lord Glorified is He voices this statement to make His slaves feel secure so as not think that Allah Glorified is He will punish them without calling them to account. We must learn that Allah Glorified is He is the Most Forbearing and the Possessor of Great Bounty, Who says: 'Say [Prophet Muhammad], "In Allah's Grace and Mercy let them rejoice..."' (Yunus: 58).

Allah Glorified is He forgives much; the entrance to His Mercy and Grace is quite open and the way to repentance is paved before sinners. It is Allah's Bounty that He Glorified is He made some of the disbelievers stand in opposition to Muslims at the beginning of the Call, and afterwards they became like swords in defence of Islam. Allah, the Most Compassionate, gathers us for reckoning on the Day of Resurrection which is beyond doubt and uncertainty. We are all heading towards that day; the disbelievers will come there against their will, while the believers will be delighted for they are going to meet their Lord, being sure of Allah's Mercy and Grace.

The disbelievers lose themselves due to their evil deeds—we seek refuge in God—as confirmed by the True Lord Glorified is He Who says, '...Those who will lose themselves [that Day] do not believe.' (al-An'am: 12) Losing oneself is a consequence of losing faith. When we consider ends and means, we will find that one's means comes before their end; but in reality, the end becomes clear before the means. For example, a student keeps in mind the end of success; so, he exerts every effort to succeed. We should know that any conditional statement is situated between two responses: the motivating response and the actual response. Success is a motive for studying, whereas studying makes success a reality. Ibn Ar-Rumi, a poet, said,

Who can show me my end before my means?
How come? Indeed, ends come after means?

The poet's lines here do not speak the truth because man must be aware of the end first, then he must look for the means that will lead him to the end. When we find that man's ultimate end is to resort to Allah Glorified is He while the means is the religion's way of life, then why are people at a loss? Thus, we learn that those who have not believed in faith have lost themselves because they have not distinguished the motivating end which is to repent and submit to Allah Glorified is He from the existing end which is the means. Allah Glorified is He has made it easy for His slaves when He has given them the way of life they must follow.

Then, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَلَهُۥ مَا سَكَنَ فِى ٱلَّيۡلِ وَٱلنَّهَارِۚ وَهُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ﴿١٣﴾

All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him.
He is the All Hearing, the All Knowing [13]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 13)

It is the Greatness of the Supreme Existent Whose Existence comes from His Self that He speaks about Himself in the third-person. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says at the beginning of some verses, 'Say: "He is Allah…"'.

'Say' is a command; as if when the True Lord Glorified is He says 'He', it only belongs to Allah Glorified is He. 'All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him...' (al-An'am: 13). The verb sakana (rest) is comprised of the Arabic letters sin, kaf and nun from which we can get several meanings. There is, for instance, the word sakan (settlement or dwelling) and the word sukoon (stillness or the opposite of movement). An example of dwelling is Allah's Words for Adam peace be upon him: '...O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in this garden…' (al-Baqara: 35).

Again, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him...' (al-An'am: 13). It is as if night and day are a vessel and all of existence is contained within it. Night and day here refer to the dimension of place which is the earth. Every place on earth has night and day. If we want to refer to dwelling, the verb sakana refers to that, and if we want stillness —which is the opposite of movement —the meaning is still there. Everything in motion eventually becomes still. Man controls movement for some time, then he dies or becomes motionless inside the earth. Thus, the common feature that characterizes both night and day is 'All that rests...' (ma sakana). Therefore, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: 'All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him. He is the All-Hearing, the All Knowing.' (al-An'am: 13)

When Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him...' (al-An'am: 13), He talks about time as well as the events that occur within it. As we may know, man is an event, and everything that happens to him is an event too. Everything in the universe is also an event. All these events are originated by the True Lord Glorified is He Who gets His Existence from His Essence.

Since events are created, they must have time and place. The place of events is the heaven and the earth and what is between them, while the time of events is night and day. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He talks about the creation of time after telling us that He is the Creator of place. 'Say, "To whom belongs all that is in the heavens and the earth?" Say, "To Allah"' (al-An'am: 12).

So, time and place were created when Allah Glorified is He wanted to bring this universe into existence. Never say, 'Where had Allah Glorified is He been before He created the universe?' This is because the word 'where?' is an inquiry about place, and 'when?' is an inquiry about time. Both were established following the existence of events in the universe. The universe is a fixed state, while time is not a fixed state because it can be in the past, the present, or the future.

When the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him...’ (al-An‘am: 13), it means that He controls the two states: the fixed and the unfixed, or what is stationary and what is moving in the universe. This is because everything that moves will eventually become stationary. Or, the True Lord’s statement, ‘All that rests by night or by day belongs to Him...’ (al-An‘am: 13), refers to what occurs during the night and the day. In other words, everything that occurs by night and day, whether it is moving or stationary is possessed by Allah Glorified is He.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He concludes this verse by saying, ‘He is the All Hearing, the All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 13) Hearing is connected to something heard, i.e. that which is in motion, while knowledge is connected to something heard, seen, smelt and involving other forms of perception. Therefore, Allah’s statement, ‘He is the All-Hearing, the All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 13), is rendered to include both moving and stationary things, for nothing is concealed from him or escapes him.

When the True Lord Glorified is He describes Himself with an attribute that is shared by humans, we should understand it within the context of ‘…There is nothing like Him…’ (ash-Shura: 11). You, O man, hear and can be described as ‘hearing’; you have knowledge and can be described as ‘knowing’; you have sight and can be described as ‘seeing’ and you have power and can be described as ‘powerful’. Further, you may possess wealth and you can be described as ‘rich’; you exist and you can be described as ‘existing’ and you are alive and you can be described as ‘living’.

However, are these attributes that you have the same as Allah’s? No, because Allah’s Attributes are only understood within the framework of ‘…There is nothing like Him…’ (ash-Shura: 11). We witness this in ourselves; man has a state of living and a state of death; the state of living is divided into two other states: the state of waking and the state of sleeping. In the state of waking, we see per the laws of vision which is ruled by the laws of light. Likewise, hearing is governed by laws concerned with sound and oscillating waves.

Nevertheless, man sleeps with closed eyes and he has dreams in which he sees different colours. So, what makes you perceive these colours while your eyes are closed? Since humans have dreams in which they can see without eyes, then do not say that Allah Glorified is He sees us with eyes that are like ours. Indeed, He Glorified is He sees within the context of '…There is nothing like Him…' (ash-Shura: 11). He Glorified is He is the All-Sustaining and He governs His slaves in both time and place when they are awake and when they are asleep.

To give you an example of our daily life, we find a man and his wife sleeping in the same bed. The man may see himself in his sleep facing enemies, while his wife sees herself surrounded by her joyful children and grandchildren. Then, they wake up and tell each other about what they have seen for more than an hour, even though the human brain is active for only seven seconds during sleep.(1)

Thus, the company of others, time and place are absent during sleep. Having learned about these laws that govern man's life, we must conclude that we cannot encompass the Attributes of the Creator of all laws, the True Lord Glorified is He. We must understand them within the framework of '…There is nothing like Him…' (ash-Shura: 11).

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He then says:

قُلْ أَغَيْرَ ٱللَّهِ أَتَّخِذُ وَلِيًّا فَاطِرِ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضِ وَهُوَ يُطْعِمُ وَلَا يُطْعَمُ ۗ قُلْ إِنِّيٓ
أُمِرْتُ أَنْ أَكُونَ أَوَّلَ مَنْ أَسْلَمَ ۖ وَلَا تَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ ﴿١٤﴾

Say, 'Shall I take for myself a protector other than God, the Creator of the heavens and the earth, who feeds but is not fed?' Say, 'I am commanded to be the first [of you] to devote myself [to Him].' Do not be one of the idolaters [14] (The Quran, al-An'am: 14)

The Arabic letter hamza that equals the letter 'a' in English in the phrase 'aghaira' translated here as 'is it other', is called the hamza of negation, just as we say in Arabic `atasub `aback translated here as 'Do you insult your father?' This hamza does not refer to a question as much as it indicates reproach and blame. '…Is it other than Allah I should take as a protector...'

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

(al-An'am: 14), i.e. the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He commands His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to reject the taking of other than Allah Glorified is He as a protector.

Indeed, taking Allah Glorified is He as a protector is a vital matter because the events occurring to man prove to him that he is weak and his circumstances are always changing. When feeling weak, man must seek refuge in the One Who is more powerful than him and Who does not change. The Power of the Protector —Allah Glorified is He–cannot become weaker, just as His Wealth cannot turn into poverty, and His Knowledge has nothing to do with ignorance. He is the One Who changes and is never changed. Therefore, it is Allah's Blessing towards His creation that He has made Himself a Protector for them since He Glorified is He controls the course of events.

The True Lord Glorified is He teaches His creation how to be wise, act properly, and put their trust in Him. He Glorified is He is the Ever-Living who does not die. We notice in this verse that the True Lord Glorified is He commands His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to convey His revelation to people. Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed the revelation to the letter as stated in the inimitable Glorious Quran.

An example of this is the True Lord's statement, 'Say: "He is Allah the One."' (al-Ikhlas: 1). Here, Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him honestly conveys to us the exact words of his Lord Glorified is He as it was sent down to him, beginning with the word 'Say'. We see the same thing in this verse, 'Say [O Muhammad], 'Is it other than Allah I should take as a protector...' (al-An'am: 14). He is the One Whose Attributes of Perfection are mentioned in the previous verses; the One Who created the heavens and the earth and made darkness and light. Allah Glorified is He controls everything reposing by night and day. This True Lord Glorified is He is the One worthy of worship.

The True Lord Glorified is He wants His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to extract the answer from people instead of saying, 'I do not take other than Allah as a protector'. Allah Glorified is He commands His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to ask people, 'Say [O Muhammad], "Is it other than Allah I should take as a protector..."' (al-An'am: 14). Thus, the question is raised by the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him as commanded by Allah Glorified is He. People are given freedom to come up with an answer which will eventually be the desired one.

When a man hears the like of this question, he must rack his brain and think carefully to find an answer to such a question. He will give no answer other than saying, 'I do not have a protector except Allah Glorified is He'. A protector is the one who is always here to help you in your weakness and save you when crying out to him for help.

A man does not cry out to anyone for help unless he is afflicted with calamities. The distressed person thus rests assured that the powerful one who comes to their help will save and assist them. It is quite normal for a man to seek a protector in this life, while it is quite despicable for him to seek a protector other than Allah Glorified is He. We —the believers — take one another as protectors within the framework of Allah's Protection in support of the True Lord's statement, 'The believers, both men and women, support each other. They order what is right and forbid what is wrong they keep up the prayers and pay the prescribed alms and they obey Allah and His Messenger [Muhammad]. Allah will give His Mercy to such people; Allah is Almighty and Wise.' (at-Tawba: 71)

The believing men and women exchange love and assistance in accordance with the mutual contract of faith that is between them and the True Lord Exalted and Glorified is He. They command one another with the commands of the right path. They prevent one another from the unlawful that Allah has prohibited and they connect themselves to the True Lord by establishing the prayer. They carry out Allah's right regarding their wealth by way of zakat. They obey Allah and follow the commands of His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. Hence, they are bestowed with Allah's true promise of mercy and He is the One fully capable of taking care of them. He is Wise in maintaining them and He is Almighty; no one overcomes Him.

Therefore, you are seeking a protector in a moment of weakness, and a moment of adversity. A man is not created perfect, such that he is susceptible to weakness and poverty, not always strong nor rich. You know that man is subject to changes, so we do not see a strong person whose strength is permanently established, or a rich person whose wealth is permanently established. Man is 'the son of changes'. Circumstances that are beyond his capacity befall him, and therefore he asks others who can help him. The believer also loves to be strong so that he can help others because the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He has distributed His gifts amongst His creation in the universe so that He can guarantee the permanence of the protection and its continuation. Thus, you are in need of the work of another man because you are weak in some aspects, but someone else is strong at it. The doctor needs the engineer, and the engineer needs the doctor. The doctor and the engineer need the farmer, and the farmer needs the work of the engineer and the doctor. The doctor, the engineer, and the farmer need the work of the lawyer.

This is how Allah distributes His gifts in the universe, and He did not allow for one man to possess all the gifts. Thus, society does not support itself out of courtesy and generosity, but out of need. Every man is the master of his corner of life, and the other corners are mastered by other human beings. Therefore, the True Lord says, 'It is We who have apportioned among them their livelihood in the life of this world and have raised some of them above others in degrees [of rank] that they may make use of one another for service. But the mercy of your Lord is better than whatever they accumulate.' (az-Zukhruf: 32).

This is a declaration from Allah Glorified and Exalted is He that He has distributed provision amongst humanity so that they can support one another and some would be made to work for others in fulfilling the needs of one another so that the matters of life follow smooth organization. In this distribution, there is mercy from the True Lord towards His creation. If all people were of equal intelligence, and all of them became geniuses, who would oversee regulating the streets? Who would work on and maintain buildings, or take care of and feed the animals, besides many other things without which life cannot be ordered.

Each one of us sees the man who digs wells for flowing streams and goes out the next morning saying, 'O Opener, O Omniscient, O All-Provider and O Bountiful'. He seeks a new well from the flowing streams so that he can leave it until he has acquired nourishment for himself and his dependents. Each one of us is in need of others, and this is the meaning of, ‘they may make use of one another for service.’

Therefore, taking a protector is a natural matter, and faith in Allah gives us the intelligence to choose a protector. It is upon the believing person to choose the protector that will be there when he needs him, and therefore he must choose the protection of Allah, not the protection of changing circumstances. Allah subjugates people to serve the believer, including his enemy. Therefore, the True Lord informs us on the tongue of His Messenger, ‘Say: “Am I to take for my protector anyone but Allah.”’ (al-An‘am: 14) Those who rebuke us for taking Allah as a protector and want us to take other than Him see in themselves an example. His hopes may be dashed, for the man from amongst them may take a man like him as a protector, and when he needs him he finds that he is sick, absent or his heart has changed towards him. However, the believer does choose Allah as his protector because He is the One who is never absent and will never change, and nor will He ever become weak. The Quran does not rebuke man for talking a protector from amongst human beings, but the True Lord indicates to us that He is the True Protector, and it is upon the believer to take his believing brothers as his protectors because it is a protection from Allah and unto Allah.

You, O Muslim, when you choose the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He as your protector, He is the One who will bring you all kinds of provision and prepare them and arrange them to be at your service. This is because Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, ‘Say, “Is it other than Allah I should take as a protector, Creator of the heavens and the earth, while it is He who feeds and is not fed?”’ (al-An‘am: 14) Indeed, the True Lord created the heavens and the earth without using any prior example. He created this universe without using any previous model. When 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him wanted to confirm his miracle for his people, he brought some clay and formed it into the shape of a bird. Therefore, there is a prior example that he found and followed. 'Isa (Jesus) is a man from the creation. As for the Creator of the entire creation, He created the heavens and the earth without any prior example. You, O man, might not turn to the issue of the creation of the heavens and the earth because you see them in every moment in a monotonous fashion, and you may think that it is an easy matter, but the True Lord says, 'The creation of the heavens and earth is greater than the creation of mankind, but most of the people do not know.' (Ghafir: 57)

Allah the Exalted vows that the creation of the heavens and the earth is a matter that is greater and finer than the creation of mankind but most of mankind does not know this. Then Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'And the heaven We constructed with strength, and indeed, We are [its] expander.' (adh-Dhariyat: 47)

This refers to the creation of the seen and unseen universe because there are many celestial bodies and solar systems, and what is beyond that of this expansion of the universe that the intellect cannot grasp nor define. This baffling capacity is from Allah's power. We find the True Lord using the word Creator at one time meaning to put in order, but at another time to mean disorder. The example of putting something in order is the True Lord's saying, 'Creator of the heavens and the earth.' He created the heavens and the earth without any prior example and with a masterful efficiency.

The True Lord says in another place, 'When the sky breaks apart.' (al-Infitar: 1) The True Lord is drawing attention to the day of the greatest fright in which the sky will be split and in which the celestial bodies will fall. None of these things will be carrying out their task because Allah will cause them to dysfunction.

He also says: '[And] who created seven heavens in layers. You do not see in the creation of the Most Merciful any inconsistency. So, return [your] vision [to the sky]; do you see any breaks?' (al-Mulk: 3) The True Lord is Capable of everything, and He is the creator of the seven heavens with precision, one over the other. The one looking cannot see any flaw in this creation, and let man look at the sky again and he will not find any flaw therein; no cracks or fissures.

The True Lord, with His complete power, gives everything attributes that make it suitable for carrying out what it was created for, so let no one thinks that he has exited from the power of his Creator– and He created the heavens and the earth with complete fashioning and precision, and He is fully capable of splitting them and making them unsuitable at any time that He wills. An example is the sun being rolled up, the stars being blotted out and the mountains being pulverised to dust.

One of the scholars said, 'the word creator was not understood until a Bedouin came and said, "So-and-so is arguing with me over a well that I created (i.e. dug)."' The Bedouin is the one who began the digging of the well. Therefore, the Creator of the heavens of the earth is the One Who created them without any prior example. He says, 'Have those who disbelieved not considered that the heavens and the earth were a joined entity, and We separated them and made from water every living thing? Then will they not believe?' (al-Anbiya': 30) This wise saying was not understood deeply by those before us, but man in these modern times has understood it after scientists discovered that the heavens and the earth were one entity, and the True Lord separated them by His Will; and He made from water every living thing.

Therefore, He is fully capable of everything, and nothing exits from the domain of His power. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He before granting us the creation of life, warned us against being deluded by this life. Therefore, He said, 'Blessed is He in whose hand is dominion, and He is over all things competent. He who created death and life to test you [as to] which of you is best in deed - and He is the Exalted in Might, the Forgiving.' (al-Mulk: 1-2)

It is as if He is drawing man's attention to receive life, and to know that Allah the Exalted created death, so beware of assuming that life is that which gives you the power of motion, realisation and will in some monotony and eternity because there is death.

'Have you seen that which you emit? Is it you who creates it, or are We the Creator? We have decreed death among you, and We are not to be outdone. In that We will change your likenesses and produce you in that [form] which you do not know.' (al-Waqi'a: 58-61) Man does not see the semen that he discharges and which goes into the womb of his wife. No one can do so and observe it until it becomes an embryo and then a human being, but the True Lord is the Determiner and the Creator. He is fully capable of giving us life and determining when we will die, and no one overcomes Him. Indeed, He changes our outward forms when He wants to, and He creates other than us and brings us into being in outward forms that we do not know. He is the All-Bestowal of life and He is the One Who removes it with death.

He says to us, ‘And have you seen that [seed] which you sow? Is it you who makes it grow, or are We the grower? (al-Waqi‘a: 63-64) Here the True Lord draws our attention towards the crops that we eat and the fruits that we harvest from the earth, and all we need to do is plant the seeds. He is the One who placed in the seed accumulated wonders. In the seed is that which nourishes it until it has a small root that can suck up its nutrients from the earth, and then it grows a stem and then the roots become firm and the stem is strengthened. All man needs to do is plant the seeds and sow the earth. Still, the True Lord respects man’s work. He says, ‘and have you seen that [seed] which you sow?’

Regarding water, the True Lord says, ‘And have you seen the water that you drink? Is it you who brought it down from the clouds, or is it We Who bring it down? [If We willed, We could make it bitter, so why are you not grateful?’ (al-Waqi‘a: 68-70) This fresh water that we drink is only sent down by Allah from rainy clouds. This process of causing rain is an objective of gathering. The water flowing in the rivers only came from the rain that has come down from the sky. The True Lord has sent the sun’s rays to evaporate the seawater. It accumulates itself in a cloud and then Allah’s command comes to blow cold winds and thus it falls as rain.

When we filter a cup of water in a laboratory, we bring a stove, a container, and some fuel. We place the water that we want to filter and it evaporates. Then we uncover the drops of vapour by means of a draught of cold air. The like of this process burdens us greatly in terms of physical and mental work to build this kind of device that allows us to filter a cup of water. Thus, what do we think of the rain that is sent down pouring in abundance? Indeed, we find that three quarters of the earth’s surface is water. Allah the Exalted has spread it out over a vast area so that it can evaporate easily. Thus, if we sprinkle a glass of water over a vast surface in the coldest place, it will evaporate. This spreading of the surface area of water is what facilitates the process of evaporation. The water vapour ascends the oceans and the sea until it reaches the upper layers of the atmosphere, and then it becomes visible in the form of small water drops that fall as rain in disparity from one region to another. He is also Fully Capable of removing the usefulness of this water. The True Lord says to us: ‘And have you seen the fire that you ignite? Is it you who produced its tree, or are We the producer? We have made it a reminder and provision for the travellers.’ (al-Waqi‘a: 71-73) He reminds us that He is the One Who created the fire that we kindle. He brought the first source of fuel which is the wood that originally was dried green trees. In all of this, the True Lord’s power is made manifest to us, so we glorify His Most Great name.

‘So exalt the name of your Lord, the Most Great.’ (al-Waqi‘a: 74) Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is transcendent above having any partners in the matters of creation and the universe. Thus, the True Lord addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Say, “Is it other than Allah I should take as a protector?” This question forces us to reflect on the matter of choosing a protector, to employ our thoughts and to know that taking a protector is a necessary matter within the human soul. However, who deserves to be taken as a protector? We find in the way the True Lord raises us what helps us to extract sound thoughts and rightly guided opinions when He says to us: ‘Hence, place thy trust in the Living One who dies not.’ (al-Furqan: 58)

We know that taking a protector from a human being will not last. Thus, you feel that you are alone in this universe, but when you rely on Allah, He is the Ever Living Who never dies. He is the, ‘Creator of the heavens and the earth, while it is He who feeds and is not fed?’ He is the one who feeds us from the underground wells of the earth that He willed for our nourishment. Why does the True Lord mention the issue of food here? Food is a type of sustenance which – as you know – is directly consumable and beneficial to us. If a man were in the desert, and all he had was a mountain of pure gold with no sip of water or a piece of bread, then the mountain of gold is worth nothing. The mountain of gold is indeed sustenance, but it does not benefit us directly. The provision that we benefit from directly is food, drink, and clothing. We need food and drink every day, and we need clothes. Therefore, direct provision is the basic essential of life.

The protector who gives victory must have abundant power to feed; the one who provides us with the power that is the basis of life. It is the capacity for man to continue on earth. The mother feeds her child and she is also fed by the food that her husband gives her. The True Lord alone is the One Who feeds all creation and no one feeds Him. When we trace every gift in this life, we find that each one goes back to Allah.

Accordingly, do not use your protector for the means but use him for the ends, because all means go back to Allah. The command comes from the True Lord to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'Say, [O Muhammad], "Indeed, I have been commanded to be the first [among you] who submit [to Allah] and [was commanded], to not ever be of the polytheists."' (al-An'am: 14)

This command is coming from the supreme commander, and He is Allah. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say that this command is from him because he is a human being like us. Allah informed that our Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is the first to surrender unto Allah and the first to receive the honour of adhering to Islam. For example, every Muslim leader is an example for others such as Tariq ibn Zyad who conquered Andalusia which was a vast kingdom. He descended from the ships and said to his soldiers, 'I have not commanded you to do anything I would be safe from. Rather, I am with you. Know that I, when the two armies meet, shall set myself against the tyrant of the people of Luzuriq (Roderick), and I will fight him if Allah so wills.' He did not command anything that he did not apply to himself. He applied it to himself first, and the bane of leadership is commanding something one does not apply.

Before that there was `Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him who governed himself and then governed the life of this world. He gathered his relatives first and said to them, 'I will lead the Muslims, and by the One in whose hand is my soul, whoever opposes me from amongst you, I will make him an exemplary punishment for the Muslims.' `Umar, Allah be pleased with him, wanted to govern his relatives first to provide a model for those entrusted with authority that they govern their relatives first, and to warn them against exploitations under his name so that the affairs amongst Muslims would be upright. Unfortunately, we see many people speaking of [idealistic practice of] Islam and they want everyone else to be [true] Muslims while they do not apply the principles of Islam on themselves. The True Lord revealed the command to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Say, [O Muhammad], “Indeed, I have been commanded to be the first [among you] who submit [to Allah] and [was commanded], to not ever be of the polytheists.”’ (al-An‘am: 14)

The meaning of submission is that he is handing over the reins of his life to the One whose rule and justice he has confidence in, and He is the True Lord. When we were children, we handed over the reins of our affairs to those in charge of our upbringing, and we see fathers and mothers who are tired and burdened. We obey their commands until we reach adolescence and our personality grows within us. We find an adolescent who refuses, for example, to wear short trousers and instead wears long trousers, and he chooses what clothes to wear per the prevalent modern fashion. Then the young man begins to administer his own affairs.

The bane of our lives is that we neglect our children’s upbringing when they are very young. Then we come and say, ‘Come on! Let us raise the youth’ pretending to forget that youth is a phase filled with strength that can be used to the benefit of society. The time for a sound upbringing is early childhood. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him per the Lord’s words, is the first of the Muslims, and he received the command against associating partners with Allah.

Beware, O Muslims, of being arrogant towards the like of this command because Prophet Muhammad is the first one to be commanded to it by the True Lord. Beware, O Muslim, of finding any fault in receiving a command from your Creator because a fault may come to you when a command is issued to you from one of your equals, but if it is being directed from the True Lord, then it is a must that your soul is pleased with it and your heart finds tranquillity in it. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him used to exert himself when he came across an incident in which there was no ruling from Allah. He would give a ruling by himself, and if the ruling was correct the True Lord would reveal something from the Quran to confirm it. If the ruling needed some amendment, then the True Lord would reveal the necessary amendment for the ruling, and the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would convey the True Lord's amendment of it without finding any fault in that. He would convey it with a smile, veracity and trust that prove He is conveying from Allah.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He favoured Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he did not amend a judgement out of respect for the Prophet's independent reasoning. He says: 'May Allah pardon you, [O Muhammad]; why did you give them permission [to remain behind]? You should not have until it was evident to you who were truthful and you knew [who were] the liars.' (at-Tawba: 43) The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him had given permission to some of the hypocrites to stay behind from fighting before their matter had been clarified so that he would know who amongst them was truthful in his excuse and who was lying. The pardon came from Allah because the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him did all he could to arrive at a judgement and the Messenger informed us of what Allah revealed.

The True Lord says:

قُلۡ إِنِّيٓ أَخَافُ إِنۡ عَصَيۡتُ رَبِّي عَذَابَ يَوۡمٍ عَظِيمٖ ١٥

Say, 'I fear the punishment of a dreadful Day if I disobey my Lord' [15] (The Quran, al-An'am: 15)

He is the chosen Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the one selected and infallible declaring that he fears Allah because the destiny of Allah is not possessed by anyone. No one can change Allah's destiny other than Allah Glorified and Exalted is He. In the above verse, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him conditioned fear on disobeying Allah, but if he does not disobey his Lord, he has no reason to fear. The 'if' conditions fear on disobedience which would never come from the infallible Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because he does not disobey Allah.

The True Lord wanted to clarify for us that the infallible one does not disobey Allah, but this statement comes on the tongue of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for us to know that there is a gruesome punishment with which Allah threatens those who disobey Him. It is a punishment that harasses the disobedient until it comes to him. This punishment has a particularity of an attraction between it and the disobedient one, just like a magnet's attraction for something else made of metal. For man to be saved from this punishment, he needs the one who will spare him from this severe kind of punishment. Then the True Lord says:

مَّن يُصْرَفْ عَنْهُ يَوْمَئِذٍ فَقَدْ رَحِمَهُۥۚ وَذَٰلِكَ ٱلْفَوْزُ ٱلْمُبِينُ ﴿١٦﴾

God will have been truly merciful to whoever is spared on that Day: that is the clearest triumph [16] (The Quran, al-An'am: 16)

It is as if the one who is not spared from this punishment is the one who will be attracted by the force of this punishment because the fire of hell attracts and drags towards itself those who will be punished. The True Lord says: 'And for those who disbelieved in their Lord is the punishment of Hell, and wretched is the destination. When they are thrown into it, they hear from it a [dreadful] inhaling while it boils up.' (al-Mulk: 6-7) Those who disbelieve in Allah have a punishment that begins with hearing hell inhaling, while it is boiling. Inhaling, as you know, is a force that attracts and draws air into the nose and chest. So, what do we think about the force of Hell inhaling as it draws in and attracts those whom it has been commanded to punish? This fire itself responds to the True Lord questioning it when it hears His statement, 'On the Day We will say to Hell, "Have you been filled?" and it will say, "Are there some more."' (Qaf: 30)

Therefore, the power of punishment that Allah has given it is a duty for Hell which prompts it and pushes it to ask for more disbelievers to punish. Allah Glorified and Exalted created everything to perform a duty, and the duty of the fire is to comply with the True Lord's command when He commands it to carry out its task. Therefore, it is prompted to demand those who will receive punishment. The fire never violates the command of Allah and His decree. If the True Lord spares one of His servants from punishment, then the fire obeys that command. 'He from whom it is averted that Day - [Allah] has granted him mercy.' (al-An'am: 16) He is the doer of whatever He wills. If He reckons us with justice, then every single one of us will be touched by some of hell's punishment, but it is Allah's mercy that prevents the fire from touching the believers. This is because Allah Glorified and Exalted is He pardons much and because the fire inhales everyone who is destined for punishment. We know that inhaling is quicker than exhaling, and inhaling in life is for air.

The reason why inhaling is quicker than exhaling is that the former is tasked to prolong the primary life, which is to provide the body with air. Man, as you know, can only endure without air for the shortest amount of time possible, and it is from Allah's mercy that He has not allowed anyone to own air. This inhaling that gives life on earth also exists in the Hereafter, and it is attributed to the fire. It inhales in order to swallow up the disobedient. In doing so, it carries out the task is has been assigned with. We also know that the fire carries out its task in fury, in accordance with what Allah Glorified and Exalted is He has said: 'It almost bursts with rage.' (al-Mulk: 8)

Does the fire carry out its task without pleasure? Does the fire differ from all of Allah's creations that carry out their tasks in happiness and harmony? The fire bursts with fury because the disbeliever from amongst these people did not know the value of faith, and the fire has feelings like all other created beings. The entire universe has feelings. The universe – as an example – rejoiced at the birth of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The earth, sky, stars, trees and the entire universe rejoiced at the coming of the Prophet Muhammad. This is because all these creations which are subjugated to man glorify Allah and obey Him by their nature just like the bringer of glad tidings, guides man to the Straight Path to make him obedient. Those creatures rejoice at the coming of this bringer of glad tidings.

We know that the place in which man exists, this universe, rejoices when those within it are obedient. This place also grieves when man is disobedient. The place cries out, i.e. any place, upon which there is a disobedient person. We can see this clearly in the True Lord's words regarding the people of Pharaoh, 'How much they left behind of gardens and springs, And crops and noble sites! And comfort wherein they were amused. Thus And We caused to inherit it another people. And the heaven and earth wept not for them, nor were they reprieved.' (ad-Dukhan: 25-29)

The land upon which Pharaoh and his people lived had feelings; the gardens, rivers, water-runnels and all other blessings that man is blessed with, have feelings and sentiments. They feel angry and upset, and they cry out when those who disbelieve in Allah's blessings live within them. This is why the sky and the earth do not cry over the disappearance and exemplary punishment of these disobedient disbelievers and idolaters, while they cry when a believer departs from them. We have in the statement of 'Ali Allah be pleased with him a clarification of this. 'Ali, Allah be pleased with him, said, 'When a believer dies, two places cry over him; a place in the sky and another on Earth. As for the place in the sky, it is the points of ascent of his good actions while the place on earth, it is the place where he prayed.'

This is also evident in a Hadith: 'When one of you dies he is shown his place in the early morning and in the evening. If he is from the people of paradise, he is from the people of paradise; and if he is from the people of the fire, He is from the people of the fire. It is said to him, "This is your place until Allah resurrects you to stand before Him on the Day of Resurrection."'(1)

Therefore, the place in the sky where the deeds of man ascend grieves because there is a loss of righteous action that was passing through it. A man's place of prayer loses the man's prostration that was done out of humility before Allah. However, all creations that have been created by Allah have feelings, and everything in the universe carries out its task per the law of setting in motion and subjugation, not the law of options. Man is the only one who lives per the law of option in some of his states because he is capable of obedience as well as disobedience. This is why when we see prostration to Allah in the Quran, we indeed hear the True Lord's statement, 'Do you not see that to Allah prostrates whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on the earth and the sun, the moon, the stars, the mountains, the trees, the moving creatures and many of the people? But upon many the punishment has been justified. And he whom Allah humiliates - for him there is no bestower of honor. Indeed, Allah does what He wills.' (al-Hajj: 18)

Therefore, all creations prostrate to Him except for certain individuals amongst mankind. Many of them prostate to Allah and many of them deserve punishment because they do not obey the True Lord. Whoever disobeys the way of Allah is not a believer, and Allah banishes him from His Mercy, and whomever Allah humiliates will never have any honouring. The universe unanimously prostrates to Allah except for man. Amongst mankind, there are those who are righteous and act in harmony with the submission of the universe to Allah, and the universe rejoices because of them. On the contrary, there, too, are those whom the universe is angry with because they disobey Allah.

(1) Al-Bukhari, Muslim, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah

The True Lord says about those whom He spares from punishment due to the excess of His Mercy towards His servants because they obeyed Him; and at times their disobedience overwhelmed them, but they repented from it: 'He from whom it is averted that Day - [Allah] has granted him mercy. And that is the clear attainment.' (al-An'am: 16) We know that this particular attainment is the peek. Attainment of this world is like success or wealth besides other things that are liable to perish. It is contingent because it leaves man and man leaves it, but the attainment of the Hereafter is the lasting triumph that never ends.

This is the difference between the blessings of this life and the blessings of the Hereafter. Man lives in luxury in this life per his conception of luxury. For example, we find a peasant imagining luxury. For him it is an outdoor stone bench in front of his house that he sits on, and several jugs that he fills with clean water. If the peasant was to move to the city, he would imagine luxury to be a home that has splendid furniture and electronic appliances such as a refrigerator and other things. Therefore, the possibilities of luxury are different per how man imagines it. As for the felicity of the Hereafter, it is a felicity that man does not relinquish and it does not relinquish man. It is a felicity that the Infinitely Giving Creator has made. Indeed, in paradise there is that which no eye has seen, no ear has heard and what has not occurred to the heart of any human being. Therefore, the triumph of the Hereafter's felicity is the manifest triumph.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He encompasses everything with knowledge and omnipotence, and says:

وَإِن يَمْسَسْكَ ٱللَّهُ بِضُرٍّ فَلَا كَاشِفَ لَهُۥٓ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ
وَإِن يَمْسَسْكَ بِخَيْرٍ فَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَيْءٍ قَدِيرٌ ﴿١٧﴾

If God touches you [Prophet] with affliction, no one can remove it except Him, and if He touches you with good, He has power over all things [17] (The Quran, al-An'am: 17)

Adversity is what afflicts a living being and disrupts the stability of his life. When man lives without any grievance or sickness and he feels completely healthy, he knows that he is of sound health. This is because he does not feel any pain in his eyes or any restriction in his breathing or anything else, but when one of the organs of his body causes him pain, he puts his hand on it, grieves and thinks about going to the doctor. Therefore, soundness of health in relation to man is the regular work of every organ in a way that does not attract one's attention.

The True Lord diverts the attention of those who possess blessings when they see a man from amongst them who has lost some blessing. When you walk in the street and you see a man who has lost a leg you say, 'Praise be to Allah' because both of your legs are sound. It is as if you do not realize Allah's blessing towards you until you see someone else who has been deprived of it. This makes us realize how pain and harm impart on us awareness of blessings. Furthermore, disturbances could afflict man's life so that he knows he lacks many of Allah's blessings, and thus he says regarding his fate, 'O Reliever of worries! O Lord!' Therefore, we find man saying 'O Lord!' whenever harm comes to him, and he takes refuge in Allah. Indeed, Allah has said about man: 'And when affliction touches man, he calls upon Us, whether lying on his side, sitting or standing; but when We remove from him his affliction, he continues [in disobedience] as if he had never called upon Us to [remove] an affliction that touched him. Thus, is made pleasing to the transgressors that which they have been doing.' (Yunus: 12)

When man senses weakness, if he is afflicted with some adversity, he does not tire of supplicating to Allah regardless of whether man is reclining, sitting, or standing. When the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He removes the harm from him, he may depart from Allah's side, and resume disobeying Allah as if he had not supplicated to Allah to remove the harm. This is the behaviour of those who waste their own selves by disobeying Allah. The soul or Satan, after the harm has been removed, makes it seem good for the disobedient to plunge deeper and deeper into the wells of disobedience and the mire of depravity.

Man may attribute the removal of harm to other than Allah, and attribute the uncovering of the harm to the skilfulness of the doctor whom he consulted forgetting that the skilfulness of the doctor is one of Allah's blessings. Or he may attribute the alleviation of distress to the wealth or knowledge that Allah has given him forgetting that Allah is the Bestower of everything. This is identical to what Qarun (Korah) did when he thought that his wealth was the result of his exertion, toil, work and skilfulness forgetting that the True Lord is the Original Cause of all causes, harmful or beneficial. He is the One Who causes harm just as He causes benefit.

Harm turns man's attention to the blessings of the True Lord in this life. When man is content and patient, Allah removes the harm from him, because harm does not continue for man unless he receives it with anger and lack of contentment with Allah's decree. The True Lord does not cease any divine decree in the creation unless the creation is content with what Allah has decreed. The one who does not accept afflictions is the one who will have his afflictions continue. As for the one who wants Allah to remove his affliction, let him then accept the divine decree.

The True Lord gives us examples of this matter. There is Ibrahim (Abraham) who received the command to slaughter his only son. This command came to him in a way that a non-believer in Allah's decree might see as severe, but it was obligatory for Ibrahim (Abraham) to slaughter his son by himself; and this is a test at a very high level. Ibrahim (Abraham), the friend of the Most-Merciful, has not looked for an excuse to flee from the test Allah had given him, nor did he say, 'It was only a dream, not revelation'. But it was true, and the command came to him with the easiest of means of inspiration, the dream, yet with the most difficult commandment which is to slaughter his son. We see the greatness of being a prophet in how the True Lord's Commands are received. Allah inspired to him to allow his son Ismail (Ishmael) to share him in receiving the reward of being content with the divine decree, 'And when he reached with him [the age of] exertion, he said, “O my son, indeed I have seen in a dream that I [must] sacrifice you, so see what you think.” He said, “O my father, do as you are commanded. You will find me, if Allah wills, of the steadfast.”’ (as-Saffat: 102)

Ismail (Ishmael) had become old enough to participate with his father in the demands of life when the command came to Ibrahim (Abraham) in his sleep to slaughter his son. Ismail’s (Ishmael’s) heart was filled with contentment with Allah’s decree, and he did not occupy himself with resentment towards his father, nor did he resist or struggle. Rather, He said, ‘O my father, do as you are commanded.’ (as-Saffat: 102) The two of them took the command of Allah with acceptance and contentment, and therefore the True Lord says about both: ‘And when they had both submitted and he put him down upon his forehead, We called to him, “O Ibrahim (Abraham). You have fulfilled the vision.” Indeed, We thus reward the doers of good. Indeed, this was the clear trial. And We ransomed him with a great sacrifice.’ (as-Saffat: 103-107)

The two of them took part in accepting Allah’s decree, and both surrendered to the command. Ibrahim (Abraham) surrendered as the doer and Ismail (Ishmael) surrendered as the one receiving the action. Allah knew of their sincerity in receiving Allah’s Command, and here the True Lord called Ibrahim (Abraham), ‘You and Ismail (Ishmael) have responded to the divine decree and this obedience has credited your account. This is why benevolence shall come to you and to your son, and that is by removing the test’. Then the ransom came with a tremendous sacrifice because it came by Allah’s Command. The True Lord did not stop there, but rather, he gave Ibrahim (Abraham) the good news of another son to be born: ‘And We gave him good tidings of Isaac (Ishaq), a prophet from among the righteous.’ (as-Saffat: 112)

Allah indeed removed the affliction from Ibrahim (Abraham) and gave him goodness which was another son. Thus, we, as human beings, prolong the time of affliction because of our lack of acceptance to it. However, if an affliction befalls man without any cause on his part, but he is pleased with his Lord, then the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He removes that affliction from him. If you see a man whose test is being prolonged, then know that he has lost contentment.

We notice that the True Lord says here, 'And if Allah should touch you with adversity, there is no remover of it except Him. And if He touches you with good - then He is over all things competent.' (al-An'am: 17) Allah knows that no servant can endure the True Lord harming him; for the True Lord's Strength is infinite and therefore, one is only touched with harm, and likewise with goodness. In this world, man does not obtain only a touch of goodness, as all goodness is stored away for him in the Hereafter. We know about the goodness of this world that either it will leave man or man will leave it. As for all goodness, it is in the Hereafter.

Whatever progress in creativity and invention man makes, he will never arrive at all the goodness that is found in the Hereafter. This is because the goodness of this life requires production and effort from human beings. As for the goodness in the Hereafter, it is per the Greatest Giver, and He is Allah. No one removes harm except Allah, and the sick person is not cured by merely going to the doctor. Rather, the doctor treats with the skilfulness that Allah has granted him, and the one who cures is Allah. 'And when I am ill, it is He who cures me.' (ash-Shu'ara': 80)

This is because the True Lord created the illness and He created the medicine. He made doctors to be merely bridges from the illness to the medicine and then to the cure. Allah brings the means into existence so that His servants can rejoice and be happy, and thus He made skills a type of those means. If not, the matter is in His Hands Glorified and Exalted is He. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Treat one another, O servants of Allah, for indeed Allah did not create an illness except that He created a treatment for it, except for one illness: old age.'(1)

We see that the distinguished doctor always states that the cure came with him and not because of him, and he acknowledges that Allah ennobled him by making the cure come at the time of his treatment. Thus, the True Lord is the One Who removes the harm, and He is the One capable of granting you and touching you with goodness, and His power has no limits. The True Lord says after that:

---

(1) Narrated by Aḥmad, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nisa'i, Ibn Majah, Ibn Hibban and Al-Hakim from Usama ibn Sharik

وَهُوَ ٱلْقَاهِرُ فَوْقَ عِبَادِهِۦ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ٱلْخَبِيرُ ﴿١٨﴾

He is the Supreme Master over His creatures, the All Wise, the All Aware [18] (The Quran, al-An'am: 18)

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He has arranged the universe with causes and effects, and everything in existence is a medium between one thing and another. The earth is a medium for receiving plants. A father is a medium between his own father and the grandson, and we all know that the True Lord is over His servants, He is Dominant with His Power. He directs the universe with wisdom and encompassing knowledge, and He knows everything that is hidden and manifest. He says: 'Say, "He is the [one] able to send upon you affliction from above you or from beneath your feet or to confuse you [so you become] sects and make you taste the violence of one another." Look how We diversify the signs that they might understand.' (al-An'am: 65)

He has the absolute power to send punishment from the sky or from the depths of the earth. He can place enmity between the servants so that they fight one another to repel one another so that the earth is not ruined. 'And if it were not for Allah repelling [some] people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted.' (al-Baqara: 251)

Beware of thinking that when the True Lord allows the creation to possess means that they own those means. No. The True Lord wanted to arrange the duties of the universe. That is why when we see someone being oppressive in the universe, we then find another oppressor disciplining the first oppressor. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He does not discipline the evil person at the hands of a good man, but rather, he disciplines him by way of another evil person worse than him: 'And thus will We make some of the wrongdoers' allies of others for what they used to earn.' (al-An'am: 129) It is because He frees the oppressed from the people of piety of having any role in disciplining the oppressor. Rather, Allah avenges the oppressor by way of another oppressor like him or stronger than him. This is what we notice throughout history, recently and in the distant past. When the righteous servant gains power over those who have done evil to him, he says what Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him said when he entered Mecca, 'O Quraysh! What do you think I should do to you?' They said, "Good; the brother of a noble man and the nephew of a noble man." He said, 'Go, for you are free.'(1)

When Allah wants to avenge an evil person, He sends to him another evil person like him to crush his neck and cut off his nose, or he humiliates him so that corruption does not spread further and prevail. Allah is Dominant over His servants, yet it is dominance with wisdom and knowledge, not that of superiority, tyranny and control. To clarify this point, Allah may decree for one of His servants that his son breaks his arm. Then the man takes his son to a doctor who is not experienced to place a splint on the boy's arm, and he repairs the bones in the light of this splint in the wrong place. Then the man takes his son to a skilled doctor who breaks the boy's hand again so that he can put the bones back in their correct place. This breaking was done to straighten the bones and put them in the right place. The servants can never infuriate Allah, but the True Lord Glorified and Exalted takes justice for the one who is infuriated. We know that man chooses between faith and disbelief. If he disbelieves and disobeys, then he has nothing in the Hereafter but punishment. If not, Allah decrees for him an illness he is unable to rebel because He is Dominant over His servants. And the proof is that He controls things in which the servants have no choice. As long as man is governed by two brackets and he has no say when he is born and when he dies why then does he rebel against Allah's commands? The True Lord says after that:

قُلۡ أَيُّ شَيۡءٍ أَكۡبَرُ شَهَٰدَةٗۖ قُلِ ٱللَّهُۖ شَهِيدُۢ بَيۡنِي وَبَيۡنَكُمۡۚ وَأُوحِيَ إِلَيَّ هَٰذَا ٱلۡقُرۡءَانُ لِأُنذِرَكُم بِهِۦ وَمَنۢ بَلَغَۚ أَئِنَّكُمۡ
لَتَشۡهَدُونَ أَنَّ مَعَ ٱللَّهِ ءَالِهَةً أُخۡرَىٰۚ قُل لَّآ أَشۡهَدُۚ قُلۡ إِنَّمَا هُوَ إِلَٰهٞ وَٰحِدٞ وَإِنَّنِي بَرِيٓءٞ مِّمَّا تُشۡرِكُونَ ﴿١٩﴾

Say, 'What counts most as a witness?' Say, 'God is witness between you and me. This Quran was revealed for me to warn you [people] and everyone it reaches. Do you really bear witness that there are other gods beside God?' Say, 'I myself do not bear witness [to any such thing].' Say, 'He is only one God, and I disown whatever you join with Him' [19] (The Quran, al-An'am: 19)

The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him differed with the people who opposed him, and differing requires wisdom and a clear proof. The witnesses are one of the clear proofs, so what do we think when the witness is Allah? He is the witness, the Arbiter and the Executer Who makes no deception. His rule is void of any oppression, and His will does not oppress a servant even equal to an atom's weight. Therefore, there is no witnessing that is greater than the True Lord's witnessing that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is sent by Him. If Allah had wanted, he would have made everyone believers, but He wanted man to have choice. The compassion of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is what made him hope that they would believe, but the True Lord says to His Messenger: 'Perhaps, [O Muhammad], you would kill yourself with grief that they will not be believers. If We willed, We could send down to them from the sky a sign for which their necks would remain humbled.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4) The True Lord commands His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to be compassionate towards himself first and not to kill himself out of grief because of their stubbornness and lack of faith. If the True Lord had wanted to make them all believers, He would have sent down a sign, for the duty of a messenger is only to convey the message. If He had wanted, the True Lord would have coerced the entire creation to have faith in Him just as He has subjugated the entire universe to serve man and the universe to glorify and praise Allah. However, He left the creation to choose so that their faith would confirm the attribute of Allah being loved; because voluntary faith is that which confirms this quality of being loved. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is only a warner and a giver of glad tidings with this Quran that has been sent down to him with revelation.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in his (Sunnan) [1/118) and in (Tarikh At-Tabari) [3/61)

Given this setting of witnessing, warning serves just right because witnessing exists when there is a dispute. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called to faith, but those who oppose him call to disbelief and idolatry. Allah's witnessing is greater than any other witnessing. This is why the True Lord decides here that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him should warn with the Quran. This address is directed to inform the contemporaries of Allah's Messenger as well as whoever heard of anything of the Quran, because it is as if he has seen the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and received the conveyance from him. He indeed said, '…and whomever it reaches.' (al-An'am: 19) This means he warns you with it and warns whoever from humanity that the Quran reaches.

On the tongue of His Messenger, the True Lord directs a disapproving question to those who resist, saying, 'Do you [truly] testify that with Allah there are other deities?' (al-An'am: 19) It is a question from a questioner who is confident that whoever hears his question must negate the existence of another god besides Him. It is a question that extracts confirmation from the one who hears it. An example of this is what the True Lord put to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him regarding a matter that had taken place in the year of the birth of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him where He says, 'Have you not seen, [O Muhammad], how your Lord dealt with the companions of the elephant?' (al-Fil: 1)

We know that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him did not see what happened in the Year of the Elephant because it was the year of his birth, but when the True Lord informs him about it, one should conclude it is being conveyed from Allah, which makes the information more superior to seeing with the eyes and more reliable and certain. Here we have the disapproving question: 'Do you [truly] testify that with Allah there are other deities?' (al-An'am: 19) When this question incapacitated them in certain phases of the mission, some of them said, 'We worship them only that they may bring us near to Allah.' (az-Zumar: 3) It is as if finally, they are acknowledging that the one they are drawing near to is Allah, but the True Lord severs the matter of idolatry and says on the tongue of His Messenger, 'Say, "I will not testify [with you]." Say, "Indeed, He is but one God, and indeed, I am free of what you associate [with Him]."' (al-An'am: 19) The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him does not bear witness to any god but Allah, and he presented them the disapproving question so that they might reflect and be guided to the correct answer that the True Lord stated succinctly for His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him 'Indeed, He is but one God, and indeed, I am free of what you associate [with Him].' (al-An'am: 19)

The speech here is directed towards the group that opposes the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him from amongst the idol-worshippers who are disbelievers in the Message of Allah's Messenger. The other portion is a portion from the people of the Book. These are the people who neglected the book that had been sent down to them. They no longer had the spirit of faith used to repel the disobedient from disobedience, and thus corruption had spread in the universe. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He sent Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because the disobedient did not find anyone to repel them. In that time, the reproachful self was hidden from society, and the self that commands to evil was predominant.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He did not leave human beings without messengers, for indeed there has been a messenger sent to every nation, who in return, prophesied and informed of the messenger that would follow him so that the people would be prepared to receive a warner and a giver of glad tidings. This is why all messages were informing of messengers to come so that they would not think that a pretender had violated the sanctity of their religion. Also, it is because Islam came as a universal religion, not only Muhammad's name was prophesized by the previous books, but also his exalted qualities and characteristics were clearly described therein.

Those who read about these qualities, had they removed themselves from temporal authority and immediately believed in the Message of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as 'Abdullah ibn Salam did when he said, 'When I saw him, I knew him as I know my own son, and my knowledge of Muhammad is stronger', these people forgot that they are the ones who had been given victory by Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him without them knowing. They used to seek victory through him over the tribes of Al-Aws and Al-Khazraj. They used to threaten them, 'It is about time a prophet will come from amongst you, whom we will believe in, follow and we and him will kill you [in the same manner] as `Ad and Iram were killed.' Al-Aws and Al- Khazraj rushed to believe in Allah's Messenger saying, 'Maybe this is the prophet that the Jews threatened us with. Let us believe in him first.'

Therefore, it was no surprise the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him called to this religion. Everyone who had any connection to one of the Divine Books knew of his coming, mission, and his description. They knew that he was the seal of Prophets after which revelation from heaven to earth shall come to an end.

Allah the Exalted then says:

ٱلَّذِينَ ءَاتَيْنَٰهُمُ ٱلْكِتَٰبَ يَعْرِفُونَهُۥ كَمَا يَعْرِفُونَ أَبْنَآءَهُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ خَسِرُوٓا۟ أَنفُسَهُمْ فَهُمْ لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٢٠﴾

Those to whom We have given the Scripture know this as well as they know their own sons. Those who have lost their souls will not believe [20] (The Quran, al-An'am: 20)

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was known in advance by the people of the Book just as they know their own children, but some of them preferred temporal authority over faith and thus they lost their own selves. Loss, as we know, is the loss of capital or its decrease. They lost their own selves because they should have strived to fix the spirits that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came to rectify. By doing so, they denied their souls any good, by preferring the authority of this life of this fleeting world to faith in Allah, which is a massive loss.

Allah teaches us that faith is only an advantage for one's self. One should not think that saying 'there is no god worthy of worship but Allah' is a support for Allah's throne. No, it is just for you because there is no god but He who created the universe and the creation with the attributes of Perfection, Power, Knowledge, and Wisdom. Recognising the Divinity of Allah alone does not increase Allah's Perfection, but it benefits the servants who have believed, and thus they are proficient in receiving the command to build this universe. Understanding this facilitates the movement of life in the light of Allah's way, and those believers will be in harmony with the entire universe that glorifies Allah.

'Those to whom We have given the Scripture recognize it as they recognize their [own] children. Those who will lose themselves [in the Hereafter] do not believe.' (al-An'am: 20) He informs the people of Mecca that the call to faith that the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him called to them, did not come as a surprise to the universe. Rather, it is a cry that was given as glad tidings on the tongue of a messenger. The people of Mecca had distanced themselves from their connection to the messengers and prophets, and it had been a while since a messenger had come to them; their neighbours were the people of a Book in Medina who knew such reality of which their messengers had brought affirming the covenant that Allah had taken from them. It is because we know that when the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He created the creation and settled them in the earth, He wanted them to be gifted with power from His Power, to be wealthy from His Wealth, to have knowledge from His perfect Knowledge, to have wisdom from His absolute Wisdom, to have mercy from His complete Mercy, to be dominant from His Dominance because the universe cannot be sound unless these complementary factors exist, even if they are contradictory because every attribute has a parameter within which it is active.

For example, and Allah is beyond compare, when we prefer compassion when treating our children, we are spoiling them because a good father must be firm with them when raising them. Therefore, it is not possible for the master over creation to only be merciful. He also must be dominant because there may be a situation that requires dominance. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He does not want His creation to have a single type of nature, but rather, He wants to make them to react differently depending on situations. In a situation that requires mercy, they are to be merciful, and in a situation that requires severity and harshness, they are to be severe. The True Lord says about the believers: ‘Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah; and those with him are forceful against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves. You see them bowing and prostrating [in prayer], seeking bounty from Allah and [His] pleasure.’ (al-Fath: 29)

The above verse shows the nature of the believers. Indeed, Allah the Exalted did not make severity their dominant nature because situations may require mercy. Severity, however, is required to confront the people of falsehood. The True Lord did not make gentleness their dominant nature, but gentleness is required between them because every one of them hopes for Allah’s mercy and His grace. This is why the True Lord also says about the believers: ‘Humble toward the believers, powerful against the disbelievers.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 54)

The True Lord did not make the believer humble in an absolute sense, just as He did not make him powerful in an absolute sense, but He made him humble, gracious, and magnanimous towards his believing brother, while He made him powerful towards the disbelievers who deny Allah.

Therefore, He wants His creation to follow the nature of the True Lord, and this is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says in what has been narrated by 'Ammar ibn Yasser Allah be pleased with him, 'The best of manners is that of Allah, the Most Great.'(1) And it is related, 'Be like Allah in your manners.'

As long as the True Lord wants the creation to inhabit this universe, then He must secure for them a sound way that is based on 'Do!' and 'Do not do!' If we follow the way of Allah, then we are taking what we can call in contemporary parlance 'the law of maintenance.' So, let us do what Allah tells us to do, and let us leave what Allah has told us not to do so that we can carry out our tasks in the way that Allah wants us to do so.

Significantly, corruption emerges when man does what he is ordered not to do, and conversely refrains from doing what he must do. If Allah has asked that we establish the prayer, how can we refrain from praying? If Allah has enacted upon us not to drink wine, then how can we drink it? The imbalance of faith that takes place in the universe is exclusively the result of this conflict between the commands and the prohibitions. Apart from the boundaries of these two categories, Allah has left us the choice, as it is permissible to do or not to do it because the universe will not be corrupted by anything from it.

If you consider carefully Allah's method in His command sand prohibitions, you will find that the True Lord has not put an end to your freedom, nor has He put an end to your choice. He has set limits for you whose purpose is to fight corruption in the universe. As for that which does not lead to corruption, it is a matter a personal choice. The True Lord has provided every human being with this way from Adam peace and blessings be upon him until the establishment of the Hour, and He has taken it upon Himself the promise not to punish a nation that has not been sent a messenger, and therefore, there was a successive procession of messengers. Why? Because heedlessness holds sway over man, for man may forget sometimes what restricts his movement, and he may forget again until he becomes heedless. The True Lord sent a messenger for every period of time to draw attention to the law preserving mankind, until Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came. Allah has entrusted the nation of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be the one that conveys Allah's way until the Hour is established. Therefore, He took a covenant from the prophets that they would inform of the final Prophet's Message. 'And [recall, O People of the Scripture], when Allah took the covenant of the prophets, [saying], "Whatever I give you of the Scripture and wisdom and then there comes to you a messenger confirming what is with you, you [must] believe in him and support him." [Allah] said, "Have you acknowledged and taken upon that My commitment?" They said, "We have acknowledged it." He said, "Then bear witness, and I am with you among the witnesses."' (Al-'Imran: 81)

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in (Al-Kabir) and (A-Awsat)

Therefore, Allah indeed took the pledge from every prophet that they would tell their people to believe in the Message of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him whose call corresponds with their call. The True Lord took confirmation from every prophet that he would do so, and the prophets bore witness and Allah, too, bore witness upon them. They conveyed that to their people. Thus, the support of the final Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is present in every message that preceded Islam. It was obligatory for every messenger to give a clarification of this pledge to his people, and take from them a pledge to support the Messenger that is coming to them. They informed them that it was from the completion of faith that they would assist that Messenger peace and blessings be upon him if they were to be present during his time.

The True Lord is singling out the people of the Book here, to whom the Torah and the Bible were sent down, and they are the adherents of the two great religions that preceded Islam, 'Those to whom We gave the Scripture know it as they know their own children. But indeed, a party of them conceal the truth while they know [it].' (al-Baqara: 146)

Thus, if the disbelievers of Quraysh have not had a messenger for a long time, they can ask the people of the Book. Al- Aws and Al-Khazraj tribes heard from the people of the Book that there would be an upcoming prophet and they would believe and follow him, and kill the Arabs with him just as `Ad and Iram were killed. Therefore, the cry of faith on the tongue of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was not a surprise for the universe, even though it was concealed by those who disbelieved from the people of the Book. They are the ones about whom the True Lord said: 'And when there came to them a Book from Allah confirming that which was with them - although before they used to pray for victory against those who disbelieved - but [then] when there came to them that which they recognized, they disbelieved in it; so the curse of Allah will be upon the disbelievers.' (al-Baqara: 89)

The bane that leads to denial of this conveyance from Allah befell some of the people of the Book, and they chose even though they had been informed by Allah, temporal authority because they saw therein fame, fortune, and felicity. Their ranks included the judges to whom the people turned to know the ruling in matters related to death. Likewise, they took charitable donations and they had become used to a life of leadership and felicity. The new call, if they adopted it, would strip them of this leadership even though they had been given glad tiding of this before. When the call came, it shook their temporal authority, and therefore they became enemies.

Therefore, the bane is to dress the temporal authority the guise of a Divine authority. When we investigate the history of religions, we find that the temporal authority of religions which preceded Islam is the authority that burdened the universe because the True Lord, when He created the universe, concealed within it secrets that work to serve man even if man is not aware of them. Man's scientific endeavours have led to these secrets, and He reveals the laws according to which we act. Examples of this would include the law of gravity and the law of negative and positive. All these laws are present in the universe, just as Allah has created the earth to take a spherical shape, and just as He has made the sun to be the source of heat and warmth as well as light and illumination.

Scientists utilize these preliminary steps so that they can discover the laws of these celestial bodies and the laws of this universe. When an intelligent scientist discovers some law, he says, 'I have discovered such and such'. This is a precise natural expression. He never says, 'I originated such and such'. This is because he knows that what he has discovered was already present in the universe, but he was not aware of it. Man's lack of awareness of a law that is present in the universe does not prevent benefit from reaching man even though being aware of the law increases the possibility of benefiting from it.

Thus, man enjoys the existence of the sun before becoming aware of its energy. However, when scientists specialised in studying the sun, they realised that man could benefit from this energy in a greater way than the traditional way. Therefore, some cities began to light their streets with solar energy. Some buildings began to warm their apartments with solar energy and to heat water as well with this energy. This discovery has not prevented the uneducated or the Bedouin in the desert from benefitting from the sun's light. The same goes for electricity and electrical home appliances that an ignorant person can benefit from just as much as an educated person would. It is true that an uneducated person does not know what happens in the factories that produce televisions, but he still benefits from watching the television. The television is nothing other than a transformational material of all the scientific laws that man has discovered and applied to manufacture this device that man benefits from.

For every secret of the universe, there is a birth just like the birth of man. If the appointed time for a secret's birth comes, but no one is searching for it, Allah Glorified is He unveils it coincidentally for any human being. We often hear that a scientist was doing research in some field, but he discovered a secret different from the target of his research. The True Lord says in verse of Al-Kursi: 'And they encompass not a thing of His knowledge except for what He wills.' (al-Baqara: 255)

We cannot attain knowledge of the secrets of the universe unless Allah grants permission, and there are tens of thousands of examples of this, beginning with the Archimedes Screw upon which the propulsion of submarines and steamers is based, to the law of the earth's gravity that was discovered by Newton when an apple coincidentally fell in front of him, to the discovery of penicillin and other secrets of this universe. If there were sciences that had a marked inception, there are others who do not have any. The True Lord says: '[He is] Knower of the unseen and He does not disclose His [knowledge of the] unseen to anyone. Except whom He has approved of messengers, and indeed, He sends before each messenger and behind him observers.' (al-Jinn: 26-27)

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is the Knower of the unseen which is not manifested to anyone except a messenger whom the True Lord chooses to inform of some of the unseen. He protects safeguards and preserves him with the angels to intervene between him and the whisperings of the devils and their causing confusion so that he can convey what has been revealed to him. When the True Lord decides a matter, no one has any say therein, for indeed He sends a messenger with it to the creation to guide them with commands and prohibitions. This matter is not up for discussion but rather, it comes with permission from Allah so that our desires do not contradict one another. He knew that desires amongst human beings could easily contradict one another, so He sent messengers with the proper way to straighten the affairs of human beings.

The mental activities by which a human arrives at secrets contained therein are a luxury of life. They are secrets that are the result of experience and working in the laboratory whose production is not subjective. Thus, you do not find a Russian chemistry and another that is American. This is why we see countries competing, each one trying to steal what the other one has by means of spies. As for the social setting, countries establish barriers barring principles. Thus the West does not tolerate the entry of social theories from the east, and the East does not tolerate the opposite taking place. This matter differs in scientific research. Each side tries to take possession of the laws of scientific research into the secrets of the universe, and if they are unable, they try to take it from someone else.

The True Lord teaches us to explore all the signs of the universe without turning away from them. He says to us: 'And how many a sign within the heavens and earth do they pass over while they, therefrom, are turning away.' (Yusuf: 105) He is turning our attention to the fact that every sign and every phenomenon require from us that we consider them with wisdom and close examination because we might extract what will make life easier for us. An example of this is steam power which was discovered by a man, while it was developed by someone else until this steam power came to serve all humanity.

Likewise, the one who invented the wheel helped humanity because his invention is now used to transport things and reduce journey times. All of this only came about due to reflecting on Allah’s signs in the universe with close examination. The True Lord has indeed made research into the signs of the universe something well known amongst both believers and disbelievers, and it is the right of whoever looks for His secrets. This is the case with science. As for the case with religion, the matter is different because information in the case of religion comes from Allah by way of a messenger. As for research into the universe and its scientific secrets, the True Lord says regarding it: ‘Do you not see that Allah sends down rain from the sky, and We produce thereby fruits of varying colours? And in the mountains are tracts, white and red of varying shades and [some] extremely black. And among people, and moving creatures and grazing livestock are various colours similarly. Only those fear Allah, from among His servants, who have knowledge. Indeed, Allah is Exalted in Might and Forgiving.’ (Fatir: 27-28)

O man, indeed the True Lord is turning your attention to the fact that He sent water down from the sky, and, thus plants, emerge and grow out of the earth that bear fruits of different colours and tastes. He made the mountains in different shapes and colours, some of them are weak, and some are strong. The colour of one mountain differs from another depending on the amount of subterranean material that it contains. All these mountains are from one source, but their branches differ widely to serve man.

The True Lord has indeed created grazing livestock with differing colours, shapes and sizes, and likewise people differ in colour and shape. The scholars are the ones who contemplate this and they fear Allah, the All Knowing Maker. Therefore, the matter of religion is decided by the True Lord, and the messengers convey from Allah, and likewise the people who have knowledge of the religion, who convey from Allah but they do not represent Allah because some human beings may mix their own desires with Allah’s words and say, ‘Indeed this is Allah’s speech’. This is a shameless mistake and an enormous sin.

Indeed, what happened in the Middle Ages –for example– was a confusion of scientific research and what the methodology the True Lord had sent down. When a scientist like Galileo came along to research the nature of celestial bodies, they wanted to burn him at the stake. When another scientist wanted to speak out about the nature of the earth, he hindered his freedom. When the Church governed the Western world in this manner, the entire world lagged and lived in ages of darkness. When these people encountered Muslims, they were freed from the superstitious stories of the Middle Ages. They learned the freedom of scientific research from the Arabs, and Europe advanced with that scientific method that Islam had brought and Muslim scientists cultivated.

The reason for Europe's past backwardness and ignorance was the clergymen and religion. Moreover, the Europeans avoiding religion was because of their knowledge that the clergy hated life and the advancement of civilisation, and this was to protect their influence and their temporal and spiritual authority. Some of the people of Europe wanted to take all religions to task because of the crimes of the clergy. Those who impute religion, all religion, forget that the clergy lied and claimed these things in the name of Christianity, and attributed them to it, but the Messiah did not say of this to them. However, it was the clergy that ruined life with their temporal authority, and the result was that some people took the corruption of the Church's authority as proof for the corruption of religion.

To these people I say, 'Religion does not interfere in any of the matters of scientific life and it never corrupts it'. Rather, you find that the True Lord has commanded us to research into His signs. Here is Allah's Messenger commanding us to do research into the affairs of this life under the light of experience. Allah wanted to differentiate between empirical knowledge and religion, and He wanted to protect His religion from the interference of any group saying it represents Allah and mixing their desires with the task of conveyance.

An example of this is what the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said regarding pollinating date palms. We know that a date palm is pollinated when we take the spandex of the male and use it to pollinate the female of the date palm, and then the fruit emerges as ripe. If that does not happen, the date palm produces fruit that is not ripe. The secret behind the date palm producing fruit that is not ripe is that the pollination may be done by means of the wind transferring a few pollen seeds. However, it is manual pollination of the date palm that increases the quality of the fruits. Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him once said something to the Companions that could only be understood to mean that they pollinate the date palm, and what happened thus was that the date palm did not produce the expected fruits. They were unripe fruits. At that point, the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him relied on the True Lord's words: 'And We have sent the fertilizing winds.' (al-Hijr: 22)These are true, accurate and wise words, and we find their effects in the clouds that turn into rain because of the positive encountering the negative. We find it in most plants, such as wheat, fruit, corn, and others. The spadix of the male is transferred by means of the wind to the components of the female in plants that are close to each other and they pollinate them, and likewise the wind transfers the light pollen. When pollen is heavy, it sometimes requires some effort on behalf of man to transfer the cells of the male to the cells of the female. An example of this is the date palm. This is why, when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him learned of how low the date palm had produced in the year in which some of the companions did not pollinate their date palms, He said to them, 'You know more about the affairs of your life in this world.'(1)

With this, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him settled the matter and the people of religion did not interfere again in any matter that requires practical experience for life to be benefitted. This is why it is said that Islam is a religion of science because it offers the men of science the opportunity to be released into reflecting on Allah's signs in this universe. Indeed, it calls them and commands them to discover the secrets of this universe. As for matters of human behaviour and social policy, the True Lord has sent down a way that prevents the control of some people over others and that keeps human behaviour in check with the teaching of this methodology of faith.

The methodology of faith indeed came with all the messages, and the final Message was that of Muhammad the son of `Abdullah. The good news of his coming was present in the Torah and the Bible. The True Lord says: 'Those to whom We gave the Scripture know it as they know their own children.' Does the action of the people of the Book require this knowledge? No; because some of them feared that their temporal authority would be taken from them, and the greatest example of this is `Abdullah ibn `Ubay who was the chief of hypocrisy in Islam, the one who was preparing himself to become the ruler of Medina before Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him arrived there. There were also those from the people of the Book who acted per this prophecy; an example being `Abdullah ibn Salam. The Quran does not oppress anyone but rather, it says about some of the people of the Book: 'And when they hear what has been revealed to the Messenger, you see their eyes overflowing with tears because of what they have recognized of the truth. They say, "Our Lord, we have believed, so register us among the witnesses."' (al-Ma'ida: 83)

(1) Narrated by Muslim from Anas and `Aisha

Therefore, the True Lord did not oppress those who believed from the people of the Book when they found that the way of Islam conformed with what had already come to them. However, some of the people of the Book disbelieved and showed enmity towards Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him out of fear that they would lose their temporal authority. When we look at history we find that temporal authority did, at one time, belong to the people of religion, such as what happened in Europe, but the men of religion took advantage of the people and the clergy sowed corruption on earth. The public rebelled against them and stopped obeying them to make their own laws. Because they were governing per their desires, as opposed to the revealed legislation, the law used to change amongst the men of religion regarding a single matter depending on the personality of whoever committed this matter. Whoever paid them was granted forgiveness, and whoever did not pay them was destined for punishment. They took the paltry pleasures of this world and they did not implement what Allah had commanded, so the people stopped recognising their authority.

Hence, some people do not recognise the message of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him the glad tidings of whom had come to them and they knew him clearly and his description, but they denied him because he strips them of the benefits of wealth and authority that they had acquired. Thus, they squandered their own selves and remained in disbelief. The True

Lord says about them, ‘Those who will lose themselves [in the Hereafter] do not believe.’ They lost their own selves because they sold Allah’s signs for a paltry price, and the loss of the self is greater than the loss of wealth because the loss of wealth does not have to be permanent. Man can reacquire it after losing it. However, the loss of the self is a very weighty matter, indeed. We know that the transaction of faith does not detach the actions of this life from the reckoning of the Hereafter. The true believer is the one who connects this life to the Hereafter. However, some of the people of the Book loved this life more than the Hereafter. They distinguished between the two and took a paltry fortune of this world and lost the Hereafter. After that the True Lord says:

وَمَنۡ أَظۡلَمُ مِمَّنِ ٱفۡتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا أَوۡ كَذَّبَ بِـَٔايَٰتِهِۦٓۗ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُفۡلِحُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿٢١﴾

Who does greater wrong than someone who fabricates a lie against God or denies His revelation? Those who do such wrong will not prosper [21] (The Quran, al-An’am: 21)

They attributed a lie to Allah when they did that; they had forgotten a portion of what they had been reminded of, and they had concealed some of the book that had been sent down to them. They had distorted the verses that had come down to them and had come with their own statements and attributed them to Allah. This is why we find the True Lord saying about them: ‘So woe to those who write the ‘scripture’ with their own hands, then say, “This is from Allah,” to exchange it for a small price. Woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.’ (al-Baqara: 79) The True Lord is threatening them with punishment because they have sold the religion in return for a paltry gain in this life, and they lied unto Allah and attributed to Him what He had not sent down. Therefore, woe to them, because they have descended to the lowest levels of oppression and deliberately denied everything that is required of them which is to have faith in Allah, the revealed books and the messengers.

Attributing a lie is a deliberate lie with the purpose of attributing to Allah what He has not said, and they indeed did that. This is why the oppressors are not successful, whether they oppress people by taking their wealth or by doing evil to them; or they oppress their own selves by associating partners with Allah which is the greatest oppression. Allah says: ‘Indeed, most surely polytheism is a grievous iniquity.’ (Luqman: 13) After that the True Lord says:

وَيَوْمَ نَحْشُرُهُمْ جَمِيعًا ثُمَّ نَقُولُ لِلَّذِينَ أَشْرَكُوٓا۟ أَيْنَ شُرَكَآؤُكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ كُنتُمْ تَزْعُمُونَ ﴿٢٢﴾

When We gather them all together and say to the polytheists, ‘Where are those you claimed were partners with God?’ in their utter dismay [22] (The Quran, al-An’am: 22)

The True Lord is reminding us of the Day of Gathering, the day when Allah will ask those who associated partners with Him, denied, and attributed lies to Allah, ‘Where are those whom you worshipped and whom you took as gods besides Me’? Indeed, Allah will never leave man with no purpose. Rather, every action that man does in this life is recorded and he will be asked about it on the Day of Resurrection. Allah will ask the idolaters about those whom they deceitfully worshipped besides Him, ‘Where are these gods that the disbelievers worshipped besides Allah? Why do they not step forward to save their worshippers from the punishment that Allah is warming up for them’? Allah the Exalted will scold the disbelievers sharply. He will gather them along with the idols and statues that they worshipped, and this is the peak of humiliation for them and for these gods.

The True Lord says after that:

ثُمَّ لَمْ تَكُن فِتْنَتُهُمْ إِلَّآ أَن قَالُوا۟ وَٱللَّهِ رَبِّنَا مَا كُنَّا مُشْرِكِينَ ﴿٢٣﴾

They will only say, ‘By God, our Lord, we have not set up partners beside Him!’ [23] (The Quran, al-An’am: 23)

The True Lord gathers the idolaters with their gods that they took as partners besides Allah and He asks them about these gods and they say, ‘By Allah, our Lord, we were not those who associated.’ (al-An‘am: 23) Outwardly they defend themselves but inwardly they are aware of the full reality which is that all sovereignty belongs to Allah, and on the Last Day, Allah has no partners. This is because man has no choice on the Last Day, but when man had a choice in this life, he could choose to either believe or disbelieve.

Choosing to have faith in this life is what the reckoning of the Last Day is based on. As for having faith under compulsion in the Last Day, there is no reward for it other than hell for the one who disbelieved or associated partners with Allah in this life. Had Allah wanted all of us to have faith under compulsion in this life, He would have forced us to obey Him as He did with the angels and the rest of His creation. The True Lord the Exalted subjugated all species of existence apart from man, and the subjugation of the species was to affirm His power, but man was honoured by being given the choice to go to Allah in love.

The True Lord surprises those who associate partners with Him on the Day of Resurrection because there is no Deity but Him, and they try to lie so as to escape punishment. They say, '…we were not those who associated.' (al-An'am: 23). They indeed lied to Allah through their actions in life and they want to lie against Allah on the Last Day with their words. But Allah is All Knowing of what the hearts conceal and how they were behaving in this life. In the Hereafter, He will clarify their actions for them and deal them a painful punishment.

When the True Lord says, 'Where are your 'partners'?' It is Allah, the All Knowing who is asking the question. The objective is not to acquire knowledge but rather to obtain affirmation from the one being questioned. In our daily lives, we may see a question from a student to his teacher so that the student can know what he was ignorant of, and we see the question being returned at times by the teacher to the student; but this is not so that the teacher can know what he did not know. Rather, it is for the student to affirm what he knows and learned from his teacher. Thus, if the True Lord the Exalted asks His creation a question, is He asking them to know something? Allah forbids that should be the case. The True Lord only asks His servants for the purpose of affirmation. Affirmation here also involves reproach since it is a question that has no answer. We seek refuge in Allah that He should have any partners. When the True Lord the Exalted says, 'Where are your 'partners'?' the meaning is that it is impossible for Him to have any partners. Allah asks them this question to censure and reproache them for associating with Allah that which does not exist. They associated partners with Allah in this life to free themselves from the requirements of faith, and here they are in the tremendous gathering place realizing the extent of their lying in this life. There is no dominion for anyone besides Allah, and none is to be truly worshipped but Him. Thus, they articulate what they are witnessing, 'We were not those who associated.'

Someone might say, 'but in another place in the Quran, we find Allah saying with regards to these people, 'Woe, that Day, to the deniers. This is a Day they will not speak; nor will it be permitted for them to make an excuse.' (al-Mursalat: 34-36)

They, on the day of the greatest horror, know that they denied in this life, and they will not utter anything that will benefit them. The True Lord will not allow them to offer any excuse or apology. In reality, they do not utter anything that will save them from the punishment that awaits them, and they will fall into profound bewilderment and confusion. Indeed, from amongst these people who deny Allah and the Last Day are those who made something that human beings benefited from, or the lives of people were enhanced because of it, and they think that this act will save them. These people may take their prosperity and their reward from the people whose sake they worked for and from humanity's honouring of them. However, they will receive the punishment on the Last Day because they associated partners with Allah. The True Lord was not in their thoughts for a single moment when they brought forward whatever inventions they had invented, the True Lord says, 'But those who disbelieved - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty one thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing, but finds Allah before Him, and He will pay him in full his due; and Allah is swift in account.' (an-Nur: 39) This is how we know that the True Lord rewards the deeds of the disbelievers and idolaters with His justice in this life by way of wealth and fame, but their actions are of no benefit in the Hereafter. Their actions are like the shining glitter that happens as a result of the sun's rays falling on a vast stretch of land in the desert, and the thirsty person thinks that it is water, but as he gets closer to it he finds that it has no benefit. Likewise, the disbelievers and idolaters will find that their deeds are worth nothing on the Day of Resurrection. The idolater from amongst these people will know the reality of his idolatry on the Day of Resurrection, and he will only find the One, the Unique the

All-Dominant in front of him. This is why each one of them will say, ‘By Allah, we were not those who associated’. The idolater from amongst these people denies his idolatry, and this denial is a type of lying.

Idolaters lie, and the True Lord says about them, ‘On the Day Allah will resurrect them all, and they will swear to Him as they swear to you and think that they are [standing] on something. Unquestionably, it is they who are the liars.’ (al-Mujadala: 18) When the True Lord revives them on the Day of Resurrection, they will swear to Him that they were believers just as they used to swear in this life, but Allah describes them as liars. They could deceive human beings in this life with false oaths, but what about Allah who cannot be deceived by anyone? This is how we see that the test of these people is a great test, ‘Then there will be no [excuse upon] examination except they will say, “By Allah, our Lord, we were not those who associated.”’ (al-An‘am: 23) After that the True Lord says to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him:

ٱنظُرۡ كَيۡفَ كَذَبُواْ عَلَىٰٓ أَنفُسِهِمۡۚ وَضَلَّ عَنۡهُم مَّا كَانُواْ يَفۡتَرُونَ ﴿٢٤﴾

See how they lie against themselves and how those they invented have deserted them [24] (The Quran, al-An’am: 24)

The True Lord turns His Messenger’s attention accurately towards the process that will take place on the Day of Resurrection, and when Allah will inform of some matter and we will verify that it became a reality as if we were seeing it literally and indisputably in front of us. He affirms that they have lied to themselves. We know that all actions are stripped of their temporality when they are attributed to Allah. For Allah time is one stream with no past, present, or future. An example of this is the True Lord’s statement: ‘The command of Allah is coming, so be not impatient for it. Exalted is He and high above what they associate with Him.’ (an-Nahl: 1)

It is not appropriate for someone to say, ‘How can the True Lord say that His matter has come to pass and this is in the past tense, and then He forbids the servants from hastening it, but man does not hasten something unless it has not happened’. It is not appropriate for someone to say this because the speaker is the Sublime Power and nothing hinders Him from doing what He wants. As for us, the servants, we do not dare say about an action that we will do tomorrow that we have done it, and this is because tomorrow may never come, or tomorrow may come, but we might not be able to do anything that we promised to do or our means could change. With the understanding that circumstances have become facilitated, then what power does a servant from amongst us have over anything without Allah willing it? We, the believers, know this, and it is upon us to say as Allah has taught us, ‘And never say of anything, “Indeed, I will do that tomorrow”, except [when adding], “If Allah wills.” And remember your Lord when you forget [it] and say, “Perhaps my Lord will guide me to what is nearer than this to right conduct.”’ (al-Kahf: 23-24)

In this way, the man from amongst us guarantees that he has left the circle of lying. When Allah says to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Behold’, and it is for a matter the time for beholding it has not come, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him believes His Lord as if he had already seen this matter. Indeed, the True Lord describes these people as having ‘lied to themselves’. Their lie that will take place on the Day of Resurrection is an actual, real matter. Man may lie for his own benefit in this life, but lying in front of Allah will count against man and not for him.

The True Lord continues, ‘And lost from them will be what they used to invent.’ (al-An‘am: 24) The meaning of this is that on the Last Day they look for those whom they associated as partners with Allah, but they are not able to specify these partners because they said in front of Allah, ‘By Allah, we were not those who associated.’ (al-An‘am: 23) These partners being absent from them is what clarifies and explains Allah’s statement, ‘And lost from them will be what they used to invent.’ (al-An‘am: 24) For the meaning of ‘lost’ is to be absent. Did they not say beforehand, ‘And they say, “When we are lost within the earth, will we indeed be [recreated] in a new creation?” Rather, they are, in [the matter of] the meeting with their Lord, disbelievers.’ (as-Sajda: 10)

They are like those who deny the resurrection, asking themselves in bewilderment, ‘If they are concealed in the earth and mixed with its components, can their Lord resurrect them as new’? It is because they do not believe that the One Who brought them into being the first time can bring them back a second time. When Allah asks them, ‘Where, now, are your partners’, they lie and deny that they ever associated partners with Him. These partners now have forsaken them. Man worships the god that will benefit him on the Day of Gathering, and when these gods are absent on the Day of Gathering, this exposes the forsaking of these gods, and their absence at the time when they are most needed. Nothing remains but the countenance of Allah, who holds to account those who associate partners with Him.

There are those who do not know the path to their objective and can also be misguided, but here we have those who are misguided while knowing that path that leads to their objective and this is disbelief. When the True Lord talks about those who have disbelieved, He describes them as having already, most obviously, gone astray because the path to guidance was in front of them, but they did not take it, and this is the peak of misguidance. Man may be a believer but the essentials of faith within him are weak, so he disobeys his Lord. The True Lord says about the likes of this person: ‘Whoever disobeys Allah and His Messenger has certainly strayed into clear error.’ (al-’Ahzab: 36)

It is misguidance lesser in effect than the absolute misguidance and disbelief. But what about the one who is misguided because he does not know the path of guidance? This is what is apparent to us in the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him when the True Lord said to him and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon him ‘Go to Pharaoh and say, “We are the messengers of the Lord of the worlds.” Commanded and say, “Send with us the Children of Israel.”’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 16-17) The True Lord issued the command to Musa (Musa (Moses)) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them to go to Pharaoh so that he can send the Children of Israel with them, but what about Pharaoh’s position? What did Pharaoh say? ‘Pharaoh said, “Did we not raise you among us as a child, and you remained among us for years of your life? And then you did your deed which you did, and you were of the ungrateful.”’ (ash-Shu'ara’: 18-19)

Pharaoh wants to remind Musa (Moses) of the former’s favour on the latter’s. He reminds him that he raised him in his palace and despite that Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did not respect it and he killed a man from amongst Pharaoh’s people. In Pharaoh’s opinion, that was a form of ingratitude for his favours. Yet, here he was, a second time, transgressing against Pharaoh's divinity by inviting him to have faith in The True God whom Pharaoh could not imagine, and Musa (Moses) peace be upon him gleaned the essential mistake in his behaviour at that moment. The mistake was not ingratitude to Pharaoh but rather the mistake was the killing, for He says, '[Musa (Moses)] said, "I did it, then, while I was one of those astray."' (ash-Shu'ara': 20). This is how we know that Musa (Moses), in the moment that he killed a man who was his enemy, did not have with him the path of guidance. Rather, his straying from the right path was due to his lack of knowledge that there was another path to guidance. Here the True Lord addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'And He found you lost and guided [you].' (ad-Duha: 7)

O Prophet Muhammad, you did not have a clear path towards guidance before you assumed prophethood, and the meaning of lost here is not deviation but rather, it means that before revelation was sent down, he did not know which path he was supposed to take. Lost can also be forgetfulness, and as long as man has forgotten reality, he is lost. An example is the True Lord's statement: 'So that if one of the women lost [memory of the testimony], then the other can remind her.' (al-Baqara: 282). Here the True Lord establishes that the testimony of a woman requires a guarantee, and that is done by confirming it with another woman's testimony. Because of the way a woman is created, she is not able to poke her nose into all the details of what she sees. Rather, she hears things superficially and therefore she does not get the complete picture. When the testimony of one woman is supported by the testimony of another woman, then each of the women reminds one another of whatever details may have been missed. This is because the mentality of a woman and the way she is created are based on preservation and being on guard in a society that contains dispute.

When the True Lord describes these idolaters on the Day of Resurrection He says: 'And lost from them will be what they used to invent.' (al-An'am: 24). Those whom they were lying about and claiming that they were partners besides Allah have deserted them, and the idolaters are the ones who are censured and taken to account for assuming partners. It may be that some of them have assumed a partner for Allah, but this partner has no sin in the matter, such as some of them assuming 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him to be a partner besides Allah, and 'Isa (Jesus) is far removed from associating partners with Allah or making himself a partner in divinity. The True Lord has said, ‘And [beware the Day] when Allah will say, “O 'Isa (Jesus), son of Maryam (Mary), did you say to the people, “Take me and my mother as deities besides Allah?” He will say, “Exalted are You! It was not for me to say that to which I have no right. If I had said it, You would have known it. You know what is within myself, and I do not know what is within Yourself. Indeed, it is You who is Knower of the unseen.”’ (al-Ma‘ida: 116)

The idols themselves that the idolaters took as lords say, ‘They worshipped us and we are more worshiping of Allah than those who stand praying at night. Therefore, the offense is thus committed by those who have associated partners with Allah, not the rocks that worship Allah and glorify Him because they are subjugated and prepared for what they have been created for. One of the poets imagined a dialogue taking place between the cave of Thawr and the cave of Hira`. The cave of Thawr says:

How we envied Hira` when the spirit came down

Trustworthy, assailing you with lights

When the True Lord permitted the emigration, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him hid himself in the cave of Thawr, and the other rocks said:

Thus, Hira` and Thawr became equals
Because of them the rocks were interceded for
They worshipped us and we are more worshipful of Allah
Than those who stand in the early morning
They took out silence as evidence against us
So for them we came to be fuel for the fire
Indeed, they have committed a crime of ignorance as they did
To the son of Maryam (Mary) and the disciples

The one who transgressed the bounds has his punishment and the one who is transgressed against Therein is saved by the mercy of the All-Forgiving

Therefore, here are the rocks saying that they are free from associating partners with Allah, and that they are more worshiping of Allah than those who stand praying at night. The obvious silence of the rocks has been taken by some to be evidence that the rocks are pleased with being worshipped, but these same rocks will become the rocks of hell, prepared for those who disbelieved in Allah. The crime committed by the servants against the rocks is like the crime done to 'Isa (Jesus), the son of Maryam (Mary). Those who exceed the bounds in worshipping rocks or human beings will be punished. As for rocks and human beings who have no sin in these matters, they only desire Allah’s forgiveness and mercy.

The True Lord says after that:

وَمِنۡهُم مَّن يَسۡتَمِعُ إِلَيۡكَۖ وَجَعَلۡنَا عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِهِمۡ أَكِنَّةً أَن يَفۡقَهُوهُ وَفِيٓ ءَاذَانِهِمۡ وَقۡرٗاۚ وَإِن يَرَوۡاْ كُلَّ
ءَايَةٖ لَّا يُؤۡمِنُواْ بِهَاۚ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءُوكَ يُجَٰدِلُونَكَ يَقُولُ ٱلَّذِينَ كَفَرُوٓاْ إِنۡ هَٰذَآ إِلَّآ أَسَٰطِيرُ ٱلۡأَوَّلِينَ ﴿٢٥﴾

Among them are some who [appear to] listen to you, but we have placed covers over their hearts – so they do not understand the Quran – and deafness in their ears. Even if they saw every sign they would not believe in them. So, when they come to you, they argue with you: the disbelievers say, ‘These are nothing but ancient fables’ [25] (The Quran, al-An’am: 25)

Indeed, from amongst these people are those who listen to the Quran without the objective of understanding and being guided by it. Rather, it is with the objective of seeking all possible means to attack it. It is as if their hearts are locked from the ability to understand and properly derive the means to guidance. They argue with the objective of affirming their disbelief; not with a pure intention to know the horizons of the True Lord’s signs and to arrive at the straight path.

We know that this entire chapter came to confront the issue of idols, statues, and associating partners with Allah. We know that the miracle that came with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the Quran, and it is a miracle of speech. It is different from the visual miracles that were witnessed by the contemporaries of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him such as the parting of the sea with the staff, or seeing the staff become a snake which snatched everything that the magicians had thrown down or the miracle of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him curing the blind and the leper. These are all visual miracles that are limited to a specific time. As for the miracle of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him it is a miracle that is heard repeatedly.

Indeed, hearing is the first tool of realisation of the human soul. It is the first instrument of realisation that alerts man. It is the only instrument of realisation that accompanies the time of sleep and carries out its task because its design includes the capacity to continue functioning during the time of sleep. We know that when the True Lord wanted to maintain the people of the Cave for a period of three hundred and nine years, He veiled their ears so that they would be in a deep slumber, as they were in a cave in a mountain, and the mountain was in a desert with winds, hurricanes and tornadoes blowing against it. Had their ears been in their normal state, they would not have been able to sleep peacefully as Allah had wanted them to; and this is why He veiled their ears. Allah Exalted is He said, ‘So We cast [a cover of sleep] over their ears within the cave for several years.’ (al-Kahf: 11)

Therefore, the miracle of Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him came in an auditory fashion, but it can also be read, and when man receives a statement he receives it by hearing, and afterwards he can read this statement and tries to understand it. No one knows how to read unless they have heard the sounds of the letters first and then seen them afterwards. His miracle is distinguished by the master of evidences amongst the means of human realisation, which is hearing. The True Lord says, ‘And among them are those who listen to you.’

Indeed, there is a difference between hearing and listening. The one who hears is the one who hears unintentionally, while the one who listens hears intentionally. The one who hears without intention does not have a choice but to hear, unless his ears are blocked. As for the one listening, he is the one who intends to hear. They were listening to the Quran not with the objective of unveiling the horizons of guidance but with the objective of persisting in disbelief, and with the intention of launching attacks against the Quran.

The True Lord says, ‘…but We have placed over their hearts coverings, lest they understand it, and in their ears deafness…’ (al-An‘am: 24). As if, because of their choice to disbelieve, Allah has prevented them from understanding the Quran, and we know that all the contemporaries of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard him; some believed and some persisted in disbelief. We know that for every action there is a receiver, and it is possible for the receiver to believe and with that the action has produced its benefit. Also, the receiver could persist with his previous position and thus not believe, and here in this case the action does not produce its benefit. The doer is one and the same, but the receiver differs. Some of the disbelievers heard the Quran and then left without faith, 'And among them, [O Muhammad], are those who listen to you, until when they depart from you, they say to those who were given knowledge, "What has he said just now?" Those are the ones of whom Allah has sealed over their hearts and who have followed their [own] desires.' (Muhammad: 16)

They are like the disbelievers who listen to the Quran and then leave so that they can mockingly say to the believers who have come to know and believed, 'What speech is this that Muhammad is saying'? These mockers are the ones whose hearts Allah has sealed with disbelief, and they leave guidance and head for misguidance. The one speaking with Allah's speech is the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him conveying from Allah. The one hearing differs. There is the hearer who believes and is affected by what he hears, and there is the hearer who disbelieves because his ears cannot translate what he has heard into awareness and realisation. But the Quran is for those who have believed that it is guidance and a cure. As for those who do not believe in it, their ears are deaf to understanding with no insight, and this is why they do not understand anything Allah revealed. You find the soul of the believer to be far-sighted because it knows what is in the Quran. As for the one who wants to be a tyrant on the earth, he does not want to make himself adhere to the way.

To recognise the difference between these two types of humans, we find the believer contemplating about the universe and thus, realising that it must have a wise Maker. As for the disbeliever, his insight is blind from seeing this. When the believer listens to a statement from the Creator of the universe, he listens attentively while the disbeliever runs away from it.

The leaders of Quraysh such as Abu Jahl, Abu Sufyan, An-Nadar ibn al-Harith, Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughira, `Utba ibn Rabi`a, Shayba ibn Rabi`a and Harb ibn Umayya, gathered, and one of them asked An-Nadar, ‘O Nadar! What is the story behind the speech that Muhammad says?’ An-Nadr was a narrator of stories that he gathered from all over the land, for he had travelled to the lands of Persia and Byzantium and traversed the length and breadth of the Arabian Peninsula. He said, ‘By Allah, I do not know what Muhammad is saying except that he says the fables of ancient times.’

An-Nadr, Abu Sufyan and Abu Jahl engaged in an argument with Prophet peace and blessings be upon him Muhammad. This argument reflects a lack of understanding of the signs that the Quran has brought. Allah did not put deafness in their ears forcibly, but rather, primarily, because of their disbelief, and Allah sealed their hearts because of their disbelief. The disease of disbelief settled in their hearts and they preferred it to faith, so Allah worsens their disease. The True Lord Glorified is He says about them: ‘And if they should see every sign, they will not believe in it. Even when they come to you arguing with you, those who disbelieve say, “This is not but fables of the former generations.”’ (al-An‘am: 25)

Fables are something that are written down and addressed as something wondrous and fictional. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is exposing them in front of themselves, and they are trying to find a flaw in the Quran, but they will not be able to find it. Allah Glorified is He says the final word about them: ‘And they said, “Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?”’ (az-Zukhruf: 31).

They know the greatness of the Quran; so how can they say that it is the fables of ancient times? They were amongst those who were astonished by the grandeur of the Noble Quran’s style even though they were an oratory nation. But they also know that the requirements of the Quran are difficult for their egos to bear. In addition, they wanted to remain in a position of leadership, might, and subjection over others, while the Quran came to establish equality between all human beings in front of the True Lord, the One and the Unique.

By the Will of Allah, compelling events came about to be a cause for faith, such as what happened with `Umar ibn A-Khattab when he learned that his sister (Fatima bint Al-Khattab) had accepted Islam. He went to her, beat her and made her bleed. The flow of blood evoked within him his brotherly compassion and it put an end to his stubborn conceit. Then he wanted to read the page which contained some verses from the Quran but his sister told him to purify himself. He did so and then sat and listened. After he forwent conceit and stubbornness, and by purifying himself, his ears became ready to understand what was in the Quran. Then he went to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and declared his faith in Allah as his Lord, and in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his final Message.

After that the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَهُمۡ يَنۡهَوۡنَ عَنۡهُ وَيَنۡـَٔوۡنَ عَنۡهُۖ وَإِن يُهۡلِكُونَ إِلَّآ أَنفُسَهُمۡ وَمَا يَشۡعُرُونَ ٢٦

And tell others not to listen [to the Quran], while they themselves keep away from it. But they ruin no one but themselves, though they fail to realize this [26] (The Quran, al-An'am: 26)

The disbeliever from amongst these people only turns away from what Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him requires. He not only does not want to be guided but also bars others from faith, so it is as if he has committed two crimes: the crime of his own disbelief and the crime of baring others from faith.

Quraysh were indeed certain that whoever heard the Quran, would be guided by it, and for that reason, they advised one another against hearing the Quran. If they were to hear it, they had to distort it or make some noise that would come between the one hearing the Quran and him reflecting on it. 'And those who disbelieve say, "Do not listen to this Quran and speak noisily during [the recitation of] it that perhaps you will overcome."' (Fussilat: 26)

They were certain that the Quran would overwhelm them with proof and silence them with clear evidences. Had they listened to it, they would have found a sweetness and an elegance therein that would remove all stubbornness and denial from their hearts. Because of this, it is as if they are bearing witness that the Quran affects the natural disposition of man, without disregarding they have a gift for Arabic rhetoric. Nevertheless, the disbelievers persisted in their stubborn opposition despite their deep love for the style, eloquence, and rendering of the Quran. They were not content with their own misguidance, so they wanted to misguide others, which would double their sins to the addition of the sins of those they are misguiding. This had not affected, at the slightest, the progress of the call nor on the proclamation of faith coming from Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is because the True Lord Glorified is He gives him victory despite all this; for Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘And Our word has already preceded for Our servants, the messengers. That indeed, they would be those given victory. And that indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome.’ (as-Saffat: 171-173) When the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And they prevent [others] from him and are [themselves] remote from him. And they do not destroy except themselves, but they perceive [it] not.’ (al-An‘am: 26) We know that the purport of this statement is that they oppose the call of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because it would strip them of their temporal authority with its grandeur, tyranny and exploitation of the weak. This is why they stood in denial towards it and disbelieved in it.

Since they took this position towards the call, they were never going to have faith, and because they turned away and distanced themselves from the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they had indeed lost. The others, however, had not turned away but sought refuge in Allah, Who gave them refuge.

These stubborn deniers of the call of Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him stood in front of his call and barred and forbade people from following it because this call would strip them of their temporal authority with its grandeur, tyranny and exploitation of the weak by subjugating them to serve them and exerting their authority over them. This, primarily, is what prompted them to prevent others and forbid them from following Islam. Secondly, they themselves turned away and distanced themselves from following the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, it was for their own benefit, primarily, that they forbid others before turning away themselves because had the people believed in Allah’s Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, while they alone remained in disbelief, would they have benefitted at all from this process? They would not have benefitted, so, their desire was for no one to believe in Allah's Messenger so that their authority would remain.

The Quranic rendering came expressing the subtlest details of this state, saying, '…and they prevent [others] from him.' (al-An'am: 26) The beginning was to forbid others from having faith in the Message of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Then, they distanced themselves from Allah's Messenger, and thus, their fate became such that they would remain in their disbelief, and the loss was theirs. Meanwhile, other people believed.

This is how we see that the Quranic rendering always expresses psychological states with the most accurate of expressions, for the True Lord's saying: 'And they prevent [others] from him…' (al-An'am: 26), is a logical statement expressing the position of those who oppose Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. As for The True Lord's saying, '…and are [themselves] remote from him…' (al-An'am: 26), this is an illustration of what they have done to themselves after preventing others from following Muhammad's call and the final Message. Given this picture, they are committing two sins. The first is the misguiding of others and the second is their own misguidance. Because of this, the True Lord's following statement applies to them: 'That they may bear their own burdens in full on the Day of Resurrection and some of the burdens of those whom they misguide without knowledge. Unquestionably, evil is that which they bear.' (an-Nahl: 25)

No one should say, 'This verse contradicts the True Lord's Glorified is He statement," 'And no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another.' (al-Isra': 15). This is because the two crimes; their crime and the crime of them misguiding others, is because of their action.

The True Lord Glorified is He continues, '…and they do not destroy except themselves, but they perceive [it] not.' (al-An'am: 26) We see that the one who stands in opposition to goodness and the True Lord's call is only doing so with the intention of benefitting himself and acquiring this life for his own sake, but they will never achieve that. Why? Because Allah Glorified is He is Dominant over His affairs: 'And Our word has already preceded for Our servants, the messengers. That indeed, they would be those given victory. And that indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome.' (as-Saffat: 171-173)

The True Lord Glorified is He never allows His hosts to be defeated. He will certainly destroy the enemies of His call because of their disbelief and their barring of others from Allah's path. They are the ones who destroy themselves by themselves, and the Islamic call to faith shall remain in the ascent. They will see the lands of disbelief decreasing day by day. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He says in another verse: 'Have they not seen that We set upon the land, reducing it from its borders?' (ar-Ra'd: 41)

The lands of disbelief decrease, and when Allah judges, there is no power that can repel His judgement. Therefore, the Quran amply explains this matter towards the end of its revelatory order and teaches us to cut off every relation that we have with the disbelievers. Allah Glorified is He says, 'Say, "O disbelievers, I do not worship what you worship. Nor are you worshippers of what I worship. Nor will I be a worshipper of what you worship. Nor will you be worshippers of what I worship."' (al-Kafirun: 1-5)

This is how we see that cutting relations is a required matter between two groups; one group sees that it is upon truth, while the second group is upon falsehood. The cutting of relations can be a temporary matter and circumstances and situations may put pressure on people to resume earthly relations once again, but cutting relations must be supported by a matter of creed, and there should be no dissimulation. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says it twice: 'I do not worship what you worship. Nor are you worshippers of what I worship. Nor will I be a worshipper of what you worship. Nor will you be worshippers of what I worship.' (al-Kafirun: 1-5)

The believer sees both the present and the future, and he is fully aware of the impossibility of him worshipping what the disbelievers worship as well as the impossibility of the disbelievers worshipping what he worships.

Someone might say that the Quran, in its revelatory order, must not contradict reality, but we see in His Glorified is He statement, 'I do not worship what you worship. Nor are you worshippers of what I worship.' is repeated twice, which thereby closes the door in front of the disbelievers so that they will not believe even though some of them did enter Allah's religion. We say that indeed it is not a contradiction because the True Lord Glorified is He did not close the door in front of the disbelievers whom Allah willed to believe, and the evidence is that Allah Glorified and Exalted is He said: 'When the victory of Allah has come and the conquest. And you see the people entering the religion of Allah in multitudes. Then exalt Him with the praise of your Lord and ask forgiveness of Him. Indeed, He is ever accepting of repentance.' (an-Nasr: 1-3)

Therefore, the matter does not freeze at that point because the camp of faith will expand and it will confront the camp of the disbelievers, and the people well enter the religion of Allah in crowds. But there are those whom Allah has decreed to never believe so that they will remain upon their disbelief and enter the Fire. He Glorified is He says after that: 'May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined and ruined is he. His wealth will not avail him or that which he gained. He will [enter to burn in a Fire of [blazing] flame; and his wife as well - the carrier of firewood. Around her neck is a rope of [twisted] fibre.' (al-Masad: 1-5). Abu Lahab, and those of his kind, will enter the Fire and he will never enter Allah's religion.

The True Lord's statement Glorified is He then comes: 'And you see the people entering the religion of Allah in multitudes.' This statement opens the door of hope because 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab, `Amr ibn Al-`As and `Ikrimah ibn Abu Jahl entered Islam. The chapter of Al-Masad came after the chapter of An-Nasr in the order of the Quran, as Allah had willed. This teaches us that there are people who will never enter paradise because they are like Abu Lahab and his wife, Umm Jamil. Following this is the chapter of al-Ikhlas: 'Say, "He is Allah, who is One. Allah, the Eternal Refuge. He begets not, nor was He begotten. Nor is there to Him any equivalent."' (al-Ikhlas: 1-4) There is no god besides Allah that can nullify what Allah has judged, and no one can repel Allah's judgement. Therefore, whoever disbelieves and associates partners with Allah will be from those who have squandered themselves and destroyed themselves without perceiving it. After that, The True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ تَرَىٰٓ إِذْ وُقِفُوا۟ عَلَى ٱلنَّارِ فَقَالُوا۟ يَٰلَيْتَنَا نُرَدُّ وَلَا نُكَذِّبَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ رَبِّنَا وَنَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلْمُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿٢٧﴾

If you could only see, when they are made to stand before the Fire, how they will say, ‘If only we could be sent back, we would not reject the revelations of our Lord, but be among the believers’ [27] (The Quran, al-An’am: 27)

When we look at the True Lord’s statement, ‘If you could but see when they are made to stand before the Fire…’ (al-An‘am: 27), we do not find an apodosis in the way that we would find when you say, ‘Had I seen so-and-so, I would have welcomed him’, or ‘Had I seen so-and-so, I would have punished him’. In both sentences there is an apodosis, but in this noble statement we do not find an apodosis, and this is part of the grandeur of the Quranic rendering. Thus, there are events which words cannot describe, and for that reason the True Lord Glorified is He omits them so that it fits the way every hearer sees it.

In our daily lives, we find a criminal in some land where his corruption and crimes are worsening amongst the population; killing, torture, theft, criminal attacks and no one is ever able to stop him. Then Allah enables the security forces to arrest him, and we see this denigrate turns from being a tyrant into a dastardly coward, almost kissing the hand of the police officer so that that he does not put the handcuffs on him. Someone sees this scene and he describes it to others by saying, ‘If you could have seen the moment the police arrested this criminal…’ This expression conveys all the meaning of humiliation imaginable. Therefore, the omission of the apodosis is beneficial so that every hearer can imagine the humiliation in whatever way he likes. This is because the witness, had he chosen to narrate what had happened in detail the moment the criminal was arrested, then he might have limited the humiliation to only what he saw, and this would have prevented those hearing from being able to imagine it and picture it. But if the witness suffices himself by saying, ‘If you could have seen the moment the police arrested this criminal…’ this statement generalises what was seen so that each person hearing can picture the humiliation in a way that suits the capacity of each person’s imagination to picture things. This is how the Quran wanted to illustrate the horror of standing before the Fire, as the True

Lord Glorified is He used the word ‘if’ without any apodosis when He said: ‘If you could but see when they are made to stand before the fire and will say, “Oh, would that we could be returned to life on earth and not deny the signs of our Lord and be among the believers.”’ (al-An‘am: 27)

Some people wanted to find fault with the Quran’s style, and some from amongst them would say, ‘How can you say the Quran is the peak of oration, eloquent in its style, inimitable in its presentation and it says what it says about az-zaqum (a tree in hell)? Indeed, the Noble Quran says about this tree: ‘Is Paradise a better accommodation or the tree of zaqqum? Indeed, We have made it a trial for the wrongdoers. Indeed, it is a tree issuing from the bottom of the Hellfire. The shoots of its fruit-stalks are like the heads of the devils.’ (as-Saffat: 62-65)

Every tree needs water and air, and the life going through it is manifested in the greenness of the leaves, so how can this tree emerge from the Fire? Is there not an anomaly in that? Then the illustration of the tree goes on, and the True Lord Glorified is He describes its fruits with the True Lord’s Glorified is He statement: ‘The shoots of its fruit-stalks are like the heads of the devils. And indeed, they will eat from it and fill with it their bellies.’ (as-Saffat: 65-66)

We have not seen the zaqqum tree, and we have not seen Satan’s head. Those who try to find fault in the Quran say mockingly, ‘Seeing as no human being has ever seen Satan’s head, or the zaqqum tree, how can Allah compare the unknown to something else that is unknown’? They clamour and ask each other, ‘How does the one hearing benefit from the comparison of something unknown with something else that is unknown’? We say in response to them ‘Indeed the foolishness of your hearts and the loss of your natural gift for Arabic are what make you incapable of understanding the rhetoric spread across this statement’.

To give an example we say imagine a man sets up a competition for ‘caricature’ artists from around the world, and he asks each of them to draw a picture of Satan. When the day comes to decide the winner, you will find more than one picture of Satan, and the ugliest picture will win. Winning here will not be because of beauty but rather, it will be for how skilful someone is in illustrating ugliness. In this way, we would have in front of us various illustrations of ugliness, so what do we think about the True Lord Glorified is He as He wanted to let the imagination unrestricted to picture the zaqqum tree and likewise Satan's head? With this rhetorical style, the True Lord Glorified is He wanted to make known the benefit of demonstrating the ugliness of the tree's appearance from which the people of disbelief will eat.

The same notion is used here in the True Lord's statement, 'If you could but see when they are made to stand before the Fire', and what will happen to these people standing before the Fire is not mentioned here. Rather, the True Lord Glorified is He is content with expressing for us that we will see them standing in such a position because the Last Day is the day of recompense; either to Paradise or to the Fire. Paradise, as we know from the statement of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him contains that which no eye has seen, no ear has heard and what has never occurred to the heart of any human being. We know that what the eye sees is limited, but the range of hearing is broader. This is because the ear hears what you witness and what others witness, while the eyes only see what they can see. The True Lord Glorified is He does not stop there, but rather He informs Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that paradise contains what has never occurred to the heart of any human being. In other words, Paradise contains things that language is incapable of expressing because language expresses people's imaginations of things. The meaning exists first, and later a term is coined to express it.

This is how we know that Paradise contains blessings that have no terms with which any meaning can be conveyed to the believer. Likewise, we also know that there is a punishment in the fire for which there are no terms that can express it. If the True Lord Glorified is He had said, 'If you could but see when they are made to stand before the Fire', we would have seen a matter that is dreadful, frightening and humiliating besides the other common terms that describe the severity of the punishment, but this will not be as effective as the verse puts it.

When we read 'made to stand,' we know that it contains a structure and a present existence, and there are those who have been made to stand before the fire. They are the ones who denied the fire in this life, but then they found themselves amongst those whom Allah causes to stand before the fire, so that they can see the punishment that awaits them. In this way, the True Lord Glorified is He makes them stand before the fire that they denied in this life. They were informed of it in this life. A person, who believes in it, especially after it is conveyed by a truthful person, would make this knowledge of certainty. If man passes to the next stage of knowledge and sees a tangible representation of the information, then this is the eye of certainty. When the believer is informed by his Lord, he arrives at things with the knowledge of certainty from Allah because he believes his Lord. This is why `Ali Allah be pleased with him says, 'If the veil were to be lifted from me, I would not increase in certainty.' This is because he affirms what has been conveyed to him.

But what is it about the deniers? Man will see the knowledge of certainty on the Day of Resurrection when it becomes the eye of certainty. Both the believer and the disbeliever have a share in this. However, the disbeliever sees the Fire with the eye of certainty and they enter it so that he can be burned by it. Thus, he feels it and this is the 'true certainty'.

This is how we know that the fire is the 'eye of certainty', seen by both the believer and the disbeliever. The fire as the 'true certainty' is something that only the disbeliever suffers and is punished by. As for the believer in paradise, he feels the 'truth of certainty' because he abides therein and enjoys its blessings. Allah Glorified is He illustrates this in His statement: 'No! If you only knew with knowledge of certainty, you will surely see the Hellfire. Then you will surely see it with the eye of certainty.' (at-Takathur: 5-7) The truth of certainty is mentioned in His statement: 'And if the deceased was of those brought near to Allah. Then for him is rest and bounty and a garden of pleasure. And if he was of those of the right, then the angels will say, "Peace to you; you are from those of the right." But if he was of the deniers who were astray, then for him is an accommodation of scalding water and burning in Hellfire. Indeed, this is the true certainty.' (al-Waqi'a: 88-95)

What are these deniers going to do when they see the fire with the eye of certainty? They will fear having to suffer from it when they enter it. That is why they say, '...Oh, would that we could be returned to life on earth and not deny the signs of our Lord and be among the believers.' They will wish that they could return to this life so they can have a fresh start and accept faith. In some cases, a wish is a request for something impossible to inform that the one requesting it would love for it to be so, as someone once said,

If only youth would come back one day
And I would tell him what old age has done

Or someone else's statement,

If only the celestial bodies would come down to me, I would arrange them
In necklaces of praise, as my words aren't enough to praise you

They say, '…would that we could be returned…' If they are saying this as a wish, then it is an impossible request, and it also includes a promise not to deny Allah's signs. Are they able to do this? No, because the Noble Quran has said in the following verse:

بَلۡ بَدَا لَهُم مَّا كَانُواْ يُخۡفُونَ مِن قَبۡلُۖ وَلَوۡ رُدُّواْ لَعَادُواْ لِمَا نُهُواْ عَنۡهُ وَإِنَّهُمۡ لَكَٰذِبُونَ ﴿٢٨﴾

No! The truth they used to hide will become all too clear to them. Even if they were brought back, they would only return to the very thing that was forbidden to them – they are such liars! [28]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 28)

They are requesting to be returned to this life but not to fulfil the promise in their impossible request because they will do what they did before: disbelief, denial and rejection. They seek refuge in this statement because of their excessive fear of what Allah has prepared for them, and this is after the disbelief and rejection they committed in this life is shown to them. It is said that the Day of Resurrection is 'the Day of Disgrace' because every person will find his book around his neck, and it will be said to him, 'Read your record. Sufficient is yourself against you this Day as a reckoner.' (al-Isra': 14)

If we, in this life, record events with sounds and pictures, then what do we think about the True Lord Glorified is He recording us? Man will see a loathsome thing on the Day of Judgement in sound and picture, and he will see every action that he did in a way that he cannot deny. It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is clarifying for every servant, 'I will not reckon you but rather, I will leave you to reckon yourself'. Man will be surprised to see his limbs speak to testify against him; his hands will speak of what he did, his tongue will speak of what he said, his feet will relate where they were taken. Thus, these limbs that respond to the will of their owner in this life have a different position in the Hereafter. They will not carry out man's will on the Last Day but rather, the will of the One Who gave man his will 'To whom belongs all sovereignty this Day? To Allah, the One, the Prevailing.' (Ghafir: 16)

An example of this – and Allah is beyond compare– is that we find a squadron or combat regiment that has a commander who gives orders to the soldiers. If he gives them erroneous commands, they still carry them out. After the battle has finished, the supreme commander asks them what happened, and they respond by mentioning the series of erroneous commands that were issued by their immediate commander.

Therefore, one should beware of thinking that one's parts will always act per your power. Your control over something is a matter that Allah granted you. He can strip it away from you in this life whenever He wants. The Day of Resurrection will come and your control over your parts will come to an end. In this life, you can see illustrations of this control over the parts of the body being stripped, and this is to remind you of the power of the Sublime All-Giver. You see the one who does not see, and the one who has lost control over one limb or more of his limbs. This is a reminder from Allah that man's control over his limbs is only a matter that has been bestowed by Allah. The True Lord's statement Glorified is He about the disbelievers, 'But what they concealed before has [now] appeared to them…' exposes their deceit in this life. Then Allah responds to their prior wish that is filled with humiliation and misery, the wish to be returned to this life. Allah Glorified is He says, 'And even if they were returned, they would return to that which they were forbidden; and indeed, they are liars.' Thus, they are lying when they promise that they would believe if they were to be returned to this life, and the True Lord's next statement Glorified is He clarifies this:

وَقَالُوٓاْ إِنۡ هِيَ إِلَّا حَيَاتُنَا ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَمَا نَحۡنُ بِمَبۡعُوثِينَ ٢٩

They say, ‘There is nothing beyond our life in this world: we shall not be raised from the dead’ [29] (The Quran, al-An’am: 29)

Throughout their lives, they had not taken faith as a result deduced from contemplating an organised and arranged universe that has been made perfect in its creation. They had not paid attention to this order, perfection, and arrangement that is present in human relationships, regardless of whether they are believers or non-believers; and we know that there are qualities that are commonly despised by all of mankind, believers, and non-believers alike. If a non-believer steals from his associate, is he not punished? Indeed, he receives a punishment from his society. In all societies, there are rewards and punishments, or rather there is a reward for the performance of good deeds, and faith does not prevent mankind from adopting anything that has to do with the performance of good deeds. As for those who are void of faith, events compel them to put laws in place to regulate reward and punishment.

We find that the criminalisation of whoever opposes goodness, beauty, and rectification of the universe is a matter that is inherent to man’s natural disposition and it is necessary for man. They criminalise evil actions after events have bitten them and they do not turn to the heavenly way that came with reward and punishment for every action to protect the honour of man. On the Day of Resurrection, they will stand in humility and under compulsion to see what they have done: ‘But what they concealed before has [now] appeared to them. And even if they were returned, they would return to that which they were forbidden; and indeed, they are liars.’ (al-An‘am: 28)

If they were to be returned to this life and given the choice again, they would still act as they had done before, and they would not say such a statement on the Last Day unless they were forced. Before that they were saying, ‘And they say, “There is none but our worldly life, and we will not be resurrected.”’ (al-An‘am: 29)

When they were in this life, they only believed in one life which was the worldly life. They did not pay attention to the fact that man enjoys life in this world in proportion to how strong he is, and woe to the weak in relation to the strong. The strong only fears a law that may punish him, or he fears a god that will punish him for his sins, no matter how much he has hidden them. We find the believing judge always saying, 'If you hide things from being judged on earth, you cannot hide them from being judged in the sky'.

It is from the foolishness of the people of disbelief that they call life on earth 'worldly life,' whereas it is inferior. As long as they judge and know that it is inferior, then it must be countered by a higher life. All of this will happen to them when they stand before the fire, and the fire is one of the soldiers of the All-Compeller; so what do you think of them when they shall stand before the Creator of the fire and the Lord of all the worlds?! The True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَوْ تَرَىٰٓ إِذْ وُقِفُوا۟ عَلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ ۚ قَالَ أَلَيْسَ هَٰذَا بِٱلْحَقِّ ۚ قَالُوا۟ بَلَىٰ
وَرَبِّنَا ۚ قَالَ فَذُوقُوا۟ ٱلْعَذَابَ بِمَا كُنتُمْ تَكْفُرُونَ ﴿٣٠﴾

If you could only see, when they are made to stand before their Lord, how He will say, 'Is this not real?' They will say, 'Yes indeed, by our Lord.' He will say, 'Then taste the torment for having disbelieved' [30] (The Quran, al-An'am: 30)

They, therefore, were scared and confused and they asked to be returned to this life because what they witnessed was a great horror; so what do you think about them standing before Allah? Indeed, it is a terrifying position. If the True Lord Glorified is He omitted the apodosis before when they were made to stand before the fire, then this situation is even more suited to omit the apodosis, so that the imagination is left unrestricted. It is certainly a greater horror.

Thus, we see them being reproached in the True Lord's statement to them, 'Is this not the truth?' They are surprised by the presence of Allah saying this to them, after witnessing the resurrection and standing before the Fire. Allah Glorified is He is not asking them a question but rather, He is affirming, and He willed for the affirmation to come from them. They affirm it because the situation requires no obstinacy.

The True Lord Glorified is He presents this matter in the form of negation so that no one supposes that there is any insinuation of the answer. The Lord's verdict is issued, ‘taste the punishments because you used to disbelieve.’ Thus, they taste the punishment that they used to deny. Tasting the punishment is not from any kind of force or tyranny because Allah does not oppress in the slightest, but because they brought forth that which necessitates their punishment.

After that the True Lord Glorified is He says:

قَدْ خَسِرَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِلِقَآءِ ٱللَّهِ ۖ حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءَتْهُمُ ٱلسَّاعَةُ بَغْتَةً قَالُوا۟ يَٰحَسْرَتَنَا
عَلَىٰ مَا فَرَّطْنَا فِيهَا وَهُمْ يَحْمِلُونَ أَوْزَارَهُمْ عَلَىٰ ظُهُورِهِمْ ۚ أَلَا سَآءَ مَا يَزِرُونَ ﴿٣١﴾

Lost indeed are those who deny the meeting with their Lord until, when the Hour suddenly arrives, they say, ‘Alas for us that we disregarded this!’ They will bear their burdens on their backs. How terrible those burdens will be! [31] (The Quran, al-An’am: 31)

Every capital needs work to increase it, but if the work has wasted the money, then this means that there is a double loss. The first loss is because the capital has gone, disappeared and been wasted. The second is because man’s own effort has been wasted along with the capital.

Therefore, those who denied meeting Allah have indeed lost because they sold the longer lasting future for the short-lived present. Each one of us wants to benefit from his work and we try to give a little to take much.

For example, a farmer appropriates a specific amount from a large quantity of wheat, which is in his storehouse so that he can sow it in the earth after it has been cultivated. This means a small decrease in this farmer’s storehouse, but it is a decrease for a future increase. When he places the seeds in the cultivated earth, we find the True Lord Glorified is He bringing forth vegetation for him that is doubled and multiplied many times over. In this way, the farmer sells that which is small, and in the present to take that which is great in the future.

This is how an intelligent person leads his life by weighing his steps carefully. If he wants to increase the benefits, then he must put in more effort. If he notices insufficient return, he would instantly cease that whichever is unproductive. Because the intelligent person does not like losing, we always find him weighing things and comparing between the effort he expends and what he will get in return. As for those who have disbelieved in meeting Allah, they have indeed squandered their own selves, because they did not compare between the two lives; a life that is presumed and life that is certain, because the length of our stay in this life is presumed and not certain. We do not know how long we will live therein, and the life of man on earth is seventy years on average, as an example. However, no one knows exactly how long they will be in this life, and our life spans are limited. We are vanishing, going, and dying, but the life of the Hereafter is certain and has no fixed term. It is permanent. We know that the blessings of this life with regards to man, are per his means that are found therein. As for the blessings of the Hereafter, they are per the absolute power of the Original Cause, and He is Allah. Given this understanding, the loss of those who have disbelieved is massive, heavy and bloody because they did not trade with Allah.

'Those will have lost who deny the meeting with Allah, until when the Hour [of resurrection] comes upon them unexpectedly, they will say, "Oh, how great is our regret over what we neglected concerning it…"' Those who have disbelieved, it is their disbelief and their denial that has brought them to loss. The coming of the Hour, all of a sudden, is not the end of the trip. It is only the arrival at the first loss because their loss does not end with the sudden coming of the Hour. It only begins the moment the Hour surprises them. They are surprised by the occurrence of that which they were denying, and they know that what they did in this life can only necessitate punishment. Here begins the loss which they are incapable of hiding. That is why they say: 'Oh, how great is our regret over what we neglected concerning it.' In other words, we disregarded and squandered ourselves, while we were in this life. With this, we know that commitment to this life and taking the means therein is something that is not blameworthy, but negligence while being in this life is blameworthy because it is wasting time and sowing corruption on earth.

I say this lest no one thinks that enjoyment in this life is blameworthy in and of itself, and so that no one thinks that the religion only addresses the Hereafter because it also addresses this life. Recompense in the Hereafter is only of a different type and manner to that of this life. Whoever has excellent behaviour in this life will obtain the reward of the Hereafter, and whoever does evil will obtain the punishment of the Hereafter. For this reason, it is totally incorrect to compare between this life and the religion.

We must be aware of the mistake of those who say ‘the religion and this life’, because the religion is not the opposite of this life. In fact, this life is the total focus of the religion. I say in refutation of those who think that the reason why some countries have become advanced in our age is that their people have neglected religion and become infatuated with the delights and pleasures of this life, and thus, they have worked to build civilizations.

We say that devotion to the religion with a spirit of understanding is what builds civilisations, and those who strive to improve in this life will be rewarded on the Day of Recompense. We must understand that the opposite of this life is the Hereafter, and the religion comprises both. It comprises this life as a subject, and the Hereafter as a reward. Those who are infatuated with this life and do not believe in the Hereafter are the ones who say on the Day of Resurrection, ‘Oh, how great is our regret over what we neglected concerning it.’ The immaterial burdens in this life (i.e. sins) will materialise as physical realities, and this is so that the humiliation can be public. Thus, whoever stole a sheep in this life, will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection carrying it on his back. Whoever stole a cow will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection carrying it on his shoulder and it will be mooing. Likewise, whoever stole a tonne of building iron will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection carrying it on his back, and this is how Allah humiliates him on the Day of Resurrection.

This is then the situation of the people of the fire. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘Unquestionably, evil is that which they bear.’ We know that they will not just be carrying the burdens of their own sins but they will also be carrying some of the sins of those who took them as an example, and this is the sin of misguiding others. They know that the burden will be materialised as physical, and these sins have lead them to the Hellfire. We know that the result of every action is what is sought from it; so whoever does acts of righteousness, will find the righteousness of his actions, and whoever does acts of evil, will find his evil actions.

We see practical examples of this in our daily lives. For example, two brothers working in agriculture; and each of them owns two pieces of land. The first one gets up at the crack of dawn to tend to his land and cultivate it. He brings fertilizers for it and pays attention to the times of irrigation. He strives with earnest and endeavour until the day of the harvest. The other, on the contrary, stays up at night watching television and does not get up from his sleep until midday. He only expends the minimum amount of effort in tending to his land. The day of the harvest comes and the first brother obtains the result of his labour with an abundant yield. The other only has a small yield in addition to the grief he must swallow because of his laziness and neglect. Therefore, the intelligent person is the one who anticipates the return of his actions in life and he chooses the type of activity that will guarantee him felicity in this life and the Hereafter, and bring peace to the soul in this life and the Hereafter.

The one who sleeps and does not go to work is a man who loves himself, and whoever gets up early in the morning to work also loves himself, but there is a difference between the love of an idiot that is followed by regret and the love of someone who deeply understands the meaning of life, and his love is followed by an abundant reward. The True Lord Glorified is He says to us:

وَمَا ٱلْحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنْيَآ إِلَّا لَعِبٌ وَلَهْوٌ ۖ وَلَلدَّارُ ٱلْءَاخِرَةُ
خَيْرٌ لِّلَّذِينَ يَتَّقُونَ ۗ أَفَلَا تَعْقِلُونَ (٣٢)

The life of this world is nothing but a game and a distraction; the Home in the Hereafter is best for those who are aware of God. Why will you [people] not understand? [32] (The Quran, al-An’am: 32)

This sums up life for the kind of people who stop in describing it as an amusement and play. Play is the pursuit of something and its destruction at the same time. For, example, a child who builds a sandcastle on the beach but then wrecks it: He only built a sandcastle so that he could wreck it. The purpose of play is to kill time in some endeavour that may be later wrecked. Thus, building and wrecking in this situation is playing which does not necessarily divert the person from his duties. As for amusement, it is to kill time in some useless endeavour besides distracting the person from his duties as well.

The small child, for example, receives some games from his father so that he can spend his time with them. He may wreck them and then build them again. The games of a child are also amusement at the same time because a child does not have any duties besides going to school. He will come to have more responsibilities and the family will teach him how to distinguish between playtime and the time for carrying out responsibilities. If he plays during the time he is supposed to be carrying out responsibilities, then the games become amusement because it is distracting him from a responsibility that is required of him.

Likewise, a life that lacks the methodology of the One Who created it and created man therein is both game and amusement. As for man taking life consistently with the specifications of the One Who created it, then this is a life that will bring about goodness in this life and in the Hereafter. The One Who created this life made it as a place for us to cultivate for the Hereafter. The believer, therefore, has two lives: one of righteousness in this life and another of felicity in the Hereafter because he lived this life per the Will of the One Who created it.

It is amazing that the One Who created us has not charged us with any responsibility until we reach the age of puberty. Responsibility comes with maturity and the completion of the intellect. The True Lord Glorified is He has allowed us to play in the years prior to maturity. However, these games must be played under the supervision of elders so that they can be turned into experience that will benefit us throughout the phases of life. It allows us to know how we arrived, in the modern age, at such a degree of progress in the manufacturing of games from which a child can learn. He can disassemble them and reassemble them again. Even the elders; we find them, in our time, learning how to drive a car while sitting at home in front of the television, as if they are on a real road on a real street crowded with cars. Whoever masters this practical training will be able to go out and drive cars. Thus, we find that training benefits man. Small children know games that will benefit them when they grow up, and likewise, training also benefits adults.

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him advised us to teach our children horse riding, swimming and archery, horses were, at the time of the Message, one of the important weapons that were ridden by those calling to Allah and fighting for His sake. He recommended that we teach our children how to swim because this builds the body and strengthens it. It benefits the youth and teaches them how to confront difficulties. When he recommended archery, it was because defining a target, material or immaterial, and knowing how to achieve it is something required of every youth. These were all games, but they were not amusement. They are enjoyable and man can continue to practice them after reaching the age of responsibility. He peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Teach your children swimming and archery.'(1) So what do we say about the games of our age and our time?

Indeed, we find that football has drawn the interest of men and women, young and old, and it is a game that does not teach anyone anything. It is a game for the sake of gaming. It is a game that drains the time of most people, and that game has adopted all the rules of serious matters. It starts at a specific time. The spectators arrive two hours beforehand. The state must devote enough security forces for the sake of maintaining order, even though it is amusement that has no benefit for the spectator. It may also prevent, interfere with and interrupt some people's work, and for other people their prayer. All of this takes place, while we find that some fields that require seriousness have no rules. I say this so that people wake up and realise that this game does not benefit them at all. I state this opinion and I ask every head of a household to exert control over his family, and advise them with calmness and attentiveness until each member of the family becomes aware of his responsibilities and knows that it is just a form of amusement. It takes up a lot of one's time that should be used for working and carrying out the duties and responsibilities of life. If we do this, we will not complain and feel worn out because of a lack of production.

It is the duty of the state to consider these matters, and for us to treat every matter with proportionate measure. It is not sound to put seriousness into the rules of a game, but rather, so that seriousness has its rule, and games have their time. Also, we should not put games inside the sphere of amusement. This is because the meaning of amusement is that we devote ourselves to doing something that has no objective and no benefit at the outcome. If we look at life lacking Allah's methodology, then it is nothing but games and amusement.

(1) Narrated by Ad-Daylami in (Musnad Al-Firdaus) and Abu Naʿim in (Al-Hilya)

Here we turn our attention to the True Lord's precision in starting with play and then amusement. Then He says, 'but the home of the Hereafter' which clearly indicates that when man becomes detached in life from the methodology of the True Lord Glorified is He becomes surprised by events such that he treats sudden events with clear seriousness. Therefore, we must deal with life under the light of Allah's methodology. Allah Glorified is He informed us that He had created man from clay and shaped him and breathed into him from His spirit and gave him a first life; and both the believer and the disbeliever partake in it, the obedient, the disobedient and every person that has senses, movement, thoughts and will. Allah sent messengers with the methodology so that this life would be directed towards an objective, which is the second life, the abode of the Hereafter. It is the complete and everlasting life, and we hear the statement of the True Lord Glorified is He: 'O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life.' (al-Anfal: 24)

The True Lord Glorified is He is presenting to us a higher, permanent life that is different from the life that ends. The one who refrains from adopting Allah's methodology in his life has simply enjoyed life exactly as the animal. But the one who adopts Allah's methodology chooses the higher life, the life of goodness, beauty, happiness, and excellence. We know that beauty in life is the beauty that does not bequeath ugliness. True goodness is that which spreads Allah's goodness amongst the servants, for man does not take goodness for himself and leave his evils for others. Therefore, I advise you not to take goodness for yourself at the expense of giving evil to others because you would not like it if others acquired goodness at your expense. The one who loves to unleash his evils amongst people, will receive evil from someone else, and whoever loves to take goodness from people, then let him give people from his goodness so that existence can remain beautiful. Therefore, life without [applying] Allah's methodology is ugly because the strong causes havoc therein with his strength, and the weak retreats with feelings of humiliation and loss.

But the True Lord Glorified is He wants the life of the believers to be in the light of His methodology, and when they apply his commandments of 'Do!' and 'Do not do', then they preserve life from corruption per the commands of the Sublime Creator of life, for Allah Glorified is He is the One Who brought us into existence and laid down for us the laws of maintaining life. When He prevents one believer from doing evil, then He has indeed prevented and made it impermissible for every believing person to do evil towards his brother, which secures man against evil.

Allah only singled out the believers with calling and supplicating because they are the people who respond to Him and obey Him. As for those who are their enemies from the people of disbelief and idolatry, they have denied Allah, disobeyed Him and have not believed in Him. When Allah commands a believer to do goodness He is, in fact, commanding all believers to do goodness towards themselves and others. This is how they obtain a peaceful life. This is why Allah Glorified is He says, 'respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life.'

Those who do not respond to Allah or to His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he calls them to what will give them life, remain in this life immersed in games and amusement. They are like the dead. We know that the True Lord Glorified is He wants the higher life for the believers. Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has named the way that lays down for us commands and prohibitions, a spirit: 'And thus We have revealed to you an inspiration of Our command.' (ash-Shura: 52). The True Lord Glorified is He named this angel that was sent down with the revelation: 'The Trustworthy Spirit has brought it down.' (ash-Shu'ara': 193)

Therefore, the life that gives man sense and movement is the first life in which he plays and amuses himself. This is not life that is intended for Allah because the life that is intended for Allah is the life of faith, and this is why the True Lord Glorified is He called it everlasting, and he called His methodology 'a spirit.' 'And the worldly life is not but amusement and diversion; but the home of the Hereafter is best for those who fear Allah, so will you not reason?'

Indeed, sheer discernment gives man goodness. It is an attempt to understand the secrets of the universe in terms of causes and causers. We see the sun's light filling the daytime and spreading illumination and warmth, and the disappearance of the sun and emergence of the moon brings about the serenity of stillness and guides people in the darkness of the land and the sea. The flowing of water quenches man's thirst and irrigates crops. The movement of wind moves the clouds, guides ships, assists in navigation and aviation and it pollinates plants. These are all causes that Allah willed so that balance would be implemented in the universe. Man takes his share from life with means that he works with, and he cannot take means from anywhere else. It is true that there are people who live without means and they take from the labour of others, but it is upon them to be wary of Allah. Beware of feeding yourself and your children by exploiting others. This is because life, sooner or later, will overtake you and your strength will become weakness, and insuring man for his state of weakness can only be by giving obligatory zakat to the weak, and helping them and assisting them in everything that they need. We find that non-believers have taken the idea of insurance from zakat. You give your zakat to the poor to insure yourself as a believer. They took this idea and turned it into life insurance, and this is why they have interfered in Allah's preordainment.

But the True Lord Glorified is He wanted, by way of zakat, to secure the entire society, not just secure the one who insures himself. We know that what scares man and makes him accumulate wealth is the fear of weakness, but had the rich given some of his wealth to the poor, reassurance would have filled his soul and the souls of the weak.

What makes people puff and pant in life to accumulate things for their children is their lack of conviction in the mutual responsibility of society that Islam has legislated. They see orphans and they are lost in society, but if people in the society had faith in the mutual responsibilities of society, every orphan would find the paternity of the entire society to be his.

The man who puffs and pants while earning his living in order to ensure the future of his children may turn his children into orphans because he has been preoccupied from their upbringing. This is why the prince of the poets, Shawqi may Allah's Mercy be upon him says:

The orphan is not the one whose parents
Are no longer living and have left him abject
But the orphan is the one whose mother has Abandoned him, or his father is busy

Indeed it is the duty of the society to take the issue of goodness from the statement of the True Lord Glorified is He when he says; 'O you who have believed, respond to Allah and to the Messenger when he calls you to that which gives you life'. (al-Anfal: 24) Just as the True Lord Glorified is He brought the bodies to life with the spirit that He breathed into clay which came to have sense and motion, He is also the One Who sent down the Message to elevate human beings so that they do not become like grazing livestock or stray from the path as in the verse, ‘And the worldly life is not but amusement and diversion; but the home of the Hereafter is best for those who fear Allah, so will you not reason?’ (al-An‘am: 32)

The abode of the Hereafter is goodness because the life of this world, no matter how long it lasts, will come to an end. But the Hereafter is eternal. We take our blessings in the life of this world via means, but we take the blessings of the Hereafter according to the vastness and abundance of Allah’s Power. The bane of the life of this world, even for those who have blessings and power and riches, is the fear of poverty or death, but in the Hereafter the people of the paradise will be in everlasting blessings. The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

قَدْ نَعْلَمُ إِنَّهُۥ لَيَحْزُنُكَ ٱلَّذِى يَقُولُونَ ۖ فَإِنَّهُمْ لَا يُكَذِّبُونَكَ
وَلَٰكِنَّ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ بِـَٔايَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ يَجْحَدُونَ ٣٣

We know well that what they say grieves you [Prophet].
It is not you they disbelieve: the evildoers reject God’s revelation [33] (The Quran, al-An’am: 33)

The True Lord Glorified is He has explained the state of the disbelievers and their situation in the Hereafter when they will stand before the fire and before Allah Almighty. After that, the discussion turns to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who was shouldering the great responsibility with its difficulty of conveying from Allah the Exalted to these disbelievers. He peace and blessings be upon him was grieved because his people did not taste the sweetness of faith and he is the Messenger of whom the True Lord Glorified is He says; 'there has certainly come to you a Messenger from among yourselves. Grievous to him is what you suffer; [he is] concerned over you and to the believers is kind and merciful.' (at-Tawba: 128)

He peace and blessings be upon him was very concerned for all people to be believers and he was hurt by the opposition of some people towards the call of faith. Indeed He peace and blessings be upon him was very concerned for the disbeliever to believe despite the fact that his duty as a Messenger was only to convey the Message. If the True Lord Glorified is He had wanted to make all of humanity believers, He would have sent down a sign to them that would have made them all believers. Allah tells The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to not kill himself with grief that they will not be believers.

But the True Lord Glorified is He does not want the submission of necks; He wants the submissions of hearts. Indeed He Glorified is He wants that people come voluntarily and out of their own will to affirm their love for their Creator. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that He knows well that he is saddened by what they say. And when He says qad (well), then you should know that what comes after it is an established matter. This particle may be inserted before a perfect verb and in this case, it comes to precede an established matter. Sometimes it indicates scarcity or abundance and this is when it is inserted before an imperfect verb that indicates the present or the future. If there is a cause connecting the agent and that which is acted upon, then this is abundance. If the outward purport of the matter is not clearly connected, then it indicates scarcity. An example of a connection that indicates abundance is someone saying that how often (qad) is the diligent person successful. This is because the diligent person and success are connected in a causal manner. However, there could still be a surprise incident that makes a diligent person unsuccessful, such as becoming sick on the day of the exam, but the likelihood of being healthy is greater than the likelihood of being sick and this is abundance.

An example of (qad) being used for scarcity is someone saying how rarely (qad) does the lazy person succeed. This refers to a lazy person being successful coincidentally, without any logical reason, as if he read a number of lessons the night before the exam and then took the exam and passed. Therefore, (qad) that is used with a perfect verb is for something established, and if it used with an imperfect verb, then it indicates frequency if there is a logical causal relationship, but yet it indicates scarcity if there is not a logical causal relationship. However, we all know that Allah's Knowledge is pre-eternal; no power and no matter is outside of what Allah the Exalted knows. Thus (qad) here is for an established matter even though it is being used with an imperfect verb. The True Lord Glorified is He wanted to inform us that He knew from pre-eternity what was going to happen and He used (qad) so that we would think of the action.

In the concerned verse, grief occurs when the soul leaves the domain of its happiness. Thus, man has achieved the objective of rectitude and contentment when each one of his organs is carrying out its task. If any breakdown that disturbs the work of one of his organs happens, then this brings grief or it may be affected if something is obtained that was not sought.

What the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him sought was to turn everyone who heard the Message to belief. But some of them opposed faith. Some of them accused the Messenger of sorcery or madness or saying poetry. Here the True Lord Glorified is He consoles His Messenger in the concerned verse and tells him that he must know that what they say does not belong to him because he, by consensus of their own opinions, is the truthful and trustworthy one. They are only denying the signs that were sent to him for them because they know him for being truthful and trustworthy. The proof is that any disbeliever from amongst them would not trust anyone with any portion of his wealth or his valuables except the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Man does not cheat himself in what is specific to him, so it is as if Allah the Exalted wanted to take responsibility for His Messenger, because whoever insults the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him only insults the One who sent him the Almighty Allah.

This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says that He knows that he is saddened by what they say. He confirms to him that they do not call him untruthful, but it is the verses of Allah Glorified is He that the wrongdoers reject. He Glorified is He makes it clear to us that His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him was concerned to the furthest extent possible for his nation to respond to the call of the True Lord Glorified is He until the believers would be convinced of the True Lord's statement Glorified is He regarding His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him, 'there has certainly come to you a Messenger from among yourselves; it is grievous to him what you suffer; [he is] concerned over you and to the believers is kind and merciful.' (at-Tawba: 128)

Concern has no meaning except that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him loves that no one from among his people turns away from his way and from his religion. But the True Lord Glorified is He made the matter of religion optional so that He would know who was coming to Him voluntarily while being capable of not coming and who was not coming to Him while being capable of coming.

Indeed the True Lord Glorified is He has universal standard practices in the universe that He applies to the creation and the question may arise, what is it that makes the True Lord Glorified is He leave a scope for disbelief in the world, and why does He grant evil a scope in the life of this world? Does He not rule over it with a wise plan? We say: 'If there was no evil in the world, then harming and frightening people would not have truly known sweetness.' Therefore, the existence of evil, disbelief and the effects of disbelief compel people to conclude that they must have faith, and that goodness must exist. If evil had no place in the universe, then what would make people turn towards goodness? This is why you find that the believers' faith gets stronger when the enemies of faith are attacking the believers, harming and instigating against them. If the life of this world was to become monotonous, then maybe the matter of Islam would become lax in the souls of the Muslims. This is why we find that those who believe in Allah the Exalted are constantly vigilant; because there are those who disbelieve in Him. Thus He says to His Messenger: 'We certainly know that what such people say grieves you indeed...' (al-An'am: 33). It is as if He Glorified is He is informing us that He willed for the universe to contain both believers and disbelievers.

This is why, O Muslim, if you ask why there are disbelievers on earth, you should know that they are from Allah's creation and the True Lord Glorified is He wanted them to choose disbelief. So they did not choose disbelief against His Will. Our master the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was grieved because there were people who did not believe, so the True Lord Glorified is He is consoling him because He knows that he is grieved by their statements of disbelief and the accusations that they make against him. Did they not say that he was a sorcerer? Did they not say that he was a madman? Did they not say that he was a liar? Did they not say that he was a soothsayer? Did they not say that he was a poet? He Glorified is He knows what they have said and He knows that these statements grieve The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. The True Lord Glorified is He wants to remove this grief and relieve His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him of it, so He informs him that 'they are not denying you, O Messenger of Allah, for you know your rank with them and it is the rank of being the truthful and trustworthy one. No one dares to deny you, but they reject Allah's signs. Is there a greater distraction than this? It is not possible to find a distraction greater than this.'

We know that what the people of idolatry said about The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is to be rejected, because they were masters of rhetoric, eloquence and fluency, so how can they say that the Quran is poetry while they know the different styles; standard speech and rhymed prose as well as prose and verse?

Does it make sense for them to confuse the Quranic style with poetry? This is definitely not possible. They said that the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was a sorcerer, but how could he have bewitched those who believed in him and not bewitch others? If he was a sorcerer, he would have bewitched them as well. The fact that they remained in disbelief nullifies this accusation. They said that he was a liar, but by saying this, they are denying themselves because they know that he is the truthful and trustworthy one. Here is the conversation(1) between Al-Akhnas ibn Shuraiq and Abu Jahl: Al-Akhnas said "O Abu Al-Hakam! What do you think about what you have heard from Muhammad?" Abu Jahl replied; "what have I heard! Here, we hear a statement of jealousy, envy, and hatred. We hear about those matters that are far from the subject of the luminous Muhammadan message.” Abu Jahl continued; “we have competed with Banu 'Abdul Manaf in nobility. They fed and we fed. They bore burdens and we bore burdens. They gave and we gave until we faced each other on horseback and were like racehorses. They said 'There is a prophet amongst us and revelation comes to him from the sky', how can we achieve something like this? By Allah, we will never believe in him and we will never affirm him.” Al-Akhnas then stood up and left him. Therefore, it is a matter of raging jealousy for positions of temporal authority. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He refutes them, saying: ‘How dared they distribute the mercy of the Lord? It is Allah who has apportioned among them their livelihood in the life of this world and has raised some of them above others in degrees of rank in order for them to make use of one another for service. But the mercy of the Lord is better than whatever they accumulate’. (az-Zukhruf: 32) And this is the True Lord Glorified is He consoling His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by saying to him that He knows that he is saddened by what they say, but indeed, they do not call him untruthful, rather, it is the verses of Allah that the wrongdoers reject. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘We know that you, [O Muhammad], are saddened by what they say. And indeed, they do not call you untruthful, but it is the verses of Allah that the wrongdoers reject.’ (al-An‘am: 33)

(1) The story of Al-Akhnas ibn Shariq debating with Abu Jahl

Indeed they are oppressors because oppression is removing a right from someone to another who does not deserve it. The most repulsive form of oppression is polytheism because the True Lord Glorified is He is the Only One Who deserves to be worshipped. The least form of oppression is to move a right that has been earned or granted to other than the one to whom it belongs and this oppression exists amongst people. The polytheists moved the right of the Divine Essence to those who do not deserve it, i.e. the statues and idols. As for the believers, they acknowledge the right of the Divine Essence to be worshipped.

There is another type of oppression that I want to talk about, that is, when someone misuses his name. An example would be a father who gives his son a name of Mahdi, but he fills the life of this world with corruption by harming himself and harming others. We say to someone like this that it is an obligation for you to respect your father's hope in you, so do not oppress your name 'Mahdi'. There must be consistence between your behaviour and the name that your father has given you.

As for the case of a father calling his son 'Mahdi' but not instructing him in anything regarding guidance or the religion and the boy goes into the life of this world filling it with misery for himself and others, but is then guided afterwards is able to learn guidance, then his name has come to live up to its meaning.

In the 1930's, we used to hear warnings when we visited Cairo: 'Beware against ʿImad Ad-Din (pillar of the Religion) Street because all bad things are on this street.' I was astonished that a street called ʿImad Ad-Din was a place for crime, and I said in that regard:

The ugliest oppression after polytheism
Is to oppress a name by using it to name something that is the opposite in nature
For a street that is named ʿImad ad-Din
Has been made a street for opposing the religion

In life, there are many cases of names being misused by their owners, but the greatest and ugliest level of oppression is associating partners with Allah the Exalted. (al-An'am: 33) Denying (jahd) is the refusal of the tongue and its disdain and reluctance to articulate the word of truth. If the polytheists had isolated themselves and reviewed the issues of The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and the Message, they would have found their hearts content with him being truthful and a Messenger and that the way has only come with guidance. However, their tongues were not able to acknowledge this.

This is why the way of faith commands each one of us, when we want to discuss whether a matter is true or false, not to discuss it in a gathering of people, but rather to discuss it firstly amongst ourselves so that we can distinguish the truth therein from falsehood. This is why The True Lord says: 'Say, 'I only advise you of one [thing] - that you stand for Allah, [seeking truth] in pairs and individually and then give thought. There is not in your companion any madness.' (Saba': 46)

It is as if the True Lord Glorified is He is guiding us to the manner of distinguishing; either we discuss the matter amongst ourselves or it is discussed by two people so that it is possible for one of them to be convinced by the other's opinion without a third person witnessing his defeat and thus making him stubborn and argumentative. With this, the True Lord Glorified is He is advising those who have accused The Messenger, Prophet Muhammad – and we seek refuge in Allah – of having gone mad and madness is that you produce actions without any premise, reflection, or consideration of consequences. The one doing these actions is bereft of wisdom. The sane person, on the other hand, is the one who determines his actions with wisdom. He evaluates and examines allowing his intellect and wisdom to decide on the best course of action. He deals with people in an orderly manner and with excellent conduct. Have any one of the polytheists seen anything from the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that would indicate a lack of consistency in his actions?

This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Nun. By the pen and what they inscribe, You are not, [O Muhammad], by the favour of your Lord, a madman. And indeed, for you is a reward uninterrupted. And indeed, you are of a great moral character.' (al-Qalam: 1-4)

A great moral character is incompatible with madness. All people have done this with their Messengers and accused them of madness and stupidity. Every time a Messenger has come to his people with a true way to eradicate falsehood, his people have confronted him in this manner. We know that the sky does not intervene with prophecies and miracles unless corruption is overflowing and the believing soul has been obliterated. Within the believer is a nucleus of goodness and he is thus prompted to do goodness. If his soul tells him to do an act of disobedience and he does it, then indeed his reproachful soul censures him for it. But, if his soul has been obliterated and it does not consider reproach, then his soul that enjoins evil takes control and you will not find anyone in the society saying: 'Do not do that!' This is because the entire society has become corrupted as in the verse: 'they used not to prevent one another from wrongdoing that they did. How wretched was that which they were doing.' (al-Ma'ida: 79)

Therefore, the sky does not intervene with a Message or a miracle or a way unless corruption is overflowing, and as long as corruption is overflowing, then there will be those who benefit from this corruption. When a Messenger comes for the sake of preventing corruption, this Messenger prevents those who sow corruption from exploiting people and he intervenes in their exploitation from people. This is why every Messenger was opposed by those who sow corruption and they used to say: 'We do not see you followed except by those who are the lowest of us.' (Hud: 27)

The followers of every Messenger are the oppressed who need someone to rescue them. As for the tyrants, they confront the Messenger and oppose him. These tyrants receive him with harm that is commensurate with his mission. If his mission is for the tribe, then the harm comes to him from this tribe. If his mission is broader than that, then he receives all kinds of suffering.

As long as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a Messenger sent to all of mankind, then he must come across all kinds of hardships and bear with them, and Allah Glorified is He has prepared him for this mission. The previous Messengers suffered from much harm in accordance with their call. As for The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him he is for all of mankind. There is no message after him and this is why several people have gathered against this Messenger and against this Message.

For this reason the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدْ كُذِّبَتْ رُسُلٌ مِّن قَبْلِكَ فَصَبَرُوا۟ عَلَىٰ مَا كُذِّبُوا۟ وَأُوذُوا۟ حَتَّىٰٓ أَتَىٰهُمْ
نَصْرُنَا ۚ وَلَا مُبَدِّلَ لِكَلِمَٰتِ ٱللَّهِ ۚ وَلَقَدْ جَآءَكَ مِن نَّبَإِى۟ ٱلْمُرْسَلِينَ ﴿٣٤﴾

Other messengers were disbelieved before you, and they bore their rejection and persecution steadfastly until Our aid arrived – no one can alter God's promises. You have already received accounts of these messengers (The Quran, al-An'am: 34) [34]

If the Messengers who preceded you were denied and were patient with it, and they were messengers only for their own people or for a specific nation in a specific time, then what about you, as you are The Seal of the Messengers for all of mankind and all time? Indeed you must bear this because the True Lord Glorified is He has chosen you for this mission and He is All Knowing that you are worthy of it. The True Lord Glorified is He guarantees the victory of His Messengers so it is not feasible for Him to leave evil and falsehood to overwhelm the Messengers. As long as He Glorified is He has sent the Messenger then He must give him victory, for He says: ‘And our word has already preceded for Our servants, the messengers, [That] indeed, they would be those given victory, and [that] indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome.’ (as-Saffat: 171-173)

And as long as The Word of Allah the Exalted has preceded the Messengers, then nothing can change His Words Glorified is He and no one is capable of amending the principles that Allah the Exalted laid down in His Statement: ‘And none can alter the Words of Allah. And there has certainly come to you some information about the [previous] messengers.’ (al-An‘am: 34)

The True Lord Glorified is He narrated to His Messenger the stories of those sent before him and He did not stop at informing him that the Previous Messengers were denied by their people. However, the True Lord Glorified is He conveyed to His Messenger what had happened to every Messenger from those mentioned in the Noble Quran and what happened to the Messenger – any messenger – in terms of being firm in the face of his enemies. Then He explains that The Word of The True Lord Glorified is He is always victorious and the True Lord Glorified is He has related the stories of some of the Messengers, for He said: ‘Among them are those [whose stories] We have related to you, and among them are those [whose stories] We have not related to you.’ (Ghafir: 78)

After that, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَإِن كَانَ كَبُرَ عَلَيۡكَ إِعۡرَاضُهُمۡ فَإِنِ ٱسۡتَطَعۡتَ أَن تَبۡتَغِيَ نَفَقٗا فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ أَوۡ سُلَّمٗا فِي
ٱلسَّمَآءِ فَتَأۡتِيَهُم بِـَٔايَةٖۚ وَلَوۡ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ لَجَمَعَهُمۡ عَلَى ٱلۡهُدَىٰۚ فَلَا تَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلۡجَٰهِلِينَ ﴿٣٥﴾

If you find rejection by the disbelievers so hard to bear, then seek a tunnel into the ground or a ladder into the sky, if you can, and bring them a sign: God could bring them all to guidance if it were His will, so do not join the ignorant [35] (The Quran, al-An’am: 35)

This verse means that indeed you, O Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him are a Messenger from Allah the Exalted and you have a way which is your miracle that proves the veracity of what you have come with., Furthermore, if their opposition distresses you and it agonises you that they oppose you and turn away from you, and if you are able to make a hole for yourself in the ground in order to bring them a sign or build a ladder to climb into the sky and ask for this sign, then do so. However, you are unable to do so because it is beyond the limits of your capacity and the polytheists and hypocrites will receive the punishment because you came, O Messenger of Allah, to take away the force of their temporal authority and establish justice based on faith. This is why they tried to mock you and harm you.

The disbelievers asked the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to make the earth open up a spring for them and they asked that he climb into the sky and make it send something down to destroy them. These things were not within the capacity or ability of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says to him that which will lock the doors of his grief and put an end to his sorrow and distress that is due to their opposition, and so that he knows that mocking and opposition are perfectly normal for every one of the Messengers. You, O Messenger of Allah, have priority in this because your mission is bigger than those of all the Messengers. We notice that the True Lord Glorified is He brings the example of what they say, when He says: 'Then if you are able to seek a tunnel into the earth or a stairway into the sky to bring them a sign, [then do so].' (al-An'am: 35)

The True Lord Glorified is He did not say: 'Do that!' as if the matter is a reassurance for the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him because the apotheosis of a situation like this is known, and the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him does not force anyone to have faith. The opposition of these people is a matter intended by the One Who necessarily exists so that He can test them, and had He wanted to force them, He would have done so and no one would turn away from Allah Glorified is He. The entire universe is obedient to Allah the Exalted; the sun, the moon, the stars, the air, the water, the mountains, the earth and everything that is in the universe is obedient to Allah Almighty including the animals that are subjugated to serve man, but He Glorified is He gave man the choice to come to Him with love.

We know that the True Lord Glorified is He left some of the subjugated creatures to be out of the control of man, to affirm for man that he does not control these things with his ability, but it is He Glorified is He who creates them and puts them under his control. This is why we see a huge camel being ridden by a small child, but we also see men, regardless of how strong they are, being very careful and cautious around a small snake as in the verse: ‘Do they not see that We have created for them from what Our hands have made, grazing livestock and [then] they are their owners? And We have tamed them for them, so some of them they ride, and some of them they eat.’ (Ya Sin: 71-72)

If Allah Glorified is He had not put them under our control then no one would be able to get close to them and I always give this example when someone says: ‘Why did Allah the Exalted create the fly?’ One of the people of brilliance said: ‘To humiliate the tyrants, for their authority does not include these insects. The True Lord Glorified is He has given the man the might of leadership, but He has also taught him to be humble before the Creator'.

The True Lord Glorified is He informs His Messenger that if He Glorified is He had willed, He would have united them upon guidance. So, never be of the ignorant.

That is, had Allah the Exalted wanted He would have made all of mankind believers and to this someone might say: ‘How can Allah the Exalted address His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him by saying to him to never be of the ignorant?' We say that when the True Lord Glorified is He says this to His Messenger, He Glorified is He does not say this because He expects the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to do such a thing, as the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is divinely protected from ignorance. Rather, it is a statement that contains transcendence of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him from above being amongst the ignorant ones.

After that, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

إِنَّمَا يَسْتَجِيبُ ٱلَّذِينَ يَسْمَعُونَ وَٱلْمَوْتَىٰ يَبْعَثُهُمُ ٱللَّهُ ثُمَّ إِلَيْهِ يُرْجَعُونَ ﴿٣٦﴾

Only those who can hear will respond; as for the dead, God will raise them up, and to Him they will all be returned [36] (The Quran, al-An’am: 36)

The meaning of the word yastajib (respond) is that they obey the command of the One Who commands and the prohibition of the One Who prohibits. There is a difference between istijaba (responding) and ijaba (answering) because responding means that the one you have asked for obeys you and carries out what you have asked him to do. Answering means that the one you ask, answers you, even if he rejects what you say, so the answer may be the opposite of what you were asking for. The True Lord Glorified is He says that only those who hear will be the ones who respond, i.e. indeed those who respond to the call of the True Lord Glorified is He are those who hear with their ears with their hearts in confirmation because there is a difference between hearing outwardly while deviating inwardly and obediently hearing outwardly while inwardly loving this obedience. We know that receiving something heard is one thing and the one who is affected by what is heard is something else.

When good listening is combined with the effect of love to carry out what man has heard, then this is what faith requires. The believers are those who listen to the words of Allah the Exalted with the effect of love and they are different from those who hear speech and it goes in one ear and get out through the other ear. They leave the words without applying them and the soul does not contain a single trace of that speech.

Thus, we see that Allah Glorified is He has made and created in man senses that guide and show him the way to either belief or disbelief. The believer’s ear hears, the heart confirms and the intellect examines and believes. As for the disbeliever, his ear hears but his heart opposes and the intellect looks for reasons to disbelieve as he desires disbelief and strives for it. Therefore, his senses do not carry out their task in an orderly manner and it is as if those who hear but do not respond are like the dead. The matter, therefore, is not restricted to hearing but what is sought is that there is hearing, which is meant to be affected by what is heard and is to obey it. Do not think that it is difficult for Allah Almighty to let the one who does not hear and obey, to be guided and become upright. Nothing can turn away from Allah Almighty because He Glorified is He revives the dead.

As long as He Glorified is He revives the dead then He does not demand faith that comes through compulsion. Rather, He demands faith that it out of one's own will and conviction. If He Glorified is He had wished, He would send a sign down from the sky and their necks would have remained in submission, but He Glorified is He demands hearts and not just the outward forms. Therefore, those who respond to the call of faith are those who are truly alive. As for those who do not respond, they are just like the dead. After they have died and their lives have ended, Allah the Exalted will resurrect them to ask them about their actions in the life of this world. When they go back to Allah Almighty, they will find the reckoning. We know that the final and permanent return is to Allah Glorified is He and whoever goes back to Allah the Exalted with his actions being pure hastens the pure reward and longs and looks forward to it. As for the one who goes back to Allah the Exalted under compulsion, he fears a painful reward.

After that, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَقَالُوا۟ لَوْلَا نُزِّلَ عَلَيْهِ ءَايَةٌ مِّن رَّبِّهِۦ ۚ قُلْ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ قَادِرٌ عَلَىٰٓ أَن
يُنَزِّلَ ءَايَةً وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ لَا يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٣٧﴾

They also say, 'Why has no sign been sent down to him from his Lord?' Say, 'God certainly has the power to send down a sign,' though most of them do not know [37]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 37)

Indeed, Allah Glorified is He clarifies for us their continuous argumentation and their request for some sign; a sign is a wondrous matter that Allah the Exalted brings to the hands of a Prophet to confirm his truthfulness in conveying from Allah Almighty. It is as if they do not want to acknowledge that the Quran is a clear sign despite them acknowledging the honour of the Quran, for they said: 'Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31)

But they do not acknowledge the Quran to be a miraculous sign because they know that the previous Messengers were all sent with a miraculous sign that was separate from the Book that they brought. The miracle of Moses peace be upon him Glorified is He was the stick and his hand that he took out of his pocket which became white without any visible cause, and he parted the sea, but his Book was the Torah. Jesus' miracle was speaking in the cradle by Allah's leave, curing the blind and the leper and bringing the dead back to life by Allah's leave. He came with the Bible to spiritually balance with the materialism that had filled the souls of the Jews. After they said that the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was inventing lies, the True Lord Glorified is He challenged them to bring something like the Quran and then He asked them to bring ten chapters like it. Then He asked them to bring something similar to the shortest chapters. Therefore, fabrication is possible for you if we suppose that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has fabricated it, so it is possible for you yourselves to fabricate in the rhetorical styles that you have distinction and superiority in. Indeed, the Quran has challenged them and as long as it has challenged them, it is a miracle because the basis of a miracle is a challenge. Allah Almighty challenges them to bring one chapter similar to the chapters of the Quran, but they are unable to do so. He is challenging them in the field of language and they are gifted masters of language. The Quran came to challenge them in the field of their expertise, but some of the Arabs asked the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him for a tangible, natural miracle that they could see. Stupidity blinded them from knowing that tangible knowledge only has a temporary affect; whoever sees it, says that it is a miracle and whoever does not see it, may believe, or deny it. We, as Muslims, do not affirm tangible miracles unless the Quran has related them. This is because the Quran has come to all of mankind and for this reason, it does not make sense for the final way to be detached from the Prophet's miracle that he came with.

Thus, the Quran came as a miracle for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and it is a permanent immaterial sign with the rulings and organic structures that it contains, as well as the universal signs and scientific matters. However, people will always have disagreements in terms of language; and the miracles that the Quran contains, will never cease to be wondrous until the Day or Resurrection. Every day we extract new miracles from the signs of Allah the Exalted that silence every denier because they are universal miracles; and it is astonishing that some of the people who extract these miracles are not Muslims and do not believe in the Quran.

However, some of the polytheists were not content with the Quran as a sign and miracle that proves the truthfulness of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and so they asked for a tangible miracle. But is this request for a sign a real request with hope that they will obtain knowledge of the True Lord Glorified is He and have faith in Him, or is it just a reason so that they be excused to stay in their disbelief? If requesting a sign was truly coming from their hearts, then we would take them by the hand, show them the way, guide them and say to them: ‘Indeed the Messengers who came with miracles other than the Book of guidance, were Messengers who were sent to specific nations within specified times. They brought signs with them which were seen once, and then they were finished. But Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has come for all time and places, and this is why it is not appropriate for his sign and his miracle to be tangible not to restrict it to a specific time and place. The True Lord Glorified is He willed that the miracle of His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him be a permanent way. The treasures of the Quran manifest and reveal universal signs that are verified with knowledge and seen by human beings; and what is concealed, the humans will discover until the coming of the Hour. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘We will show them Our signs in the horizons and within themselves until it becomes clear to them that it is the truth.’ (Fussilat: 53)

That is, indeed Allah Almighty will unveil His signs for human beings so that they are manifest and the truth becomes clear to them. If you demand a sign purely for the sake of argument, hesitating to declare your faith, then you should know that other people demanded signs and the True Lord Glorified is He sent down these signs to them, but they disbelieved. Further, it is stated in the Quran that nothing could have hindered Allah Almighty that He should send signs except that the people before them rejected them.

This what happened with the people of Prophet Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him when they demanded that he should bring to them a she-camel, and yet they rejected this sign and even slaughtered her; therefore their Lord crushed them for their sin and leveled them with the ground. Thus, the nations before demanded signs and Allah Glorified is He is surely able to send down signs, but the disbelievers do not know, and will say the same as those who rejected Allah's signs, thereby hindering signs to be sent down as stated in the Quranic verse.

The True Lord Glorified is He indeed sent down the Quran to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him and it contains many signs that are so majestic that we cannot count. If they had demanded a sign and Allah the Exalted had given them one and they still did not believe, then He Glorified is He would have had the right to destroy all of them. However, Allah the Exalted promised Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that He would not destroy them as long as He peace and blessings be upon him was amongst them as stated in the verse.

Therefore, Allah Glorified is He neglecting their demand by not sending to them a sign, is actually solicitous about them because amongst them are those who will believe and amongst them are those whose progeny will be believers and who will carry the Guidance and believe in it until the coming of the Hour because they are the followers and bearers of the Final Message.

Afterwards, the True Lord Glorified is He with the finest eloquence, states:

وَمَا مِن دَآبَّةٖ فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَلَا طَٰٓئِرٖ يَطِيرُ بِجَنَاحَيۡهِ إِلَّآ أُمَمٌ أَمۡثَالُكُمۚ
مَّا فَرَّطۡنَا فِي ٱلۡكِتَٰبِ مِن شَيۡءٖۚ ثُمَّ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِمۡ يُحۡشَرُونَ ٣٨

All the creatures that crawl on the earth and those that fly with their wings are communities like yourselves. We have missed nothing out of the Record – in the end they will be gathered to their Lord [38] (The Quran, al-An'am: 38)

Indeed, He Glorified is He makes it clear to us: I give signs that I know to be received and accepted by those of sound natural disposition. I sent the Quran down to you so that you would believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who bore it as a Guidance for reforming your lives. I have made you the masters of the universe, served by all beings because you are the children of Adam peace be upon him. It is more appropriate for you to realise that the animals are in your service and the plants are in the service of the animals and man. All beings in existence are made subservient to serve you. I made all creation subordinate to man, provided them with what benefits and maintains them and devised a system for them, and I gave them natural inclinations in such a way as befitting their purpose so as to offer you comfort; such being the case with those who serve you, how is it then with you? Indeed I have sent down the Guidance that reforms the life of man who is the vicegerent on earth.

It is stated in the verse under discussion that Allah Glorified is He has given every beast apart from man faith by way of a natural disposition and guided them to their provision by natural instincts. Of all beings, man is distinguished with intellect which he may use best so it leads him to faith, or use it incorrectly thereby straying from faith. Man is in doubt that he learned by imitating other creatures besides himself; Cain learnt from the raven how to bury his brother and the designers of aeroplanes learnt about flying by studying birds. Therefore, man must learn that he has a Creator who has made all creation serve him to advance his life and to care for his honour after death. An example is the ant who told the other ants to get into their dwellings in order not to be crushed by Prophet Solomon peace be upon him and his hosts, as stated in the Quran. In fact, the ants are a community that have guards and a guard from amongst them said this to warn the other ants.

Furthermore, Allah Glorified is He explains in the Quran that there is not a single thing except that it exalts His Glory and Praise, but we do not understand their glorification. Every community from this great number of communities that Allah Almighty has created in the universe glorify and praise Him, but no one understands the languages of these communities. Allah the Exalted has informed us that He taught Prophet Solomon peace be upon him the languages of all peoples and communities. This is why, when he heard what the ant had said, he smiled wondering at her words.

Such is how we know that Allah Glorified is He gave Solomon's ears the capacity to sense the frequencies of the voice of the ant and the capacity to understand what this frequency conveys. Thus, Prophet Solomon peace be upon him smiled as he heard her words, as Allah the Exalted had taught him the speech of these creatures. If Allah Glorified is He had taught us the speech of these creatures we would have understood their glorification of Him. However, we do not comprehend their glorification because we have not learned their language. An example of this – and to Allah Almighty belongs the highest similitude – is that an Arab may travel to a land in which English is spoken, but he does not know that language thus he is unable to understand what is being said. Therefore, if Allah the Exalted had taught you the speech of birds, inanimate objects and plants, you would have known their languages. Furthermore, the True Lord Glorified is He states in the Quran that He caused the mountains to join Prophet David in glorifying and praising Him. Therefore inanimate objects – mountains – joined him in glorification; and so did the birds, for this hoopoe bird understood the Oneness of Allah Almighty and he felt uneasy from within when he saw the Queen of Sheba and her people prostrating themselves to the sun and not to Allah Glorified is He as stated in the Quran. The hoopoe understood the Oneness of Allah the Exalted and it knew that Satan has ways of getting through to a living creature. He also knew that prostration is for Allah Glorified is He alone, as stated in the Quran.

All living beings are divided into communities like us and someone might say: 'But there are living beings that are neither in the sky nor on the earth, such as the fish in the sea.' We say: 'Indeed water comprises three quarters of the earth's surface and fish swim in a part of water that is a part of the earth, therefore they swim in a part of the earth. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who created beasts on earth, birds in the sky and He created what is less than these communities and guided them to their purpose and sustenance, for it is He Glorified is He Who Creates everything and then proportions it.

We see scientists nowadays trying to discover the language of fish and the secrets of the ant kingdom and its behaviour and find out how the nests of the ants become storehouses in the summer for the winter's food. They studied how ants deal with wheat germ and how they remove the germination cells from the grain of wheat, because if the germination cells go with the wheat germ inside the ants' food storehouse, it may grow destroying the ants' home. It is He Who creates everything and then proportions it, as stated in the Quran.

Scientists are interested in the ants' antennae because one ant, for example, can see a piece of sugar and not go near it. Instead, it goes and calls on an army of ants who are able to move the piece of sugar. Scientists have found that if the thing that the ant wants to eat weighs more than what the ant is capable of carrying, it calls on a number of other ants to carry out the task.

The scientists asked: Where does the ant acquire the ability to determine mass, weight and size? It is astounding that ants have the ability to determine the number required to carry a specific mass. What is even more astounding is the ant's ability to distinguish between two things that are of the same size but have a different mass, such as a cube of iron and a cube of sponge that is the same size? For the cube of iron, the ant calls for additional numbers to help carry it even though the sponge is of the same size. This is undoubtedly from the Omnipotence of the True Lord Glorified is He who creates everything and thereupon forms it in accordance with what it is meant to be and determines the nature of all that exists, and thereupon guides it towards its fulfilment.

Then you turn your attention towards animals and you find that there are the male and the female and that male animals are tremendously more beautiful than the females. The dominant majority are females and the minority are males. The male only approaches the female within a specific season when the impregnation time comes; the female goes to prepare the nest making it ready for whatever result that may come. This process is for a higher wisdom; maybe it is for the preservation of the species so that animals help man populate the earth.

In the world of birds, we find birds building beautiful nests to receive the young birds furnishing it with the best things. They do this in such a skilful way that maybe even man is incapable of imitating. You find in the life of animals and birds that as soon as a creature is capable of relying on itself, its mother cannot distinguish him from anyone else's son. Therefore, all creations are communities like us and they have provisions and life spans and duties, as stated in the Quran that Allah Glorified is He never neglects anything in His decree.

'The Book' here may refer to the Preserved Tablet, but we say that it refers to the Quran. Everything existing, mentioned, or is underground is in the Noble Quran. It mentions that such communities understand the Oneness of Allah the Exalted glorify and praise Him. Contemporary work discloses in exact detail the realities of this regulated universe. We find that the intellect guides us to invent things of benefit to our lives, but when we follow our passions, we corrupt this universe. Allah Glorified is He made for the subservient beasts of the earth a sphere for work, provision and a life span by virtue of natural instincts, and He did the same for birds and all living things.

The True Lord Glorified is He says in the verse under discussion that all will be gathered unto Him. Thus everything is gathered on the Day of Resurrection. Moreover, Abu Hurayra, Allah be pleased with him, narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Rights are granted on the Day of Resurrection to whom they belong, such that the hornless sheep takes from the horned sheep.'(1) This means that the True Lord Glorified is He will avenge the horned sheep that rammed the hornless sheep to make up for the pain that it endured. After every being apart from men and jinn has taken its right, they are turned into ashes. As for those who hear but do not respond, they are the ones who deny the signs, and this is why the True Lord Glorified is He says about them:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا صُمٌّ وَبُكْمٌ فِى ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ ۗ مَن يَشَإِ
ٱللَّهُ يُضْلِلْهُ وَمَن يَشَأْ يَجْعَلْهُ عَلَىٰ صِرَٰطٍ مُّسْتَقِيمٍ ﴿٣٩﴾

Those who reject Our signs are deaf, dumb, and in total darkness. God leaves whoever He will to stray, and sets whoever He will on a straight path [39] (The Quran, al-An'am: 39)

Deafness is a problem that afflicts the ears and thus they do not hear, and dumbness is a problem that afflicts the tongue and thus it does not speak. Dumbness is connected to deafness because man does not speak unless he hears and because language is the daughter of imitation. Thus man does not speak unless he hears.

Furthermore, human beings grow up in environments that differ in languages and they only speak the language of the environment that they have grown up in. This is because language is not a blood or a species. Rather, language is hearing and what the ear hears is related by the tongue. Man does not read unless he hears and knows the connection of what he hears with what he sees.

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim, At-Tirmidhi and Ahmad ibn Hanbal

This is how we know that hearing is the first portal of realisation and this is why deafness comes before dumbness.

However, is realisation related only to deafness and dumbness? No. Indeed man hears first, then he sees, then he tastes, then he smells and then he touches. Hence rational information comes to him. An example of this is that everyone knows that fire burns, but one will not realise this unless he finds that it touched a living being and burned it. Another example: People agree that the nightingale’s voice is beautiful and this agreement is the result of people hearing the nightingale’s voice. Therefore rational information comes as the result of tangible information.

They also have no capacity to recognise guidance in any way; they are deaf so they do not hear the word of truth, dumb so they do not speak and in deep darkness they are guided to the realisation of things and not to faith. All of this goes back to the Will of Allah the Exalted in that whoever He wills, He lets go astray or guides to the straight path as stated in the Quran. But does His Will intrude into the lives of people and force them? No, because the True Lord Glorified is He states in the Quran that He does not guide one who has wasted his own self by lying.

This is further stated in another Quranic verse. Therefore, their oppression, sinfulness, and disbelief were all done voluntarily so that sickness burgeoned and was firmly established in their hearts and Allah Almighty increased them in their sickness. He Glorified is He is not affected in the slightest by anyone associating partners with Him, for whoever associates anything as a partner with Allah Almighty only wrongs himself. Afterwards, a command comes for the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتَكُمْ إِنْ أَتَىٰكُمْ عَذَابُ ٱللَّهِ أَوْ أَتَتْكُمُ ٱلسَّاعَةُ
أَغَيْرَ ٱللَّهِ تَدْعُونَ إِن كُنتُمْ صَٰدِقِينَ ﴿٤٠﴾

Say, ‘Think: if the punishment of God or the Hour should come to you, would you call on anyone other than God, if you are being truthful?’ [40] (The Quran, al-An’am: 40)

The words ‘…have you considered...' in the verse under discussion comprised of a question, a verb and a pronoun which is the articulation of the letter (ta') with a (fatha) which is for the second person, such as you saying: 'Have you seen so-and-so?' and as if you were saying to him: 'If you have seen him then tell me about him.' When you say this to the one being addressed (the second person) then you are asking about something he has seen and set eyes on and after that you use the letter (kaf) to indicate the second person, as if you are saying to him: 'Tell me about you.' And the meaning is 'Tell me about yourselves.' Thus the meaning of '…Have you considered... 'is 'Tell me about your state according to the one who sees.' The command is thus for The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to ask the idolaters to inform him about what they do when harm comes to them or something that is beyond their means. Do they call on the gods (al-Lat) and (al-'Uzza)? No, because in the moment of sudden danger they are incapable of lying to themselves. Rather, they call on Allah the Exalted whom they do not declare their faith in. If they were truthful in their disbelief, they would not call on Allah Glorified is He, but rather, it would be obligatory for them to call on their gods. However, in the moment of danger they say: 'O Lord!' as if they know that no one can rescue them but Him Glorified is He. Thus, the falsehood of their disbelief and their associating partners with Allah Almighty is exposed right in front of them and no one cheats himself, even the impostor who claims to be able to cure people. If he is afflicted with an illness, we find him referring to a trained, specialist doctor. No one cheats himself and when a man is in danger, the truth comes out from the man himself.

The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him is asking them: 'Who do you call on in the moment of danger?' Indeed they call on Allah Almighty, as if they have no confidence in their gods, as stated in the Quran that when affliction befalls man, he cries out unto Allah, whether he be lying on his side or sitting or standing.

But what happens when the heart's harshness returns? He goes on as though he had never invoked Allah the Exalted to save him from the affliction that befell him, as stated in the Quran. Therefore why do they ask Allah the Exalted to help them in the moment of danger when they do not follow the commandment? The command comes to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to ask them who they call on in the moment of danger. The answer also comes from the True Lord Glorified is He when He states:

بَلۡ إِيَّاهُ تَدۡعُونَ فَيَكۡشِفُ مَا تَدۡعُونَ إِلَيۡهِ إِن شَآءَ وَتَنسَوۡنَ مَا تُشۡرِكُونَ ﴿٤١﴾

No indeed, it is on Him that you would call. If it were His will, He could remove whatever harm made you call on Him, and then you would forget what you now associate with Him [41] (The Quran, al-An'am: 41)

Certainly, you, O idolaters, do not call on anyone besides Allah Glorified is He to remove harm from you and if He sees that it is wise to answer your supplication He answers it. The True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَلَقَدۡ أَرۡسَلۡنَآ إِلَىٰٓ أُمَمٖ مِّن قَبۡلِكَ فَأَخَذۡنَٰهُم بِٱلۡبَأۡسَآءِ وَٱلضَّرَّآءِ لَعَلَّهُمۡ يَتَضَرَّعُونَ ﴿٤٢﴾

We sent messengers before you [Prophet] to many communities and afflicted their people with suffering and hardships, so that they could learn humility [42] (The Quran, al-An'am: 42)

The True Lord Glorified is He indeed sent Messengers to the previous nations with signs and Guidance, but their people rejected them, so Allah Almighty took them to task with calamities and events that harm either one's person, or wealth, with sickness, or poverty so that they might humble themselves before Him Glorified is He.

Thus when the True Lord Glorified is He causes misfortune to befall people, i.e. with calamities or adversity or something that harms and causes damage, He only intends to test man. If he believes in other than Allah the Exalted then let him go to the one whom he believes in, and he will not remove that misfortune, or harm unless he goes back to Allah Glorified is He. But when they humble themselves before Allah the Exalted He does not accept the like of this humility, as He Glorified is He says:

فَلَوۡلَآ إِذۡ جَآءَهُم بَأۡسُنَا تَضَرَّعُواْ وَلَٰكِن قَسَتۡ قُلُوبُهُمۡ وَزَيَّنَ
لَهُمُ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ مَا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٤٣﴾

If only they had learned humility when suffering came from Us! But no, their hearts became hard and Satan made their foul deeds alluring to them [43] (The Quran, al-An'am: 43)

Indeed He Glorified is He entices and urges them to humble and lower themselves before Him Glorified is He so that He removes what they have been afflicted with, but their hard hearts prevent them, even in the moment of danger when they are being afflicted with harm, from seeking refuge in Allah Almighty because they are scared of following His commands. In addition, their hearts are too harsh to let guidance penetrate it, as the True Lord Glorified is He states in the Quran that their hearts are corroded by all the evil that they were wont to do.

This means that their hearts became locked and sealed after Allah Almighty stamped and sealed them so they will not accept goodness and they will not incline towards it. Thus they will not believe. Afterwards, The True Lord Glorified is He states:

فَلَمَّا نَسُوا۟ مَا ذُكِّرُوا۟ بِهِۦ فَتَحْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ أَبْوَٰبَ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ
حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا فَرِحُوا۟ بِمَآ أُوتُوٓا۟ أَخَذْنَٰهُم بَغْتَةً فَإِذَا هُم مُّبْلِسُونَ ﴿٤٤﴾

So, when they had forgotten the warning they had received, We opened the gates to everything for them. Then, as they revelled in what they had been given, We struck them suddenly and they were dumbfounded [44] (The Quran, al-An'am: 44)

When they forgot the reminder that came to them from the True Lord Glorified is He through His Messengers to follow the way and submit to His Oneness, He Glorified is He afflicted them with a punishment that surprised them and they fell into confusion that took away their intellects, smashed their hearts and cut off their hope.

The Messengers only come to remind because faith is present in one's natural disposition, but it is heedlessness which conceals faith. Man lives in a universe that is filled with blessings that no one has anything to do with and no one has any hand in them and no one claims them for himself. Thus man must always live praising Allah the Exalted the Master of these blessings.

The True Lord Glorified is He reminds His slaves with blessings or with Messengers who came with successive Messages. Imagine that a man had become heedless of the blessing of Allah Almighty in food, then the moment of hunger comes and so he sits longing for food and Allah Glorified is He then grants him that food, so how can he forget in the moment of desperation, the One Who gave him this food?

In the verse under discussion, reminding could occur either by means of the Messengers who remind people that the Bestower of blessings is Allah the Exalted and that He Glorified is He has sent down His Guidance so as to reform the universe with it, or it may be by means of the blessings enjoyed by man in each and every moment. This is because they alert man to the One Who gives them. An example of this is when man covers his nakedness and his body with beautiful clothes. Does he not ask about the One Who gave the manufacturer this gift with which he designs clothing? Therefore how can man take the blessing and not be reminded of the One Who bestows blessings? Indeed Allah Glorified is He does not deprive them of blessings when they abandon showing gratitude for them. Rather, He opens to them the gates of all good things, i.e. He gives them more and more blessings. Thus they live in luxury and they lead a life of honour, health, affluence, power and authority. Then what happens? He seizes them suddenly, and they are then left in despair, as mentioned in the verse in question.

In the Egyptian countryside there is a popular saying: ‘No one falls from the carpet.’, but Allah Glorified is He sometimes allows polytheists to attain high ranks in this worldly life and then suddenly takes them to task so that they would suffer a greater punishment in the Hereafter. Therefore, one should not be deceived by those disbelievers to whom Allah Almighty gives the luxuries of this life and thus should never wish to be in their place.

If we carefully reflect on the saying of Allah Almighty: ‘we opened the gates of everything to them’, we will be fully aware of the absolute accuracy of the style of the Quran. Allah Almighty says that He ‘opened … to them’, meaning that He caused them, i.e. the deniers of the truth, to be deceived by the finery of this life. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He grants them understanding by means of which they would realise that the provision of this world’s life compared with the hereafter is but little. This meaning here is totally different from the saying of Allah in the chapter of al-Fath in which He Glorified is He says: ‘Surely We have given to you a clear victory.’ (al-Fath: 1) This means that He the Almighty granted Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a clear victory by allowing him to open Mecca. As such, it is crystal clear that there is a big difference between the two Arabic words, i.e. ‘Fath Lak’ and ‘Fath ‘Alyk’, for the latter means to overtake someone by degrees from whence s/he does not perceive, whilst the former means to cause one to be prosperous and victorious, which is why He the Almighty says: ‘Then, as they revelled in what they had been given, We struck them suddenly and they were dumbfounded.’ (al-An‘am: 44)

That is to say that the meting out of the punishment takes place in the moment of joy; a point which is frequently experienced in our daily life. For example, we know of many grooms and brides who were afflicted with disasters on their wedding days. At that point, the following poetic verse may be quoted:

Events walked in the rooms of the Alhambra
The announcer of death walked in the wedding house

This aforementioned verse of poetry can yet give a correct and proper understanding of the verse: ‘Then, as they revelled in what they had been given, We struck them suddenly and they were dumbfounded.’ (al-An‘am: 44) In the same connection, when we carefully reflect on the verse: ‘… what they had been given …,’ we realise that Allah Glorified is He by allowing them to get all of these blessings, He paves the way for suddenly taking them to task. That is to say that the divine punishment~~s~~ are afflicted without prior warning. In our daily life, if one is given a warning that a certain disaster would strike him/her, s/he would take all necessary precautions to protect him/herself. Here, we should stress that there is no contradiction whatsoever between the verse under discussion and the verse in which Allah the Exalted says: ‘Say [O Prophet Muhammad], ‘Think: if the Punishment of Allah should come to you, by surprise or openly, would anyone but the evildoers be destroyed?’ (al-An‘am: 47), for this latter verse shows clearly that the Punishment of Allah Almighty, out of His Great Wisdom, might befall the oppressors either surprisingly or openly, as follows: the oppressors may be suddenly and surpassingly afflicted with the divine torture by way of punishing them. They may also be openly afflicted with it, i.e. the divine punishment so that they would not say, ‘had not the punishment come to us suddenly, we would have taken precautions for it'. Allah Almighty then concludes the verse saying that they, i.e. the oppressors, will be struck with the divine punishment while being dumbfounded and disappointed since no one will help them or even save them.

Allah Almighty then says:

فَقُطِعَ دَابِرُ ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلَّذِينَ ظَلَمُوا۟ ۚ وَٱلْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ ٱلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٤٥﴾

The evildoers were wiped out: praise be to God, the Lord of the Worlds! [45] (The Quran, al-An'am: 45)

This verse draws our attention to a very important fact, that is, we must praise Allah Almighty for giving us these examples of those wrongdoers and the punishment that afflicted them to guide us to the Right Path. In addition, we must praise Him; Glorified is He for purifying the world from the foulness of the corrupters. This is clearly understood from the fact that even though Allah Almighty opened the gates of everything to those oppressors, they forgot what they were reminded of, which is why He the Almighty punished them suddenly when they were occupied with what they were given. We thus deduce that the act of wiping out those corrupters, although a disaster for them, is actually a blessing conferred by Allah Almighty on the believers. At this point, one may ask, 'How does the Quran view punishments as blessings?!' Let us illustrate this point more clearly; Allah Almighty says in the chapter of ar-Rahman: 'O assembly of the jinn and the men! If you are able to pass through the regions of the heavens and the earth, then pass through; you cannot pass through except with authority, which then of the bounties of your Lord will you deny? The flames of fire and smoke will be sent on you two, then you will not be able to defend yourselves, Which then of the bounties of your Lord will you deny?' (ar-Rahman: 33-36) These particular verses here give examples of the types of divine punishments, which include the sending of flames of fire and smoke. Even though these are viewed as divine punishments to the disbelievers, they serve as a blessing and reminder to the believers, as we know for certain, that people are deterred by knowing the severity of punishments. That is to say that this divine warning to the disbelievers is, in essence, a blessing from Allah the Exalted to the believers.

As a matter of fact, when Allah Almighty confers His Grace upon the believers by wiping out the wrongdoers, the believers must praise His Glory, a point which is proved by the verse; ‘The evildoers will be wiped out: praise be to Allah, the Lord of the Worlds.’ (al-An‘am: 45)

He the Almighty subsequently interrogates them by saying:

قُلْ أَرَءَيْتُمْ إِنْ أَخَذَ ٱللَّهُ سَمْعَكُمْ وَأَبْصَٰرَكُمْ وَخَتَمَ عَلَىٰ قُلُوبِكُم مَّنْ إِلَٰهٌ غَيْرُ ٱللَّهِ
يَأْتِيكُم بِهِ ۗ ٱنظُرْ كَيْفَ نُصَرِّفُ ٱلْءَايَٰتِ ثُمَّ هُمْ يَصْدِفُونَ ﴿٤٦﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘Think: if God were to take away your hearing and your sight and seal up your hearts, what god other than He could restore them?’ See how We explain Our revelations in various ways, yet still they turn away [46] (The Quran, al-An’am: 46)

In this verse, Allah Almighty orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask those disbelievers what they would do if Allah Almighty took away their hearings and sight and if He the Almighty sealed up their hearts; do they think that there is another god other than He the Almighty that can restore them? The disbelievers actually exploited the Blessing of Allah Glorified is He to oppose Him; He endowed them with the blessing of hearing, yet they did not make use of it to listen to the divine guidance; He the Almighty granted them the blessing of sight, yet they did not utilise it to see His signs; and they were given hearts by means of which they could reason, yet they sealed them up and so were unable to receive goodness. So, how would they act if Allah Almighty took these blessings away from them? Is there any other god that can restore these blessings?!

In our daily life, we notice that Allah Almighty has deprived some people from certain blessings which have been given to others. In truth, this is viewed as a way of instructing us how to understand the way the affairs of the universe are run. At this point, we should stress that depriving someone of a particular blessing does not mean that Allah Almighty hates them. Rather, He Glorified is He wants to remind people of the fact that there is a Sublime Bestower of Blessings Who is the Only One Who deserves to be worshipped. That is why, if He Glorified is He takes these blessings away from the disbeliever, s/he will be unable to ward off any harm.

In this verse under discussion, Allah Almighty tells us that even though Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him clarified matters for them, i.e. to the disbelievers with clear proofs, they turned away from Him peace and blessings be upon him and they did not occupy their minds through carefully reflecting on the truthfulness of the Divine Message that He peace and blessings be upon him delivered to them. This is why Allah Almighty described them as turning away from the Truth.

In this regard, when the believer sees someone with a physical disability, s/he should thank Allah Almighty for his Blessings. Yet, I would like to drive your attention to a very important point which is that when Allah Glorified is He causes someone to have a physical disability, He the Exalted out of His Infinite Mercy, causes him/her to be superior in another area. An example of this is illustrated in the following poetic verses in which the poet says:

I became blind in the womb but (my) intelligence is due to (my) blindness
I came to have amazing thought, as a refuge for knowledge
The illumination of the eye diminishes and becomes a support for the heart
For what man loses of knowledge can be gained again

In our daily life, we may see a blind person leading those who see to guidance. In addition, we may see a person who is deaf enchanting people with his/her music. Beethoven is a classic example. As such, it is clear that Allah Glorified is He out of His Grace and Bounty makes those with physical disabilities become superior in other fields of their life. In the same vein, there is no other god in the universe, if any, that could restore the disbeliever what Allah Almighty has taken from him/her. Allah Almighty says: ‘See how we explain Our Revelations in various ways, yet still they turn away.’ (al-An‘am: 46) In this particular part of the verse, Allah Almighty drives the attention of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the fact that even though He the Almighty made all the signs and His message clear to these people by all possible and impossible means, they turned away from His Way of Guidance as their hearts had been sealed and thus they were unable to understand or even reflect on the Truth.

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

قُلۡ أَرَءَيۡتَكُمۡ إِنۡ أَتَىٰكُمۡ عَذَابُ ٱللَّهِ بَغۡتَةً أَوۡ جَهۡرَةً هَلۡ يُهۡلَكُ إِلَّا ٱلۡقَوۡمُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿٤٧﴾

Say, ‘Think: if the punishment of God should come to you, by surprise or openly, would anyone but the evildoers be destroyed?’ [47] (The Quran, al-An’am: 47)

Grammatically, if we compare the verse under discussion to the following verse: ‘Say [Prophet], ‘Think: if Allah were to take away your hearing and your sight and seal up your hearts, what god other than He could restore them?’ See how We explain Our Revelations in various ways, yet still they turn away’ (al-An‘am: 46), we notice that Allah Glorified is He puts a Fatha (a short diagonal strike over the Arabic letter) on the second personal pronoun in the verse under explanation, whereas He puts a Damma (a little looped symbol like a small waw placed over the Arabic letter) on the second personal pronoun in the latter verse. In addition, we notice that Allah Almighty in the verse under discussion has used the Arabic pronoun Al-Kaf which is used to indicate the second person, a thing that He the Almighty did not do in the verse above. At this point, the fact should be stressed that every word in the Quran is used to impart a particular meaning and thus cannot be replaced with another, although they may be similar to each other. So how can we understand these grammatical nuances? Using the second personal pronouns in this verse, i.e. At-Taa’ and Al-Kaf, clearly indicates that Allah the Almighty wants to highlight an absolutely crucial point, that is, He the Almighty wants to tell us that the disbelievers would be completely destroyed. As for the verse above, Allah Glorified is He interrogates the disbelievers to affirm the content of the question Allah Almighty gave to them in the verse.

In this vein, we should highlight a very important point; when we interrogate someone about a certain incident, it may happen that the person being asked might not have been an eyewitness. In the case where they are an eyewitness, their answer will be in the affirmative. That is to say they have actually seen the incident. Yet, in case they were not present at the time of its occurrence, they will answer in the negative. As a point of thought, this clearly highlights how people act with each other in this regard. Yet, the matter is totally different when Allah Almighty is the One Who asks about an incident that took place in the past which the believers did not see. As a matter of fact, the believers, out of their faith in Allah Glorified is He must give the answer in the affirmative despite not having seen the incident with their own eyes.

This point is further elucidated by the verse in which Allah Almighty asks Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him: ‘Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with the possessors of the elephant?’ (al-Fil: 1) In the aforementioned verse of the chapter of al-Fil, Allah Almighty asks The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the incident of the possessors of the elephant that took place in the same year of his birth peace and blessings be upon him. That is to say He the Almighty asked him this question even though he did not see this incident with his eyes. At that point, someone may ask, ‘Why does Allah ask Prophet Muhammad about something he did not see?’ As a matter of fact, this particular question here and similar indicates a very important point, where The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him must firmly believe in everything that Allah Almighty tells him of. In other words, when He the Almighty asks him peace and blessings be upon him here, ‘Have you not considered…?’ this means that He Glorified is He orders the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to have absolute certainty in all that he is told about. This is because Allah will never deceive him, or tell him a lie, while the Prophet’s perception out of the human nature, might sometimes do so.

As such, it is clear right now that this rhetorical style is intended to indicate certainty. Let us offer another example to illustrate this point more clearly; when you do a lot of favours for someone and then they deny it, you would not say to him, ‘I did a lot of favours for you’. Rather, you would ask him, ‘Have you not considered the favours I did for you on that day?’ As a matter of fact, you put your statement in the form of a question because you are absolutely sure that they, upon carefully reflecting on the matter, would answer you in the affirmative. That is to say, they would confess that you already did them good. By asking questions like this, the fact is yet proved by the person being interrogated rather than the questioner himself.

Having shed light on the disbelievers’ stubbornness regarding the rejection of the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and being unconvinced with the divine signs sent to them to establish the truthfulness of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him, Allah the Exalted told us that disbelievers had exceeded the limits and asked for a number of particular signs. They even did so in a rude and unpleasant way. In the Quran, Allah Almighty tells us about the demands that the disbelievers made to The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: 'And they say: We will by no means believe in you until you cause a fountain to gush forth from the earth for us. Or you should have a garden of palms and grapes in the midst of which you should cause rivers to flow forth, gushing out. Or you should cause the heaven to come down upon us in pieces as you think, or bring Allah and the angels face to face (with us). Or you should have a house of gold, or you should ascend into heaven, and we will not believe in your ascending until you bring down to us a book which we may read. Say: Glory be to my Lord; am I aught but a mortal Messenger?' (al-Isra': 90-93)

If we carefully reflect upon these demands of the disbelievers, we will find that they are all presented as a challenge. We know for certain that Allah the Almighty is the One Who chose the Quran to be the eternal miracle of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In addition, Allah Glorified is He knows that the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him faithfully and sincerely delivers the Divine Message to his people. For this reason, He Glorified is He orders the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to tell those disbelievers that their belief will neither harm nor bring any benefit to Allah the Exalted rather, they will be the ones who will benefit as a result of it. Here, we should take into account the undeniable fact that Allah Almighty possessed the attributes of perfection even before He created the entire universe, and that He the Almighty will never lose them.

As a matter of fact, it is out of these divine attributes of perfection including knowledge, power, and wisdom and will that He the Exalted created the entire universe. As such, we human beings must be fully aware of the fact that our belief in The Almighty will never ever add to His Attributes of Perfection or Majesty. Instead, it is the human beings themselves who will get benefit as a result of their belief. So, if there are those amongst you who are arrogant and obstinate, then Allah Glorified is He will not leave them to corrupt His Way of Guidance. Rather, He the Almighty overtakes them as is clearly evident in the stories of the previous Messengers and Prophets with their peoples and how Allah Almighty severely and painfully punished them.

Indeed He Glorified is He could torture you, O disbelievers of Quraysh*,* in the same way He did with them. In addition, if you carefully reflect on the stories of the previous Messengers with the deniers of the Truth from among their people, you will know for certain that they were suddenly and surprisingly overtaken by the divine punishment. Let us offer a number of examples to illustrate this point; Allah The Almighty, tells us about the people of ‘Ad (1), saying: ‘Then as to Ad, they were unjustly proud in the land, and they said: Who is mightier in strength than we? Did they not see that Allah Who created them was mightier than they are in strength, and they denied our communications? (15) So We sent on them a furious wind in unlucky days, that We may make them taste the chastisement of abasement in this world's life; and certainly the chastisement of the hereafter is much more abasing, and they shall not be helped. (16)’ (Fussilat: 15-16)

The people of ‘Ad were given to arrogance and denied the Message of Prophet Hud (Eber) peace be upon him. They mistakenly believed that they were the mightiest people on the surface of the earth and thus hurt their Prophet and the believers with him. Yet, they did not take into account that Allah Almighty Who created them, is mightier than them. But, how did Allah the Almighty punish them? He sent on them a furious wind so that He could make them taste the punishment in the life of this world... Allah Glorified is He then adds that they will receive a more severe, painful and humiliating punishment in the Hereafter since they will find none to support them.

Moving to the people of Thamud(2), the Quran tells us that Allah Almighty showed them the way of guidance, yet they chose the way of misguidance and even preferred disbelief over belief. They denied and rejected the Message of Prophet Saleh (Shelah) peace be upon him and slew the she-camel. This is why Allah Glorified is He overtook them with the scourge of an abasing punishment for what they earned. In the Quran, Allah Almighty says: ‘And as for Thamud, We showed them the right way, but they chose error above guidance, so there overtook them the scourge of an abasing chastisement for what they earned.' (Fussilat: 17)

---

(1) ‘Ad (Arabic: عاد , ʿAd) was an ancient tribe mentioned frequently in the Quran.[1] ‘Ad is usually placed in Southern Arabia, [2].

(2) The Thamūd (/ˈθɑːmʊd/; Arabic: ثمود) is the name of an ancient civilization in the Hadramaut known from the 1st millennium BC to near the time of prophet Muhammad.

The destruction of the possessors of the elephant is a third case in point. The people of Abraha, the Abyssinian, came to Mecca for the sake of destroying the Sacred House, but they were welcomed by flocks of birds that Allah Almighty sent down upon them casting against them stones of baked clay. In the Quran, Allah Almighty says: 'Have you not considered how your Lord dealt with the possessors of the elephant? (1) Did He not cause their war to end in confusion, (2) And send down (to prey) upon them birds in flocks, (3) Casting against them stones of baked clay, (4) So He rendered them like straw eaten up? (5)' (al-Fil: 1-5)

According to the aforementioned examples, Allah the Almighty meted out His punishment upon those oppressive disbelievers suddenly and surprisingly, that is, they were surprised by the divine punishments which overtook them suddenly. Yet, the Quran tells that Allah Almighty has meted out His punishment upon some people openly and overtly. The drowning of Pharaoh and the destruction of Qarun (Korah) are two cases in point. As for Qarun, Allah Almighty tells us in the Quran how he was wiped out, saying, 'Surely Qarun was of the people of Moses, but he rebelled against them, and We had given him of the treasures so much so that his hoards of wealth would certainly weigh down a company of men possessed of great strength. When his people said to him: Do not exult, surely Allah does not love the exultant; (76) And seek by means of what Allah has given you the future abode, and do not neglect your portion of this world, and do good (to others) as Allah has done good to you, and do not seek to make mischief in the land, surely Allah does not love the mischief-makers. (77) He said: I have been given this only on account of the knowledge I have. Did he not know that Allah had destroyed before him of the generations those who were mightier in strength than he and greater in assemblage? And the guilty shall not be asked about their faults. (78) So he went forth to his people in his finery. Those who desire this world's life said: O would that we had the like of what Qaroun is given; most surely he is possessed of mighty good fortune. (79) And those who were given the knowledge said: Woe to you! Allah's reward is better for him who believes and does good, and none is made to receive this except the patient. (80) Thus we made the earth to swallow up him and his abode; so he had no body of helpers to assist him against Allah nor was he of those who can defend themselves.' (al-Qasas: 76-81)

Qarun arrogantly denied that Allah Almighty is the One Who supplied him with his riches. He even became enthralled with what he possessed to the extent that he was totally given to arrogance, yet how did Allah Almighty punish him? Allah Glorified is He made the earth swallow him up and his abode was placed before the eyes of those who wished to be in his place. As such, we reach the conclusion that the punishment of Allah Almighty may strike people either suddenly and surprisingly, or openly and overtly. Here arises a good question, 'Why did Allah Glorified is He sometimes afflict people with His punishment suddenly with some people and overtly with others?' As for the first kind of punishment which is the sudden one it proves to those who worship other than Allah the Exalted that they are deceived, for if those gods had been true, they would have at least warned their followers of the forthcoming punishment that would strike them. That is to say that this particular kind of punishment is intended to definitively prove the incapability of those false gods and the like to protect their followers. But in case someone claimed that they were suddenly struck with the punishment and thus were unable to ward it off, we say to them that the punishment of Allah the Exalted also comes openly and overtly, so why are you unable to ward it off?! In spite of the fact that the plea of those deniers of the Truth is null, they are still unable to attain faith. Allah Glorified is He acted with the disbelievers of Quraysh in the same way He did away with those people who denied the Messages of their previous Prophets and Messengers; He the Almighty sent them miraculous signs in order that they might think and reflect.

In this regard, we should know that the polytheists of Quraysh had plotted to kill Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, which is why they stood at the door of his house, yet Allah Glorified is He saved him. It is narrated that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him managed to leave while they were still standing at the door, but they, out of Allah's Omnipotent Power, were unable to see him. In this way, their conspiracy against the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him failed and they were unable to hurt him.

The disbelievers of Quraysh had even previously sought the help of sorcerers to hurt him peace and blessings be upon him, but yet they failed to do so. That is to say, Allah the Almighty fully protected His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him from the schemes of the disbelievers, for He Glorified is He is the best of planners.

Back to the chapter of al-An'am, Allah Almighty, says: 'Say [O Prophet Muhammad], 'Think: if the Punishment of Allah should come to you, by surprise or openly, would anyone but the evildoers be destroyed?' (al-An'am: 47) We notice that the concluding sentence in this verse takes the form a question which is used, as we showed previously, to affirm the meaning of a sentence, since the answer to the asked question is expected to be given by those who are being questioned and thus will secure confession on their part. We know perfectly well that confession is the best evidence.

Here arises a very good question; 'How does Allah Glorified is He save the believers at times of punishments?' We know full well that the divine punishments are only intended to torture the evildoers. We can illustrate this point as follows: destruction means 'to take away the life of a person who is indulged in the finery of this worldly life', which is why those who do not believe in the life after death will surely feel the bitterness of loss upon death. Yet, the believers, who know for certain that they shall return to Allah the Exalted and that they will be held accountable for their deeds before Him the Almighty fully realise that in case they are negatively affected by the punishments of the disbelievers, they will be admitted into paradise, which is a great blessing for them since they will eternally live therein.

As such, it is clear that destruction is only intended to torture the evildoers because it deprives them from the joy of this worldly life. In addition, upon death, they will have nothing in the Hereafter but perdition, loss and permanent punishment. As for the believers, Allah Almighty will confer His favour upon them by admitting them into paradise wherein they will eternally live in happiness. That is to say that the believers enjoy Allah Almighty's favour and grace at times of ease and hardships alike.

In the following verse, Allah Glorified is He highlights how the concept of faith must be deeply rooted in the minds of those who believe in the Messengers and Prophets. It goes without saying that people with a sound Fitra (natural disposition), upon hearing the divine guidance, do not hesitate to accept it. That is because the Fitra, upon observing the deviation of people and upon realising that there is someone who is sent to guide people back on track, will have no choice but to believe in the bearer of the Message, i.e. a Messenger or a Prophet. In the same connection, when one's natural disposition sees that the entire universe has been prepared to serve man, it must then ask about the Creator of this universe and about the way that must be implemented so that this blessing of existence can be preserved.

Furthermore, man should be fully aware of the undeniable fact that s/he is one of the different creatures in the universe, which is full of provisions and endless resources. At that point, we should stress the fact that no one has ever claimed to be the creator of the heavens, the earth, water, or air. That is why people with a sound Fitra must wonder about this great Creator Who granted them the right of succession in the entire universe. Yet, when this great Creator sends a Messenger or a Prophet to clarify everything for and to tell us about the creation of the heavens and the earth and about the One Who supplies us with provision, this sound human Fitra must then accept and believe in this Messenger or Prophet. In addition, in case this Messenger or Prophet is supported with a divine miracle or sign, the human mind will immediately confess the truthfulness of him because it is at that point that the human mind has found its treasure.

In this vein, we should stress that it is prohibited for the believers and Messengers themselves, as well as the disbelievers to exceed the limit. In addition, they are not allowed to exaggerate in the praise of any Messenger or Prophet. We should be fully aware of the fact that Messengers are ordinary people who are chosen by Allah Glorified is He to serve a particular mission, that is, to convey His Message. In addition, we should take into account that the Messengers are unable to bring forth such miracles or signs demanded by their people. That is why Allah Almighty, in the following verse tells us about the ultimate objective behind the sending of Messengers and Prophets; He Glorified is He says:

وَمَا نُرۡسِلُ ٱلۡمُرۡسَلِينَ إِلَّا مُبَشِّرِينَ وَمُنذِرِينَۖ فَمَنۡ ءَامَنَ
وَأَصۡلَحَ فَلَا خَوۡفٌ عَلَيۡهِمۡ وَلَا هُمۡ يَحۡزَنُونَ ﴿٤٨﴾

We send messengers only to give good news and to warn, so for those who believe and do good deeds there will be no fear, nor will they grieve[48] (The Quran, al-An’am: 48)

This verse means clearly that Allah Almighty did not endow Messengers and Prophets with such great power by means of which they can act as they like. That is to say that the main reason behind sending them is to deliver the divine way of guidance to mankind. Thus, no one should demand signs or miracles from them because they are, without the Help of Allah the Exalted absolutely incapable of doing so. Here, we should stress that all the Messengers and Prophets know for certain that they are merely human beings receiving the divine revelation. This is how we should believe in Messengers and Prophets; we should accept them as bearers of glad tidings and warners.

We previously explained that Al-Bishara (glad tidings) means giving glad tidings of something pleasing before it actually happens. The reason behind giving glad tidings is to prepare and urge people to accept the divine way of guidance and thus the act of ‘giving glad tidings’ is viewed fruitfully as it has actually turned into reality. Al-Indhar (giving warning), on the other hand, means informing people of something evil or displeasing so that they would protect themselves.

In addition, the act of ‘giving glad tidings’ prompts people to do good, while the act of ‘giving warning’ deters people from doing bad and thus keeps them away from it. As such, it is clear that the ultimate objective of sending Messengers and Prophets is to give glad tidings and to warn people, which is why we should not exaggerate their role or associate divinity to them. So, we should not ask them to bring forth signs and miracles since Allah the Almighty is the One Who is fully able to do so. At this point, I would like to also stress that it is totally wrong to criticise the divine miracles sent with these Messengers and Prophets.

Once again, the verse, ‘We send Messengers only to give good news and to warn …’ exactly and precisely defines the ultimate objective behind the sending of Messengers and Prophets. That is to say, this is a role to be performed by Messengers and Prophets so what about the role that should be performed by those to whom those Messengers were sent? The answer is clearly given in the verse; '…so for those who believe and do good deeds there will be no fear, nor will they grieve.' (al-An'am: 48)

It is clear right now that people must accept faith upon hearing the Divine Message being delivered to them through the Messenger or Prophet sent to them. They should also be fully aware of the essence of the divine way of guidance and apply it. Thus, whoever from amongst them believes and acts righteously has no need to fear because they have indeed achieved a mighty success. In addition, they will not grieve, for they will, on the Day of Resurrection, enjoy the fruits of their good deeds, which are recorded in their book. As for the word Iman (belief/faith), it means that the heart becomes totally assured with a matter of creed, in such a way that it gives no room for any more doubt. That is why Iman is called Aqida (creed) meaning that there is a binding matter that is never dissolved.

In this regard, I would like to stress that believers should make use of all the signs and proofs by which their belief in Allah Almighty becomes firm and steadfast, a matter which can only be fulfilled by the heart. In addition, it is of great importance to know that only convincing the heart is insufficient to establish faith because the heart is not the only organ within. That is to say that man must surrender to the divine way of guidance with his/her entire body including the intellect. In other words, man is said to have true faith in case s/he correctly offers all acts of worship according to the divine way of guidance.

I lay strong emphasis on this point to avoid sayings such as; 'I have a believing and sound heart, yet I do not apply the divine way of guidance.' Wrong is this statement! The matter of belief does not go like this. It is true that your heart has attained faith, but why have all your body parts not carried out the requirements of faith?! Why do you not give your mind a chance to reflect, think, plan and be reminded?! Why do you not give your eye the chance to consider and benefit from the gifts that it sees?! The same applies to the rest of your body parts including the hand, the tongue, the ear, the foot, etc., why do you not give them the chance to do good?!

Regarding Al-Islah (doing righteousness), it is an act which is only fulfilled by the body parts; that is, man shall utilise his/her mind in producing ideas which are beneficial to mankind; s/he shall, upon hearing the speech, follow the best of it; and s/he shall utilise his/her hands to perfect all the works they do. Here, we should stress that believers know for certain that the affairs of the universe are run by due measure. In addition, they realise that there are some things in the universe with which they have nothing to do. Yet these things represent the highest ranks of proficiency. For instance, we view that rainfalls in its due seasons and so is the wind, which also blows in its due seasons and courses. In the same connection, we see no contradiction whatsoever between the movement of the sun and that of the earth, for each of them runs in a due course. That is to say that everything in the universe is run by due measure and thus gives clear indication of the absolute proficiency.

As a matter of fact, corruption only occurs as a result of the intervention of man in the affairs of this worldly life. Let us offer an example with air pollution; there are so many factors that led to the corruption and pollution of air including building houses close to each other, the lack of sufficient open green spaces and poisonous exhausts emitted from machines as a result of burning fuel. In actuality, when man made these machines, s/he did not take this into account and to get his/her comfort paid no attention at all things against which s/he had to take precaution. Exhaust fumes, which increase the pollution of the environment being an example. Despite the discovery of other means that can prevent this pollution, some people are reluctant to use them.

When we drive cars, believing that we have reached the peak of civilisation, why do we forget the main principle upon which civilisation is based, i.e. making use of the modern scientific discoveries to make machines in such a way which is beneficial to people? In other words, why should we not apply new techniques by means of which pollution of the environment is decreased? As such, it is clear that car exhausts corrupt the air in our environment and thus destroys man's lungs.

It is important that we know that it is out of the responsibility of faith that we, upon making new machines, should take into account the amount of harm that could result from them. Everyone who lives in a crowded city is harmed by the bad effects of car fumes despite the fact that not everyone has a car, so how can the driver of a car be satisfied with him/herself not to modify the parts of this machine which may exert harmful impact upon him/herself as well as others? This is why Muslims must not be deceived by the deceptive appearance of civilisation. Rather, they must derive the main reasons behind the progress of today’s civilisation from their main resources. In addition, Muslims must take into consideration how to avoid harm to not fall under the category of the greatest losers about whom Allah Almighty says: ‘Say [Prophet]: ‘Shall we tell you who are the greatest losers in whatever they may do? (103) ‘[It is] they whose labour has gone astray in [the pursuit of no more than] this world’s life, and who none the less think that they are doing good works (104)’ (al-Kahf: 103-104).

In this regard, we should learn this great lesson from the universe around us and which Allah Glorified is He created in such a way that guarantees its permanent existence. If we carefully reflect upon the universe, we will fully realise that everything created by Him the Almighty is beneficial to mankind including the waste of animals which man uses to fertilise land. In truth, this is the true meaning of the verse: ‘…so for those who believe and do good deeds there will be no fear, nor will they grieve.’ (al-An‘am: 48)

It is clear right now that ‘faith’ is an action of the heart and ‘doing righteousness’ is an action of the body parts. For this reason, we must exert our utmost efforts to set the course of life in order. Here, we should stress the fact that the entire universe has been perfectly created; it runs by due measure and thus it suffers no flaws. Yet, due to the fact that we want to have a luxurious life, we should make use of our minds created by Allah Almighty to utilise the worldly materials and elements in such a way that secures us permanent joy.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this point more clearly; primitive man used to drink from rivers when feeling thirsty. Then, when s/he realised that their thirst was not sufficiently quenched by stretching his/her hands to get a handful of water from the river, they made a vessel out of clay to use it in drinking. After that, people made vessels out of thin iron sheet to use for the same purpose. They finally managed to make vessels out of glass. So, the question to be asked here shall be ‘Are these things to fall under the category of necessities of life or that of luxuries of life?' Indeed they fall under the category of the luxuries of life, so if you, O mankind!, want to make your life luxurious, you should then use your intellect to reach the best potential on how to utilise the materials and substances placed by Allah the Exalted in the universe. In this way, Allah Glorified is He enables you to reach the latest scientific discoveries. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point; our grandmothers in the countryside used to fill vessels with water from wells and canals for drinking, yet they used to filter this water to make it potable. As time went by there were certain people who used to get water from canals and then sell it to people at homes. However, when scholars managed to discover the law of Al-Istitraq (balancing liquids), people were able to send water to tanks in upper floors and thus they managed to pump it into pipelines of different sizes. As such, people were able to get access to water directly to their homes. This example shows us clearly how man made use of his/her intellect benefit from the materials Allah Almighty placed in the universe.

However, in the past when water was not as easily accessible as it is today, there was less wastage. Previously a couple of vessels of water were sufficient for a family for a whole day; now that water is readily available there is more wastage.

That is why it is of great importance for Muslims to fear Allah Almighty in all their actions. If we fear Him Glorified is He in the use of water, we will fully realise that the large quantities of water we waste in vain, may be urgently needed by other people. So, when we put an end to the misuse of water, this will keep us as well as others away from harm.

Let each one of us calculate, for example, how much water s/he consumes when performing ablution. Indeed a man from amongst us opens the tap, washes his/her hands three times, rinses his/her mouth three times, cleans his/her nose three times, washes his/her face three times, washes his/her forearms three times, wipes his/her head and finally washes his/her feet, yet during this entire period of making ablution, a large quantity of water falls down from the tap and goes in vain. Had s/he carefully thought about using such water falling down from the tap properly, others would not have complained about the lack of water. So, why do Muslims not just take the amount of water that is necessary for ablution? It is narrated that people in the past used to make ablution with half a litre of water, so why do we not use the Blessings of Allah the Exalted in the best way?

At that point, we must take into account that just as we are ordered by virtue of Islam to offer prayers to perfect our souls, we are also required to cultivate our manners and perfect our moral conduct. That is to say, that we should not misuse our capabilities which Allah the Almighty granted us. In addition, we should pay great attention to know how to attain the highest ranks of righteousness. We should not yet exert our efforts to get comfort while neglecting the fact that this comfort will bring forth further hardships. Rather, we must carefully and thoroughly reflect upon matters so as not to fall under the category of those people mentioned in the verse; 'And follow not that of which you have not the knowledge; surely the hearing and the sight and the heart, all of these, shall be questioned about that.' (al-Isra': 36) In this aforementioned verse of al-Isra', Allah Almighty, explains that Muslims must take into account the fact that they are responsible for their hearing, sight and heart, and that they will be held accountable for them on the Day of Resurrection. For this reason, it is not right for them to languish in taking the best of knowledge so that they can perfect their speech and actions. By doing so, there will be no need for them to fear in the life of this world or the Hereafter because they have believed and lived righteously. In addition, they will not be afflicted with grief in the life of this world or the Hereafter; this is the true meaning of the verse; '… so for those who believe and do good deeds there will be no fear, nor will they grieve.' (al-An'am: 48)

It is clear right now that following these divine laws allows man to protect him/herself in this worldly life and in the Hereafter as well. If you see, O Muslim, that the affairs of people are not run perfectly, you then should know that one of the rules of Allah Almighty has been neglected. If you see a poor person suffering from hunger or without clothes, then you should know that one of his/her rights have been denied by someone else. Here, we should stress a very important fact which is that Allah, Creator of the universe, destined that the rich, whom He Glorified is He gave great provision, should give the poor from the extra amount of this provision so that they be relieved from their poverty, but the rich refuse to obey the divine order and thus deny them of this right. However, there are some people who used to practice it as a profession even though they are in no need. As such, we can deduce that corruption in this regard has two reasons as follows: man's deception of others by asking them for money, although s/he is in no need of that; and the rejection of the rich to carry out the divine order by giving obligatory alms to the poor.

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

وَٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا يَمَسُّهُمُ ٱلْعَذَابُ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَفْسُقُونَ ﴿٤٩﴾

As for those who rejected Our signs, torment will afflict them as a result of their defiance [49]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 49)

There are two possible explanations for this verse under discussion; it may refer to those who deny and reject the signs of Allah Almighty, which are sent with the Messengers and Prophets as a proof of their truthfulness. By doing so, those deniers of the Truth are thus judged as disbelievers. It may also refer to those who denied and rejected the divine way of guidance, that is, they did not act upon the divine teachings and instructions therefore deviating from the Right Path. In other words, they became immoral and disobedient. As for the Arabic word Al-Fisq (defiance), it refers to the date when it comes forth from its peel when its size, upon ripeness, becomes smaller than it was. Here, we stress that the one who deviates from the divine way of guidance is the one who is deemed a loser because Allah Glorified is He has laid down this way of guidance to protect people from falling prey to misguidance. The essence of this divine way is yet crystal clear in the two orders 'Do!' and 'Do not!'

Indeed man acts sinfully and defiantly when s/he does not obey the divine commands or when s/he does what He Glorified is He judged prohibited. Let us offer this example to illustrate this point; a man, fearing that his radio may stop working properly, will follow the rules regarding its proper use. An electronic device, for example, will not perform at a capacity that its manufacturer has not set for it. So, if the manufacturer says, 'Use 220 volts so as not to ruin the machine,' man should act accordingly. If we apply this to man, we will find that Allah the Almighty has created man and laid down for him/her rules by means of which they could protect themselves from the divine punishment. Therefore, whoever breaks these divine rules will be struck with His punishment. As for the verse: '… torment will afflict them as a result of their defiance,' it gives the impression that the punishment loves to descend upon the disobedient and the defiant. That is to say that torment has rushed towards him/her in order to afflict him/her; this point is yet proved by the verse in the chapter of al-Mulk in which He Glorified is He says: 'Well-nigh bursting with fury; [and] every time a host [of such sinners] is flung into it, its keepers will ask them, 'Has no warner ever come to you?' (al-Mulk: 8)

In another position in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: 'On the day that We will say to hell: Are you filled up? And it will say: Are there any more?' [Qaf: 30) That is to say that the punishment itself is keen to be applied to the one who has done evil which is why the suffering insists on afflicting those who have acted sinfully and defiantly. Here, we should stress that using the Arabic word Al-Mass in this context indicates a very important meaning which is that the human penalties are incomparable to those of Allah the Almighty.

As a matter of fact, if a man punishes his fellow man, he does so according to his own strength and power, and no creature's punishment can ever become severe and painful like that of Allah Almighty. That is because the severity of the punishment differs according to the power of the punisher. If we apply this principle to Allah Glorified is He we will find that His punishment is so severe and painful that no one can endure it. He Glorified is He and then says:

قُل لَّآ أَقُولُ لَكُمۡ عِندِي خَزَآئِنُ ٱللَّهِ وَلَآ أَعۡلَمُ ٱلۡغَيۡبَ وَلَآ أَقُولُ لَكُمۡ إِنِّي مَلَكٌۖ
إِنۡ أَتَّبِعُ إِلَّا مَا يُوحَىٰٓ إِلَيَّۚ قُلۡ هَلۡ يَسۡتَوِي ٱلۡأَعۡمَىٰ وَٱلۡبَصِيرُۚ أَفَلَا تَتَفَكَّرُونَ ﴿٥٠﴾

Say, 'I do not have the treasures of God, nor do I know the unseen, nor do I tell you that I am an angel. I only follow what is revealed to me.' Say, 'Is a blind person like one who can see? Why will you not reflect?' [50] (The Quran, al-An'am: 50)

We previously explained that the Arabic verb 'say' gives a command to The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. We know for certain that The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him delivers the divine message as it was revealed to him. Here, we stress that it was sufficient for him peace and blessings be upon him to just say: 'I do not have the Treasures of Allah', without the verb 'say' in the beginning of the speech. However, the existence of the verse as such clearly indicates the absolute accuracy of the Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him in delivering the Message of Allah the Exalted. It is taken for granted that all the words of the Quran are Tawqifi, meaning that every word therein is sent down from Allah Glorified is He. In other words, the archangel Gabriel conveyed the Message to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him exactly as he received it from Allah the Exalted and he peace and blessings be upon him in turn, conveyed and delivered it to us as it was revealed to him; an act which plainly indicates that no one has the right to change even one letter of the Divine Revelation.

In this vein, The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him informed us that Allah the Almighty has sent him as a guide, a giver of glad tidings and a warner. In addition, He Glorified is He supported His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him with a sign, i.e. the Quran, proving his truthfulness and accuracy in delivering the Message. It goes without saying that whoever listens to this guidance from him peace and blessings be upon him was not supposed to ask for anything except that which is consistent with his human nature. That is to say that no one is allowed to ask The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to bring forth any signs other than those sent down by Allah Glorified is He. That is because The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say except that he is a mere bearer of the Divine Message, which is why any discussion with him must be within the framework of this claim.

As a matter of fact, the disbelievers overstepped this when they asked The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to bring them forth other signs including a bursting spring of water from the earth, or that he should have an embellished house. This is why Allah Glorified is He orders him peace and blessings be upon him to inform them that he does not possess the treasures of the heavens and the earth, so how can you, O disbelievers, demand him to have houses and palaces?. Furthermore, how can you ask him peace and blessings be upon him to inform you of the unseen so that you can accept that which is beneficial and avoid that which is harmful? Is the divine way of guidance which guides to everything beneficial and keeps you from all that is harmful, not suffice you? Moreover, The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never told them that he knew the unseen. In fact, they themselves gave this testimony about him peace and blessings be upon him. Allah the Almighty says: ‘Yet they say: ‘What sort of Messenger is this [man] who eats food [like all other mortals] and goes about in the market-places? Why has not an angel [visibly] been sent down to him, to act as a warner together with him?’ (7) Or: ‘[Why has not] a treasure been granted to him [by Allah]?’ Or: ‘He should [at least] have a [bountiful] garden, so that he could eat thereof [without effort]!’And so these evildoers say [to one another], ‘If you were to follow [Muhammad, you would follow] but a man bewitched!’ (8)’ (al-Furqan: 7-8)

The disbelievers of Quraysh had indeed mocked The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and asked him to bring forth other signs and miracles for them. They even wondered how it could be for this man who claims to be a Messenger, to eat food as they eat and to go to markets as they do! If he, i.e. Muhammad peace and blessings upon him the disbelievers say, was truly a Messenger sent from Allah, He Glorified is He would have relieved him of the hardship of earning a living or would have sent down an angel to help him convey the divine way of guidance to people or would have sent down treasure from the sky with which he could spend out of or would have been granted a bountiful garden from the fruits of which he would eat.

These were the demands of the chief disbelievers of Mecca; those who oppressed their own selves with disbelief and wanted to turn people away from believing in the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. In pursuit of achieving their goal of turning people away from the Message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the disbelievers of Quraysh once accused him peace and blessings be upon him of being bewitched, another time of being mad, a third time of being delirious, a fourth time of being a liar and a fifth time of receiving the Quran from non-Arabs. Yet, Allah Glorified is He refutes all of these false and unfounded allegations and fabrications with which they went astray and caused others to go astray. Allah the Almighty says in the Quran: ‘And We have not sent before you any apostles but they most surely ate food and went about in the markets; and We have made some of you a trial for others; will you bear patiently? And your Lord is ever seeing.' (al-Furqan: 20) This verse clearly states that The Messengers and Prophets that were sent before Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him used to eat food, earn a living, and frequent the marketplace. So, if the polytheists are faulting the Messenger for that and trying to lead people astray with all possible means, then Allah the Exalted is reassuring the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him that He, Allah the Almighty will grant him victory. In addition, people will be held accountable before Him Glorified is He for their deeds, be they good or bad. Furthermore, all their demands from you, O Messenger Muhammad, clearly indicate their stubbornness. He peace and blessings be upon him, never ever said to them that he was a king, but rather, he told that that he was just a bearer of the Divine Message. So, how could they then ask him peace and blessings be upon him to bring forth for them signs which have only to do with Allah's Ownership of the treasures of the heavens and the earth? In the same way, how could they ask him peace and blessings be upon him to inform them of the unseen? Furthermore, how could they criticise him peace and blessings be upon him for being a mortal Messenger that eats, marries, and walks in the marketplace?!

All of these statements by the polytheists of Mecca clearly indicate their obstinacy and insistence on disbelief because they have asked him peace and blessings be upon him to bring forth for them signs which go beyond the fact that he peace and blessings upon him was just a bearer of the Divine Message. The disbelievers of Quraysh asked him peace and blessings be upon him to bring them forth springs of water, gardens and palaces all of which are demands that cannot be met by a Messenger sent only to convey and deliver the Divine Message to people. It is taken for granted that Allah the Almighty Alone is the One Who is fully able to bring forth these signs.

As for the Arabic word Khaza'in (safes) which is the plural of Khizana (a safe) refers to that item in which every precious thing is stored so that it can be taken out at the time of need. You do not call something a Khizana unless you have made it as a container for something precious which you fear to be taken out at the wrong time. Here, we should be fully aware of the fact that Allah the Almighty is the One Who possesses the treasures of the earth a point which is proved by the Quran in which He says: ‘And the earth – We have spread it out wide, and placed on it mountains firm, and caused [life] of every kind to grow on it in a balanced manner, (19) and provided thereon means of livelihood for you [O men] as well as for all [living beings] whose sustenance does not depend on you. (20) For no single thing exists that does not have its source with us; and nothing do we bestow from on high unless it be in accordance with a measure well defined. (21)’ (al-Hijr: 19-21) Allah tells us about the most essential point in this regard which is that Allah the Almighty is the One Who knows the secrets of the universe, and that He Glorified is He manifests and discloses them at their appropriate time, but the question to be asked here right now is ‘How does Allah Almighty do so?’ Allah Glorified is He sheds light on the beginning of creation and on the creation of the heavens and the earth. In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Say: What! do you indeed disbelieve in Him Who created the earth in two periods, and do you set up equals with Him? That is the Lord of the Worlds. (9) And He made in it mountains above its surface and He blessed therein and made therein its foods, in four periods: alike for the seekers. (10) Then He directed Himself to the heaven and it is a vapour, so He said to it and to the earth: Come both, willingly or unwillingly. They both said: We come willingly. (11)’ (Fussilat: 9-11)

In these aforementioned verses, Allah the Almighty commands The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to ask the polytheists of Mecca how they could disbelieve in Allah the Exalted in spite of the fact that He Glorified is He is the One Who created the heavens and the earth in two periods and how they could set up partners for Him in worship when He is the creator of the earth upon which they live and get the necessary materials and substances by means of which their lives are preserved until the end of time. We know for certain that man’s life is kept by virtue of the food placed in the earth out of the Divine Mercy. Yet, in case man wants to have a luxurious life, s/he had to be ambitious to do so. He Glorified is He then tells us that He placed towering, unshakable mountains in the earth, and that He blessed the earth and the towering, unshakable mountains altogether. Having told us about the creation of these mountains, He Glorified is He moves to tell us about the apportioning of nourishment; a point which indicates that mountains are, in reality, the storehouses of nourishment. At that point, someone may ask, ‘How is this?’

We say, 'Indeed the facts confirm this reality because if you reflect on the flowing rivers, you will find that they consist of the rain that fell down on the mountains. That is to say that rainwater which is made up of small, minute particles, falls on these mountains and thus breaks them down. As such, it becomes full of the different minerals which are of great benefit to the land. We call this mixture of rainwater and minerals as Al-Ghrain (alluvial mud). When water flows in rivers and streams, this alluvial mud is transported to the land and serves as natural fertilisers from which plants get the necessary minerals. Had Allah Almighty so willed, He would have made the entire surface of the earth flat and thus enjoys fertility which is beneficial to plants, However, His Wisdom destined that the nourishment of plants is done in this way. As a matter of fact, if we carefully examine plants, we will find that they differ in the way of absorbing minerals from the soil. There is a particular type of plants that take their nourishment from a depth of half a metre, whilst a second type of plants do so from a depth of one metre, and so forth. Also, if we do not add manure or fertilisers or alluvial mud to the cultivated land, it becomes weak. Out of the fact that Allah Glorified is He wants the process of cultivation to be continued forever, He the Almighty created mountains in such a rigid form which makes them vulnerable to the factors of erosion, such as heat, cold and cracks. Yet, when rainwater falls down on them, it becomes full of the nourishing ingredients and minerals that the earth needs. These nourishing ingredients are thus transported via water to the earth. This is how the earth is constantly fertilised. As such, it is clear right now that those mountains are, in essence, the storehouses of Allah's Treasures.

But, is man's entire life based only on agriculture? The answer is definitely 'no' because if we look at a small model of the earth, we will find that it resembles a large melon. If we thus cut it into equal triangles, all of which are of the same distance as that from the exterior to the centre of the melon and made them all in the form of a pyramid, we would find that each piece contains an amount of provision which is equal to the other. Why? It is because life does not only depend on particular types of nourishment, but rather, we need different tools, materials and minerals to inhabit the earth, such as iron, petrol, manganese and the like from the other natural treasures of the earth upon which civilisation is established.

Indeed we find that these treasures are hidden either in the mountains or in the deserts, but each one of these treasures will not be disclosed but in an appointed time. Yet if we draw a comparison between the treasures found in a pyramidal section of the earth measuring from the centre to the perimeter and another, we would find that the treasures found of them are equal to each other. However, each type of these treasures has an appointed time to be disclosed to people. This goes in accordance with the Quran in which Allah Glorified is He says: ‘For no single thing exists that does not have its source with Us; and nothing do We bestow from on high unless it be in accordance with a measure well-defined.’ (al-Hijr: 21)

That is to say, there is not anything except that its storehouse is with Allah Almighty Who sends it down in accordance with a due measure. Let us examine this point in the light of intellect which is man’s greatest blessing. Indeed the intellect is something and thus has storehouses with Allah Glorified is He. This point is yet proved by the fact that the amounts of ideas man had ten centuries ago can in no way be comparable to those we have today. This is because every generation has benefited from the ideas of the previous ones to arrive at new conclusions. Therefore, it is clear that there are storehouses for ideas and thoughts and likewise everything in existence has storehouses with Allah the Exalted yet He Glorified is He does not send down from these treasures and storehouses except in accordance with a well-defined measure.

As a matter of fact, when Allah Glorified is He wants a particular secret to be disclosed, He the Almighty prepares the means for it. For example, in the past, we used to chop wood from trees in order to make fuel. After chopping the wood, out of fear that it might be spoilt, we transformed it into charcoal and thus secured a source of energy. These are all treasures that were hidden in the earth, yet man did not discover these sources of energy until after Allah the Exalted qualified them to receive this treasure. Here, we should stress that the Grace of Allah Almighty will surely remain until the end of time. Having managed to make charcoal, we entered the age of steam which led us to the age of electricity that has further allowed us to advance our knowledge and utilise the resources that Allah Glorified is He has bestowed upon us which led us, in turn, to the age of the atom.

All these discoveries were created by Allah Glorified is He and deposited in earth. When the time is due, Allah the Exalted inspires a person to take all the necessary steps to reveal it. The following generation builds on the discoveries of the previous and thus the development is always growing.

Such discoveries were either Allah's totally hidden or deposited with a certain code. For example, it was Allah the Exalted who made manifest the discovery of radium at the necessary time, by Madame Curie. Before the discovery of radium, scientists knew that there was an element they had not yet identified which had a specific atomic composition. This is because the elements of the universe are made with great and majestic wisdom. Furthermore, something could be typically transformed into something else. An example would be that you pick a flower and enjoy its fragrance until it wilts. You may not be fully aware that the flower has a specific composition and that humidity allows the flower to bloom. A flower is composed of the elements found on earth and when it wilts, these elements return back to the earth after the water it contains evaporates, like other water, and forms clouds which are moved by the wind and falls as rain again.

In this way, the drops of water contained in the flower evaporate to form clouds and then return to the earth once again in the form of rain. The percentage of water in the universe is stable, without decrease or increase since Allah Glorified is He created the creation in this universe. When man makes use of an amount of water, it returns, according to certain processes designed by Allah the Exalted to the reserve of water in the universe. Someone may ask: How many tonnes of water have I drunk in my life? You will find that you have drunk and made use of hundreds or thousands of tonnes of water and you disposed it in the form of perspiration, urine, mucus or similar. Then, how much water remains in your body after disposal of such quantities of water? The proportion of water may be more than ninety per cent of one body's weight(1). After your death, this amount of water in your body will evaporate, join the clouds, and then come down again as rain. Thus, the amount of water in the universe does not decrease or increase. This is what we call stored and ever transformed provision. Just as the amount of water contained in the flower evaporates, its smell also evaporates into the air and likewise its coloured substance dissolves into the earth. When we plant a rose tree, each rose takes its colour from the coloured substance stored in the earth. Therefore everything is either stored in its essence or its elements are stored in a transformed form. This is one of the laws of the universe. Life is based on these two types of elements.

(1) Not correct as a scientific fact, it is around 65 percent

For instance, man is certainly created of flesh and blood, and a cow is also created of flesh and blood. When man dies he returns to the earth and when man benefits from animals, then those animals also return to the earth. The elements composing the bodies of humans and animals enter into a new cycle. Therefore they are reserves designed by Allah Glorified is He which is either in a transformed or preserved form. The thing which is embedded into another thing and returns to its original state once again, is considered a transformed reserve.

It is out of the Mercy of Allah the Exalted that He does not allow anyone to own the reserves of the earth or heavens so they cannot be arrogant with others. Even The Messengers, being humans, were not authorised to dispose of these reserves. Allah Glorified is He has taken it upon himself to preserve the reserves of the earth and the heavens so that we are assured of our provisions. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He tells us that if we control His treasures of Mercy, then we would withhold them from fear of spending and man is ever stingy. Allah Glorified is He knows that man, by his very nature, can be very greedy or selfish, while He Glorified is He is The Rich, The Bountiful. Therefore, He sends down what He wills to His servants from His reserves so that they can take benefit from them. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not claim that he owns the reserves of Allah the Exalted so how is it then that the idolaters ask him for that which is in the reserves of Allah Glorified is He? He peace and blessings be upon him made this clear to them and further clarified that he does not know the unseen as he is told in the Quran to inform people that he does not have the treasures of Allah Almighty nor does he know the unseen.

In this way, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him negates for himself having any Divine attributes because the universal reserves are in the hands of Allah Almighty. Likewise he negates for himself having knowledge of the unseen. It may be said: 'But what about the future incidents and events about which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told us, are such incident of the unseen? We say: 'That certainly does not mean that he knew the unseen, but rather, he was informed of it'. That is Allah Glorified is He taught him these issues as He states in the Quran that such announcements relating to the unseen were revealed to him; otherwise he could not have known them. It is none but Allah Glorified is He Who told Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the news of the unseen. To decisively settle the matter, Allah Glorified is He states in the Quran that He is the Knower of the unseen! So He does not reveal His secrets to anyone except to those whom He chooses as a messenger; for surely He makes a guard to march before him and after him. Allah the Exalted alone is the Knower of the Unseen and He does not let anyone from the creation know about the Unseen except the Messengers whom He chooses to inform of it. Allah Glorified is He protects His Messengers in the meantime with angels who protect them from the interference of the jinn so that they do not eavesdrop what has been revealed to him of the unseen and communicate it to the soothsayers before it is conveyed to people. In addition, this is intended as a preservation of the revelation from the tampering and insanity of the jinn.

Therefore the Messenger is taught some of the unseen, but is not a knower of the unseen. The unseen – as we know – is that which is hidden from the senses and for which there are no premises. There are things hidden from you, but they have premises that if you follow from the outset, they will possibly lead you to the conclusion. For example, if you give a student a mathematical problem to solve, he will solve it, but this does not mean that he knows the unseen. Rather, he follows the premises and arranges the available information to figure out the answer.

The same applies to those who have discovered secrets in existence. Did they know the unseen? No, because they only used some of the premises available for them in the universe in order to arrive at new conclusions. It is true that these conclusions were concealed from us, but their premises were not. This also applies to all engineering theories; every theory is based on the one that preceded it and is an observation of a self-evident matter in the universe, however difficult and complex the theory is. Every science has premises that if a researcher looks into them, he will arrive at new conclusions. This is what we call 'relative unseen' (ghayb idafi), i.e. it was unseen at a certain time but comes to be seen at later time. Hence, this knowledge is always attributed to human beings, as stated in the Quran that none can comprehend anything out of the knowledge of Allah the Exalted except what He pleases.

The all-encompassing knowledge belongs to Allah the Exalted and He Glorified is He is the One Who allows some of His creation to encompass some of His Knowledge. None of the secrets in this universe are to be unearthed except by His permission. Allah Glorified is He guides scientists to scrutinise the premises that lead them to the conclusions, but what about the knowledge that does not have any premises? This is from the absolute unseen of which Allah Glorified is He informs no one but those whom He chooses from among His Prophets.

I underline this fact so that none of us mistakenly think that being informed of the whereabouts of your lost property is not related to the knowledge of the unseen. It may be unseen for the owner of the lost item, but it is not for the thief who steals neither it nor the one who conceals it. It is not also unseen for the jinn who accompany the thief. Thus, it is not an absolute unseen as it is known to some others. Therefore, the reserves of Allah Glorified is He are filled with all kinds of treasures that enable man to sustain his life on earth, providing him with necessities or luxuries.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...nor that I know the unseen, nor do I tell you that I am an angel'... (al-An'am: 50). Thus, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as can be inferred from the verse, negates for himself three things: two of which negate his divinity, namely, ownership of the universe's reserves and knowledge of the unseen. The third thing is that he is not an angel. Does this mean that an angel is higher than a prophet? No, but they said that he walks in markets and earns a living by working. An angel does not do this. However, a Messenger is certainly of a higher rank than an angel because he guides the human beings and the jinn and follows what has been revealed to him from the absolute King, Allah Glorified is He.

'I do not follow aught save that which is revealed to me' (al-An'am: 50). Being perfectly honest in conveying what was revealed to him from Allah the Exalted, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him declares his reality as being merely a human. A human being is subject to changing circumstances. He knows one thing and is ignorant of something else. It is for the benefit of people that the Messengers follow and do not innovate, in that they convey to them the commandments of the Creator in their actual wordings and not the ideas of human beings that may change or be replaced. Had they innovated, they would have done so due to their human nature. Innovation in this regard would be a disadvantage. Exact following of the revelation in this respect is an elevation for human beings because Messengers follow what Allah the Exalted Who chose them to be Messengers, has revealed to them. Therefore the illiteracy of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is an honour for him and for us. As regards a normal person, illiteracy is a shortcoming, but it is perfection Only for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him!

The word ummi (unlettered) –as we know– means that he is as uneducated as he was born. He has not received an education nor has he learnt from others. But his knowledge and education is entirely divine, being inspired by Allah Glorified is He. With him declaring himself unlettered, it means that everything in his mind is not taken from the creation of Allah Almighty. Rather, everything occurring to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was inspired by revelation.

That being the case, then his illiteracy is deemed as an honour for us, whilst illiteracy amongst us –i.e. Muslims– is considered an aspect of backwardness and we must all strive to put an end to it. Allah the Exalted orders His Prophet Muhammad to tell his people: '…I do not follow aught save that which is revealed to me…' (al-An'am: 50). Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him does not speak of his own desires but rather, he conveys the revelation that has come to him.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse stating: 'Say, 'Is the blind equivalent to the seeing? Then will you not give thought?' (al-An'am: 50)

When Allah Glorified is He presents an issue as an example, it must be agreed upon even by those who disbelieve in Him. They know that the blind and seeing cannot be deemed equal, as is true of shade and heat or darkness and light. The natural disposition of man does not accept any disagreement in these matters. Blindness – as we know – is the lack of sight affecting someone who would normally see. So someone could not say about a rock: ‘This rock is blind’ because it is not normal for rocks to see. Therefore, the term ‘blindness’ can only be applied to the one who is normally supposed to see. What does the loss of sight do in regard to a tangible matter? The lack of sight definitely harms man because he is a being that moves. He might fall into a hole or collide with something causing harm to himself. We all agree and know that the blind person has trouble getting around and suffers many hardships. What protects him from this is either his sight or seeking help from a sighted person.

At old times, scholars thought that sight was the result of rays of light being emitted from the eyes and directed towards the visible object, but this theory was refuted by an Islamic scholar called Ibn Al-Haytham, who taught the scholars that the rays of light are, in fact, emitted from the visible object and directed towards the eye of the beholder, based on the proof that man cannot see the object in the dark. Blindness prevents the eye from receiving the rays of light and no one disagrees that blindness is destructive, harmful, and troublesome, whereas sight provides ease and comfort. It is as if Allah Glorified is He says to the creation: Beware of assuming that your entire life depends on your tangible surroundings. No, there are some values that if man does not know, he stumbles, strays and is troubled.

Accordingly, Allah Almighty’s Guidance has come to guide the human soul to values, such as light guides man towards objects. The same as sight helps man to avoid obstacles, Allah’s Guidance helps man to avoid obstacles with regard to immaterial matters. Man lives by his values, considering that a blind person may find a sighted person to lead him, but he may not be led to guidance if it is provided to him. Therefore man can do without sight, but he cannot do without guidance. Without guidance, one will go astray. When one’s values are spoiled, this would be more severe and serious than misguidance in sensory matters.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘...Say, ‘Is the blind equivalent to the seeing? Then will you not give thought?’ (al-An‘am: 50)

There is thinking (tafakkur), remembering (tadhakkur) and reflecting (tadabbur). Thinking is to employ the intellect in something obvious from the outset, intending to infer something from it. When someone says to someone else: 'Think about this matter', it means to turn over in your mind everything related to this matter. It is as though the one urging thinking about the matter is confident that the one turning it over will arrive at the same opinion he has in mind. As for remembering, this is when someone arrives at a conclusion after reasoning, and then forgets it. Afterwards, someone draws his attention to this conclusion that he reasoned out. Hence, thought brings an initial, fresh conclusion, while remembering calls to mind a conclusion that was known to someone but he forgot about it. As for reflecting, it is not sufficient for man to only look at the outer aspects of matters, but he should look deeper into it. Everything has a surface which may conceal what is beneath it. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He demands that man should look into the depths of things and what is on the other side; that is, he reflects on the matter from every aspect and not to be satisfied with that which is merely on the surface. It is similar to someone buying something from a trustworthy merchant and the merchant honestly shows the buyer the specifications of the item and asks him to test the item as per its specifications. However, a cheating merchant will attempt to tamper with the specifications in order to deceive the buyer.

When Allah Glorified is He asks us to think, remember, and reflect, it is only to revive our rational abilities with which we come to the conclusion that Allah the Exalted desires. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَأَنذِرْ بِهِ ٱلَّذِينَ يَخَافُونَ أَن يُحْشَرُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِمْ ۙ لَيْسَ
لَهُم مِّن دُونِهِۦ وَلِىٌّ وَلَا شَفِيعٌ لَّعَلَّهُمْ يَتَّقُونَ ﴿٥١﴾

Use the Quran to warn those who fear being gathered before their Lord – they will have no one but Him to protect them and no one to intercede – so that they may beware [51] (The Quran, al-An'am: 51)

This means to warn with the revelation – that you follow – those who fear the Day when they will be brought before Allah Almighty. To Warn – as we know – means to inform people of something dreadful before it happens so as to prevent it from happening, so who are those people whom Allah Glorified is He orders Prophet Muhammad peace be upon him to warn with the revelation? In the early days of Islam, the interest of some believers in devotional faith was weak, but since their hearts had faith and they feared the day when they will be brought before Allah Almighty, then the revelation signifies a warning for them to take devotional faith seriously. Likewise, the people of the Book can also be warned by the revelation because they believe that they will meet Allah Almighty on the Last Day. Warning can also be for someone who believes in Resurrection but doubts the Prophets and their intercession. Alarming and warning may cause this category of people to re-examine the issue of faith and accept the true Message brought forth by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

Warning by way of the revelation may be undertaken in one of the aforementioned ways, but does a believer fear being gathered unto Allah the Exalted? No, a believer only fears being gathered without a protector or helper and in reality, there is no one who can offer help or protection from Allah Almighty. No intercessor can rescue from Allah’s punishment unless He permits it, as stated in the Quran that no one can intercede with Him except by His permission ‘Who is it that can intercede with Him except by His permission?’ (al-Baqara: 255) This is what is held by the believers in Allah Glorified is He. To define this, Allah Glorified is He states that: ‘There is no guardian for them, nor any intercessor besides Him- that they may guard (against evil)'. (al-An‘am: 51) Indeed they are the believers who have believed in Allah the Exalted and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but they fell short in some of the requirements and commandments as provided in the Quranic statement ‘Whoever believes and acts aright'. (al-An‘am: 48)

When warning comes to these believers, they do righteous deeds out of fear that they will be brought before Allah Almighty without a protector or intercessor. Believers, therefore, hope to be under the Protection and Mercy of Allah the Exalted on the Day of Gathering. Such are those about whom Allah Glorified is He tells that have confessed their faults and mingled a good deed and an evil one; maybe Allah will turn to them mercifully; surely Allah is Forgiving, Merciful. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And [there are] others who have acknowledged their sins. They had mixed a righteous deed with another that was bad. Perhaps Allah will turn to them in forgiveness. Indeed, Allah is Forgiving and Merciful.' (at-Tawba: 102)

Even though the noble verse deals with and includes, in addition to the believers, the people of the Book and also those who believe in the Resurrection but do not follow Prophets. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَا تَطْرُدِ ٱلَّذِينَ يَدْعُونَ رَبَّهُم بِٱلْغَدَوٰةِ وَٱلْعَشِيِّ يُرِيدُونَ وَجْهَهُۥ ۖ مَا
عَلَيْكَ مِنْ حِسَابِهِم مِّن شَيْءٍ وَمَا مِنْ حِسَابِكَ عَلَيْهِم مِّن شَيْءٍ
فَتَطْرُدَهُمْ فَتَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٥٢﴾

Do not drive away those who call upon their Lord morning and evening, seeking nothing but His Face.
You are in no way accountable for them, nor they for you; if you drove the believers away, you would become one of the evildoers [52] (The Quran, al-An'am: 52)

We know that Allah Glorified is He created man and settled him in the earth and made his existence contingent in this universe in which He has placed all the essentials that are necessary for man's life and welfare.

Allah Glorified is He orders that there should be equality in worship between people such that there would be no one elevated over someone weak, no transgressor over someone oppressed. In this way, life's activity takes the right course in such a way as grants every individual certain gifts in accordance with what they are prepared for. If the balance of human equality were ever to be disturbed, Allah Glorified is He would refer them to undisputed proof; that is you, O humankind, were equal when you were all created originally from dust and you are equal because you return to dust. Then you are all equal when you are called to account on the Day of Resurrection, so why should you differ in the other matters? Equality must rather be established. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was keen to guide people and he burdened himself with more than what Allah the Exalted commanded him. Thus Allah Almighty reproved him for being hard on himself out of his keenness for his people to have faith. Some people think that Allah Glorified is He rebuked His Prophet peace and blessings be upon him because of a shortcoming, and we respond to these people saying that they should understand this kind of reproof in its true sense because there is a difference between reproving for the benefit of the one being rebuked in order to censure them because they contravened and disobeyed. For instance, if you were to find your son playing on a working day not going to school and neglecting his lessons, you would rebuke and censure him for disregarding what is expected of him. However, if you found your son putting all his energy and spending all his free time revising, you would ask him not to burden himself with all this trouble and would tell him to go and take a break. In this situation you are censuring him for his own benefit, so it is as if the censuring and reproving is for and not against him. Therefore the issue they keep raising regarding reproving Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has been solved as we clarify that Allah Glorified is He reproves His Messenger for his credit and not against him. Finding it easy and simple to spread His message amongst the weak, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him exerted himself and expended effort in the hope that the arrogant and proud would taste the sweetness of faith. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He states: 'He frowned and turned (his) back because there came to him the blind man. And what would make you know that he would purify himself, or become reminded so that the reminder should profit him? As for him who considers himself free from need (of you), to him do you address yourself and no blame is on you if he would not purify himself' ('Abasa: 1-7).

Therefore, reproving here is for the benefit of whom? It is reproving for the benefit of Allah's Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and when Allah Glorified is He says to His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him: 'O Prophet! Why do you forbid (yourself) that which Allah has made lawful for you? you seek to please your wives; and Allah is Forgiving, Merciful.' (al-Mumtahana: 1) This verse points to a matter that annoyed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then he abstained from some of that which the human soul desires and which Allah the Exalted has made permissible. Reproving here is also for the benefit of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him. Due to his deep concern for all his people to be guided, it was obligatory for him to treat the tyrants with gentleness in order to soften their hearts, but the tyrants did not want to be made equal with the weak. An assembly from the Quraysh passed and found Khabbab ibn Al-Aratt, Suhayb, Bilal, ʿAmmar and Salman al-Farisi, Allah be pleased with them all, with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They were all from amongst the weak. They said: 'O Muhammad, are you pleased with those from amongst your people? Is it these whom Allah has favoured among us? Are we to follow these people? Send them away, for perhaps if you do, we will follow you.' It is as if they were saying to him: 'Surely, you have satisfied yourself with these weak people and left us while we are the powerful. We will not sit with you unless you tell these weak people to get away from you.' To that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by the disposition of faith, said: 'I am not one to repel believers.' The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him knows that there were people resembling them who said similar things to their prophets. The people of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him said to him what is narrated in the Noble Quran that they did not see him but as a man like themselves, and that they do not see him followed except by those who were the lowest of them and at first suggestion. And they did not see in the believers over them any merit; rather, they thought they were liars.

'So the eminent among those who disbelieved from his people said, "We do not see you but as a man like ourselves, and we do not see you followed except by those who are the lowest of us [and] at first suggestion. And we do not see in you over us any merit; rather, we think you are liars.' (Hud: 27) Some of the disbelievers tried to invite The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to meet them halfway by saying: 'When we come then drive them away and when we leave then bring them back.' In his opinion the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him found a medium solution that could bring the differing points of view closer together. He peace and blessings be upon him consulted with ʿUmar ibn Al-Khattab, Allah be pleased with him, who said: 'If you do it then we can see what they want.' The wealthy disbelievers of Quraysh asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to record this in a document. The inkwells and pens were brought, but before writing took place the following verse had been revealed: 'And do not drive away those who call upon their Lord in the morning and the evening, they desire only His favor; neither are you answerable for any reckoning of theirs, nor are they answerable for any reckoning of yours, so that you should drive them away and thus be of the unjust.' (al-An'am: 52)

Consequently, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him threw down the leaf brought to contain some words giving preference to the chiefs of the Quraysh as regards sitting with him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him only inclined towards writing this document because he desired that they would accept Islam so that their people would follow Islam as well, out of his mercy and affection towards them. He peace and blessings be upon him saw that this would not take anything away from his Companions nor would it make them less esteemed, so he inclined towards it. Whereupon, Allah the Exalted sent down this verse to forbid him from inclining towards sending his weak companions away, but it does not mean that he peace and blessings be upon him had repulsed them and sent them away. Then, after that, he summoned the weak and they came to him.

Prior to this incident, he peace and blessings be upon him would sit with the weak and would leave the gathering if he peace and blessings be upon him wished, but, Allah Almighty wanted to honour those weak people after forbidding him from repulsing them and for what they underwent in His cause. For this reason, Allah Glorified is He sent down another command ordering Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to leave his gathering with the weak until they themselves leave. This is stated in the Quranic verse as Allah Glorified is He orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to withhold himself with those who call on their Lord morning and evening desiring His goodwill, and not to let his eyes pass from them, desiring the beauties of this world's life; and not to follow him whose heart Allah Almighty has made unmindful to His remembrance, and he follows his low desires and his case is one in which due bounds are exceeded. When this verse was sent down, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Praise be to Allah who has made among my nation he with whom I am ordered to be patient.'(1)

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Haythami in (Majma' Az-Zawa'id) and At-Tabarani. Al-Haythami declared its chain of narrators to be authentic

With this noble statement Allah Glorified is He wanted to honour the weak and oppressed. Salman Al-Farisi and Khubbab ibn Al-Arratt Allah be pleased with both of them said: 'This verse was sent down regarding us, because he peace and blessings be upon him would sit with us and come so close to us that his knees would be touching our knees. He would stand up and leave when he wanted to and then this verse was sent down. Therefore, he would not stand up and leave us until we stood up. We knew this and we hastened him to stand'. This means that they were the ones who stood up first from the gathering of The Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Do not drive away 'those who call upon their Lord Morning and evening, seeking nothing But His Face' (al-An'am: 52).

This is a divine order to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and to all Muslims as well. This the highest honour for those who constantly remember Allah the Exalted from amongst the weak because they are the people who love faith and they were the first to believe in Islam.

It is narrated that some of the Arab noble people embraced Islam and went to meet one of the Muslim caliphs. They sought permission to enter. The caliph did not grant them permission until he had granted it to the weak of the Muslims. This angered them and they said: 'How comes that he gives permission to these people before us although we have become Muslims?' One of them, who knew and understood the religion, said: 'Are you all angered because he is granting permission to these people before you? They were called to believe in Islam and they responded, whereas you were called, but you hesitated to accept Islam. So what will be your response when they will be called to enter paradise before you?'

These weak people obey Allah the Exalted seeking wajh Allah (lit. Allah's Face) The Arabic expression wajh Allah indicates that their hearts are imbued with faith and that, for the sake of preserving their faith, they fled the oppression and tyranny of the disbelievers who wanted to force them to return to disbelief and misguidance again. They love faith and the Pleasure of Allah the Exalted and were pleased that Allah Almighty would reserve for them all their rewards to the hereafter. When we hear the verse: 'seeking His Face…'

(al-An'am: 52), we know that this is one of the attributes of Allah Glorified is He. Accordingly, we shall believe that the Attributes of Allah Almighty have no similar as there is nothing like unto Him Glorified is He.

The term (wajh) is used to refer to the essence because the face is the distinguishing characteristic of essence. If you were to meet a group of people and they would cover their faces with their clothes, you would not be able to distinguish between them. The word wajh may also refer to noble people. When one says, 'So and so met wujuh al-Qawm,' this means that he met the nobles among his people. Allah Glorified is He states that everything shall perish except for Him Glorified is He. When Allah says: 'You are in no way accountable for them' (al-An'am: 52), this communicates a sense of reverence for the dignity of the weak as someone might say, 'These weak people sought refuge in the Islam so that they could flee from the oppression and not out of love for the Islam. Therefore Allah Glorified is He makes it clear here that this, i.e. to judge peoples' intentions, is not the mission of anyone. People's actions shall be considered, whereas their intentions shall be judged by Allah Almighty alone. Allah Glorified is He says: 'You are in no way accountable for them, nor they for you; if you drove the believers away, you would become one of the evildoers.' (al-An'am: 52) It is as if Allah Glorified is He is saying to His Messenger that if you were accountable for them in any way, it would have been permissible for you to drive them away, but you, Messenger of Allah, know that every individual is rewarded for his actions. If they are good then the reward is good and if they are evil, then the reward is evil. Allah the Exalted revealed to His Prophet Muhammad that no one shall bear the recompense of the bad actions committed by another: 'Say, "Is it other than Allah I should desire as a lord while He is the Lord of all things? And every soul earns not [blame] except against itself, and no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another. Then to your Lord is your return and He will inform you concerning that over which you used to differ.' (al-An'am: 164) Thus, every individual has his record of actions, according to which one shall be rewarded or punished. Afterwards, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ فَتَنَّا بَعْضَهُم بِبَعْضٍ لِّيَقُولُوٓاْ أَهَٰٓؤُلَآءِ مَنَّ ٱللَّهُ
عَلَيْهِم مِّنۢ بَيْنِنَآۗ أَلَيْسَ ٱللَّهُ بِأَعْلَمَ بِٱلشَّٰكِرِينَ ﴿٥٣﴾

We have made some of them a test for others, to make the disbelievers say, ‘Is it these men that God has favoured among us?’ Does God not know best who are the grateful ones? [53]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 53)

Here Allah Almighty refers to two groups of people; the first group felt haughty to sit with the second group of weak people who were sitting with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Here, Allah the Exalted puts both groups to the test (fitnah). Some people think that fitnah is a blameworthy matter. In fact, it is not. It is not intrinsically blameworthy. Rather, it may be blameworthy because of its consequences. Fitnah, or test is designed to reveal a believers’ deep faith… Allah the Exalted points out that tests are meant to distinguish the true believers from the liars: ‘But we have certainly tried those before them and Allah will surely make evident those who are truthful and He will surely make evident the liars.’ (al-’Ankabut: 2-3)

Allah Glorified is He tests the truthfulness of one’s faith, with either afflictions or blessings. Allah Almighty also put the previous nations to the test of blessings and afflictions. He Glorified is He had known the results of these tests even before their occurrences. Through these tests, the true believers are distinguished from the hypocrites. Whoever shows patience throughout trials and tribulations then he proves that he is a true believer. On the contrary, he who does not show patience then proves to Allah Almighty that his belief is not true; when he is granted goodness he is assuaged and pleased, and if he is afflicted with evil and tribulation, he turns away from worship. Thus, he loses both in this world and in the Hereafter.

Accordingly, tribulation is only a test for people. There are many differences in our universe. These differences are intrinsic features of life. It is obligatory to believe in the decree of Allah Glorified is He in His creation as He created people different; one is tall, another is short; one is white, another is black; one can see, another is blind; one is rich, another is poor; one is healthy, another is ill – each one is a test for the other.

A sick person, for example, is a test for the healthy one, and a healthy person is a test for the sick. A sick person shall accept the decree of Allah the Exalted and not be envious of the healthy person. Rather, he may observe whether the healthy person will disparage him or offer him help. Likewise, the poor person is a tribulation for the rich person. He looks towards the rich person to know if he will despise him, impede him, or take advantage of him. This rich person is a tribulation for the poor person. The rich person sees whether the poor person is looking at him with envy or he is pleased with what Allah the Exalted has given to someone else. This is how tribulations are.

Indeed amongst people are those who have been given some gifts and there are those who have been stripped of this gift. Both giving and stripping is a test for us so that we should believe that the Creator of this universe has distributed gifts amongst the creation and He did not allow for one person to have everything. This is intended so that every person would be in need of the gifts of someone else and that co-operation and social cohesion would be established amongst people.

When Allah the Exalted creates someone with some sort of disability, He Glorified is He compensates him with some other gift. Accordingly, one finds that all human beings are a test for each other. Likewise, the existence of believers is a test for the disbelievers. Disbelievers were a test for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and vice versa. The disbelievers of Quraysh used to say that they wished that the Quran would have been sent down on a great man of the two cities of Mecca and Ta'if; 'and they said, "Why was this Quran not sent down upon a great man from [one of] the two cities?' (az-Zukhruf: 31) Hence, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him knew that these people were begrudging him because the Glorious Quran was being sent down to him. This statement was a trial for The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him but he was patient with this and proceeded until he completed his mission and conveyed the message, paying no attention to what they were saying. He peace and blessings be upon him considered their sayings evidence for the strength of the miracle that proved the truthfulness of his message.

The weak people were a trial for those haughty people who asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to drive away the weak, and so was the weak for them. Had those haughty people been true believers, they would not have been begrudging the weak believing in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessing be upon him before them.

Therefore, we are all trials for one another. When anyone of us sees someone with a gift that he himself has not been granted, then he must know that it is a trial for him. He must accept and be pleased that someone is granted a gift. Allah Almighty is not worshipped with anything better than respecting His decree regarding how people are granted different blessings. This is why Allah Glorified is He puts all of us into tests. Accordingly, if one is true believer in Allah the Exalted then one shall fully accepts the blessings bestowed upon other people so that Allah the Exalted makes other people fully accept the blessings He bestows upon you.

In the verse under discussion, the test was that a group of people demanded that the weak be driven away saying, 'Is it these men that Allah has favoured among us?' It is as if they were belittling the social status of the weak believers. Allah Almighty then replies to their question: 'Does Allah not know best who the grateful ones are?' (al-Ana'am: 53) It is Allah the Almighty Who has eternal knowledge about human beings and no one shall suggest to Him what He decides. Those disbelievers used to object Allah's decrees previously asked why the Quran was not revealed to a great man of the two cities. But Allah Almighty replied to their question stating that He Glorified is He Alone Who decides who shall be granted His blessings and grace.

In this way, we know that Allah Glorified is He did not entrust the message to the polytheists or any other one, nor did He entrust them to distribute provisions and manage the peoples' affairs. Rather, it is He Glorified is He Alone Who is the One Who distributes provisions and blessings amongst human beings so that every individual has to rely on others to do things that he is incapable of. Others then shall rely on him also for things that they are incapable of. Prophethood is a divine choice that is great and more exalted than all other worldly affairs. The context thus shows that some of the influential Arabs asked Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to drive away some weak people, so Allah the Exalted wanted to assuage the weak with some worldly reward even though He reserved reward for the rest of the believers to the Hereafter. This is why Allah Glorified is He afterwards says:

وَإِذَا جَآءَكَ ٱلَّذِينَ يُؤْمِنُونَ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا فَقُلْ سَلَٰمٌ عَلَيْكُمْۖ كَتَبَ رَبُّكُمْ عَلَىٰ نَفْسِهِ ٱلرَّحْمَةَۖ
أَنَّهُۥ مَنْ عَمِلَ مِنكُمْ سُوٓءًۢا بِجَهَٰلَةٍ ثُمَّ تَابَ مِنۢ بَعْدِهِۦ وَأَصْلَحَ فَأَنَّهُۥ غَفُورٌ رَّحِيمٌ ﴿٥٤﴾

When those who believe in Our revelations come to you [Prophet], say, 'Peace be upon you. Your Lord has taken it on Himself to be merciful: if any of you has foolishly done a bad deed, and afterwards repented and mended his ways, God is most forgiving and most merciful'[54] (The Quran, al-An'am: 54)

The demand to drive away these weak people signified an attack against their honour and status because they were not wealthy or eminent amongst the people. But Allah Glorified is He assuaged them with peace from Him in this worldly life and He commanded His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to communicate this message of peace to them. Peace here signifies a state where one becomes free of both psychological and physical weaknesses. It is as if Allah Glorified is He wanted to compensate them with peace coming from Him. The word rahma (mercy) is repeated several times in the Glorious Quran. For example, Allah the Exalted states that He reveals in the Quran what gives people health and mercy.

What is the difference then between mercy (rahma) and giving health (shifa')? Mercy is that Allah Almighty does not test man with an illness. Indeed it is prevention. As for giving health, it is that Allah Glorified is He removes an illness that has afflicted man. This is the convalescence after the treatment.

Therefore, this verse clearly proves that in the Quran there is both mercy and giving health, i.e. prevention and treatment. The one who adheres to the way of the Quran will never be afflicted with social and psychological diseases, whereas the one who deviates from the guidance of the Quran will be afflicted with social and psychological diseases. If one returns to the guidance of the Quran then he will be cured of whatever disease he suffers from. When Allah Glorified is He commands His Messenger to say to these people who had been incensed by the demand for them to be repulsed, despite their faith in the message of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'Peace be upon you. Your Lord has taken it on Himself to be merciful' (al-An'am: 54), it means that what happened to them in this case was the last of their tests. In return for this provocation, they had been granted everlasting peace. As long as Allah the Exalted has taken it upon Himself to be merciful, then He will protect them from what may harm others.

When you hear Allah's statement: 'Your Lord has taken it on Himself to be merciful' (al-An'am: 54), you shall be sure that no one obliges Allah Almighty to do anything because He is the Creator of the Universe. His Will is absolute over the universe, so no one can prescribe anything for him and obliges him to do it. However, Allah Glorified is He is the One Who obliges mercy upon himself. When we consider the word nafsih (upon himself), we should understand it in the light of the fact that 'there is nothing like unto Him'. This is because the self (nafs) with regards to human beings signifies that there is body, blood, movement, and life. Nevertheless, what does it mean when it is used in reference to Allah the Exalted? In such context it refers to the Divine Being. If you do not believe that it communicates this sense, then you will be trapped into many violations. May Allah Almighty protect us, and you from their evils.

I underline this meaning so that it settles in the mind of every believer. Indeed the (nafs) (self) in relation to living beings is different when attributed to Allah Almighty. We must consider anything that is attributed to Allah the Exalted in light of the Quranic verse 'there is nothing like unto Him' (ash-shura: 11) because the (nafs) with regards to living beings necessitates the existence of spirit mixed with material. The material is comprised of parts. If you do not consider the meaning of Allah's (nafs) in light of the Quranic statement that 'there is nothing like unto Him' (ash-shura: 11), then you –we seek refuge in Allah Almighty from this – negate the Oneness of Allah the Exalted.

We know that Allah Glorified is He has two descriptions which are derived from the same Arabic root: (Wahid) and (Ahad); those who have not deep understanding think that (wahid) and (ahad) have the same meaning. We say 'no'; rather, each word has its special sense. When we say: 'Indeed Allah Almighty is (Wahid,)' it means that there is no second individual of His kind and He does not have an equal, a counterpart, or anything that is similar to Him. When we say: 'Indeed Allah Almighty is (Ahad),' it means that He is not comprised of constituent parts whose existence together is necessary for the making the whole. This is because something can be (Wahid) but not (Ahad). For this reason we clearly stress the difference between (Wahid) and (Ahad); so that every believer knows it well. Allah Glorified is He is One (Wahid) with no similar or partner. He Glorified is He is also (ahad) which means that He does not have constituent parts that require one another. We clarified before that there is something called (kulli) totality and something else called (kulli) total. The totality is made up of parts and each of its parts does not have an independent reality. There is not a reality for the totality unless the parts are joined to one another.

An example of this would be a chair which is made of wood, nails and glue. But when they exist separately, we cannot call them a chair. However the thing that is manufactured from all of these things in a fixed shape is indeed a chair. Therefore the totality has parts that come together in order to form this total thing. The word kulli refers to a genre or genus who include many members. Accordingly, it may refer to human being.

Based on this Allah Glorified is He is not a kull (totality), i.e. He does not have parts because He is (ahad) and He is not a kulli (total) because there is nothing like unto Him. Therefore, we all shall understand that everything that is attributed to Allah Almighty must be understood in the context of that there is nothing like unto Him.

We should not understand the word (nafs) in relation to Allah Glorified is He as we understand it in relation to human beings because for Allah the Exalted it has a very different meaning unlike that of human beings. This is because Allah Almighty is independent and is not in need of anyone else. Allah Glorified is He is not comprised of parts, for He has all perfection and majesty in His oneness and uniqueness as well as in all of His Attributes and Actions.

One might ask about the significance of mercy in this context? The answer comes in the verse: ‘If any of you has foolishly done a bad deed, and afterwards repented and mended his ways, Allah is most forgiving and most merciful’. (al-An‘am: 54) When Allah Almighty revealed His Legislation, it included texts which prescribes punishments for adulterers, thieves and others who violate the rulings of the sharia. A punishment can only come after something is stated to be prohibited. For example, no one should be punished for committing bribery, slander or any violation to legislation unless it is clearly stated that this very act is a crime. Nothing can be considered a crime unless with clear text. Allah Glorified is He Who created humankind knows that some of them may incline to disobedience as their very souls incite them to evil. Examples of these punishments include the punishment of theft, adultery, and fornication.

What is the meaning of sending down texts like these? The meaning of sending down texts like these is that Allah Glorified is He knows that man may be weak with regards to adherence to some obligations and thus falls into disobedience. Therefore, there must be a punishment for violating His commands. In this way, Allah Glorified is He considers the very nature of man; as He gives him the right to choice, He lays down reward and punishment. Just as Allah Almighty lays down texts regarding crimes and their punishment, He Glorified is He also opens for people the door to repentance so that the one who disobeys Him once does not give up all hope. Doing so, Allah the Exalted protects society from the evil of those disobedient people and shows them mercy as long as they show repentance for their disobedience. Furthermore, Allah Almighty may show mercy to some of His creation by protect ting them from falling into disobedience. Allah Glorified is He states clearly in the Quran that He opens avenues for people to show repentance for their disobedience.

Allah the Exalted guides people to show repentance and pardons them. He shows great mercy toward the repentant believers. One of the aspects of His Mercy is that He Glorified is He accepts the repentance showed by those who commit bad deeds out of jahala, i.e. unintentional purpose.

A bad deed is something that Allah Almighty has prohibited. But is there anyone who does a bad deed out of (jahala)? Some of us think the word jahala stated means lack of knowledge. This is not the intended meaning here. The one who lacks knowledge is someone who is not preoccupied with something and thus has no knowledge about it. In Arabic, jahl and jahala have different meanings. Jahl means that someone believes in something of no real essence such as the case when someone believes in a false doctrine. In order to eliminate (jahl) in this case, we should convince him of the true doctrine in order that he should reject the false one.

What bring about hardship for mankind are ignorant people because the ignorant person firmly believes in something which has no ground at all. When Muslim scholars contemplated this verse: 'so that if any of you does a bad deed out of jahala' (al-An'am: 54), they said: 'jahala is (foolishness) and thoughtlessness when the consequences of an action are not taken into consideration and man does not appreciate the reward he misses out on and the punishment that will overtake him'. Even a believer may commit a bad deed because he does not consider the reward and punishment. In this case, one commits whatever fulfils his immediate desires without carefully examining the consequences to come in the future. When one calls to mind the reward he will get or the punishment he will suffer, he will not commit bad deeds.

Moreover, jahala means that one commits a bad deed without contriving it. For example, a man may plan to travel to somewhere to acquire knowledge. Having settled there, a gorgeous woman may come to him and incite him to make love with her and he may fail to resist her incitement and, thus, commits the major sin. Falling in this sin is considered to be out of jahala because he did not intend to commit this bad deed and he would never boast about it.

There is a difference between this man and another man who looks up all the addresses for brothels in his new neighbourhood before travelling there. He is actually planning to do evil and commit indecency. He is resolved to commit a bad deed, he boasts about it and does not regret doing it. Allah Almighty does not forgive this one if he insists on doing evil and does not show repentance until he sees death. In this case, repentance has no value at all as Allah the Exalted indicates in the Quran.

This is because Allah Glorified is He only accepts the repentance of those who commit sin in a state of idiocy and thoughtlessness, who then hasten to show repentance for their sins. On the contrary, as for those who do not regret for doing until they see death, Allah Almighty does not accept their repentance and puts them into severe torment. This verse clearly states that Allah Almighty does not accept the repentance of those who do not turn in repentance immediately after committing sins, but who wait until they are in the agonies of death, nor does He accept the repentance of the disbelievers who die without embracing Islam.

Allah Glorified is He clearly states: 'If any of you has foolishly done a bad deed, and afterwards repented and mended his ways, Allah is most forgiving and most merciful.' (al-An'am: 54) This verse clearly indicates that repentance must be followed by reform and righteousness. This is because good deeds remove bad deeds. Allah Glorified is He is the Most-Forgiving and does not punish one for a sin for which one repents from. He is a dispenser of Mercy because He rewards the one who frequently repents from committing bad deeds. Furthermore, out of His great Mercy, Allah the Exalted replaces bad deeds with good deeds. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ نُفَصِّلُ ٱلْءَايَٰتِ وَلِتَسْتَبِينَ سَبِيلُ ٱلْمُجْرِمِينَ ﴿٥٥﴾

In this way We explain the revelations, so that the way for sinners may be made clear [55]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 55)

When we hear the verse: ‘In this way we explain the revelations...’ (al-An‘am: 55) we then know that the verse is going to give detailed elaboration of legal rulings which resembles a previous elaboration. In the previous Quranic verses, Allah the Exalted had already elaborated on several matters such as; the veracity of the Oneness of Allah, The Prophethood of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the divine destiny and decree. After all of that, Allah Almighty provides us with the evidence which affirm the realities that the people of falsehood deny. He elaborated for us on matters of creed and the activities of life and the acts of worship that we carry through the commandments of faith. Just as Allah the Exalted has elaborated for us the veracity of His Oneness and Prophethood of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and the divine destiny and decree. In some modes of recitations, the word (sabil) is stated in the nominative case, i.e. the path of those who are lost in sin manifests itself and makes itself distinct and clear. In some other modes of recitations, it is stated in the accusative case, i.e. that you, O Muhammad, will come to know the path that those lost in sin will travel along. The word (sabil) is stated in the Quran in the feminine case in some verse and the masculine case in other verses.

With this, Allah Almighty wants to teach us that the Quran is sent down in a clear Arabic tongue that has been received and accepted by the Arab tribes. Some of them have supremacy, like the tribe of the Quraysh because they inhabit Mecca where the Ka‘ba, to which all tribes make pilgrimage, is located.

Allah Glorified is He wants to put an end to this supremacy. This is why the Quran stated some words that the other tribes use. An example of this is the word (sabil), which is feminine in the language of the Hijaz. The Quran states it in the masculine form which is the language of the tribe of Tamim. Allah Glorified is He did not reveal all words of the Quran according to the style of the Quraysh so that the people of Quraysh should not think that the supremacy they had prior to Islam will continue even after the advent of Islam. The Quran was revealed for all people. That is, indeed Allah will judge every human being according to his certainty of faith. Those who stubbornly oppose will receive fair judgment, and so will those who persist in sin and prefer disobedience to submission. However, believers will receive an entirely different treatment; however, both believers and disbelievers fall within the framework of Divine Justice. Finally, everyone will receive justice corresponding to his position in terms of faith. Sinners will stand opposite of believers; if you identify the clear path of sinners, you will accordingly recognise the path of believers. When the Lord the Most High mentions the opposite of something and specifies a certain ruling for it, then the other ruling appropriate to its opposite is left to the understanding of readers and listeners. If the True Lord the Most High specifies a curse and rejection as the outcome of sin and crime, then mercy and honour are the distinct outcomes of believers. For example, if you say to a student who assiduously devotes himself to lessons and keeps revising during free time outside the school, 'You are on the path of success.' Whoever hears this statement knows that a student who does not assiduously devote himself to studies and revisions during free time will end up failing and suffering disappointment.

Thus, Allah Glorified is He leaves it to the perception of those hearing His speech to understand the implied meanings. He certainly knows the outcome of all. If the True Lord the Almighty says, ‘[We do it] so that the path of those who are lost in sin might be distinct [from that of the righteous].’ (al-An‘am: 55) It also indicates the path of honour and mercy awaiting believers. It is well known that the Quran presents the most rhetorical of styles which requires readers to know the semantics of every word and each letter to understand the implications of each situation and circumstance as in the example when Allah the Exalted says, ‘you have already had a sign in the two hosts that met in battle: one host fighting in Allah's cause and the other denying Him.’ (Al-‘Imran: 13)

The Lord the Most High leaves it to readers' intelligence to know that the disbelieving hosts fight in Satan's cause, whereas the believing hosts fight in Allah's cause. Allah the Most High leaves it for us to understand that faith belongs to those who fight in the cause of Allah, which is opposite to the other disbelieving hosts who fight in the cause of Satan since it mentions that the first host is fighting in the cause of Allah. The same holds true for the verse in question. Allah the Most High says, ‘[We do it] so that the path of those who are lost in sin might be distinct [from that of the righteous]’ (al-An‘am: 55). Accordingly, we distinguish the path of those who are not lost in sin from that of believers.

قُلۡ إِنِّي نُهِيتُ أَنۡ أَعۡبُدَ ٱلَّذِينَ تَدۡعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِۚ قُل لَّآ أَتَّبِعُ
أَهۡوَآءَكُمۡ ۙ قَدۡ ضَلَلۡتُ إِذٗا وَمَآ أَنَا۠ مِنَ ٱلۡمُهۡتَدِينَ ﴿٥٦﴾

Say, ‘I am forbidden to worship those you call on other than God.’ Say, ‘I will not follow your vain desires, for if I did, I would stray from the path and cease to be rightly guided’ [56] (The Quran, al-An’am: 56)

We know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not worship any idol before Islam, following the convictions of his natural disposition. Why does then come this prohibition of such aberrant worship? This prohibition comes to clarify the difference between a matter of custom and a standard of worship. We know that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him never worshipped idols due to the sound nature in which Allah the Almighty created him. In this verse, the habit is transferred to a commandment of worship: ‘Say [to the deniers of the truth], “Behold, I have been forbidden to worship those [beings] whom you invoke instead of Allah” (al-An‘am: 56)

They used to supplicate and worship idols instead of Allah the Exalted. If we discuss this issue as one of natural dispositions, we perceive the foolishness of this kind of thinking and acting. Why is this? Simply put, the idols are stones that the People of ignorance sculpted themselves and then worshipped. In other words, they created their gods, which goes against human common sense; a created being normally worships only the Creator. Furthermore, if anyone of them looked at the idols, he would question their essence of, or the truth of their, existence. They are inanimate objects and, as known, such objects are the lowest form of creation. A category is distinguished from another by something that either raises or lowers it. The peak of the creation is man, whom Allah the Most High has ennobled with sense, will, movement and thinking. After man come the animals that have senses and movement but no thought. Then come the plants that grow without movement or thought. When the natural inclination to grow is stripped from plants, they become inanimate objects. Therefore, the order of created matters from the highest to the lowest is as follows: man, animals, plants, and inanimate objects.

Each category has its particular characteristics, while each higher category has an additional superior characteristic. The lowest of all is inanimate objects that serve plants, while plants serve animals and man. Finally, animals serve man. Evidently, the highest of all is man, while the lowest is inanimate objects. How can the highest of all, man, worship the lowest of all, idols? Indeed, the judgment of human natural disposition clearly disregards the folly and illogicalness of this kind of thinking.

The nature of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him even before his mission, guided him to reject this false notion. Then, the mission turned the habit of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him into an established worship for him and for all his followers. ‘Say [to the deniers of the truth], "Behold, I have been forbidden to worship those [beings] whom you invoke instead of Allah." Say, "I do not follow your errant views" (al-An‘am: 56)

The fact that idolaters worshipped idols proved that they followed no guidance, but clearly indicated human submission to hawa (delusive desires and aberrant views). To put it simply, guidance is a path leading to a desired objective, whereas hawa refers to personal thoughts that seek to fulfil desires and delusions. This is why we find some who want to lead humanity astray have started movements that have nothing to do with religion at all, such as Qadianism, Bahaism and Babism to name a few. These people claim religiosity but waive ethics and morality. Several examples came to the forefront concerning issues recently examined by courts, such as one who claims religiosity, but he kisses women. He does not establish a relationship between people and religious principles; rather, he lets loose their natural inclinations to follow their desires. People with large fortunes and certain degrees of education have followed them and have made themselves believe in a great deception. They think that they have assumed religiosity, while in reality they have followed many desires that go against the principles of religion.

'Say, "I do not follow your errant views – or else I should have gone astray, and should not be among those who have found the right path." (al-An'am: 56) In other words, the verse tells the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to inform idolaters that he is not following their desires that lead to misguidance. To put is simply, whoever follows his desires will deviate from the truth and never join the rightly guided.

The True Lord the Most High then says:

قُلۡ إِنِّي عَلَىٰ بَيِّنَةٖ مِّن رَّبِّي وَكَذَّبۡتُم بِهِۦۚ مَا عِندِي مَا تَسۡتَعۡجِلُونَ
بِهِۦٓۚ إِنِ ٱلۡحُكۡمُ إِلَّا لِلَّهِۖ يَقُصُّ ٱلۡحَقَّۖ وَهُوَ خَيۡرُ ٱلۡفَٰصِلِينَ ٥٧

Say, 'I stand on clear proof from my Lord, though you deny it. What you seek to hasten is not within my power. Judgment is for God alone: He tells the truth, and He is the best of judges'[57] (The Quran, al-An'am: 57)

Allah Glorified is He informs His Messenger peace and blessings be upon him that his abandonment of idolatry, even when he perceived it by his very sound reasoning and pure nature, has now become an obligation. The fact that Allah the Most High has chosen him for His mission qualifies him to receive obvious guidance in the clear Revealed Laws of commandments and prohibitions! Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the best example for mankind to follow. He carried out all actions in accordance with the Divine Law, and believers followed his example. For a contemporary example, the Quran declares alcohol forbidden, so believers abide by the prohibition in submission to the Lord, the Most High. Nowadays, doctors from every country prohibit the consumption of alcohol since it harms human organs such as the liver and the brain, along with the nervous and digestive systems. We also have films that show how one glass of alcohol affects man's health. When a non-Muslim sees a film like this, he refrains from alcohol for his own benefit aside from religious devotion. However, as Muslims, we must adhere to this restraint as a matter of faith. Therefore, the Lord, the Most High says: ‘who could be better of speech than he who calls [his fellows] unto Allah and does what is just and right, saying, "Verily, I am of those who have surrendered themselves to Allah’ (Fussilat: 33).

In this verse, we realise that no one is better in speech than the one who obeys the Divine Laws and does good deeds that affirm his belief in monotheism: ‘Say: ‘Behold, I take my stand on a clear evidence from my Lord’ (al-An‘am: 57). Without clear evidence from Allah, we cannot identify the way. Only through clear Divine Evidence do we know that He is the Only God Who lays down laws: commands and prohibitions. In this verse, Allah the Exalted uses the word rabbi (my Lord) for us to know and realise that He is the Creator Who sustains us all. Since He is the Creator and Sustainer, we must obey His Laws. Allah has sent down commandments since He is the Only True Lord worthy of worship along with being the Creator and Sustainer, so we comply with His Laws. However, what about deniers? ‘…[So] it is to Him that you are giving the lie! Not in my power is that which [in your ignorance] you so hastily demand. Judgment rests with none but Allah. He shall declare the truth, since it is He who is the best judge between truth and falsehood’ (al-An‘am: 57).

The deniers of Allah take others besides Him as partners, along with not conforming to His Laws. Some went to extremes in disbelief and said, as Allah the Most High relates their claim: ‘O Allah! If this be indeed the truth from You, then rain down upon us stones from the skies or inflict [some other] grievous suffering on us!’ (al-Anfal: 32) When we discuss their claims, we find their vocative formula, ‘O, Allah!’ which is an acknowledgement of Allah to Whom they turn. Why do they turn away from His Law and Worship after acknowledgment? They do it out of arrogance and pride: ‘If this be indeed the truth from You, then rain down upon us stones from the skies, or inflict [some other] grievous suffering on us!’) (al-Anfal: 32) Was it not more appropriate for them to contemplate the truth and say, 'If this be the truth from you, guide us to it?'

It should be noted that they did not refer the truth to Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying, 'O, Allah! If this be the truth from Muhammad', rather, what was said was the following: 'O, Allah! If this be the truth from you.' They opposed Allah's command and anticipated punishment, being the worst example of arrogance and stubborn disbelief. In response, the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him said to them: '[so] it is to Him that you are giving the lie! Not in my power is that which [in your ignorance] you so hastily demand.' (al-An'am: 57) The word isti'jal (hastily demanded) refers to matters that are urgently and quickly requested. It is derived from Al-'ajalah (haste) which signifies actions done too quickly to attain a certain objective before its due time. As long as they seek for punishment to be hastened, then it will come to them, but it will come at the time that Allah the Exalted decides. Simply, everything in the universe only occurs when Allah so wills: 'Not in my power is that which [in your ignorance] you so hastily demand. Judgment rests with none but Allah. He shall declare the truth, since it is He who is the best judge between truth and falsehood' (al-An'am: 57).

Indeed, the judgment rests with none except Allah Who can, as He wills, either send down punishment against them in this world as certain people from the past suffered or delay it for a specific time or for the Hereafter, and none can change His Will. It is a sign of Divine Wisdom that He keeps those who oppose the way of faith in order to be indicative of the truthfulness of faith. We must understand that the evil taking place in the universe is not outside or against Allah's Will. The Lord the Most High created mankind, gave them freedom of choice and allowed them to make their own choices, whether they are good or evil. Therefore, nothing happens in the universe against Divine Will. He the Almighty is the Creator of human freedom. If He so willed, no one would do any evil in the universe. O believer, contemplating the Divine Philosophy of supporting truth and certainty reveals that the continuance of evil and disbelief supports the certitude of faith, but how? In response, presume that we live in a world devoid of evils, there would be no victims. If there are no victims, there would be no encouragement to do goodness. This is why you find that the spirit of faith becomes stronger when Islam is disturbed by enemies for it wakes up the human souls. If the harmful effects of evils do not exist, mankind would not mobilise for goodness.

Likewise, disbelief may be a way to certain faith when mankind see the evil tyranny and corruption of disbelievers in the earth. When this happens, people become armed with certainty and fortified with faith to win protection from many evils. In conclusion, the existence of evil and disbelief turns to be a means to certain faith: ‘Judgment rests with none but Allah. He shall declare the truth, since it is He Who is the best judge between truth and falsehood’ (al-An‘am: 57).

Yes, the judgment rests with none but Allah; He the Exalted judges all situations fairly and impartially, for He is All-Sufficient and free from needing anyone or anything. He created the universe, so He is independent of it. He has all Attributes of Perfection, and the creation adds nothing to Him. He only created the universe for the benefit of the creation. The Prophet peace and blessings be upon him informs us:

قُل لَّوْ أَنَّ عِندِى مَا تَسْتَعْجِلُونَ بِهِۦ لَقُضِىَ ٱلْأَمْرُ
بَيْنِى وَبَيْنَكُمْ ۗ وَٱللَّهُ أَعْلَمُ بِٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٥٨﴾

Say, ‘If what you seek to hasten were within my power, the matter would be settled between you and me, but God knows best who does wrong’ [58] (The Quran, al-An’am: 58)

This is a message from the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him to the whole creation that the events of the universe occur only in conjunction with the Divine Will of the Creator at fixed times that only He knows. O, Prophet, tell them that if it was within my power and capacity, then the punishment that you so hastily demand would come and destroy you swiftly out of my anger for my Lord and wrath upon you, as you deny Him. However, the matter is not for me to decide; it only belongs to Allah, the Wise Who knows what oppressors deserve. In another context, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘If We defer their suffering until a time-limit set [by Us], they are sure to say, "What is preventing it [from coming now]?" Oh, verily, on the Day when it befalls them there will be nothing to avert it from them; and they shall be overwhelmed by the very thing which they were wont to deride’ (Hud: 8). It is Divine Wisdom that decreed to delay punishment until a certain time as Divinely determined. In turn, this wisdom allowed disbelievers to daringly violate Divine Laws and grow worse and worse in their disbelief to the point of saying, 'What is withholding the punishment from us?' Indeed, they do it as a way of mockery and do not know that punishment will inevitably come when they will have no escape from it. Allah is truthful in both His promises and His threats. Punishment will come to them because of their mockery, and there will be no refuge or way out for them.

In another context, the Lord the Exalted says: 'They challenge you to hasten the punishment. Indeed, had not a term been set [for it by Allah], that punishment will most certainly come upon them of a sudden, and they will be taken unawares! They challenge you to hasten the punishment. Hell will encompass all those who deny the truth on the Day when punishment overwhelms them from above and from below their very feet, and they will be told, 'Now taste the punishment for what you used to do.' (al-'Ankabut: 53-55)

In this verse, we see disbelievers, challenging Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to bring them punishment, but it only occurs following Divine Will, and it will inevitably take them by surprise. It will inundate them from above and from below when they will hear the angel in charge of punishing them saying: 'Taste the punishment that you denied and it is the reward of your actions.'

The True Lord Glorified is He then says:

وَعِندَهُۥ مَفَاتِحُ ٱلْغَيْبِ لَا يَعْلَمُهَآ إِلَّا هُوَ ۚ وَيَعْلَمُ مَا فِى ٱلْبَرِّ وَٱلْبَحْرِ ۚ وَمَا تَسْقُطُ مِن
وَرَقَةٍ إِلَّا يَعْلَمُهَا وَلَا حَبَّةٍ فِى ظُلُمَٰتِ ٱلْأَرْضِ وَلَا رَطْبٍ وَلَا يَابِسٍ إِلَّا فِى كِتَٰبٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٥٩﴾

He has the keys to the unseen: no one knows them but Him. He knows all that is in the land and sea. No leaf falls without His knowledge, nor is there a single grain in the darkness of the earth, or anything, fresh or withered, that is not written in a clear Record [59] (The Quran, al-An'am: 59)

The mafatih is the plural of either miftah or maftah. The former refers to the instrument used for unlocking, i.e. the key. The latter refers to a safe to be unlocked. According to the meaning of the former, it means that Allah the Almighty has the keys to the unseen, whereas the latter implies that Allah has the safe of the unseen. Both meanings are timeless—unlimited by time, and the safe refers to a repository for storing valuables for their due times; each safe has a lock and key. The True Lord the Most High says about Qarun (Korah): 'Behold, Korah was one of the people of Musa (Moses), but he oppressed them. We had given him such treasures that even their keys would have weighed down a whole company of strong men. His people said to him, "Do not gloat, for Allah does not like people who gloat."' (al-Qasas: 76)

Evidently, only treasures are hoarded and kept in locked safes. Allah the Most High has the keys of the unseen. The unseen refers to everything that is hidden from you. It has two types: first, a matter hidden from you but known to someone else, and this is not absolutely, but relatively unseen. For example, when a pickpocket steals your wallet while you are on the street, and you do not know where your money is, it is the thief who knows exactly where your money is. This is a relative form of the unseen since it unknown to some and known to others. However, there is the special unseen that you and others do not know, for it has certain physical means, which if followed, man will win the knowledge of this unseen. Scientific discoveries that bring out their secrets when scientists take the means that Allah has placed in the universe are types of relative unseen. There is also the absolute unseen which no one knows but Allah, such as the exact time of the Last Day and other eschatological issues known only to Allah. This is why we say that the only Knower of the Unseen is Allah Who has the keys of the unseen. This unseen occurs beyond human senses and has no physical means to discover.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'He has the keys to the unseen. No one knows them but Him. He knows all that is in the land and sea. No leaf falls but He knows it, nor is there a single grain in the darkness of the earth, nor anything, living or dead, but it is written in a clear Record.' (al-An'am: 59) It is out of His kindness towards His creation that He explains to them matters falling outside their perception through other perceptible matters. There is the visible world that is heard, seen, tasted, or touched, and there is the world of the unseen. Therefore, Allah chooses some servants to receive gifts from His Graces and Bounties to explain these matters. For example, the righteous slave who was the travelling companion of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him said: ‘And I did not do [any of] this of my own accord. This is the real meaning of all [those events] that You were unable to bear with patience.’ (al-Kahf: 82)

A gift like this proves that the one who receives it, has a relationship with his Lord. The True Lord the Most High does not give these gifts so that they become a part of a person's nature or his job, whereby we refer to him in every matter to inform us of what to do. This is not the case. They are simply pure gifts that He the Exalted grants; He distributes or withholds them. He has the keys of the unseen, and He reveals some to us through the visible world.

‘He knows all that is in the land and sea’ (al-An‘am: 59). Allah the Almighty mentions land before sea, for land with all of its contents of inanimate objects, plants, trees, animals, mankind, towns, and roads are perceived by all human beings. Conversely, some countries are landlocked. This is why Allah the Most High mentions land before mentioning the sea, which is possible to see, but the sea world is more hidden than that of land. The sea world takes up a large part of the earth's surface, and every day we discover something new in it. After that, Allah the Exalted takes us back to the sea again and says: ‘No leaf falls but He knows it...’ (al-An‘am: 59).

Allah the Most High explains to us clearly His Omniscience since He knows everything including the things connected to a tree's leaf after it carried out its tasks of photosynthesis, nourishing the tree and ripening the fruits before it falls to the earth. Falling, as we know, is when something material drops. Later, scientists explained that it was the earth's gravitational pull. When a leaf falls from a tree, it has a very lightweight. Allah Glorified is He is the One Who does what He wills in the atmosphere surrounding the area in which it falls as well as the movement of the wind that puts it into motion. Why does the Lord mention the matter of a leaf? This example helps us know that when He concludes the previous verse saying: ‘But Allah knows best as to who is doing wrong’ (al-An‘am: 58), it implies that He knows the times in which every leaf moves. It is a sign of His Perfect and All-Encompassing Knowledge.

Clearly, these matters do not result in reward or punishment, so what about the matters that do result in reward and punishment? He certainly knows and judges them: ‘No leaf falls but He knows it, nor is there a single grain in the darkness of the earth’ (al-An‘am: 59). He the Most High also knows the seed that is hidden in the depths of the earth and its circumstances. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘nor anything living or dead, but it is written in a clear record’ (al-An‘am: 59) which means that He, indeed, knows the affair of every being in this world since every being in the life of this world is either living or dead. He not only knows that but also has everything written down and recorded. Angels are in charge of this process. When angels find that the movement of the universe continues precisely and exactly in accordance with the written Book, they keep glorifying Allah day and night: ‘For unto Him belong all [beings] that are in the heavens and on earth, and those that are with Him are never too proud to worship Him and never grow weary [thereof]. They extol His limitless Glory by night and by day, never flagging [therein].’ (al-Anbiya’: 19-20) The dominion of the heavens and the earth belongs to Allah, and He is the only one worthy of worship. Angels never become arrogant. They tirelessly worship Him and humbly submit to His Will. O slave, you are forced in some situations and free in others, whereas He knows what choices you will make at all times.

Allah Glorified is He then says,

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى يَتَوَفَّىٰكُم بِٱلَّيۡلِ وَيَعۡلَمُ مَا جَرَحۡتُم بِٱلنَّهَارِ ثُمَّ يَبۡعَثُكُمۡ فِيهِ
لِيُقۡضَىٰٓ أَجَلٞ مُّسَمّٗىۖ ثُمَّ إِلَيۡهِ مَرۡجِعُكُمۡ ثُمَّ يُنَبِّئُكُم بِمَا كُنتُمۡ تَعۡمَلُونَ ٦٠

It is He who calls your souls back by night, knowing what you have done by day, then raises you up again in the daytime until your fixed term is fulfilled. It is to Him that you will return in the end, and He will tell you what you have done [60]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 60)

We all know that sleep is not an optional process. Sometimes we see someone who suffers distress and fails to sleep. Sleep is a forced process that Allah creates in man to stop human activity after exhausting energy exerted by movement. Sleep is a type of self-inhibition. Why has Allah the Exalted made sleep similar to death? Some people understand that death signifies the spirit’s departure from the human body. Seemingly, the Lord tells us: 'Beware of thinking that the presence of a soul in a body gives life, motion and freedom of movement. No, it is I Who preserves the soul in the body, and I have not given man any choice concerning these actions.' Therefore, do not become infatuated by the soul; there are apparatuses that you have no control over, such as heartbeats, breathing and other physical activities of human bodies. Allah gave us the example of the People of the Cave whom He caused to sleep for three hundred and nine years: '… and [some people assert], "they remained in their cave three hundred years" and some have added nine [to that number].' (al-Kahf: 25)

To sum up, sleep is a Divine Blessing that Allah places in creation itself. For this reason, if you want to sleep, it is not within your capability; rather, it is controlled by Allah's Will. It is said that sleep is a guest: if you request it, it troubles you, i.e. it makes you tired, but if it requests you, it brings you ease. Sleep comes to the tired person even on pebbles, while it may not visit a person lying on a bed of silk. Allah the Most High says: 'And among His wonders is your sleep, at night or in daytime, as well as your [ability to go about in] quest of some of His bounties. In this, behold, there are messages indeed for people who [are willing to] listen!' (ar-Rum: 32) Sleep is a perfect sign itself. It does not only come at night, but also during daytime. Some jobs must be done at night. Night workers must sleep during the daytime. Allah causes us to be like the dead at night, and He knows what work we have done during the daytime. Then, He allows us to live until an appointed time only known to Him. He will resurrect us on the Day of Resurrection to show us the outcome of our deeds. Allah refers to sleep as death and calls waking up 'resurrection'. Simply put, people have no choice regarding their movements in both death and sleep.

When he declared his mission openly after three years of calling to faith secretly, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Indeed I am warning you of a severe imminent punishment. You will certainly die just as you sleep, and you will be resurrected just as you wake up. For the good deeds, you will be rewarded with good and for evil there is punishment. Eventually, it is either everlasting Paradise or everlasting Hellfire.' Ibn 'Abbas, Allah be pleased with him and his father, said: 'The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) climbed Mount Safa one day and called out to the Meccans in a loud voice, "O, Community of Quraysh, come and gather here, I have important news for you!" The tribal fellows of Quraysh gathered around him and said, "What happened?" He responded, "If I were to tell you there were enemy horsemen on the other side of this mount who were about to attack you in the morning or towards the evening, would you believe me?" They said, "Yes, indeed." He said, "Then, I warn you against a severe punishment ahead." Abu Lahab said, "Woe to you! Is this why you gathered us?" Allah then revealed: "Doomed are the hands of Abu Lahab" (al-Masad: 1)."(1)

During sleep, human consciousness is lost, or human conscious soul leaves the body by the Will of Allah. Therefore, man sleeps, but when Allah takes the soul and keeps it, death follows. This is why we must understand that sleep and waking up have their laws and so does death. Every law has its principles. Thus, the law of being awake is not like the law of sleep, and that of sleep is not like that of death.

Furthermore, the law of resurrection is not like the law of death. Thus, awakening, sleep, death, and resurrection exist independently. It would be wrong to take the law of one state and apply it to another state. Allah gives us a clear example regarding ourselves; when someone is awake, the spirit has control over human voluntary movement. When one sleeps, their voluntary movement is incapacitated, but the vital activity continues. When one sleeps, he may see dreams and visions in which he sees someone dressed in certain colourful clothes, so how can he perceive these colours while his eyes are closed? Simply, there are means of perception besides eyes.

Likewise, we feel the passage of time while awake, but during sleep one may see a dream in seven seconds and talks about it half an hour. Two people may share the same bed yet one meets friends and beloved ones, eating, drinking, and rejoicing, while the other meets enemies and experiences suffering and fight. Thus, the time is different, and so is the company. Evidently, the law of sleep differs from the law of wakefulness, and the law of death differs from the law of life: 'He it is Who causes you to be [like] dead at night, and knows what you work in daytime; and He brings you back to life each day in order that a term set [by Him] be fulfilled. In the end, unto Him you must return. Then, He will make you understand all that you were doing [in life].' (al-An'am: 60) In this verse, Allah Glorified is He tells us of all human states: wakefulness and work, sleep and death, and resurrection. Each state has its laws. We only know the laws of wakefulness and sleep since we consciously experience them. For the law of death, we compare it to them, and accordingly, we also believe in the law of resurrection. Allah Glorified is He then says,

(1) Al-Bukhari, Sahih; At-Tirmidhi, Sunan. Book: At-Tafsir; Al-Bayhaqi, Ad-Dala'il; Ahmad, Musnad; At-Tabari

وَهُوَ ٱلْقَاهِرُ فَوْقَ عِبَادِهِۦ ۖ وَيُرْسِلُ عَلَيْكُمْ حَفَظَةً حَتَّىٰٓ إِذَا جَآءَ
أَحَدَكُمُ ٱلْمَوْتُ تَوَفَّتْهُ رُسُلُنَا وَهُمْ لَا يُفَرِّطُونَ ﴿٦١﴾

He is the Supreme Master over His subjects. He sends out recorders to watch over you until, when death overtakes any of you, those sent by Us take his soul – they never fail in their duty[61] (The Quran, al-An'am: 61)

Al-Qahir (one who is supreme) refers to the One Who dominates through His tremendous supreme power. One may say, 'As long as the True Lord. The Most High is Al-Qahir, then how can the disbeliever disbelieve or the sinner sin?' In reply, they do so since Allah the Exalted has given them free will to believe or disbelieve and to obey or disobey. However, as a sign of His Supreme Power, Allah the Almighty decrees various inevitable events and situations to take place beyond everyone's abilities. Not one who rebels against Allah dares to save himself from sickness or death. Rebels and disbelievers choose since Allah has endowed man with free will, but He is the One Who decides birth and death, and man has no say regarding them. Likewise, He the Almighty has the absolute control over the matters of wealth and poverty, and deniers cannot escape afflictions even though they deny the Divine Way. To put it simply, disobedience and rebellion fall within the capabilities created by Allah in man: 'And He is Supreme over His servants. And He sends forth heavenly forces to watch over you until, when death approaches any of you, Our messengers cause him to die, and they do not overlook [anyone].' (al-An'am: 61)

When Allah the Exalted talks about Himself, He may use the first person pronoun, such as: ‘Verily, I – I alone – am Allah.’ (Ta Ha: 14) He also uses the majestic plural: ‘Indeed it is We Who has sent down the Reminder [the Quran], and indeed it is We Who will preserve it.’ (al-Hijr: 9) Allah also talks about His Essence using the third person pronoun, such as in the verse in question: ‘And He is Supreme over His servants’ (al-An‘am: 61). The first person pronoun is evident as the speaker says, I, He addresses others by saying, 'You'. However, the third person pronoun designates a person other than the speaker. When the Lord the Most High uses the third person pronoun, He wants to make it clear to us that He is absolutely present and witnessing everything. When He says 'He', it only refers to His Exalted Essence. This is why He says: ‘Say: "He is Allah, the One God"’ (al-Ikhlas: 1). He the Exalted says 'He' before mentioning the reference, which is 'Allah' even though it is normal for the reference to come first. However, He says: ‘Say: "He is Allah, the One God."’ (al-Ikhlas: 1)

If this pronoun is used, it refers to Himself. When He speaks in the first person pronoun, we see Him speaking about His Essence in the singular form: ‘Verily, I – I alone – am Allah.’ (Ta Ha: 14) He also says: ‘Indeed it is We Who have sent down the Reminder [the Quran], and indeed it is We Who will preserve it.’ (al-Hijr: 9). Why are there differences? When He talks about His actions, we find that each action requires all His Attributes of Perfection; it requires Knowledge for speech, Power for creation and Wisdom and several other necessary attributes to materialise perfectly. When He says, ‘Indeed, it is We Who have sent down the Reminder [the Quran], and indeed it is We Who will preserve it’ (al-Hijr: 9), the act of ‘sending down’ requires various attributes. Thus, the plural majestatis must be used; all Attributes of Perfection are manifested in sending down. However, if He talks about His Essence in the context of Monotheism, He never uses the plural pronoun since He wants to exclude all traces of plurality from His Essence. He is the One Who has no partner. When He talks about His Essence, He says: ‘Verily, I – I alone – am Allah.’ (Ta Ha: 14)

When He talks about the reminder, He says: ‘Indeed it is we who have sent down the Reminder [the Quran], and indeed it is We Who will preserve it.' (al-Hijr: 9). Thus, in the context of exaltation and sending down, which entails a number of His Attributes, He uses the plural pronoun; however, when presenting the Oneness of God to exclude all notions of polytheism, He uses the singular pronoun. In this verse, He the Exalted says: 'And He is Supreme over His servants...' (al-An'am: 61). Upon hearing the word Al-Qahir, it implies the controller and those who subject to control, or Al-Maqhur. Since there are two realms of Al-Qahir and Al-Maqhur, we have two measures and two domains. Truly, Allah is Al-Qahir, but what are the manifestations of this attribute? Actually, everything in the universe is held under God's Omnipotence and Power. He creates and ends creation, gives wealth and poverty and grants health and afflicts sickness.

Everything in the existence is under His Control, even the soul that He makes is a source of human perception and power. He is supreme over it. If a man kills another by hitting a vital human organ, life comes to an end, and the remaining parts of body fails, and then the soul is drawn out. Clearly, it is the soul that controls the body. However, whoever destroys the structure within which the soul resides, forces it to leave the body. Sometimes, He destroys the body by taking its soul without affecting the body with any affliction or malady, and then it turns into decayed bones. To sum up, He holds irresistible Power over souls and bodies, and nothing in existence can confront or resist His Power. 'And He is Supreme over His servants...' (al-An'am: 61).

Al-Qahir also signifies the One Who governs by means of his comprehensive power over others, or Al-Maqhur. Look at any set of opposites in life, and you find that it is subjected to the attribute of Qahr, or the Divine Irresistible Power.

'And He is Supreme over His servants' (al-An'am: 61). The word fawqa (over), necessitates a place but one with limits. Since having supremacy over others requires power; does it mean that the fully Capable must be in a high place? The answer is 'certainly, He must not'. For example, someone who places a bomb under a high building destroys it from beneath; it requires no high place. Thus, fawqa implies dominance and mastery. When we talk about the True Lord, bear in mind the rule that 'There is nothing like unto Him' (ash-Shura: 11) for His Essence is not like any other essence, and His Attributes are not like any other attributes. The same holds true for His actions. His actions become true, or into being, following His saying ‘Be!’ So, the Supreme Power in His statement: ‘And He is Supreme over His servants...’ (al-An‘am: 61) refers to Divine Dominance. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him then says, ‘Our Lord descends to the lowest sky every night in the last ten days of Ramadan.’ In which night does He descend? Is it the night befitting your place or the place of someone else in the other side of the world? Sunsets and sunrises successively follow one another around the different parts of the world, and every minute night begins and daybreak starts. This is how we know that Allah is with you and, meanwhile, with all others as well. His hand is stretched out to you and to others as well: ‘Nay, but wide are His hands stretched out’ (al-Ma‘ida: 64).

When the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him says, ‘Indeed, Allah stretches His hand out at night to receive repentance for the evil actions of the day, and He stretches His hand out in the day to receive repentance for the evil actions of the night until the sun rises from the place it sets,’(1) do not understand to mean that it refers to a specific night or day. Simply put it as: Divine Forgiveness is always there during all times and at all places, and there is nothing like unto Him. ‘And He is Supreme over His servants...’ (al-An‘am: 61).

In this verse, the word 'Ibadihi means His slaves (singular 'abd, or a servant/slave). The Arabic plural is either 'abeed or 'ibad (slaves/servants). The 'ibad are those over whom Allah is supreme, or in other words, they have no choice, and they submit to His ruling for which they do not have a choice. It is plainly clear that man is forced in some matters and has no say in them, e.g. breathing and heartbeats. Likewise, man has no say regarding the work of the stomach, intestines, ureters, kidneys, etc. In this aspect, believers and disbelievers are alike. It is Allah's Mercy that willed these matters to work beyond our powers and choices. If we did have a say in them, we would have to ask, 'How do we regulate the process of breathing while we sleep?'

It is Divine Mercy that He denies us any choice in some matters that affect our lives. Who can say to his stomach, 'Have you not digested the food yet?' Who can command a kidney to function? In these matters, man submits to Allah and has no choice. As for areas where man does have a choice, the scope of legal responsibility exists. Therefore, the Divine Law does not impose or prohibit anything unless man is able to undertake it. So, only matters that fall within human freedom and ability constitute the area of legal responsibility.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad and Muslim from Abu Musa in (At-Tawba)... It is also narrated by An-Nasa'i in At-Tafsir.

Whoever obeys the Lord in the area of legal responsibility submits to the law and admits himself to the category of 'Ibad, or those who renounce their choices and wholeheartedly submit to Divine Laws. They say, 'O, Lord! We will not do except what Your Law wants us to do.' All of them carry out Allah's Ruling in that which they have a choice but not to carry out. Unlike the 'Ibad, the 'Abid rebel against legal responsibility. Thus, Allah Glorified is He guides us: 'Say: 'O, you servants of mine who have transgressed against your own selves! Despair not of Allah's Mercy. Behold, Allah forgives all sins.' (az-Zumar: 53). Allah clarifies the characteristics of His 'Ibad saying: 'For, [true] servants of the Most Gracious are [only] they who walk gently on earth, and who, whenever the foolish address them, reply with [words of] peace' (al-Furqan: 63). These 'Ibad renounce their choices and accept the Divine Commands in obedience to Allah. In matters in which they have no choice, they are like the rest of the living. The entire creation are ʿAbid in areas which they have no choice, but only believers are 'Ibad of Allah, as well.

However, there is a Quranic verse that stirs up debates over this meaning. The Lord talks about the events of the Hereafter saying: 'Was it you who led these creation ('Ibadi) astray.' (al-Furqan: 17) In this verse, the word 'Ibad refers to those who have gone astray because the reason for this is that in the Hereafter everyone and everything is His 'Ibad. No one has any choice there, but in this world, it is only believers who are the 'Ibad, whereas disbelievers are ʿAbeed since they disobey when they possess the choice.

'And He is Supreme over His servants. And He sends forth heavenly forces to watch over you' (al-An'am: 61). In addition to dominating the world, Allah sends heavenly forces. If being supreme (Qahr) means dominance, mastery, control, and power, then He is All-Dominant over His slaves, and He also sends heavenly forces to watch over them. He also says: 'He has hosts of helpers – both such as can be perceived by him and such as are hidden from him – that could preserve him...' (ar-Ra'd: 11). This is how Allah is supreme over us, and it is for our benefit. When a weak person is under the power of a tyrant, he may say, 'Allah is the All-Dominant, the Sublime.' There is a reminder in this for the one who possesses relative power that there is the All-Dominant Lord over all living beings. For this reason, a strong person retrains their dominance and refrains from sins to avoid punishment.

It is a manifestation of Divine Mercy that 'He sends forth hafazhah to watch over you' (al-An'am: 61). Hafazhah (heavenly forces/keepers) may also record the speech of people: 'not even a word can he utter but there is a watcher with him, ever-present' (Qaf: 18). These angels who watch and are always present are also Hafazhah. They are the noble scribes who observe and keep count of and record human deeds.

Whenever science advances, it gives us better understandings of the hidden meanings even if the Quran and Sunnah are the only reliable evidence for eschatological issues. Therefore, we believe that angels record our deeds as the Lord said in submission to the statement of Allah Glorified is He: 'Who believe in [the existence of] that which is beyond the reach of human perception' (al-Baqara: 3). To put it simply, if faith relies only on visible things, there would be no difference between people? Rather, faith, in its perfect sense, is the belief in the unseen. When Allah the Exalted says: 'Not even a word can he utter but there is a watcher with him, ever-present' (Qaf: 18), He informs us about angels that write down good deeds and bad deeds. When we look at human beings, we find them different; some exceed others in attributes and capabilities. As time progresses, man knows more of the Divine secrets, and then achieves better spiritual progress.

In the past, huge recording devices first appeared, and advancements followed, along with their size being reduced. As this industrial process progressed, the machine became smaller insomuch that they made recording devices that were the sizes of watches, ring stones and even small grains, which may be scattered in any place for the purpose of espionage by recording the secrets of gatherings and meetings. Whenever the power of a manufacturer develops, it grows more delicate and finer. Now compare these manufactured devices to the creative powers of Allah? If a human being can produce an invisible recording device, even though the human power, skills and wisdom are limited, and when the Lord says: 'Indeed there are angels that you will never see but they calculate your deeds', accept and believe in it. He the Most High also says: 'noble, recording [angels]' (al-Infitar: 11). In this verse, Allah Glorified is He says: 'And He sends forth heavenly forces to watch over you until, when death approaches any of you' (al-An'am: 61). In their definition of death, the scholars said, 'Death is the cessation of all life processes. Your lifetime depends on the time you spend before death reaches you. Allah the Almighty says: 'until, when death approaches any of you' (al-An'am: 61). He simply says that death will approach all of us without specifying its time, place, cause, or means. This kind of vagueness clearly implies a wonderful lesson—we must be ready to meet death at any given time, place and possible mean.

It is no surprise that it could happen at any age. Allah the Exalted keeps its time unknown for greater benefits. Now, if He the Most High were to inform us of its determined time, place, year, or cause, man will wait for it. However, the True Lord decreed it to be obscure to keep humans on guard for it as a most profound admonition. It draws humans' attention and prompts them to anticipate death at every moment and at every place, expecting by any cause. In this way, death stands clearly in front of all human beings. This is why we are scared of committing any sin lest our soul be taken while we are engaged in it. You do not like to meet Allah in a state of disobedience. When the call to prayer for Zhuhr, or noontime prayer, is called and you do not perform it, you may say, 'Its time is extended', and you may find someone who will tell you, 'Guarantee me that you will be alive when the time for Zhuhr ends.'

'Abdullah Ibn Masud Allah be pleased with him asked the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him 'Which action is best?' He said, 'Praying on time.' 'Abdullah Ibn Masud Allah be pleased with him asked, 'Then what?' The Prophet said, 'Gratitude and benevolence to one's parents.' He asked, 'then what?' Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Striving in battle (jihad) for the sake of Allah.'(1) You certainly cannot guarantee that you will live until the end of a given prayer time. Then, believe the fact that obscurities are most profound in effects and clarification. Some people may ask, 'And why has Allah not made this clear to us?' I always say that, indeed, Allah has clarified what He has made obscure since keeping a thing hidden to expect it all times is more profound than specifying its time, place or cause. Have we not seen someone going to a doctor for treatment, but what happened is that death occurred and the doctor proved the cause of his death? We have definitely seen that. This person sought help from the means, but this very means does not prevent Allah from implementing His Decree. Shawqi Allah's Mercy be upon him said:

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Like a lion, death is inevitably lethal,
Whether you face it early or at old age
When it overlooks you, then every medicine is beneficial
But when vigilant medicine can but help it.

Doctors may make a mistake with an injection bringing life to an end. We usually say that a doctor's mistake is a Divine Decree coming into effect. An affirmation of this fact, Allah Glorified is He says, 'Until, when death approaches any of you, our messengers cause him to die...' (al-An'am: 61). The Quranic word tawaffahu (cause to die) takes three forms:

- The first form is yatawaffa (Allah causes you to die). It occurs in Allah's statement: 'It is Allah [alone that has this power – He] who causes all human beings to die at the time of their [bodily] death' (az-Zumar: 42).
- The second is yatawaffakum (the angel of death causes you to die). Allah the Exalted says: 'Say: The angel of death who is given charge of you shall cause you to die' (as-Sajda: 11).
- The third form is tawaffathu (they caused him to die). Allah the Most High also says: '...Our messengers cause him/her to die...' (al-An'am: 61).

Sometimes Allah directly causes death to occur, while at other times, the angel of death or His messengers are in charge of this mission. The messengers of death obey the command of the angel of death. Finally, no one causes death without permission from Allah. Taking souls and holding them is a Divine Command. The angel of death is just a means, and his messengers are executors. ‘Our messengers cause him to die: and they do not overlook [anyone]’ (al-An‘am: 61).

However, how can overlooking appear? Two things are put forth in this verse: heavenly forces that watch over and observe human behaviour and deeds. They also take the soul. These angels do not overlook anything in their missions. When we look at the root letters ‘f - r - t’, we find that they have two forms: farrata and afrata. It is amazing that the same letters convey two opposite meanings. For farrata, it means ‘to pay little or no attention’, while afrata is ‘to do something excessively beyond the moderate and acceptable limits’.

That is why Allah the Almighty says in another verse of the Quran: ‘... and when [the end of] their term approaches, they can neither delay it by a single moment, nor can they hasten it.’ (al-A‘raf: 34) He Glorified is He subsequently says:

ثُمَّ رُدُّوٓا۟ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ مَوْلَىٰهُمُ ٱلْحَقِّ ۚ أَلَا لَهُ ٱلْحُكْمُ وَهُوَ أَسْرَعُ ٱلْحَٰسِبِينَ ﴿٦٢﴾

Then they will all be returned to God, their true Lord. The Judgment truly belongs to Him, and He is the swiftest of reckoners [62] (The Quran, al-An’am: 62)

Here is a very important point, which is that the Arabic phrase Ruddu (they will all be returned) clearly indicates that people had previously met Him, which is why they will all be then returned to Him, but how could this happen? The answer to this question is quite clear in the fact that He Glorified is He is the One Who created people in the very beginning out of nothing, and then they will all be returned to Him to be held accountable for their deeds. This point is proved by another verse of the Quran in which He the Almighty says: ‘From it we created you and into it We shall send you back…’ (Ta Ha: 55).

The Arabic word Mawla is translated in this verse as 'the True Lord' since it means that there is someone who is close to you, and thus he might help and support you during times of distress. Therefore, we find that the word Mawla has been used to give the meanings of ‘someone who is close to you’, ‘someone who supports you at hard times’ or ‘someone to whom you turn at times of hardships'. It is important here to understand that you might have a Mawla from among human beings, yet he might not give you support for some reason or another. In addition, you might be afflicted with a disaster, which is beyond his capacity, and so he is unable to help you. In the same respect, you might have a Mawla whom you implore and ask for help, yet he rejects to help you since he might have a strong relationship with your enemy, a relationship that might even be stronger than yours with him, and thus he supports your enemy instead of you, although he might deceive you by telling that he has your back.

We may experience all of the aforementioned situations in this worldly life, but in the Hereafter there is only One True Mawla (Lord), i.e. Allah Glorified is He. Thus, we should know that there is a further possible explanation for the word Mawla which is ‘the master who frees his slave'. If we yet understand this particular part of the verse under discussion in the light of this meaning, we will find that saving us from the fire clearly indicates the truest meaning of Lordship. That is to say that Allah the Almighty is the True Lord Whose Power cannot be challenged or defeated; He Glorified is He unlike His creation, does not change.

At this point, we should take into account that when Allah asks you to make use of your intellect, He does so because He wants you to benefit. In this regard, we find that if you rely on an immortal human being to give you help and support, he might not do so for you for some reason or another, which is why He Glorified is He the Ever-Living, asks you to depend only upon Him since He will never leave you alone.

Allah the Almighty says: ‘Then they will all be returned to Allah, their true Lord. The Judgment truly belongs to Him …’ (al-An‘am: 62). This raises a good question, which is ‘Why does He the Almighty use the word "judgment" in this context?' It is due to the fact that Allah Glorified is He might entrust some human beings in this worldly life with making judgments in particular fields, which is why we find some people issuing rules or giving verdicts, etc. Yet, the matter is totally different in the Hereafter, for there will be none to judge except Allah Glorified is He a point which is quite clear in the Quran where Allah says: 'To whom belongs the kingdom this day? To Allah, the One, the Subduer (of all).' (Ghafir: 16)

In other words, you, in this worldly life, might have the ability to provide your children with sustenance. Also, you might have the ability to issue an order for the promotion of your employee to a higher rank. In the same respect, you might have the ability to sew clothes for others. This is to say that we, in this worldly life, have the ability to affect one another in one way or another. However, this matter is totally different in the Hereafter when Allah the Exalted is the One Who has absolute, sole sovereignty.

The Arabic particle ala may be translated as 'oh'; it is used to draw the attention of the listener to an important thing mentioned after it, but what is the wisdom of using such a particle in this context? It is because the topic mentioned after it is of great importance. We know for certain that speech goes to and fro between a speaker and a listener. As for the speaker, he transfers his ideas, thoughts and desires to the listener. Yet, before he utters a word, he carefully reflects on the matter and thus decides to say it or not. That is to say that the speaker, before saying what he wants, has to reflect and examine the main idea of the topic he wishes to covey to others. The listener, on the other hand, does not know about what the speaker is going to talk. This is why when one wants to convey a very important topic; he tries his best to attract the full attention of a speaker, to ensure that he misses nothing of his speech. In doing so, one may use the particle ala. It is thus clear that this particular particle is used in this context to attract the attention of people to what Allah is going to say after that.

Judgment is to decide on two matters, yet we should take into account the undeniable fact that it must be made fairly and justly. Unfortunately, we may find that some judges, driven by their whims, pass unfair judgments. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. We use two-container scales to determine the exact weight of a particular item. In doing so, the two containers of the scales must be equal to each other. In this case, we are able to establish equivalence. This is known as 'achieving balance,' which means we take a neutral position.

In the same respect, the saying of Allah the Almighty 'The judgment truly belongs to Him …' (al-An'am: 62) indicates plainly that Allah the Almighty will judge all people starting with Adam peace be upon him to the last human being born. Therefore, we should stress the fact that even though some of us have committed injustices against each other, Allah Glorified is He will judge us all in no time. Concerning this point, ‘Ali Allah be pleased with him was asked by some people, ‘How will Allah judge the entire mankind at the same time?’ He replied, ‘Just as He provides for them all at the same time.’ This matter is a very easy one for Allah Glorified is He. A long time ago, we used to illuminate the streets by lighting lamps here and there, and the stoker used to add fuel to each lamp alone. Yet, when mankind managed to produce electricity, they used it to illuminate the streets with the click of a button.

Allah Glorified is He subsequently says:

قُلْ مَن يُنَجِّيكُم مِّن ظُلُمَٰتِ ٱلْبَرِّ وَٱلْبَحْرِ تَدْعُونَهُۥ تَضَرُّعًا
وَخُفْيَةً لَّئِنْ أَنجَىٰنَا مِنْ هَٰذِهِۦ لَنَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلشَّٰكِرِينَ ﴿٦٣﴾

Say [Prophet], ‘Who is it that saves you from the dark depths of land and sea when you humbly and secretly call to Him [and say], “If He rescues us from this, We shall truly be thankful”?’ [63] (The Quran, al-An’am: 63)

It is troublesome for the creation when darkness comes to produce light or when light comes to produce darkness. This is due to the fact that each of these two, darkness and light, has a particular role to perform in this life. This point is clearly mentioned in the first verse of this chapter under discussion in which Allah says: ‘[All] praise is [due] to Allah, who created the heavens and the earth and made the darkness and the light.’ (al-An‘am: 1) Concerning the aforementioned verse, some people mistakenly think that Allah the Almighty should have given precedence to the mention of 'light' over 'darkness'. Yet, if we carefully reflect on this matter, we will reach the correct conclusion that the roles to be performed by these two items are of equal importance to each other. But what is that important role to be performed by darkness? We all know for certain that ‘light’ enables us to walk in the slopes of the earth and to perform our due roles in this life, an act which cannot be fulfilled without energy. Therefore, we stress that we cannot get energy without rest, relaxation, and tranquillity, all of which cannot be obtained by man except in darkness. It is thus clear that darkness is one of the Blessings Allah the Almighty conferred upon mankind. Yet, what causes man to be overtaken by tiredness is to substitute ‘light’ for ‘darkness’, or vice versa, for this is viewed as a departure from the due role of each of these two opposites. At this point, we should be fully aware of the fact that Allah the Almighty created opposite items in such a way which makes them complementary to each other in every sense. That is to say that they are not antagonistic whatsoever to each other. This point is yet proven by the Quran in which Allah says: ‘Consider the night as it veils [the earth] in darkness, and the day as it rises bright!’ (al-Layl: 1-2)

In these aforementioned verses, Allah the Almighty mentions the night time first and the day time second. As a matter of fact, each of them has a due role to perform, and thus none of them can perform the role of the other. Therefore, we should take into account that we, human beings, cannot perform properly roles which are due in the daytime unless our due roles at nighttime are performed properly. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point more clearly. If there is a man who does not sleep well at night for some reason or another, he will be half-asleep and unable to concentrate, in other words, he will be absent minded.

Therefore, it is clear right now that in order to be able to carry out our daily activities during the daytime, there must be darkness to provide rest and relaxation.

The nighttime and daytime are therefore both blessings, and they are both of equal importance to each other. Yet, we should take into account that they are not against each other, rather, they both complement each other in every sense. The True Lord Glorified is He and then says: ‘Consider the creation of the male and the female!’ (al-Layl: 3). He the Almighty again mentions another set of opposites, the male and the female. In the same way, we should firmly believe that there is no antagonism whatsoever between the roles to be performed by the male and the female, for He the Almighty has created both of them to complement each other. That is to say that in case one of them performs the role of the other, the course of life will not run perfectly. In the same respect, as long as the night has a particular role to perform and so has the day time, the male has a due role to perform and so has the female. Allah says: ‘Consider the night as it veils [the earth] in darkness, and the day as it rises bright! Consider the creation of the male and the female! Verily, [O men,] you aim at most divergent ends!’ (al-Layl: 1-4)

Back to the chapter al-An‘am; Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Who is that saves you from the dark depths of land and sea when you humbly and secretly call to Him [and say], “If He rescues us from this, we shall truly be thankful?”' (al-An‘am: 63)

Darkness, therefore, is the absence of light. Thus, we notice that Allah the Exalted does not say that looking for safety is done only in one depth of darkness, rather, it is done in various ones of it. That is to say, we ask Him the Almighty to save us from such depths of darkness, which are accumulated over each other. We know that when a depth of darkness is veiled by a second, and this second is yet covered by a third, and so on, it is at that point that we have various depths of darkness one over another.

In this regard, Allah the Almighty says: ‘…the dark depths of land and sea…’, yet if we want to know whether He the Almighty intends the corporeal meaning of darkness or the incorporeal one, we should first give the definition of darkness in its corporeal meaning, stressing that it is that which leads to misguidance when looking for the path to safety. This means anything that leads to misguidance, be it corporeal or incorporeal, is judged as a depth of darkness. This is due to the fact that man, in this case, goes through matters without any guidance. In the same respect, events and catastrophes from which man cannot be saved are also considered depths of darkness.

Thus, we should know that Allah Glorified is He offers us examples with incorporeal matters so that we are able to correctly understand the corporeal ones. What is meant by the depths of darkness here is the events, catastrophes and calamities that strike man and from which they cannot be saved. We know fully well that man is always keen on benefitting himself, yet their actions, based on the fact that each of them views the essence of benefit from a certain perspective, are contradictory to each other. Let us offer this striking example to illustrate this point more clearly. If we suppose that there is a student who goes to his school early in the morning, pays attention to his teachers, and then goes home to do his homework, it is clear that this student has thus left the pleasure of laziness to enjoy that of hard work. That is to say that he loves himself and thus wants to do that which will benefit him and his life. On the other hand, we have another student who sleeps most of the day and spends his time in cafés. This student certainly loves himself but in a foolish way since he wants to enjoy immediate pleasures that will be followed by great suffering later. The future of such a lazy student will certainly not be prosperous. Of course, this will not be the case with the hard working student who will have a promising future.

Let us offer another clear example from the countryside to fully clarify this point. If we suppose that there is a farmer who spends his time in the cafe and stays up late, to the extent that he does not till his land or even pay attention to its irrigation and fertilising, it goes without saying that his land will never produce an amount of crop equal to that one produced by this particular land whose owner takes care of its irrigation, fertilisation, etc. Thus, we should stress that Allah the Almighty will undoubtedly give abundant provision to the one who makes use of the Divine means given to him by exerting his utmost efforts to achieve his goals. Yet, the case is completely different with the lazy one who neglects his work. If we draw a comparison between these two cases in question, we will find that the latter, i.e. the lazy person has loved him/self in a way that is short-sighted and not smart, while the former, the hard working one, has a deeper love for himself, for he conducts his life in a way that benefits him and others as well.

Indeed, every activity that man engages in is done with the objective of acquiring benefit, but the essence of benefit differs from person to person. At this point, we should stress that an intelligent person is the one who takes into consideration anything that will bring long-term benefits and thus works hard to achieve his goals, a point which is clear in the following poetic verses by Al-Mutanabbi:

I see that each one of us desires life for himself
Vigilant over it, aiming for it with ardent love
The love of the coward for himself is brought about by prudence
The love of the courageous person for himself led him to war

What this poem is saying is that the love of the courageous person for himself makes him eager for the eternal life, so he exerts his utmost efforts to die as a martyr in the cause of Allah. The coward's love for himself, on the other hand, makes him a prisoner of fear because of his inability to leave this non-eternal life. Furthermore, when the coward is struck by a calamity, he, driven by his personal interests, looks for the means of salvation from any given place. In doing so, he may use his own means or those who are close to him in such a situation. Yet, in case no human being is able to give him any help, while he was heedless of Allah, it is for certain that these bad events, afflictions and calamities will guide him back on the Right Path, by reminding him of Allah, the Creator. He thus seeks His Help by supplicating to Him the Almighty and beseeching him to save him from such distress. That is to say that he does not sell himself short. However, we should take into account the fact that in case man asks Allah the Almighty to save him from a hardship, and he then returns to his disbelief and defiance after his goal has been achieved, he will be viewed as deceiving himself and fall under the following Saying of Allah the Almighty in the chapter al-Isra': 'And when harm touches you on the sea, all of those whom you call upon, except Him, are lost to you. But when He brings you safe to land, you turn aside; and man is very ungrateful.' (al-Isra': 67)

We find those who come face to face with horrors, while their means are exhausted, do not lie to themselves. Rather, out of their natural disposition, they turn to Allah Glorified is He the Omnipotent, to save them. For example, the moment a ship is struck by strong lightning and storms, to the extent that it is about to go down, we find the entire crew and passengers, excluding no one, seeking the Help of Allah the Almighty and saying, 'O Lord, O Lord, O Lord!' Some of the people on the deck of this ship might yet recite some verses of the Quran with the intention of attaining safety. The same applies to the crew and passengers of a plane which is about to crash; we find them all humbly seeking the Help of Allah the Almighty to save them.

These two aforementioned examples fully clarify the meaning of the Saying of Allah Glorified is He 'And when harm touches you on the sea, all of those whom you call upon, except Him, are lost to you.' (al-Isra': 67) As a matter of fact, man's invocation of his Lord and Protector is undoubtedly viewed as the first and foremost means of achieving certainty. We know fully well that one in this worldly life undergoes one of two matters, happiness or sadness. Happiness is yet achieved by realising beauty, blessings, rest and contentment. As for sadness which includes anything that displeases man and causes him suffering, he tries hard to get rid of it.

This previously mentioned fact is proved by the natural disposition that Allah Glorified is He has placed in man. Truthfully speaking, it is out of this natural disposition that man, upon observing what pleases him, will not find any expression to clearly indicate his praise and glorification of Allah but to say, 'Allah!' The same completely applies when man is at risk, for we will certainly find him saying, 'O Lord!' In other words, he wil be saying, 'No refuge is but with Allah.'

Back to the chapter al-An'am, Allah the Almighty says: 'Say [Prophet], "Who is it that saves you from the dark depths of land and sea…"' (al-An'am: 63). This question actually indicates the reality that everyone who hears it shall confirm which is Allah the Almighty is the One Who saves man from the dark dangers and depths of both land and sea. Therefore, we should take into account the fact that when Allah the Almighty commands His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to present this question to disbelievers, He Glorified is He knew for certain that they, out of their natural disposition, would answer this question. In other words, they will frankly admit the undeniable fact that Allah the Almighty is the One Who truly saves them from the dark depths of land and sea. At this point, someone might yet say that this verse under discussion restricts the calamities striking man to those of land and sea, although these days we suffer calamities striking us in the air, as well!

We say, 'We must understand that every air space takes the same ruling of its place which means that air over land is subject to the same ruling as land. Also, air over the sea takes the same ruling as the sea. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. It is possible for people offering their prayer in the Sacred Mosque to do so on the ground floor which means that they do so while surrounding the main building of the Ka'ba. They are also allowed to do so either in the first floor, or the second, or even the third, etc. of the buildings of the Sacred Mosques surrounding the Ka'ba, although the height of its main building does not exceed that of the first floor surrounding it. That is to say that these buildings surrounding the Ka'ba are judged sacred by virtue of the fact that they are in its vicinity*,* which is also sacred.

The same completely applies to going round As-Safa and Al-Marwa*;* pilgrims are allowed to do so on the ground floor which is between the two main symbols of these two items. They are also allowed to do so, while in the first floor of these two symbols. In other words, the first floor has been judged sacred due to the fact it is pertinent to these scared symbols. In the past, planes were not allowed to fly over Mecca and Medina. This was due to the fact that pilots at that particular time were not Muslims. In other words, the main reason why planes were not allowed to do so was not to allow non-Muslim pilots to fly over these scared places. Yet, when Muslims had pilots from among themselves, this prohibition was abolished. Therefore, it is clear that the air has the same ruling of its place, be it land or sea.

He the Almighty says: 'Say [Prophet], "Who is it that saves you from the dark depths of land and sea when you humbly and secretly call to Him…' (al-An'am: 63). It is taken for granted that man, out of his natural disposition, invokes Allah the Almighty. The Arabic word Ad-Du'aa' (supplication) means to request something from someone; in other words, any request necessitates the existence of three elements: the one who requests, the thing requested and the one to whom a request is addressed. Basically, we stress that 'request' is a type of command, but we cannot call it as such when it is made by someone of lower rank than the one being asked. As a matter of fact, in such case, we call it an act of supplication.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. When we ask students to do a grammatical analysis of the following statement 'My Lord, forgive me', we find the students who did not study their lessons very well saying that the word 'forgive' is an imperative verb. Yet, if the same question is given to students who correctly understood their lessons, we will find them, out of their good manners, saying that the word 'forgive' is a verb indicating 'supplication'. At this point, we should stress the following important facts: first, in case a request is made by someone who is of lower rank than the one being asked, it is called a Du'aa'; yet in case it is made by a person who is of equal rank to the one being asked, it is an 'appeal'; and in case it is made by someone who is of higher rank than the one being asked, then it is an 'order'.

When we look at the psychological state of the one who is struck by calamities and catastrophes, we find him, out of his natural disposition, humbly beseeching Allah the Almighty to save him, which is the true meaning of supplication. In this scenario, we stress that 'beseeching Allah humbly' is fulfilled by action and saying. In other words, it is an act which is associated with one's emotions and behaviours.

Wrong are those who think that 'beseeching Allah humbly' can be made in speech only, and without action! Let us illustrate this point more clearly. When you are in a position of power and authority and someone asks you to do him a favour, this person is thus viewed as humbly beseeching, or calling upon, you but in speech only. Yet, in case such a person asks you to do you yourself a favour, then this is viewed as humbly beseeching, or calling upon you in both speech and action. When man is at risk, he sincerely beseeches, or calls on His Lord to save him from distress, a point which is proved by the saying of Allah the Almighty '…when you humbly and secretly call to Him…' (al-An'am: 63). We should take into account that the act of 'humbly calling to Allah' can also be fulfilled with the heart. This is due to the fact that Allah the Almighty the Creator is the Only One Who knows for certain what is in the hearts. 'Let us offer an example to clarify this point. A European woman once read the biography of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and then she came across the cause of revelation of the Saying of Allah, '…and Allah will protect you from the people…' (al-Ma'ida: 67). She found out that this saying was revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him while he was asleep after staying up all night. It is narrated that 'A'isah Allah be pleased with her said to Prophet Muhammad, 'Is there not a righteous man to guard us this night?' Upon finishing her question, she Allah be pleased with her heard the clank of swords of the two companions Sa'd and Hudhayfa who came to guard him peace and blessings be upon him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him thus fell deeply asleep. The archangel Jibril (Gabriel) then came down to him with following saying of Allah, '…and Allah will protect you from the people…' (al-Ma'ida: 67) whereupon he peace and blessings be upon him said to these two Companions who came to guard him, 'O, people, go away, for Allah shall protect me.'

'When this European woman read this narration and fully understood it, she embraced Islam and said, 'If he were deceiving everyone, he would not have deceived himself by doing something that would risk his own life.' As a matter of fact, this woman, out of her discernment, fully realised that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would not order guards to leave him unless he was absolutely certain that Allah the Almighty would protect him and that He Glorified is He is fully Capable of preserving him. Once again, we stress that man at times of hardships humbly and secretly calls to Allah to save him. In addition, we explained that the act of supplication cannot be fulfilled without saying, action and emotions, three pillars shown clearly in the saying of Allah, '…you humbly and secretly call to Him [and say], "If He rescues us from this, we shall truly be thankful"' (al-An'am: 63).

The phrase tad'unahu (you call to Him) refers to speech, while tadarr'uan (humbly) refers to action which means that the act of supplication should include both speech and action. As for the word Khufya (secretly), it refers to the humility and fear of the heart, while the phrase Anjana (He rescues us from) indicates that the act of 'saving them' which frequently happened. This point is also understood from the saying of Allah, 'Say, "Allah rescues you…' (al-An'am: 64). That is to say He Glorified is He does not save them just once, but rather many times. In this respect, He the Almighty tells that His rescue of people may be done in several ways. In other words, it may be done either by repeating the act of rescue itself or by rescuing one from various disasters. As for the first case, which is repeating the act of rescue, it is done when there is a single disaster from which Allah saves many people, or when He Glorified is He repeatedly rescues only one person from several disasters. Thus, it is clear that Allah the Almighty is the One Who saves individuals and groups from different calamities. In the Quran, He Glorified is He says: 'For [thus it is:] when affliction befalls man, he cries out to Us, whether he be lying on his side or sitting or standing; but as soon as We have freed him of his affliction, he goes on as though he had never invoked Us to save him from the affliction that befell him...!' (Yunus: 12)

This aforementioned verse of the chapter of Yunus clearly indicates that whenever an affliction befalls man, he identifies his weakness and thus invokes Allah Glorified is He to save him from this affliction. As a matter of fact, he does so in whatever state he may be in, whether he be lying on his side, sitting or even standing. Yet, when Allah answers his call, he forgets His Favour and Blessings upon him as if he did not supplicate to Him the Almighty to remove this affliction from him. This point is yet proved by the saying of Allah the Almighty in which He says: 'And when harm touches you on the sea, all of those whom you call upon, except Him, are lost to you. But when He brings you safe to land, you turn aside; and man is very ungrateful.' (al-Isra': 67)

In this aforementioned verse of al-Isra', He the Almighty reminds the polytheists of Mecca and all the deniers of the Truth that whenever they are afflicted by some harm at sea, they completely forget their idols and all what they used to worship beside Him Glorified is He which is a confirmation that polytheists, under this situation, turn to none but Him the Almighty to save them from drowning. Yet, He, meanwhile, stresses that after He removes affliction from them, they return to associating other partners with Him in worship and even denying His Blessings and Favours upon them.

The same meaning is also understood from this particular verse under discussion. Allah the Almighty says: 'Say [Prophet], "Who is that saves you from the dark depths of land and sea when you humbly and secretly call to Him [and say], "If He rescues us from this, we shall truly be thankful?"" (al-An'am: 63)

The verse indicates plainly that polytheists and the deniers of the Truth humbly called to Allah the Almighty to save them from the dark dangers and depths of land and sea, confirming that they would be from amongst the grateful, but how did they act after He the Almighty saved them? He Glorified is He gives the answer in the following verse,

قُلِ ٱللَّهُ يُنَجِّيكُم مِّنۡهَا وَمِن كُلِّ كَرۡبٖ ثُمَّ أَنتُمۡ تُشۡرِكُونَ ﴿٦٤﴾

Say, 'God rescues you from this and every distress;
yet still you worship others beside Him' [64]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 64)

The verse clearly indicates that Allah the Almighty is the One Who saves them from the depths of dark in land and sea. Yet, it is at that point that we should take into consideration that He Glorified is He out of His Pre-Eternal Knowledge, knows for certain that these polytheists and deniers of the Truth would return to polytheism after being rescued. This point may be more clearly illustrated in the light of the fact that man, by nature, transgresses when he sees himself from want, a fact which is proved by the Quran. Allah the Almighty says: 'Nay! Man, indeed, transgresses, Because he thinks himself to be independent.' (al-'Alaq: 6-7)

As a matter of fact, a man of great wealth may overstep his bounds and become arrogant towards those around him, and he may even become so towards His Lord. Therefore, we stress that nothing can protect man from falling prey to arrogance but attaining faith in Allah the Almighty. It goes without saying that man will certainly be prone to arrogance as long as he does not follow the Divine Way of Guidance; the matter is completely different as to those who are conscious of Him the Almighty in all what He Glorified is He provides them. As a matter of fact, it is righteous people who lend a hand to the needy and the poor. In this respect, we should take into consideration that whenever the word 'man' is used in general sense, it is always associated with 'loss'. We can see this point ever so clear in the Saying of Allah the Almighty 'I swear by the time, most surely man is in loss' (al-'Asr: 1-2).

These previously mentioned verses indicate clearly that man will certainly be a loser if his guidance is left to himself. Yet, Allah the Almighty excludes those who believe, do good and enjoin truth and patience for each other. He the Almighty says: 'I swear by the time, most surely man is in loss, except those who believe and do good, and enjoin on each other truth, and enjoin on each other patience.' (al-'Asr: 1-3)

It is quite clear that a person who is distant from the Divine Way of Guidance will certainly experiencing utter loss. Yet, the one who firmly adheres to His Way of Guidance, he will never experience utter loss. As a matter of fact, when man does not follow the Divine Way of Guidance, he falls under the category of those dispraised in the saying of Allah, 'So when harm afflicts a man he calls upon Us; then, when We give him a favour from Us, he says: I have been given it only by means of knowledge. Nay, it is a trial, but most of them do not know.' (az-Zumar: 49)

This aforementioned verse clearly indicates that in case one, who does not follow the Divine Way of Guidance, is afflicted with harm, and then Allah removes this harm from him, he will attribute that act of rescue to himself. In addition, when such person is provided with more and more blessings, he does not admit the fact that Allah the Almighty is the One Who provides him with them, rather, he claims that he has been given everything on account of his knowledge or cleverness. As a matter of fact, such people completely forget that Allah the Almighty gives them these blessings as a form of testing them.

Allah the Almighty subsequently says:

قُلۡ هُوَ ٱلۡقَادِرُ عَلَىٰٓ أَن يَبۡعَثَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ عَذَابٗا مِّن فَوۡقِكُمۡ أَوۡ مِن تَحۡتِ أَرۡجُلِكُمۡ أَوۡ يَلۡبِسَكُمۡ
شِيَعٗا وَيُذِيقَ بَعۡضَكُم بَأۡسَ بَعۡضٍۗ ٱنظُرۡ كَيۡفَ نُصَرِّفُ ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ لَعَلَّهُمۡ يَفۡقَهُونَ ﴿٦٥﴾

Say, 'He has power to send punishment on you from above or from under your very feet, or to divide you into discordant factions and make some taste the violence of others.' See how We explain Our revelation in various ways, so that they may understand [65] (The Quran, al-An'am: 65)

The Arabic word Al-Qadir is translated in this verse as 'He has the power' which means that Allah the Almighty is fully capable and that no power, no matter how enormous it may be, can defeat or even challenge His Omnipotent Power. Furthermore, we stress that He the Almighty gives respite to oppressors, but then He suddenly strikes them with punishment that might afflict them from above or even from under their feet. What follows is an example of a number of oppressors who were overtaken with Divine Punishment from above. The people of Abraha*,* the Abyssinian, went to Mecca to destroy the Ka'ba, but Allah the Almighty sent down upon them flocks of birds that were casting stones of baked clay against them, and so He rendered them like chewed straw. Yet, there is another example of people who were destroyed by a cry, while there were others who were destroyed by a roaring, violent blast.

Let us move now to give examples for some whom punishment struck from under their feet. Qarun and Pharaohs are cases in point. As for Qarun*,* Allah the Almighty made the earth swallow him and his abode up. Pharaoh, on the other hand, was drowned in the sea. It is thus clear that Divine Punishment can afflict people from above and from under their very feet. Furthermore, this can be done either physically or spiritually.

In the saying of Allah the Almighty '…or to divide you into discordant factions and make some taste the violence of others…' (al-An'am: 65), the Arabic phrase Labsu Al-A'mr (division) means to confuse the matter in such a way that cannot be understood by people. As for the word Shya'an, it is translated as 'factions', and it is the plural of the word Shi'a, which basically refers to those who cooperate on doing something, even if it involves falsehood, and who gather together to achieve one goal. The saying of Allah the Almighty '…or to divide you into discordant factions…' thus means that He the Almighty might divide them into discordant groups, each of which is led by a certain leader and has its own school of law. In this way, Allah Glorified is He will be making them taste the violence of each other.

This raises a good question: 'Why does Allah the Almighty afflict people with all these trials?' The answer is quite clear in the fact that as long as they deviate from the Divine Way of Guidance, He the Almighty leaves them to taste the violence of each other. Furthermore, we should take into account that this act, people's deviation from the Divine Way of Guidance, never brings about any change in the world or its established laws, for we find the sky in its original state, as well as the earth, the sun, the moon, the rain and the stars; none of them has ever changed in one way or another.

In other words, Allah the Almighty leaves people to taste the violence of each other and thus become oppressors for one another when people deviate from the Divine Way of Guidance. That is to say that when we see people complaining about each other, we shall realise that they all are sinful and deviate from the Divine Way of Guidance, which is why they will not feel comfort unless they return to the Way of Allah. We know for certain that the Way of Allah prevents believers from showing off and being arrogant, for they all bow down before Allah the Almighty the Only One Who deserves to be worshipped. Confirming this point, we find Allah the Almighty commanding us to offer certain acts of worship in congregation so as to keep people of authority from thinking that they are of higher rank than those who are poor.

Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. Pilgrimage is a proof to the equality of human beings before Allah the Almighty; we see them all wearing the same clothes and going round the Ka'aba in the same way. We find no difference whatsoever between those of power and authority and those who are poor. In other words, people are all equal to each other, for they all humbly offer their acts of worship to Him the Almighty Alone. At this point, we should be fully aware of the fact that Allah Glorified is He wants to remove arrogance and conceit from among believers by prescribing such acts of worship, a point which definitively proves that they all are equal to each other.

In the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Say, "He has power to send punishment on you from above or from under your very feet, or to divide you into discordant factions and make some taste the violence of others." See how We explain Our Revelation in various ways, so that they may understand' (al-An'am: 65); nowadays, we see how Allah the Almighty divides people into discordant factions; we see so-called Muslims (those not heeding the laws of Islam) killing each other year after year. Even if we were to see two believing parties who are fighting against each other, where is the third group that will prevent them from doing so, as mentioned in the saying of Allah, 'And if two parties of the believers quarrel, make peace between them; but if one of them acts wrongfully towards the other, fight that which acts wrongfully until it returns to Allah's command; then if it returns, make peace between them with justice and act equitably. Surely, Allah loves those who act equitably.' (al-Hujurat: 9). Unfortunately, we currently watch the blood of so-called Muslims being shed and the number of victims increases day after day. Amazingly enough, other Muslims do nothing to prevent such destruction. Not only that, but we find them also providing opposing parties with weapons to kill each other; a matter that indicates that the ummah is under an awful and big disaster. Therefore, let us affirm once again that two forms of truth cannot be in conflict with each other. This is so because one issue does not accept but just one form of truth. In the same respect, a conflict between truth and falsehood will not take along period of time before the latter is defeated since it is always vanishing and fading. Yet, a conflict between two forms of falsehood may take a long period of time before it is settled since none of them deserves the support of Allah the Almighty.

The civil war in Lebanon is another case in point. It was due to this civil war that the Lebanese had discordantly divided into factions, all of which were led by their own whims and desires, thus tasting the violence of each other.

Allah the Almighty then concludes the verse with His saying, '…See how we explain Our Revelation in various ways, so that they may understand.' (al-An'am: 65)

This particular part of the verse clearly indicates that Allah the Almighty offers them clear proofs and even afflicts them with trials so that they would understand that they would receive no comfort as long as they astray away from the Divine Way of Guidance. As for Fiqh (understanding), it means to properly and correctly understand a matter. That is to say that Allah Glorified is He sent them down all of these signs and miracles so that they might heed admonition and go back to the Divine Way of Guidance.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

وَكَذَّبَ بِهِۦ قَوۡمُكَ وَهُوَ ٱلۡحَقُّۚ قُل لَّسۡتُ عَلَيۡكُم بِوَكِيلٖ ﴿٦٦﴾

Yet your people still reject it even though it is the truth. Say, 'I have not been put in charge of you [66]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 66)

This raises a very important question: 'What is that thing which is denied by the people of Prophet Muhammad?' The answer is that they rejected the Quran or the Divine Way of Guidance which includes the Quran itself and with all what Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent. We know for certain that the Quran is a miracle which contains the general pillars of the Islamic faith. The role of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was, in essence, to explain and lay down detailed rules. In this respect, we say to those who claim that they are not to abide by anything other than what has been mentioned in the Quran, The Quran is a miracle which contains the pillars of the religion. In addition, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent to explain and lay down the rules, and so his Shari'a is perfect.' Let us offer an example to illustrate this point.

Allah orders us in the Quran to perform prayer, yet we do not know how many prayers nor how many units we are to offer except from the Sunnah. In this regard, he peace and blessings be upon him is related to have said, 'Offer your prayers in the same way you saw me offering my prayers.'(1)

In addition, he peace and blessings be upon him is entrusted by Allah the Almighty to lay down rules and legislations. This point is affirmed by the Quran itself in which Allah says: '...Hence, accept [willingly] whatever the Messenger gives you [thereof], and refrain from everything that he forbids...' (al-Hashr: 7).

In this respect, we affirm that we offer all our acts of worship including prayer, almsgiving, pilgrimage, etc. in exactly the same way performed by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, we emphasise that he peace and blessings be upon him was the first person ever to apply the teachings of the Quran and the Sunnah. Allah Glorified is He says: '…and We have revealed to you the Reminder that you may make clear to men what has been revealed to them, and that haply they may reflect.' (an-Nahl: 44) This verse clearly indicates that Allah the Almighty has given Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the responsibility to explain and detail to believers what has been mentioned in general in the Quran. Therefore, we should be fully aware of the fact that we are obligated, under the Quran, to show obedience to him peace and blessings be upon him. In addition, the Quran tells that being obedient to him peace and blessings be upon him is part of showing obedience to Allah the Almighty. This is proven by the Quran in which He Glorified is He says: 'Say: Obey Allah and the Messenger…' (Al-'Imran: 32). In this aforementioned verse of Al-'Imran, showing obedience to the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him is included as part of being obedient to Allah the Almighty. Yet, in another verse of the Quran, He Glorified is He says: 'Say: Obey Allah and obey the Messenger…' (an-Nur: 54), showing separation between the two orders. Still yet a third verse in the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: '…and whatever the Apostle gives you, accept it, and from whatever he forbids you, abstain from it…' (al-Hashr: 7). As a matter of fact, all of these verse tell us to properly understand that the Sunnah has explained a number of topics that were generally mentioned, and not specifically explained, in the Quran. In the same respect, we emphasise that the saying of Allah the Almighty 'O you who believe, obey Allah and obey the Messenger and those in authority from among you…' (an-Nisa': 59) indicates that the showing obedience to those in authority is not independent, rather, it is included under the realm of obedience to Allah and obedience to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Back to the verse under discussion, Allah says: 'Yet, your people still reject it even though it is the truth. Say, "I have not been put in charge of you."' (al-An'am: 66)

It is quite clear that to deny the Existence of Allah, along with the Quran, means to completely deny the Divine Way of Guidance. As a matter of fact, disbelievers and polytheists deny nothing but the Truth, which never ever changes. In our daily life, when an incident takes place, we find that all those who are called to bear witness to what happened narrate the same story since they are telling about something which actually took place. Yet, in the case of some eyewitnesses who did not see the incident, we would find them giving different and contradictory narrations, which is why a prosecutor tries hard to get information from a witness since the truth is destined to be established even after a substantial amount of time. In the Quran, Allah the Almighty gives us a similar example; He Glorified is He says: 'He sends down water from the cloud, then watercourses flow (with water) according to their measure, and the torrent bears along the swelling foam, and from what they melt in the fire for the sake of making ornaments or apparatus arises a scum like it. Thus does Allah compare truth and falsehood! Then, as for the scum, it passes away as a worthless thing; and as for that which profits the people, it stays in the earth. Thus does Allah set forth parables!' (ar-Ra'd: 17)

This aforementioned verse of the chapter of ar-Ra'd tells that rainwater falls from the sky by the permission of Allah the Almighty. It is by this water that the lives of animals, plants, and man are preserved. The verse also tells that every valley takes the amount of water that suffices it. Yet, when this water flows down in these valleys, it is accompanied by bits of dirt that rise to its surface, exactly as the bits of dirt (dross) rise to the surface of gold when it is melted. Similarly, Allah the Almighty assures us in this verse that falsehood is groundless, drawing a similarity between it and the useless scum that rises to the surface of water. In the same respect, He the Almighty plainly tells us that He Glorified is He kept in the earth what is beneficial for people. Therefore, it is clear that denying the Truth, the Quran, and the Divine Way of Guidance by anyone is nothing but falsehood. As for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him he has not been put in charge of those who deny the Truth. In other words, his mission, first and foremost, was only to deliver the Divine Message to them. Thus, we stress that Allah the Almighty is the One Who has the Right to hold people accountable for their deeds, by rewarding the doers of good and punishing the doers of evil.

As for the saying of Allah the Almighty 'Yet your people still reject it even though it is the truth' (al-An'am: 66), the words 'your people' implies a sharp and stern rebuke for them since Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was sent from among themselves, meaning that they knew with certainty that he never ever told a lie, which is why they must have wondered, 'Is it conceivable that he invented a lie against Allah, although he did not do so with us human beings?!' However, personal desires and whims blinded their insight and sealed their hearts, and this is why Allah the Almighty addresses this matter in the Quran: 'Say: If Allah had desired (otherwise), I would not have recited it to you, nor would He have taught it to you. Indeed, I have lived a lifetime among you before it. Do you not then understand?' (Yunus: 16) In this verse, Allah the Almighty orders Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings upon him to say to them, 'Had not Allah willed to send the Quran down upon me to teach and instruct you, I would not have recited it to you.' Therefore, we take into account the fact it is out of Allah's Favour and Bounty that He sent him peace and blessings be upon him from among themselves. This fact is recorded in the Quran in which He the Almighty says: 'Certainly, a Messenger has come to you from among yourselves; grievous to him is your falling into distress, excessively solicitous respecting you. To the believers (he is) compassionate.' (at-Tawba: 128)

Despite the arrogance, stubbornness and disbelief of the polytheists of Mecca, he peace and blessings be upon him upon migrating to Medina, ordered 'Ali Allah be pleased with him to stay in Mecca to hand over trusts to their owners. This raises a good question: 'Do you, O, foolish polytheists, think that he peace and blessings be upon him shows you honesty, but in the meantime deceives Allah Glorified is He?!'

He the Almighty subsequently says:

لِّكُلِّ نَبَإٍ مُّسْتَقَرٌّ وَسَوْفَ تَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٦٧﴾

Every prophecy has its fixed time to be fulfilled: you will come to realize this' [67] (The Quran, al-An'am: 67)

The Arabic word An-Naba' is translated as 'prophecy' which means an important piece of information. We should note that not every piece of information is considered Naba'. This is because there are other provocative pieces of information which man will benefit at all from knowing them or even ignoring them. Referring to an important piece of information, Allah the Almighty says: 'Of what do they ask one another? About the great event, about which they differ?' (an-Naba': 1)

As for the main verse under discussion, it obviously explains that every prophecy will be fulfilled at a fixed time. As for the Arabic word Al-Mustaqarr, it is an adverb referring to the place wherein something is kept. It should be noted that adverbs are of two kinds, namely adverbs of time and adverbs of place. That is to say that Allah the Almighty has fixed a particular time and place for every event to be fulfilled, yet man will fully realise these fixed times and places only when He wills.

It is quite clear that An-Naba' is an important piece of information, which is astonishing. Thus, we must emphasise that there is nothing which is more important than this universal Divine Way of Guidance that is intended to save humanity from the darkness of misguidance which is available during all times and places. In addition, this Divine Way of Guidance saves people from tyrants and oppressors along with driving people's attention to the fact that it is only abiding by it that they could be protected from falling prey to their destructive whims and desires. At this point, we should consider that there is nothing more harmful to humanity than to follow their own whims and desires since when they are under this situation, they will never agree upon a single opinion. For this reason, Allah the Almighty took the responsibility of laying down this prefect way of guidance in such a manner that prevents man from following their desires. As for the other matters which may naturally be subjected to different opinions, including the disclosing of the secrets of the heavens and the earth, etc., Allah Glorified is He leaves them for the human intellect upon which to decide.

Real events of life affirm the accuracy and veracity of this point, for the human intellect has managed to uncover many of the world's secrets and to make many a scientific discovery. Thus, we must note that all the world's countries have reached similar conclusions concerning various fields of knowledge. For example, all the world's scientists, be they Russian, American, French, English, etc., have the same point of view concerning electricity. In other words, we find in our daily life that the world's different political and social systems agree on the same scientific discoveries, to the extent that some depend on previously made discoveries of other countries. Therefore, it is clear that Allah the Almighty leaves the material matters for the human intellect to think over, reflect, and invent to discover the secrets of the universe in such a way that enables them to achieve a comfortable life.

However, we find people differing with each other restlessly on the way of guidance. As a matter of fact, this big conflict of opinions results to people falling prey to deviant whims and desires. In this regard, we find that capitalism is completely different from socialism and that there are huge differences between all ideologies that are the result of personal desires including communism, existentialism, socialism, capitalism, etc. Truthfully speaking, none of these ideologies have been examined in the light of experience or a laboratory which is why many do not have the same opinion on them at all. It is quite unfortunate to find human beings making use of scientific inventions and discoveries they have agreed upon to use them as a means to impose ideologies over which they actually differ.

Truthfully speaking, Allah the Almighty has made this matter clear to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah did this by leaving human intellects free in everything that is subject to experience, but He, on the other hand, organised the life of man on earth in the light of the His Way of Guidance. This is due to the fact that Islam came right after priests and monks tried to impose their influence on the human intellect regarding the secrets of the universe.

We can prove this point by real events from the human history. In the European Dark Ages, Muslims in the east, out of the fact that they firmly adhered to the Divine Way of Guidance, made great progress. This was due to Islam teaching them how to use the intellect in unveiling the secrets of the universe. He the Almighty thus sent us this religion, which is the greatest event or gift ever, to make everything clear to us. It is as if Allah the Almighty is saying to us, ‘Indeed, this religion was weak in its very beginning, and those who believed in it were also a weak minority that were incapable of protecting themselves to the extent that they sought protection from a foreign king in Abyssinia. Despite all of this, they were victorious because they embraced and firmly adhered to this religion.’

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him revealed to the disbelievers of Mecca this Saying of Allah being discussed, ‘every prophecy has its fixed time to be fulfilled. You will come to realise this.’ (al-An‘am: 67)

The Arabic word Mustaqarr means a fixed time in which this particular event will be fulfilled. In other words, Allah the Almighty orders believers neither to hasten the fulfilment of events nor to terminate them since He Glorified is He had destined that this religion of Islam will spread all over the world but at a fixed time and place. As for the time of the fulfilment of this prophecy on the spread of Islam, it is extended until the end of time. Concerning the place of this spreading of the religion, it is the entire earth. This is due to the fact that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the seal of Prophets and Messengers, was sent to all of mankind.

In the same respect, this Quranic fact about the fulfilment of every event during a fixed time and place is confirmed by reality. Let us offer an example to illustrate this point. At the very beginning of Islam, those who converted were weak; yet when the saying of Allah the Almighty ‘[Yet] the hosts [of those who deny the truth] shall be routed, and they shall turn their backs [in flight]’ (al-Qamar: 45), ‘Umar ibn Al-Khattab Allah be pleased with him said, ‘Which hosts are these that shall be routed and turn their backs in flight when we cannot even protect ourselves?!’ Yet, during the battle of Badr, he saw the defeat of the polytheists of Mecca as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him previously told them. 'Umar Allah be pleased with him, said, 'True is the Speech of Allah! The hosts have been routed, along with turning their backs in flight.' In this regard, we find that every Quranic topic is preserved and recorded, so that mankind does not have an excuse against Allah the Almighty for He Glorified is He says: 'Every prophecy has its fixed time to be fulfilled. You will come to realise this.' (al-An'am: 67)

If reality did not confirm that every prophecy has a term set for its fulfilment, then what do the people who receive the Quran think of its veracity? This is why He the Almighty mentions every subject matter of the Quran along with its evidence. In the same respect, we should realise that He the Almighty does so in order that people would not have any excuse against Him Glorified is He.

The entire world has thus become fully aware of the victory of Islam, for Allah the Almighty had destined to teach Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his companions, Allah be pleased with them, how to cope with the events of life.

In this regard, we know for certain that He the Almighty used to send Messengers with religions over different periods of time, especially when corruption became widespread in the earth, He Glorified is He sent down His Way of Guidance to a particular Messenger or Prophet to guide mankind to the Straight Path. This is due to the fact that He the Almighty has created mankind in such a way in which they naturally achieve balance by themselves, so if one satisfied his unlawful lust in one way or another, we find that he falls under one of two categories: one, his soul might reproach and rebuke him for committing this sin, or two, he might not even view it as something unusual, and thus his soul does not reproach him anymore. Yet, we must stress that in case one's soul no longer reproaches him for committing a sin, this will certainly not be the case with the entire society. In this regard, we find amongst mankind those who bring society back to the Right Path by encouraging others to repent to Allah from their sins. Therefore, we are faced with a very important question: 'What will the situation be in the event the entire society, individuals, and groups are indulged in corruption?'

It goes without saying that it is at this point that Allah the Almighty must send a new Messenger with a new Message to get people back to the Right Path.

Thus, we emphasise that no one follows this new Messenger expect the weak minority and those who possess understanding from amongst the powerful. Thus, no one assumes that the weak seek refuge in the religion and incline towards it, due to their weakness. This is to say that Allah the Almighty warns believers and says to them, ‘Indeed, you are confronting a falsehood that has made mankind tired has along with oppressing and bringing hardships upon them. Truthfully speaking, when falsehood is wide spread in communities in such a detrimental way, none benefits from this but evildoers, whilst the doers of good feel tired. In other words, every act of corruption has a particular class that benefits from it. Yet, when those who benefit from the spread of corruption are found along with the Word of Truth, they take into account that they will certainly lose their authority and power in case this Word of Truth becomes dominant.

In other words, when the Truth is victorious, then corruption along with the authority of the evildoers must come to an end, which is why they, who benefit from the spread of corruption, stand in opposition to the new religion in order to maintain their position in the society.

Censuring non-Muslims while instructing Muslims how to cultivate their manners, Allah the Almighty says:

وَإِذَا رَأَيۡتَ ٱلَّذِينَ يَخُوضُونَ فِيٓ ءَايَٰتِنَا فَأَعۡرِضۡ عَنۡهُمۡ حَتَّىٰ يَخُوضُواْ فِي حَدِيثٍ غَيۡرِهِۦۚ
وَإِمَّا يُنسِيَنَّكَ ٱلشَّيۡطَٰنُ فَلَا تَقۡعُدۡ بَعۡدَ ٱلذِّكۡرَىٰ مَعَ ٱلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ ﴿٦٨﴾

When you come across people who speak with scorn about Our revelations, turn away from them until they move on to another topic. If Satan should make you forget, then, when you have remembered, do not sit with those who are doing wrong [68]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 68)

In this verse, Allah the Almighty tells Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that disbelievers will certainly speak scornfully about the Divine Message with which he was sent. That is why we found the disbelievers of Mecca once alleging that the Divine Message was some kind of magic, while another time we found them alleging that it was nothing but poetry; yet a third time they claimed that it is some kind of soothsaying, and, finally, we found them accusing him peace and blessings be upon him of inventing lies. Therefore, we should note that no one will say something like this except those who benefit from the spread of corruption in the universe. So, whenever there is someone who wants to put people back on track, they will take him as an enemy. This is why you, O, Prophet Muhammad, must take into account two essential points: first, your followers are weak, and thus they may not be able to resist and confront oppressive people, so you should not burden them with more than they can bear; rather, you should be patient with them since every prophecy will be fulfilled at a fixed time; second, when you see those who indulge in blasphemous talk about Allah's signs, you should keep your distance from them, show them harshness, do not approach them, do not befriend them, do not listen to them and do not let your Companions hear them, either. Why is this? It is due to the fact that they are indulging in blasphemous talk about the signs of Allah. However, should they be kept at a distance always? No, they should only be kept at a distance while they are indulging in blasphemous talk and denying the signs of Allah. Yet, when they cease doing so, then you should convey to them the Words of Truth, since there will be a dire need for them to hear it. This is why you should seize the opportunity, when they are not talking blasphemously about your religion or about you, to teach them the glad tidings that you have, along with teaching them the warnings that you have. For if you were to leave them misguided, then they will know nothing about the essence of faith, and you were sent only to convey the Message to people, and Allah Glorified is He wants goodness for all of His Creation.

'When you come across people who yakhudunna (speak with scorn) about our revelations, turn away from them until they move on to another topic…' (al-An'am: 68). The word yakhudunna (literally wade) used in the original Arabic text of the verse has an important significance, for it denotes 'going through water or mud'. When one goes through deep water, he cannot see the bottom and, therefore, cannot watch his steps or know where he is placing his feet. His feet may well fall into a cavern, unlike him who moves along a clear path and knows exactly where he is going. He places his feet where they will be firm. Thus, we understand why Allah the Almighty describes frivolous or vain talk as khawd (wading; the stem of yahkudun), for it means talking without guidance, without having solid ground to stand upon in one's arguments. This is why Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '... leave them out, playing in their wading' (al-An'am: 91). 'Playing' refers to any vain occupations that go beyond one's duties. However, if playing is meant to promote skills in any one of life's field, then children should be trained for it over time before they reach puberty. An example of this is when we train our children on swimming, archery, and horseback riding. No sooner does someone reach puberty than he starts to have a mission in life and take on responsibility. He should not waste time playing or doing whatever will distract him from performing his essential duties.

So, Allah the Exalted says: 'When you come across people who yakhudunna (speak with scorn) about Our revelations, turn away from them until they move on to another topic…' (al-An'am: 68). The human soul is subject to change which can make it forget some of what it is supposed well to bear in mind. However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has been promised by his Lord that he would not forget anything of what is revealed to him: '[Prophet], We shall teach you [the Quran] and you will not forget.' (al-A'la: 6)

So long as Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was guarded against forgetting what Allah taught him, then how should we understand these words of Allah: '…If Satan should make you forget, then, when you have remembered, do not sit with those who are doing wrong.' (al-An'am: 68) Sometimes, Allah Glorified is He directs to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a command by which He means to teach all the believers. Whenever a command comes down from Allah, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him should be the first to heed it, which explains why he is addressed by every command. Meanwhile, whenever any of the believers is overtaken by temporary heedlessness, he should do as Allah commands in this regard. When you remember, and then leave those who indulge in vain talk about Allah the Almighty until they start talking about another topic.

Allah the Exalted respects His servants, for He is the One Who has created them and Whose Omnipotent Knowledge encompasses all of them. He has created for every person an aptitude for preserving information, an aptitude for remembering and retrieving it and an aptitude for imagination. Each of these aptitudes carries out a particular task. Memory brings back old preserved information in order to make it the focal point of one's consciousness. One cannot make more than a single idea as the focus of his conscious mind, so for one idea to be focused on, another must be forgotten. This is why Allah has created forgetfulness. One idea has to be removed from the focal point of consciousness to the margin so that another may take its place. This is why one thought must be forgotten for another to be focused on. If one were to continue remembering a certain issue, it would be impossible for him to think of any other. Therefore, one idea remains the focus of one’s thought, and all other preserved information remains in the memory and can be retrievable. One may suddenly recall something that happened twenty years ago.

Thus, Allah says: ‘…If Satan should make you forget, then, when you have remembered, do not sit with those who are doing wrong.’ (al-An‘am: 68) Why does Allah associate forgetfulness with Satan? All the issues of faith are clear in the believer’s mind, and if any of them should be absent, this is due to Satan’s insinuations. Satan makes his way dazzling before man; he deceives him into thinking of what distracts him from the things that matter most. When Satan leads one to forget a matter related to his religion, and then he remembers what he has forgotten, he should seek refuge with Allah from Satan. When he has remembered, he should no longer sit with transgressing people.

By refusing to sit with them when they are wading in vain talk about Allah, a believer thus draws the attention of transgressing people that faith matters most to them; it is more important than their gatherings or whatever benefit may be taken from being with them. Thus, the believer himself benefits from remembering what Satan has made him forget, and transgressing people are also made aware of the importance of faith and how the believers prefer it to everything else. Allah did not enjoin on believers to totally separate from idolaters, while the believers were still in a state of weakness during the early days of Islam. The believers met in the Sacred Mosque of Mecca, and the idolaters would also go to the Ka‘ba - prior to the Conquest of Mecca - to perform their pilgrimage. It was not possible, therefore, for Muslims to abstain from meeting at the Sacred Mosque during the early days of the Islamic call. Allah permitted them to meet in the Sacred Mosque, and if those who indulged in blasphemous talk went there, they were commanded to keep their distance from them along with not taking into account what transgressing people said. No one bears the sin of another, as Allah says in the following verse:

وَمَا عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ يَتَّقُونَ مِنْ حِسَابِهِم مِّن شَىْءٍ وَلَٰكِن
ذِكْرَىٰ لَعَلَّهُمْ يَتَّقُونَ ٦٩

The righteous are not in any way held accountable for the wrongdoers; their only duty is to remind them, so that they may be mindful of God [69] (The Quran, al-An'am: 69)

This means that if you are with them and they indulge in vain talk about faith, you should leave their gathering so that you are not responsible for what they say. Even if you forget to leave them, but then remember and submit to the command of Allah by leaving their gathering, then you are drawing their attention to the fact that faith matters are far more to you than anything else. Indeed, this is showing respect to Allah's Commands by doing what He ordains and abstaining from what He forbids. This is why Allah Glorified is He tells us that the righteous; those who are mindful of Him, will bear nothing of the sins or punishment of these transgressors. By leaving them when they overstep the limits set by Allah the Exalted a believer thus calls them to reflect so that they may fear Him and spare themselves His punishment and His Wrath. After that, Allah the Almighty says:

وَذَرِ ٱلَّذِينَ ٱتَّخَذُوا۟ دِينَهُمْ لَعِبًا وَلَهْوًا وَغَرَّتْهُمُ ٱلْحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنْيَا ۚ
وَذَكِّرْ بِهِۦٓ أَن تُبْسَلَ نَفْسٌۢ بِمَا كَسَبَتْ لَيْسَ لَهَا مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ وَلِىٌّ
وَلَا شَفِيعٌ وَإِن تَعْدِلْ كُلَّ عَدْلٍ لَّا يُؤْخَذْ مِنْهَآ ۗ أُو۟لَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ أُبْسِلُوا۟ بِمَا
كَسَبُوا۟ ۖ لَهُمْ شَرَابٌ مِّنْ حَمِيمٍ وَعَذَابٌ أَلِيمٌۢ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَكْفُرُونَ ٧٠

Leave to themselves those who take their religion for a mere game and distraction and are deceived by the life of this world, but continue to remind them with the [Quran], lest any soul be damned by what it has done – it will have no one to protect it from God and no one to intercede; whatever ransom it may offer will not be accepted. Such are those who are damned by their own actions: they will have boiling water to drink and a painful punishment because they used to defy [God] [70] (The Quran, al-An'am: 70)

We said before that 'playing' is a useless occupation one practises as a pastime. This is allowed during childhood before one reaches the age of puberty and therefore, becomes responsible. If playing distracts one from performing his duties, this is frivolity for it diverts him from something that is obligatory and immerses him in an activity that wisdom does not justify. The life of this world does not deceive except straying minds. People of understanding realise that life of this world does not deserve to be treated as an end in and of itself; rather, it is a means to an end. It is a place of work and sacrifice, a way that leads to the Hereafter.

A mature mind would not let this temporary life dissuade him from his mission. The problem with so many is that they treat means as ends, so instead of employing them to reach the ultimate goal, they make them goals in themselves. Allah has brought us to this life to worship Him and work for the prosperity of the earth. Whoever deviates from this path will be punished on the Day of Reckoning.

Mankind's objective in the life of this world is not to live a long life, nor is it to obtain ranks, luxuries, or power. All of these things are subject to change, and they differ from one person to another. These are transient goals, and our shares of them are very different. The ultimate goal, however, is one for all people. It is the life after death, and the success of every action is measured according to how close it brings us to this objective. This is why a true believer would see the way people receive death as foolish, for when a youth of twenty dies, some would lament, 'It is a pity he did not enjoy his youth!' However, this life is not for enjoyment. Enjoying this life is not the objective. The life of the Hereafter is what we should aspire to. Given this view of life and death, whoever dies before the age of puberty which is the time when he becomes responsible for his deeds, has actually been saved from reckoning, and paradise will be his abode where he will receive everlasting blessings. This creed does not support protracted grief. When one is truly focused on his ultimate goal, he will seek to reach it with both diligence and eagerness. Suppose someone wanted to go to Alexandria, for example, would he take a horse, a coach, or a plane to get there? Needless to say, whatever brings him closer to his objective is best.

If Allah orders death to overtake some of His creation while they are still in the wombs of their mothers, then this is His Will. Whoever goes from his mother's womb to the grave has thus gone closer to the ultimate objective. He has thus been spared the stages of this worldly life with all its trials and tribulations. He went to paradise straightaway. Someone may live to be a hundred years. If he remains upright, despite all trials and tribulations, Allah the Almighty will admit him to paradise by His Mercy. Therefore, we should resign ourselves, with love and patience, to everything Allah the Exalted decrees for us, whether death or life. Allah Glorified is He says: 'Exalted is He Who holds all control in His Hands; Who has power over all things; Who created death and life to test you [people] and reveal which of you does best — He is the Mighty, the Forgiving.' (al-Mulk: 1-2)

Allah does not say, '…Who created life and death', but He mentions death first. This is to call our attention to the fact that receiving life does not mean forgetting about death, but thought of the latter, death that brings life to an end, should take precedence in the mind. This is the ultimate objective we all have in common and that we should all focus on. Any other goals or objectives pertaining to this life are temporary and subject to change and, therefore, must not dissuade one from the real goal.

People bring up their children, prepare them for school, encourage them to succeed with high scores, obtain high degrees, build remarkable careers, and become people of importance. This is right, but it must not be the goal in and of itself. This is not for which we are brought up to live. The objective is that after which nothing else comes. We are commanded to work for the prosperity of the world, but this should only be a means to the real objective which is pleasing Allah and succeeding in the Hereafter.

This is why Allah says: 'Bear in mind that the present life is just a game, a diversion, an attraction, a cause of boasting among you, of rivalry in wealth and children. It is like plants that spring up after the rain. Their growth at first delights the sowers, but then you see them wither away, turn yellow, and become stubble. There is terrible punishment in the next life as well as forgiveness and approval from Allah; the life of this world is only an illusory pleasure.' (al-Hadid: 20) This is the life of this world. It is not worth sacrificing the Afterlife. Our focus should therefore be on what can bring us deliverance in the life to come, which is the remembrance of Allah; He says: '…but continue to remind them [with the Quran], lest any soul be damned by what it has done– it will have no one to protect it from Allah and no one to intercede...' (al-An'am: 70). We are commanded to 'remind' them with the Quran, sent down from Allah and put into practice by His Messenger, and the Sunnah (Teachings) of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. People need to be reminded of the punishment that awaits those who disobey the Ordinances of Allah the Exalted. Needless to say, Allah Glorified is He would not treat those who are conscious of Him in the life of this world in the same way that He treats those who deviate from His Way. One who slanders others, tarnishes their reputations, and oppresses them is by no means like him who adheres to the way of faith. A sound disposition understands that Allah rewards everyone for their actions, whether in the life of this world or in the Hereafter. It has been reported that Arabs used to say, 'A transgressor may not die until Allah has taken revenge from him.' However, some died, and people did not see them experience the revenge of Allah, so another saying goes, 'By Allah, behind this abode is an abode in which the doer of good is rewarded for his goodness and the doer of evil is rewarded for his evil.

Thus, Allah says: '…but continue to remind them [with the Quran], lest any soul tubsala (be damned) by what it has done...' (al-An'am: 70). The root of the Arabic word tubsala denotes 'prevention' as a punishment, which means either confinement of the punished person to a limited space in this life, i.e. restricting his freedom of movement or activity, or prevention of the source of life itself by causing this person to perish. Confinement – in human convention – is to detain someone in a particular place preventing him from oppressing others, i.e. to prevent an individual from inflicting evil on society by putting him in confinement. When Islam came, instead of confining the transgressing individual, it orders the entire society to abandon that individual in some cases so he may be allowed freedom of movement, but no one would talk to him, laugh with him or share happiness or grief with him. This is a far severer punishment. An example of this is what happened with the three who lagged behind the Muslim army and refrained from fighting in one of the battles alongside Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. One of them approached his wife, but she refused to let him touch her. A second greeted his cousin, but the latter did not return his greeting, so he sat down and wept! All Muslims abandoned them. The wrongdoers suffered punishment by being cut off from the entire society.

Therefore, Allah says: '…but continue to remind them [with the Quran], lest any soul be damned by what it kasabat (has done)...' (al-An'am: 70). The word kasb in the Arabic language means an increase on one's capital. The word has a second derivative, which is iktisab (acquisition). Sometimes the two words mean the same thing. Sometimes kasb refers to earning without using trickery or incurring unusual hardship. As for iktisab, it is to earn with trickery, manipulation, and difficulty. He who does something Allah has forbidden actually needs to go through difficulty and use more of his strength. So, kasb means earning lawfully while iktisab means earning unlawfully by using trickery and going through much difficulty to obtain something. Some earn what they have no right to and believe it is their right, which is the peak of evil.

This noble verse shows clearly the difference between the two words; Allah Glorified is He says: '…for it is (the benefit of) what it kasabat (has earned) and upon it (the evil of) what it iktasabat (has wrought)…' (al-Baqara: 286). An example of this is when a man looks at his wife. It is his lawful right, and he is not to blame for seeking this enjoyment. However, if a man looks at any other woman who is not lawful for him to enjoy, he has to act stealthily in order to do so. He would not want anyone to see him while he is sneaking to look at her. This is unlawful. Another example is when the mistress of a house goes into her kitchen and takes something to eat. She feels safe on doing so as she eats of the lawful earning of her husband. As for the maid, when she wants to take a piece of meat from the kitchen without permission from the people of the house, she has to act stealthily. She would be in fear of being found out. She would wonder if the mistress of the house has counted the pieces of meat. She would try eating a tiny portion of every piece so as not to be discovered. This would sure exhaust her since attaining an unlawful enjoyment always involves difficulty and unusual hardship.

Allah says: '…but continue to remind them [with the Quran], lest any soul be damned by what it has done– it will have no one to protect it from Allah and no one to intercede; whatever ransom it may offer will not be accepted. Such are those who are damned by their own actions...' (al-An'am: 70). A soul that wrongs itself by committing evil will have no protector or intercessor besides Allah, and no ransom will be accepted from it. A protector is he who helps you if you are in a dilemma, and the dilemma of the Hereafter is indeed immense. Being with no protection then is severe punishment, indeed. Not only will Allah deprive evildoers from His Protection, but there will be no one to intercede for them with the One Who possesses all Power: Allah Exalted is He. Such is the reward of them who do not take heed and refuse to follow the way of faith. Furthermore, '…whatever ransom it may offer will not be accepted...' (al-An'am: 70). So they will be denied all ways of deliverance: Allah will not protect them, nor will He allow anyone to intercede for them, and no ransom will be accepted from them. Their destiny will be this: '…Such are those who are damned by their own actions...' (al-An'am: 70). They will be confined in Hellfire, never to be released: '…they will have boiling water to drink and a painful punishment because they used to defy [Allah].' (al-An'am: 70)

The original text of the noble verse literally translates as follows '…they will have for their drink boiling water…' (al-An'am: 70). When we read 'for their drink', we think they will have something that will quench their thirst. However, when the nature of what they will drink is revealed, which is 'boiling water', we understand that it is not meant to quench their thirst, but to torture them. When evildoers hear this and they are whom Allah is addressing concerning this admonition, they move immediately from hope to despair. When they read '…they will have for their drink…', they expect a form of mercy to be given them, yet by knowing that this drink is nothing but 'boiling water', their expectation is destroyed and replaced by despair. If this truth had come right at the beginning, those being warned would entertain no hopes at all, and fear and grief would directly ensue. However, Allah means to begin with a word that gives hope then destroy it by unveiling the truth for the pain to be twofold: once for the destroyed hope and another for the coming grief.

Here is another example concerning this point: '... and if they beg for water, they will be given water [hot] like molten lead, which will scald their faces...' (al-Kahf: 29). When one reads, '... and if they beg for water, they will be given water...', the imagined good news will give hope, but this hope is then immediately crushed by the following words, '... [Hot] like molten lead, which will scald their faces...'. Allah also says: '... fabashsherhum [give them the glad tidings] of grievous suffering.' (at-Tawba: 34) The Arabic word fabashsherhum gives the impression that what is coming is good news.

Then, the news turns out to be of 'grievous suffering'. To give hope of deliverance then unveiling punishment, is one of the disciplinary methods used in the Quran. An example of this is when a tyrant exceeds the limits in transgression. Allah does not take revenge upon him unless he attains unusual power to the extent of thinking he can never be defeated. This is why Allah says in the Quran: 'So, when they had forgotten the warning they had received, we opened the gates to everything for them. Then, as they revelled in what they had been given, we struck them suddenly and they were dumbfounded.' (al-An'am: 44)

Allah has prepared for the wrongdoers a double torment: '…they will have boiling water to drink and a painful punishment because they used to defy [Allah].' (al-An'am: 70) In this verse, punishment is the just recompense for what they used to defy, and Allah the Almighty is never unjust to any of His servants. As for those who have chosen to follow the way of Allah, they will be rewarded with the best reward for what they have done. The natural disposition of human beings is capable of doing both good and evil, and Allah states clearly what one will get for what they do in this worldly life: 'Whoever has done an atom's-weight of good will see it, but whoever has done an atom's-weight of evil will see that.' (az-Zalzala: 7-8)

Allah says after that:

قُلۡ أَنَدۡعُواْ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ مَا لَا يَنفَعُنَا وَلَا يَضُرُّنَا وَنُرَدُّ عَلَىٰٓ أَعۡقَابِنَا بَعۡدَ إِذۡ هَدَىٰنَا ٱللَّهُ
كَٱلَّذِى ٱسۡتَهۡوَتۡهُ ٱلشَّيَٰطِينُ فِى ٱلۡأَرۡضِ حَيۡرَانَ لَهُۥٓ أَصۡحَٰبٞ يَدۡعُونَهُۥٓ إِلَى ٱلۡهُدَى ٱئۡتِنَاۗ
قُلۡ إِنَّ هُدَى ٱللَّهِ هُوَ ٱلۡهُدَىٰۖ وَأُمِرۡنَا لِنُسۡلِمَ لِرَبِّ ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٧١﴾

Say, 'Instead of God, are we to call on what neither profits nor harms us? [Are we to] turn on our heels after God has guided us, like someone bewildered, having been tempted by devils into a desert ravine, though his companions call him to guidance [saying], "Come to us"?' Say, 'God's guidance is the true guidance. We are commanded to devote ourselves to the Lord of the Worlds [71] (The Quran, al-An'am: 71)

The verse begins with questioning idolatry. What do idols and other false deities do for those who worship them? What do they do to those who do not worship them? This is the first point of logic that negates ascription of divinity to anyone besides Allah. For example, what does the sun give to those who worship it? How does it punish those who do not? The sun rises over whoever worships it and whoever does not worship it. What do idols do for their worshippers? What harm can they inflict on those who reject them? Idols cannot send punishment upon those who do not worship them. Rather, those who disbelieve in them benefit by their disbelief, for they have employed their minds to know the True God, the Creator of this universe. Thus, benefit and harm come only from the One True God: Allah. What does these words of Allah: ‘... [Are we to] turn on our heels after Allah has guided us...’ (al-An‘am: 71) mean? A step forward decreases the distance that separates one from his destination. To turn back on one’s heels is to go backwards after proceeding forward along the way. A true believer would not go back on his heels, after proceeding on the way to Allah, by worshipping other than Him. He has already believed and taken several steps along the path of guidance. It is simply not logical for them to turn on their heels and become losers. Whoever does so is: ‘…like someone bewildered, having been tempted by devils into a desert ravine...’ (al-An‘am: 71). The word ‘devils’ refers to the disobedient jinns. Jinns are the counterpart species of humans. Just as there are obedient and disobedient people, there are also obedient and disobedient jinns. Allah says: ‘Say [Prophet], "It has been revealed to me that a group of jinns once listened in and said, ‘We have heard a wondrous Quran that gives guidance to the right path, and we have come to believe it — We shall never set up partners with our Lord.’"' (al-Jinn: 1-2) This noble verse proves that some of the jinns are believers and some are not. We do not see jinns, but of course they do exist. They are part of the unseen world, as Allah tells us in the Quran. There is a logical and philosophical difference between the existence of a thing and our ability to perceive that thing. We believe jinns exist because Allah tells us so. If we cannot see a thing, it does not mean it does not exist.

‘Say, "Instead of Allah, are we to call on what neither profits nor harms us? [Are we to] turn on our heels after Allah has guided us…"' (al-An‘am: 71). This concept comes in the form of a question posed by believers themselves. It is indeed worth wondering! When Allah has guided us to the Straight Path, is it plausible to turn back on our heels and slide into deviation and misguidance after having been rightly guided?! Is it wise, after having been called to worship the One God, to call besides Him other deities that can neither benefit nor harm us? What a confusion this is! Indeed they are: '…like someone bewildered, istahwathu (having been tempted) by devils into a desert ravine...' (al-An'am: 71). The Arabic word istahwathu denotes 'enticement'. The Arabic prefix ist- means 'to seek'. Thus, ist- added to huwiyy (falling; ruins) makes up the word istahwa which means to seek to make someone fall or be ruined. It means to entice someone to make him go astray. It is to tempt someone into doing a thing without even having any argument that proves the logic of what you call him for. The root h-w-a has many meanings. One of its derivatives is hawa' which means 'the air we breathe'. Another derivative is hawa which is the inclination of the soul towards something; it denotes 'whim', 'caprice' or 'prejudice'. A third derivative is huwiyy which denotes 'falling' or 'devastation'. Thus, we understand that the word istahwathu mentioned in the verse means devils have taken advantage of his own desire and enticed him to his downfall. Allah the Exalted says: 'Devote yourselves to Allah and assign Him no partners, for the person who does so is like someone who has been hurled down from the skies and snatched up by the birds or tahwy (flung) to a distant place by the wind.' (al-Hajj: 31) Such is the result of following one's hawa (desire; prejudice). It always drags one to error and causes him harm. Therefore, one should not submit to it unless it is in accordance with what Allah commands. Otherwise, if one follows his hawa (desires), they will inevitably lead him to huwiyy (falling).

Allah says: '…like someone bewildered, having been tempted by devils into a desert ravine…' (al-An'am: 71). Bewilderment denotes hesitation between one matter and its opposite. Such is the state of whoever turns back on his heels after having been rightly guided. However, he has companions who call him to guidance. Thus he is stuck between devils enticing him and pious companions calling him to the right way, and this is why he is confused. When something falls down, it has no stability or direction, which makes the image presented in the noble verse very expressive of the state of confusion of him who is hesitant between right guidance and deviation. After depicting this perplexity, Allah states the way out of it: '…"Allah's guidance is the true guidance…' (al-An'am: 71). Guidance is the way that leads to the desired objective. The maker of a machine is him who can set it right. It does not know how to maintain itself. Only its maker can make it function properly. Likewise, no one can dispose people's affairs except the One Who has created him. What sows corruption in the life of this world is that Allah has created mankind, but they want to govern their lives by their own laws, not those set by their Creator. Indeed, '…"Allah's guidance is the true guidance...' (al-An'am: 71). When we all act as servants of the One God, our personal desires would not interfere with the laws governing life since we all will then act on the sublime laws set by Him, and no conflicts can thus ensue. When we all submit to the law of Allah, none of us will be able to humiliate another, for we are all servants of Allah, and there is no servitude to any but Him. Legislators enslave people by the laws they make for them. Such manmade laws may be tailored solely to further the interest of a certain group and make all others subservient to it. This is why true guidance is when we all submit to the One God. Society can only be set to rights when desires of its individuals are directed towards pleasing Allah the Exalted by following His way.

'But if the truth were in accord with their own likes and dislikes, the heavens and the earth would surely have fallen into ruin...' (al-Mu'minun: 71). This is why Allah sent down His Ordinance. His Law does not contain anything that is against mankind. We all remember the story of the Queen of Sheba (Bilqis) and Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him when she said: '…But [now] I have surrendered myself, with Sulaiman (Solomon)…' (an-Naml: 44). She did not say, 'I have surrendered myself to Sulaiman', but rather 'I have surrendered myself, with Sulaiman, to Allah...' (an-Naml: 44). It was not to Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him but to Allah she has submitted herself. When laws come from Him, it befits us to comply with the Will of Him Who has created us. In being true servants of Allah Glorified is He no one can enslave us, for we all become equal in our servitude to Him. Right guidance is to have faith in Allah as the One God, and faith is attained when we employ our minds to ponder the signs Allah has created in the universe. So we attain faith through reflection, and once we believe in Him, we submit our affairs to Him since He knows best what is good for us: 'We are commanded to devote ourselves to the Lord of the Worlds.' (al-An'am: 71)

Allah says in the following verse:

وَأَنْ أَقِيمُوا۟ ٱلصَّلَوٰةَ وَٱتَّقُوهُ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ إِلَيْهِ تُحْشَرُونَ ﴿٧٢﴾ to establish regular prayers and be mindful of Him.' It is to Him that you will all be gathered [72]

(The Quran, al-An'am: 72)

In this verse, we find a command to do three things: to submit to the Lord of the worlds, be constant in salat (prayer) and be mindful of Him in whatever we do or say. Embracing faith comes first then all we do must be in accordance with this faith. It starts in the heart: if firm belief is established in there, all the body will comply to the commands of the One the heart believes in. Submitting to Allah means to do what He enjoins on us and abstain from what He forbids. So worship includes active and passive things. Performing what we should, like being constant in observing salat, is an active act of worship, and avoiding what we are commanded to avoid is a passive act of worship; in other words, we worship Him by doing certain things and not doing certain other things. This is what it means to be mindful of Allah Exalted is He. Right guidance is to submit to the Will of the Creator, do what He ordains and avoid what He prohibits, and this is the essence of faith and submission: 'We are commanded to devote ourselves to the Lord of the Worlds.' (al-An'am: 71)

When Allah enjoins or forbids something, He knows that all His commands fall within our capacity. We are capable of both doing and refraining from what He commands. Allah has created within us the ability to obey or disobey Him, and He has given us free will to choose. He has given us the ability to do right or wrong, or the notion of obligation would be utterly nonsensical. Allah would not enjoin or forbid anything unless we had the ability and freedom to do or not to do it. Allah has distinguished mankind by the freedom of choice which is not given to other created beings in the universe. The sun, for example, does not have the freedom to rise or not. The wind does not have the freedom to blow or not. The earth is not free to grant or withhold the elements and nutrients Allah the Almighty has created inside it. Mankind, on the contrary, is endowed with the ability to choose between alternatives. Error occurs when one commits what Allah forbids or neglects what He enjoins. A true believer is he whose deeds and words are in compliance with the Ordinance of Allah. Allah Glorified is He has sent down guidance that perfectly fits the natural disposition of His servants and can perfectly set their affairs to right. He has created in us certain things that we share with inanimate objects, plants and animals, but we are superior to all of them due to our ability to choose and act based on our free will. This is how Allah the Exalted has made us unique. Consider this example: suppose someone fell off a high place, could he stop himself from falling? In this case, one becomes as helpless as an inanimate object. He has no freedom to choose to fall or float in the air! Take another example: it is that of growth. You grow up and your body changes through time without any control or interference on your part. You cannot say, 'Today, I want to increase in height by half a millimetre!' This is out of your scope. You do not know how your heart beats or your wormlike intestines function. You do not interfere with the activity of your stomach or liver. You do not control your breathing mechanism, which is an essential source of life. These are all matters that you cannot control. This is a Mercy from Allah the Exalted; were it in the hands of people to control such essential matters, they would kill each other! Allah Glorified is He has given us free will to choose in matters pertaining to His obligations and prohibitions. We will be held accountable for what we do, not what is done to us (like the aforementioned examples). We are responsible for the matters in which we have freedom to contemplate, and then decide to do or not to do. Since responsibility requires maturity and freedom, Allah the Almighty does not hold one accountable for his deeds unless he is mature (past the age of puberty), sane and free. As for him who is insane, he has no juristic responsibility since he has no power over his mind to think of what he says or does. The same goes for him who is not mature, or under the age of puberty since his capacity to understand is not yet complete. Likewise, one is not to be held accountable for what he is forced to do by a compelling power or authority.

After stating those three commands, Allah closes the verse by saying: 'It is to Him that you will all be gathered.' (al-An'am: 72) If faith were a superficial matter that has nothing to do with the reality of people, there would be no outcomes of embracing or forsaking it. However, Allah the Almighty draws our attention to the sublime end of faith that we should reach for. Let me give you an example – just for illustration, for Allah Glorified is He is elevated above all comparison. What a student does in his studies shows in the results of his exams. Whether or not he attends his classes, listens attentively to his teachers, revises his lessons, etc. must be reflected in the results he gets in the end. Thus, one must be recompensed for what he does since Allah the Almighty has given us freedom of choice to do good or evil. This is how faith guides you to righteous deeds because it directs you to a particular objective. So long as one believes there is Allah before Whom he will stand and receive his reward for his deeds in this life, one will be mindful of Him and keen on avoiding what He forbids, for fear of being punished for it on the Day of Judgment.

Allah says in the following verse:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى خَلَقَ ٱلسَّمَـٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ بِٱلْحَقِّ ۖ وَيَوْمَ يَقُولُ
كُن فَيَكُونُ ۚ قَوْلُهُ ٱلْحَقُّ ۚ وَلَهُ ٱلْمُلْكُ يَوْمَ يُنفَخُ فِى ٱلصُّورِ ۚ
عَـٰلِمُ ٱلْغَيْبِ وَٱلشَّهَـٰدَةِ ۚ وَهُوَ ٱلْحَكِيمُ ٱلْخَبِيرُ ﴿٧٣﴾

It is He who created the heavens and the earth for a true purpose. On the Day when He says, 'Be,' it will be: His word is the truth. All control on the Day the Trumpet is blown belongs to Him. He knows the seen and the unseen: He is the All Wise, the All-Aware [73] (The Quran, al-An'am: 73)

Allah is the One Who does not ever change. From Him comes the truth. He says about His creation of the heavens and earth: 'Allah keeps the heavens and earth from vanishing...' (Fatir: 41).

He raises the heavens '…with no visible supports...' (ar-Ra'd: 2). Such is the work of All-Capable God. The creation of man is just amazing, and what is even more amazing is the creation of the heavens and earth, as Allah says: 'Greater indeed than the creation of man is the creation of the heavens and the earth...' (Ghafir: 57). When we look at the formation of the human body, we find endless wonders, and to this Allah directs out attention in the Quran: 'On earth there are signs for those with sure faith – and in yourselves too. Do you not see?' (adh-Dhariyat: 21)

When you contemplate the sky and the earth, you find the wondrous precision of Allah's creation. Your own body is like a miniature of this amazing universe, a miniature of the wonders of Allah's work. Every day brings a new breakthrough in science and unveils new secrets in the miraculous creation of the human body, secrets that were unknown to those who lived in the past; those who will live after us will be guided to other secrets of which we know nothing.

Scientists have found out, for example, that a homogenous fluid reaches equal levels in communicating tubes, no matter how different in size or design the tubes are. We pour the liquid in, and it rises and reaches the same level in all of them. The law of thermal equilibrium was also amazing when it was first discovered. It is the secret why a stove sends warmth in all directions of a room in a cold winter night. However, this law is suspended in the bodies of the warm-blooded. The internal temperatures of our bodies remain thirty-seven degrees whether one is in the North Pole or the hottest spot on earth. How come your body temperature does not change with the weather? This is quite symbolic; it is one of the signs proving that Allah the Exalted has made the human being independent and unique in this vast universe. This is amazing. What is even more amazing is that the different parts of your body have different temperatures. If the temperature of the eyes were thirty-seven degrees, they would melt. This is why we find that the temperature of the eyes is only nine degrees. Temperature of the liver is forty degrees. The organs of your body have different temperatures, yet the overall temperature is the same. Allah's creation is miraculous indeed: 'On earth there are signs for those with sure faith– and in yourselves too. Do you not see?' (adh-Dhariyat: 21)

What happens when a speck of dust enters the air passage? One involuntarily enters into a fit of coughing in order to force this speck out. Coughing then is not your own decision; it is an involuntary reaction that is part of the precise system made and governed by the All-Wise Creator. The liver is enclosed within successive layers in order to maintain its relatively high temperature of forty degrees. It can only carry out its function at this temperature. The ears are quite sensitive to cold, more than the other body parts because their temperature is low. The creation of the Almighty Lord is full of wonders we still know nothing of. ‘It is He who created the heavens and the earth for a true purpose…’ (al-An‘am: 73). He has created the heavens and earth according to fixed laws that do not change except by His will. He says: ‘The sun cannot overtake the moon, nor can the night outrun the day. Each floats in [its own] orbit.’ (Ya Sin: 40)

If you think order is a form of evidence for the existence of an All-Wise Creator, look then at the perfect order of the universe. If you think anomalies are forms of evidence for the existence of an All-Powerful Lord, look at the instances when norms are suspended or reversed. Allah maintains perfect order in the system of the universe since any disorder or anomaly in this system would lead to destruction. However, when there is one blind person out of a thousand, this does not represent an imperfection in the universe. What appears to us to be an anomaly is actually an alternative among others that Allah the Exalted has willed for a reason. In cases where there are no alternatives, order is constantly maintained; the sun must rise every day, for example, and Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... On the Day when He says, "Be", it will be: His word is the truth...’ (al-An‘am: 73). Allah has brought us into existence in truth, and when He demolishes the sky and the earth and brings life to an end, it is in truth, too. When the sky moves from side to side and celestial bodies are scattered about and fall down, it will be in truth. It is not just the act of creation and bringing people and things into existence that proves the Majesty and Power of the Creator. Rather, the obliteration of this creation and elimination of all existence also constitute a proof of His Majesty and Power. At the beginning, Allah the Almighty said to the universe, ‘Be’, and it was. In the end, He will say to the end, ‘Be!’, and all creation will come to an end so the doer of good can be rewarded for his goodness, and the doer of evil can be given his due. A righteous person may suffer because of his uprightness throughout his life, and an evildoer may never be truly recompensed in this life. In the Hereafter, reward and punishment await, and all will be recompensed in accordance with what they have done. Thus, when the world is brought to an end, this is also a proof of the Greatness and Wisdom of the Creator, for then the Day of Judgment will come, and everyone will be given their reward. So, when Allah brought us into existence, it was for a reason, and when he removes us from existence, it is for a reason too. All His actions are in truth, and He is the One Who has always existed with no beginning and no end.

Allah Glorified is He says: '…All control on the Day the Trumpet is blown belongs to Him. He knows the seen and the unseen. He is the All-Wise, the All-Aware.' (al-An'am: 73) Has control ever belonged to other than Allah? In the life of this world, Allah the Almighty has distributed properties among His servants, so each has control in his limited dominion. He has also granted authority and power to some of His servants, so they also have control over their subjects. Thus, Allah allows His servants to exercise some control in this life, but in the Hereafter, everyone will be stripped of whatever he possessed or controlled in this worldly life; this is why Allah Glorified is He says: '…"Who has control today?" Allah, the One, the All Powerful.' (Ghafir: 16) In the life of this world, He grants us means to employ and reap the fruits of our work. He has created causes that, if we use, will yield the outcomes expected of them. He gives us the power and ability to have limited control over things. An employer has power over his employees whom he pays for their work. A cook has the ability to prepare food, a tailor to make clothes, and so on. However, in the Hereafter no one will be in a position to do anything for anyone; all power and control will belong to Him alone: '…All control on the Day the Trumpet is blown belongs to Him. He knows the seen and the unseen. He is the All-Wise, the All-Aware.' (al-An'am: 73) Control already belongs to Him in the life of this world, but He has given us means to employ and exercise control over so we can achieve the results we want, yet means do not work except by His Will and Permission. Allah Glorified is He has willed the earth to be a place for struggle in this worldly life, while the Hereafter is when we return to Him to receive our recompense. 'One Day– when the earth is turned into another earth...' (Ibrahim: 48).

The earth that we live on is created for us to settle in. We cultivate parts of it to get food, build houses on other parts, and exhaust the possible means Allah has created in it to make the world prosperous. In this life, Allah has created causes that we must make use of to gain desired outcomes. Land must be ploughed to grow plants. Mines must be built to extract iron. Special tools and machines must be used to find oil. These means and causes can never be in the hand of any one person, but Allah the Exalted has distributed them amongst His servants for each to be in control of a certain aspect of this life. When the means fall short, when there is nothing one can do to achieve the desired outcomes, the Creator of all means stretches out His Hand to His servants to assist them. He has made the means for you to work, and results and success come from Him only. He may also strip you of all the means so you resort to Him and ask Him for help. Thus, they are not the means and causes that lead to results by their own power, but they are all in the Hand of Allah and they work and yield results by His Power. Everything in the world points to Him and bears witness to His Majesty. A little child may believe that the small switch on the wall is responsible for producing light. An older child would know that it is the wire that connects the switch to the electricity box that brings light. Someone who has greater knowledge would understand that electricity is produced by generators powered by waterfalls. Therefore, behind every result, there is a series of causes that lead to it, and all the causes point to the Creator and spell His Might and Wisdom. He has honoured us by allowing us control of causes and means, but this control does not really belong to us, or no one would be able to strip us of it. This is all the manifestation of His Bounty, the One to whom all control belongs: 'Say, "Allah, Holder of all control…' (Al-'Imran: 26). Whatever powers He has granted to us in this life will be returned to Him on that Day: '…All control on the Day the Trumpet is blown belongs to Him. He knows the seen and the unseen. He is the All-Wise, the All-Aware.' (al-An'am: 73) Blowing into the trumpet is an announcement that something is about to happen. After the first blow, whoever is alive will die, and after the second blow, the dead will rise. Allah says: '…He knows the seen and the unseen…' (al-An'am: 73). As long as He knows the unseen, then obviously He must know the seen as well. The expression in the verse implies emphasis. Since He knows everything, He grants rewards based on His Wisdom. Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '... He is the All-Wise, the All-Aware.' (al-An'am: 73) The All-Wise is the One Who puts everything in place, and the All-Aware is the One Who knows everything and possesses Omnipotent Knowledge. He does not need to oppress anyone because the one who oppresses another only does so to benefit from something the oppressed person has. Allah is in no need of anyone; rather, we all are in need of Him. He does not benefit from anyone, but it is He Who endows everyone with benefits. This is why servitude to Him is an honour. The word 'servitude' is hated by people, and wars have been fought for liberating human beings from being enslaved by other human beings. A master would always want to make as much profit as possible through his slave. It is He Who gives us everything and never wants anything from us, even though we are His servants. This is how servitude becomes an honour. Ponder this verse: 'Glory to Him Who made His servant travel by night from the sacred place of worship [in Mecca] to the furthest place of worship [in Jerusalem], whose surroundings We have blessed...' (al-Isra': 1). By describing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as 'His servant', Allah means to praise and honour him. He peace and blessings be upon him was sincere in his servitude and devotion to Allah Glorified is He so He elevated him and bestowed on him abundant blessings.

Thus, there is a message for everyone: cast worries aside since you have a Lord Who is never overtaken by slumber or sleep and He is the Self-Sufficient Who protects and sustains all that exists. Whatever you need is in His Hand, so just call on Him, and He will be there for you and will respond to your invocations in the manner that best suits you. Is this not an honour?

Allah says in the following verse:

وَإِذْ قَالَ إِبْرَٰهِيمُ لِأَبِيهِ ءَازَرَ أَتَتَّخِذُ أَصْنَامًا ءَالِهَةً ۖ إِنِّىٓ أَرَىٰكَ وَقَوْمَكَ فِى ضَلَٰلٍ مُّبِينٍ ﴿٧٤﴾

Remember when Abraham said to his father, Azar, 'How can you take idols as gods? I see that you and your people have clearly gone astray' [74] (The Quran, al-An'am: 74)

Allah the Exalted revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him stories of previous Prophets to console him and give him patience to deal with the difficulties of calling to Islam. At the dawn of his call, the burden was really heavy for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and his Companions, Allah be pleased with them, so He told them what happened to previous Prophets to make their hearts stronger and firm their faith. In this verse, Allah the Almighty mentions some information regarding Prophet Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him: 'Remember when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father, Azar, "How can you take idols as gods..."' (al-An'am: 74) The word idh (when and or thus) is an adverb denoting place or time, i.e. remember well the time when Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said to his father Azar, 'How can you take idols as gods?' If you remember that, it will support you in your call to Islam.

Scholars have been disserting whether Azar is the actual father of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him or is it Tarikh [son of Nahour, grandson of Prophet Ismail (Ishmael)]. I have previously stated that fatherhood represents the forefathers of an individual; so the father, the grandfather, the great-grandfather, etc. are all considered fathers. Moreover 'fatherhood' (ubuwwa) can also apply to someone who is equal to the father, such as a paternal uncle. There is an example of this in the Quran where the Allah Glorified is He says: 'Or were you witnesses when death approached Ya'qub (Jacob)? When he said unto his sons, "What will you worship after me?" They said, "We shall worship your God, the God of your fathers…"' (al-Baqara: 133).

'Fathers', or abā' ', in this verse, is in the plural form. Thus, if we count the 'fathers' in the rest of the verse, we find them to be Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them. Note that the verse is about Ya'qub (Jacob), whose father was Ishaq (Isaac), son of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them. Nevertheless, Ismail (Ishmael) is mentioned together with those 'fathers'. If you break it down, Ibrahim (Abraham) is the father, leaving us with two names, Ismail (Ishmael) and Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them. Since Ismail (Ishmael) is the brother of Ishaq (Isaac) and the Quran is articulating the word 'father' (ab), the relationship of paternal uncle can applied.

A Noble Hadith states: 'I came out of marriage, and I did not come out of fornication: from Adam until my father and mother gave birth to me. I was never affected in the slightest by the fornication of the Days of Ignorance (jahiliyyah).'(1)

It is like the Prophet peace and blessings upon him is saying that his entire lineage is free from idolaters.(2) Azar was an idol maker, and Allah the Exalted says in another verse: '...Those who ascribe partners to Allah are truly unclean...' Then, if Azar were the true father of Ibrahim (Abraham) then Muhammad peace and blessings upon him would be from his progeny. I am of the opinion that he was his uncle because Allah's Messenger peace and blessings upon him also said, 'I have come from the loins of pure men and the wombs of pure women.' This is a statement showing that his lineage is noble and free from the impurity of idolatry on both the father's and mother's side. Therefore, it is not correct to believe that Ibrahim's (Abraham's) father was Azar since he was an idolater. Then, how do we explain Allah's statement: '…Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father Azar' (al-An'am: 74)? We must check the use of the word ubua, or fatherhood, in the Quran and the Arabic language. The Quran is unequivocal that just as fatherhood applies to the actual father from whose loins the son comes; it also applies to the brother of the father or the uncle. As mentioned, the evidence is that the Quran, which states: '... to his father Azar...' also states: 'Were you [Jews] there to see when death came upon Ya'qub (Jacob)? When he said to his sons, "What will you worship after I am gone?" They replied, "We shall worship your God and the God of your fathers, Ibrahim (Abraham), Ismail (Ishmael), and Ishaq (Isaac), the one single God. We devote ourselves to Him."' (al-Baqara: 133)

---

(1) Narrated by Ibn 'Uday in (Al-Kamil) and narrated by At-Tabarani in (Al-Awsat) from 'Ali.

(2) The Hadith clearly refers to purity of the reproduction in his lineage and not his ancestor's beliefs, and there are many authentic Hadiths where the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him mentions that his parents are going to hell-fire.

Fathers (abāʾ) is the plural of father (ab), and a plural in Arabic must be at least three: Ibrahim (Abraham) and then Ismail (Ishmael), the uncle, are both described as fathers, along with Ishaq (Isaac) who is the direct father of Ya'qub (Jacob) peace be upon them. They are the three fathers mentioned in this verse. Ismail's (Ishmael's) fatherhood in relation to Ya'qub (Jacob) is not that of an actual parent, but the paternal uncle since Ismail (Ishmael) was the brother of Ishaq (Isaac), who was Ya'qub's (Jacob's) parent. Therefore, the word ab can be used to refer to an uncle.

Another proof is in the statement of the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings upon him. When his uncle al-ʿAbbās was taken captive and he demanded: 'Return back my father to me.' In this statement, 'my father' meant his uncle Al-ʿAbbas, Allah be pleased with him.

Let us see how the word ab is conventionally used in the Arabic language we speak, which is one transmitted by hearing, fixed in our ears and articulated by our tongues. Although colloquial language has caused it to lose its eloquence, the roots of the pure language can still be traced back to our ancestors. It was known and accepted by them that whenever the real father was intended, he was referred to by ‘father’ only, without mentioning his name. If someone came up to you and asked, ‘Is your father here?’ and does not mention your father’s name, then he means your actual parent. However, suppose the questioner wanted your uncle, he would ask: ‘Is your father John here?’ When the proper noun is mentioned, you know that the uncle is intended due to the fact that if the real father was intended, his name would not need mentioning. Merely asking for the father would be sufficient. Therefore, if Allah had said: ‘when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father’ without mentioning the proper name, then we could have concluded that Azar was the father of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him and not his uncle, which would also make him a great grandfather of our Messenger peace and blessings upon him. However, the Quran mentioned him by name and stated ‘his father Azar’ the first name excludes the actual father from the word ab, and with that, the controversy surrounding this issue is put to rest.

Now, why does Allah the Almighty ask his Messenger peace and blessings upon him to remember 'when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father Azar'? (al-An‘am: 74) The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him came onto the Arab nation headed by Quraysh, the nation that confronted the call to Islam right at its beginning. Although Muhammad peace and blessings upon him came after an interval of cessation of Messengers, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was still central to the creed of the Arabic people since all of his rituals were extant in Arabia. For example, the imminent slaughtering of his son and the ransom from the sky took place there along with Ibrahim’s (Abraham’s) raising of the Ka’ba’s foundations was completed there. Allah the Exalted wants to make it clear to the Quraysh that the authority they assumed over the Arabs was only due to the Ka’ba, the House, being there. If this House, the Ka’ba, had not existed, you (Quraysh) would merely be a tribe amongst the other tribes. You would not have had any respect or domination, or special rank. However, you know that your merchandise goes to the north and south, and no one dares to intrude upon it. This is merely due to the fact that whoever would attack your merchants must come someday to the Ka’ba for pilgrimage, and you would have control over them during their stay in the House. In the chapter of al-Fil, we have seen how it was followed by the following verses: ‘For the protection of Quraysh; their protection during their trading caravans in the winter and the summer’ (Quraysh: 1-2). If the House had been destroyed by Abreha (Abraha)(1), the Abyssinian, the prestige of Quraysh would have vanished. Allah gave them victory so that their journeys would continue in the winter and the summer. Therefore, Allah said: ‘So let them worship the Lord of this House who feeds them against hunger and gives them security against fear.’ (Quraysh: 3-4)

Indeed, the Lord of this House is the One Who honoured and protected the Quraysh by the very existence of this House, built by Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. So, despite their worship of idols, the people had a doctrinal link to Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. Allah Glorified is He wants to touch their hearts with the mention of the man who was the cause of their dignity. Since their first doctrinal confrontation was also that of idol worshipping and Ibrahim (Abraham) also confronted the worshipping of idols, there was much social relevance.

'Remember when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father Azar, "‘How can you take idols as gods?"' Idols, or asnam, are stone-made images shaped like a living being, whereas a wathan is a sanctified raw piece of stone that has not been shaped, treated, or manufactured. This is the difference between sanam and wathan. However, from where did the idea of idols, or asnām, first come? People have always recognised causalities in life. Man needs light and sees the sun and then moon at night. He finds strength and rigidity in mountains; so he builds houses inside them. Thus, there are things in which man sees a causal quality, and then he starts believing they are immediate agents in producing effects. This leads to sanctifying objects such as the sun or the moon. People have worshipped celestial bodies before idols or asnam. In fact, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘How can you take idols as gods?’ (al-An‘am: 75). Then, He mentions the history of idols in the discussion: ‘When the night grew dark over him he saw a star...’ (al-An‘am: 76). So, there is a connection between idols (asnam) and celestial bodies. It all starts when man sees something that benefits him, thus he attributes every other benefit to it. He starts thinking that it has some power that he should respect. Unaware of the fact that the Creator of all these objects is unseen, he starts worshipping that which is observable to him. When celestial bodies set, some people said: ‘Let us make idols (asnam) to remind us of them.' Then, there came to be an idol (sanam) resembling the sun, an idol (sanam) resembling the moon and another resembling some star. The idols (asnam) were made to remind people of the original celestial bodies. Therefore, I always give the following advice: ‘People must not be heedless of the Original Cause because He is behind all causes.’ If the mind goes through a causal sequence, it will eventually reach a cause for which there is no (observable) cause, and that is when the capacity of the creation ends and the submission to its Creator should begin. Those who are fascinated by the means are the ones who see them efficient in and of themselves.

(1) Abraha (also spelled Abreha) (died after AD 553. 525—at least 553), also known as 'Abraha Al-Ashram (Arabic: أبرهة الأشرم), was an Ethiopian general then the viceroy of southern Arabia for the Kingdom of Aksum, and later declared himself an independent King of Himyar. Abraha ruled much of present-day Yemen and Hijaz from at least 531 -547 AD to 555 - 565 AD.

When people started becoming heedless of religion, they started to worship any object they perceived as being beneficial around them. People used to make pilgrimage to the Ka’ba, and they loved it even before the Message (of Islam). On their journeys to other countries, it was a custom to take along a souvenir piece of stone that was the same type as that of the Ka’ba. It served as a comfort to them until with time, these souvenirs were themselves labelled as holy with disregard to their origin.

Ibrahim (Abraham), the close friend*,* or khalil, of the Most Merciful, was not only honoured by Arabs, but also by the people of the Book. They were honoured so much so that they claimed he was affiliated to them by saying, ‘Indeed, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was a Jew’ or ‘He [Ibrahim (Abraham)] was a Christian.’ In confronting the Quraysh as well as the people of the Book, the Quran mentions the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to remind them of someone they already respected, Allah the Almighty says: ‘Remember when Ibrahim (Abraham) said to his father

Azar, "How can you take idols as gods? I see that you and your people have clearly gone astray."' (al-An'am: 74)

To go astray (dalal) means to pursue a goal but stray off the path that leads to it. During those days, people had a 'goal' to sanctify, appreciate, and praise whoever grants them blessings. Unfortunately, they strayed off their path by failing to see the 'Efficient and Original Cause' behind all causes and falling into a vicious cycle of created causes. This is 'clearly going astray' (dalal mubeen) as it is the state of a created being deceived by another created being. The first man came into a world created for him, with the earth, the sun, the moon, and the stars; the clouds send water down as rain, while the mountains provide food. He should have paid attention to the following issue: he did not create these things, nor has anyone claimed to have created them. Therefore, should it not have occurred to man that there is a Creator for all this? After all, even the most trivial of things have their maker. For example, no one ever observed a cup of water forming itself. In fact, there were many stages that led to its development. Someone must have discovered the suitable raw material, and another had to chemically change it; also, someone must have provided the funding until it finally became a cup. The same goes for a lamp. Just think of all that is involved in its making, whether financially or scientifically along with the elements of earth that have been used to make it. Even a lamp has been developing into different styles and shapes since the day it was first invented. Now consider the sun that illuminates half of the earth for a period of time and then the other half for another period of time. It does not require any technical support, nor has it ever failed in its task. Edison, the man who invented the lamp, studied in schools, and his story has gained much admiration by writers of his biography. However, has anyone related – with admiration and with faith – the story of the sun's creation that illuminates the whole universe? We need to stop being superficial and look deeper behind the observable causes to finally conclude there must be an Original Cause that has no cause behind it. We must also listen carefully and obey those (Messengers) who solved this mystery for us by the giving the following explanation: Allah the Exalted has created this universe for us. There is no resemblance to Him in His Attributes, nor in His power and absolute wisdom. What He wants from us is to follow His Way. Messengers were sent as a mercy to rescue us and to explain this mystery (of the creation). Allah the Almighty says through His Messengers: ‘I am the One Who created the heavens. I am the One Who created the earth. I am the One Who made you in control of everything in the universe.’ This is a claim that is either true or false. If true, then you must declare your faith in Him. On the other hand, if false, then we need to ask ourselves, ‘Who else, besides Allah, has created the universe? How come he has not told us of his attributes nor has he sent us any messages to tell us about him? Also, since no one else has done so, the divinity must be declared to the only One Who has informed us of His Essence, His Attributes and His creation via Messengers, and no one has ever opposed Him. Then, we believe His claim to be the sole Creator of the universe and the One Who has given us control over it. Allah Glorified is He wants to prevent us from stopping merely at the causes, from ‘clearly going astray.'

وَكَذَٰلِكَ نُرِيٓ إِبۡرَٰهِيمَ مَلَكُوتَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِ وَلِيَكُونَ مِنَ ٱلۡمُوقِنِينَ ٧٥

In this way We showed Abraham [God’s] mighty dominion over the heavens and the earth, so that he might be a firm believer [75] (The Quran, al-An’am: 75)

Because Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him could see that the worship of idols (asnam) was clearly a way to go astray, Allah showed him His dominion (malakut) over the heavens and the earth. Since he discovered that there is a True God; that True God revealed to him the secrets of the universe.

The word malakut, or ‘greater dominion', is hyperbolic for mulk, or dominion, just as rahmut is hyperbolic for rahma, or mercy. The expression ‘greater dominion’ (malakut) implies the unseen facts. Whoever follows only the senses, like seeing and touching, merely perceives the dominion, or mulk. However, the ‘gretaer dominion’, or malakut, includes everything that is unobservable. Hence, the difference between mulk and malakut is that mulk, or dominion is all that one observes in front of himself, while malakut, or ‘greater dominion’ is everything behind this dominion, or mulk. To clarify that, let us consider how Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him negates Allah having any partners. ‘Ibrahim (Abraham) said, ‘Whatever you have worshipped, you and your forefathers, are my enemies, not so the Lord of the Worlds Who created me. It is He Who guides me and He Who gives me food and drink. And when I fall ill, it is He Who cures me, who will make me die and then give me life again.' (ash-Shu'ara': 77-81).

Note how the style changes in 'Who created me...' not 'He Who created me'. It is followed by 'It is He Who guides me'. Since no one ever claimed to have created man, it is a matter attributed solely to Allah the Exalted and does not need emphasis. On the other hand, some people claim to guide mankind, and whatever is claimed by humans is emphasised with the word 'He' (huwa). For any other matter that humans do not attribute to themselves, like creation, causing death and bringing back to life, 'He' is not mentioned. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him continues: 'He (huwa) Who gives me food and drink'. Then, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him again disregards all observable causes and defines an unseen reality: 'And when I fall ill, it is He (huwa) Who cures me'. Thus, he distinguishes between the means to a cure, provided by doctors and their prescriptions, and the Greatest Curer Who is Allah Glorified is He. People are often deceived by the means and think that the doctor is the one who cures. This is how Ibrahim (Abraham) disregards the observable means and focuses on the reality behind them. He disregards the observable (mulk or dominion) and focuses on the deep (malakut or greater dominion) to emphasise that indeed a doctor treats his patients, but he cannot cure them. In fact, there have been incidents where a patient goes to a doctor and dies of an injection given by the doctor. In such cases, the doctor turns into a cause of death instead of cure.

Glorified is He who inherits the doctor and his medicine
And lets the patient witness the death of those who gave up on him

Thus, 'it is He Who cures me', means the cure comes from Allah through the treatment by doctors. Furthermore, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him emphasises with 'He' (huwa) anything of which the cause might be deceiving.

When it comes to creed, Ibrahim (Abraham) has reached a high status acknowledged by all other Prophets. Allah Glorified is He refers to him by 'Ibrahim (Abrahim), who fulfilled his duty.' (an-Najm: 37). And He the Exalted says: 'When Ibrahim's (Abrahim's) Lord tested him with certain commandments, which he fulfilled, He said, I will make you a leader of people…' (al-Baqara: 124).

You, Ibrahim (Abraham), are trusted to be a (religious) leader for people. Then, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him asked Allah the Almighty to make his descendants (religious) leaders as well. He asked for that because he was only human, and was still in the stage of looking only at the mulk, or dominion. 'Ibrahim (Abraham) asked, "And will You make leaders from my descendants too?" He answered, "My pledge does not hold for those who do evil."' (al-Baqara: 124) This is due to the fact that [religious] leadership is not an inheritable title. Only those who deserve it could obtain it.

Ibrahim (Abraham) migrated with Hajar and their son Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon them to a barren valley next to the Sacred House where he left them to settle. The Quran relates Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him saying: 'Our Lord, I have established some of my offspring in an uncultivated valley, close to Your Sacred House, Lord, so that they may keep up the prayer. Make people's hearts turn to them, and provide them with produce, so that they may be thankful.' (Ibrahim: 37)

Ibrahim (Abraham) grasped that Allah Glorified is He was teaching him the secrets of the malakut, or greater dominion, and his mind realised that (religious) leadership is not bestowed upon those who do evil. Then, Allah the Exalted made it clear to him that he must distinguish between the succession of prophethood (religious leadership) and the Lord's granting of various foods. This is clarified when Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him supplicated: 'My Lord, make this land secure and provide with produce those of its people who believe in Allah and the Last Day…' (al-Baqara: 126).

When Ibrahim (Abraham) was asking for the sustenance of produce to be given (only) to those who believed in Allah and the Last Day, he was not bearing in mind the difference between the covenant of prophethood and leadership and the necessities of life. Thus, '…He said, "As for those who disbelieve, I will grant them enjoyment for a short while"…' (al-Baqara: 126). This means that He will indeed provide nourishment to those who believe as well as those who disbelieve.

Nourishment and the essentials of life are among the gifts of Lordship unlike (religious) methodologies which are among the gifts of Divinity. Allah is a Lord to all people since He is the One Who summoned them all: believers and disbelievers, obedient and disobedient. Furthermore, since He is the One Who summoned them all to existence, He will not deny them sustenance. Allah Glorified is He says: 'In this way, we showed Ibrahim our greater dominion (malakut) over the heavens and the earth, so that he might be a firm believer.' (al-An'am: 75).

Whoever follows the footsteps of Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him will end up being connected and attached to the True Lord's Essence Glorified is He. There is also a difference between being connected and attached to His Essence and being connected and attached to His Attributes. Those who worship Allah the Exalted because He is the All-Provider or because He is the Enricher are attached to His Attributes. On the other hand, those who are attached to Allah simply because He is God, and even if He made them poor, are attached to His Essence. When Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him purified his soul from all previous beliefs, then Allah entrusted him with universal secrets, along with granting him abundance as He grants anyone who is sincere in their attachment to their Creator; they are granted insight into universal secrets. Furthermore, there are many examples of that in the Quran, like: '... Be mindful of God and He will teach you...' (al-Baqara: 282).

As long as a person maintains the Trust of the Ordinance of the True Lord and follows His Rules, they are considered trustworthy with His Secrets (His Wisdom), and He gives them even more and more. 'Being mindful' (tattaqi) means to adhere to the True Lord's methodology, and this leads to receiving endless bounties from Him. When one is with Allah the Almighty, He certainly bestows gifts of His attributes upon them by bringing them closer and making them trust the more in Their Lord. An example of this is what happened during the emigration from Mecca to Medina. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings upon him and his companion Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him were hiding in the Cave of Hira, and Abu Bakr said, 'If any of them looks down at his feet, he will definitely see us.' This was certainly a logical conclusion, or an idea that made perfect sense. However, the Messenger peace and blessings upon him responded on a completely different level, away from the material universe to the pure world of the (malakut). He replied, ‘Abu Bakr, what do you think of two when Allah is their third?’[1]

What the Prophet is essentially saying is the following, ‘Be reassured. No one will see us because we are in Allah’s company, and He is invisible to sight.’ When someone weak is in the company of someone strong, then the law of energy is in effect and the weak is no longer weak. The same applies to a boy who may be bullied by children of his age, but when he is seen holding his father’s hand, not a single one of those children dares to approach him. People cannot be harmed by others unless they fail to be in Allah’s company since no one ever dares to harm someone who is in His Company.

Allah Glorified is He has also communicated a message about the dominion (mulk) and the greater dominion (malakūt) in the story of one of the great Messengers who was in the company of a righteous slave whom Allah bestowed His knowledge upon due to his being mindful of Him.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And found one of Our servants – a man to whom We had granted Our Mercy and whom We had given knowledge of Our own.’ (al-Kahf: 65) This pious man had obeyed the earlier Messenger of his time and completely implemented his methodology until he became attached to the True Lord Who gave him Knowledge of His own, or imparting some of His Divine Knowledge. It is truly amazing how Musa (Moses) peace be upon him is thinking within the laws of the dominion (mulk), whereas the one whom Allah has given Mercy and Knowledge from Him is thinking within the laws of the greater dominion (malakut), and each of them is excused since they are thinking within different realms. This is why the righteous slave explains later: ‘... I did not do [these things] of my own accord...’ (al-Kahf: 82). It was not his own doing; rather, he was commanded to do it. Both men could excuse one another, ‘The man said, "You will not be able to bear with me patiently."’ Thus, the righteous slave understood what Musa (Moses) peace be upon them was thinking, so he added: ‘How could you be patient in matters beyond your knowledge?’ (al-Kahf: 68) The Noble

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim

Quran relates: 'Musa (Moses) said, "Allah willing, you will find me patient. I will not disobey you in any way."' (al-Kahf: 69)

In these verses, a Messenger who has come to lead the way is now obeying a righteous man who has been truthfully following the way of a previous Messenger along with implementing his teachings as Allah the Exalted desires. This is Musa (Moses) peace be upon him whom Allah is telling us about; he is one of the great Messengers and one of those most determined among the Messengers. He then receives the command from the righteous slave: 'The man said, "If you follow me, then do not query anything I do before I mention it to you myself."' (al-Kahf: 70)

Why is this? The reason is that the righteous slave knows that Musa (Moses) will be talking from the perspective of the dominion (mulk), while he is talking from the perspective of the greater dominion (malakut). When they get on the boat, the righteous slave puts a hole in it, which is a visible damage from the perspective of the dominion (mulk); Musa (Moses) peace be upon him points out that this act is a violation of the law. How could the righteous man do such a thing to the boat? 'He replied, "Did I not tell you that you would never be able to bear with me patiently?"' (al-Kahf: 72) Musa (Moses) is reminded, and then there are the stories of the boy and of the wall.

These stories are showing how the malakut (greater dominion) corrects the anomalies of the mulk (dominion). Putting a hole in the ship was visible damage, but Musa (Moses) did not know there was a king who was forcefully taking away usable, seaworthy ships. This ship belonged to needy people who were working at sea, and the righteous slave wanted to preserve their ship for them so he put a hole in it that would cause the brutal king not to take it from them; when the brutal king sees a damaged ship instead of a seaworthy one, he would not take the damaged one. The owners would be able to fix their ship later. If Musa (Moses) peace be upon him had known that, would he not have been the one to have damaged the ship himself? He certainly would have damaged it. Therefore, if the one using laws of the mulk (dominion) had knowledge of the secrets of the malakut (greater dominion), he would have acted differently.

When it comes to killing a boy, one must ask, 'What did the boy do wrong?' The righteous slave explains: ‘The young boy had parents who were people of faith, and we feared he would overburden them by transgression and disbelief.’ (al-Kahf: 80). The parents might have spoiled this boy and feed him from unlawful wealth, so he would have become a tribulation for them. Thus, the boy was killed so that they would remain believers, and the Lord hastened the boy directly into paradise.

As for the wall, we also see the difference between the perspective of the mulk and that of the malakut. As it appears, the two of them came onto a village and asked its people for food. Asking for food is a sign of the veracity and extent of one’s need since it is not a request for money. Someone might ask for money to save it up, but someone asking, ‘Give me a loaf of bread to eat,’ this is a sign of his sincere need. The people of the village refused, however, to accommodate them, which means they were wicked and not good-natured. The righteous slave saw a wall that was on the point of tumbling down so he repaired it. Musa (Moses) peace be upon him became frustrated, and his frustration was justified. Why would the man voluntarily rebuild a wall for them when they would not even give them food? It would have been right for him to ask for something in return. Musa (Moses) was frustrated for a seemingly valid reason, but the righteous slave explained the situation. He rebuilt the wall because there was a treasure underneath it belonging to orphans. Since the people of the village were wicked and did not provide food, then if the wall had fallen, those wicked people would have stolen the treasure from its rightful owners who were still children. The righteous slave built the wall with faithful engineering that Allah the Exalted had inspired in him such that the wall would fall just as the boys attained maturity. Therefore, it was a temporary repair similar to setting an alarm to ring at a specific time. Likewise, the wall was set to fall when the boys had attained maturity so that they could take their treasure. This clarifies the contrast between the perspective of the mulk (dominion) and that of the malakut (greater dominion). The perspective of the malakut (greater dominion) sees the real causes hidden behind the outwardly causes. ‘In this way, we showed Ibrahim (Abraham) Our greater dominion over the heavens and the earth, so that he might be among the certain [in faith].’ (al-An‘am: 75).

Therefore, did he become certain or not? The word muqinin, meaning people who are certain in their faith, is the plural of muqin with the plural in the Arabic language indicating at least three. There are three successive levels of certainty (yaqin) that people can obtain: certainty of someone's knowledge whom you trust that would not lie ('Ilm al-yaqin), certainty of seeing something with your own eyes ('Ayn al-yaqin) and certainty of the truth of something or the certain truth (Haq al-yaqin). The True Lord presents this matter in the chapter of at-Takathur: 'Striving for more distracts you until you go into your graves.(1) No indeed! You will come to know. No indeed! In the end, you will come to know. No indeed! If only you knew for certain' (at-Takathur: 1-5).

What Allah is informing us is a statement out of His Own Knowledge, and we must be certain of the truth of His Knowledge. 'No indeed! If only you knew for certain you will most definitely see Hellfire, you will see it with the eye of certain.' (at-Takathur: 5-7). In the Hereafter, we will see hellfire with our own eyes ('Ayn al-yaqin).

The certain truth (Haq al-yaqin), however, is not mentioned here, but it is mentioned in the chapter of al-Waqi'a: 'If he is one of those on the Right, [he will hear], "Peace be on you" from his companions on the Right. However, if he is one of those who denied the truth and went astray, [he will be welcomed with scalding water. He will burn in Hell. This is the certain truth.' (al-Waqi'a: 90-95).

Throughout his life, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was truly amongst the people who are certain in their faith (muqinin); this was due to the fact that early on Allah the Almighty gave him insight into what is behind the outwardly aspects of the dominion (mulk), in other words, what is behind the outwardly aspects of things and their consequences. For example, Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him came to him when he was about to be thrown in the fire by his people and asked him, 'Do you need anything?' Ibrahim (Abraham) replied, 'Not from you!'

He refused Angel Jibril's (Gabriel's) help although he knew well that fire burns, but this is an outwardly aspect of the dominion (mulk) or an outwardly aspect of fire. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was also aware that the One Who created fire is the One Who gave it its burning property. Therefore, He is also the Only One capable of making it stop burning. Ibrahim (Abraham) was certain of His Lord. That is why Allah the Exalted did not put out the fire as that would have been a visible cause; He rather used it to confuse his enemies. Thereby, He clarified, 'O, fire! I have created within you the power to burn and I am telling you now: Do not burn!' ‘But we said, "Fire, be cool and safe for Abraham."’ (al-Anbiya’: 69) Thus, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him already knew such hidden truths behind the outwardly dominion (mulk) although this was one of the first tests in his life. He could have given another type of response to Angel Jibril (Gabriel) peace be upon him when he offered him help before they threw him into the fire.

(1) Literally 'until you visit the graves'… Their stay in the grave is like a short visit.

Then, towards the end of his life, he was tested with the command to slaughter his own son. Every person goes through phases of forming his personal identity, and at some point his own personal identity is the one controlling him. However, once he has children, their identity becomes more important than his own; in other words, he loves his children more than he loves himself. He wishes to offer his children everything he missed. At an old age, Allah the Almighty finally granted Ibrahim (Abraham) a son peace be upon them. Then there came the trial to slaughter this son when he was just a boy. This was a severe and harsh test, and it did not come through revelation, rather, it came through a dream. Furthermore, we all know that Prophets’ dreams are true. However, Ibrahim (Abraham) was aware that the True Lord does not want anything from His creation except their submission to His ordainment. Thus, when someone’s affliction has been extended upon him by his Lord, be it an illness or be it his wealth or in anything else, then be certain that he has not come to accept his affliction. For if he had come to accept it, the affliction then would end. An affliction is not lifted until one comes to accept it. No one is capable of pressuring his Creator. People are the ones who prolong their own afflictions. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him also knew that; he understood the perspective of the greater dominion (malakut). When it was said to him, ‘Slaughter your son’, he did not want his son to go through a period of rage against his father. Had he taken his son by one hand while holding a knife in the other, such a moment would have been filled with rage by his son causing him to miss the reward? Therefore, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him clarified the situation as the Quran relates: '…Ibrahim (Abraham) said, "My son, I have seen myself sacrificing you in a dream. What do you think?"…' (as-Saffat: 102)

This proves Ibrahim's (Abraham's) love for his son since he is keen on him obtaining the reward of submission. Then, what was Ismail's (Ishmael's) response? '…He said, "Father, do as you are commanded and, Allah willing, you will find me steadfast."' (as-Saffat: 102) Then the Quran confirms Ismail (Ishmael) and Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them both accepting Allah's affliction: 'When they had both submitted to Allah, and he had laid his son down on the side of his face.' (as-Saffat: 103) This accepting of an affliction is what lifts it. The Quran continues: 'We called out to him, "Ibrahim (Abraham), you have fulfilled the dream." This is how we reward those who do the good.' (as-Saffat: 104-105)

Allah the Exalted ransomed Ismail (Ishmael) with a tremendous sacrifice. Not only that, but He also granted Ibrahim (Abraham) a second child since he understood the malakut (greater dominion) of the heavens and the earth, along with having great wisdom to know where everything is coming from.

So, whenever someone is afflicted, all they need to do is accept it and think: 'If I am afflicted with something out of my hands and there is nothing more I can do about it, and then I need to be reassured that My Creator has brought this upon me, and it is a test from Him. I must be reassured that no creator would destroy his own creation. There must be wisdom behind all this, and even if I do not understand it, I trust in His wisdom.' The way a believer can rid himself from any calamity is to accept it, and then it will end. If someone is afflicted with the death of his son and choses to keep his house gloomy and sad, with the mother crying whenever she sees a boy the same age as her deceased son, then the door will never be closed for that grief. If they want Allah the Almighty to remove this test and to ease the pain, they must close the door on grief by learning to accept whatever happened. Every believer must know that whatever is taken away from him, will be replaced with a great reward that is better than his loss. Also, those taken by death are in a much better place than they were in this life. The following saying applies: ‘The afflicted (musab) are not those with an affliction or whose loved one passed away, rather the (musab) are those who have been denied the reward for their affliction.'

فَلَمَّا جَنَّ عَلَيْهِ ٱلَّيْلُ رَءَا كَوْكَبًا ۖ قَالَ هَٰذَا رَبِّى ۖ فَلَمَّآ أَفَلَ قَالَ لَآ أُحِبُّ ٱلْءَافِلِينَ ﴿٧٦﴾

When the night grew dark over him he saw a star and said, ‘This is my Lord,’ but when it set, he said, ‘I do not like things that set’ [76] (The Quran, al-An’am: 76)

The word janna means covering or concealing; it is the root for junun, or insanity, since it is like having a covered intellect. Janna Al-Layl (the night covered you) means that it became dark and concealed the things around you; it was so much so that you could hardly see anyone else and they could hardly see you. The word jannah, or a garden, is given this name because it contains trees and other things that cover up the person who walks inside it. Thus, janna is a root from which all derivatives indicate any type of covering.

The word kawkab, or planet, indicates that it reflects light from a star. We understand from the verse that Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was in pitch darkness so when a planet rose, he could immediately see it. Later, the planet changed its position, set, and then disappeared. During earlier days, people worshipped stars and celestial bodies, so Ibrahim (Abraham) was showing them an example of the same type of things they worshipped and said, ‘I do not like the things that set.’

فَلَمَّا رَءَا ٱلْقَمَرَ بَازِغًا قَالَ هَٰذَا رَبِّى ۖ فَلَمَّآ أَفَلَ قَالَ لَئِن لَّمْ
يَهْدِنِى رَبِّى لَأَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلْقَوْمِ ٱلضَّآلِّينَ ﴿٧٧﴾

And when he saw the moon rising he said, ‘This is my Lord,’ but when it too set, he said, ‘If my Lord does not guide me, I shall be one of those who go astray’ [77] (The Quran, al-An’am: 77)

In this verse, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him was actually saying, ‘This is my Lord.’ Scholars have been confused and have wondered, ‘How could Ibrahim (Abraham) have said, ‘This is my Lord’ as a statement? How could Ibrahim (Abraham) have uttered a phrase of polytheism?' Scholars strove to rid Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him of this statement. I say, 'May Allah reward you for that, but there is a very simple explanation to what he said. The One Who told us Ibrahim (Abraham) said, 'This is my Lord' is also the One Who said about him: 'When Ibrahim's (Abraham's) Lord tested him with certain commandments, which he fulfilled, He said, "I will make you a leader of people…" (al-Baqara: 124).

Thus, his statement 'This is my Lord' does not affect the loyalty of his faith. There must be an explanation to it. As stated previously, Ibrahim's (Abraham's) people were worshipping celestial bodies, and he wanted to draw their attention to the falsehood of their beliefs. If he had started off by calling them names like 'O liars!', 'O, people of misguidance!' and kept insulting them, they surely would not have paid attention to him or listened to him. In fact, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him used a strategy in debates called 'siding with the opponent' to borrow their ears and touch their hearts. It is also a way to prove to them that he is not biased against them from the outset. He' is slowly taking them by the hand. An example from our daily lives can be a man who is presenting a potential spouse to his daughter. The candidate is very short, while the girl – Allah knows – is quite tall! When the candidate comes to see her, she says to her mother: 'This is my suitor?' This statement means that she is denying that this short man could be her partner. So, when Ibrahim (Abraham) said 'This is my Lord', he was refuting that anything like a star or the moon or the sun could possibly be the Lord. Also, note how he marks out to them the conclusion for those who worship such planets. 'He said, "If my Lord does not guide me, I shall be one of those who go astray."' (al-An'am: 77) This statement implies who is guided and who is going astray. Therefore, 'This is my Lord' is a form of mockery like when the Quran mentions them saying: '...Is this the one who speaks [so contemptuously] of your Gods...?' (al-Anbiya': 36)

Therefore, it is as though Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said, 'Let us say that it is your lord, but it sets and disappears from you.' Furthermore, saying 'I do not like things that set' indicates that he is not biased against the people themselves.

Likewise, when Allah says:

فَلَمَّا رَءَا ٱلشَّمْسَ بَازِغَةً قَالَ هَٰذَا رَبِّي هَٰذَآ أَكْبَرُ ۖ
فَلَمَّآ أَفَلَتْ قَالَ يَٰقَوْمِ إِنِّي بَرِيٓءٌ مِّمَّا تُشْرِكُونَ ﴿٧٨﴾

Then he saw the sun rising and cried, 'This is my Lord! This is greater.' But when the sun set, he said, 'My people, I disown all that you worship beside God [78] (The Quran, al-An'am: 78)

Thus, he has proven that every celestial body – even the sun – ends up setting, so he logically concluded, as they watched, that the worship of celestial bodies is not valid. He used their own logic to have them listen as he finally negated this lordship.

Allah has accepted some cases as a justified reason to do many things, and we can compare some of them with others, such as when the True Lord says: '…those who reject Allah after believing in Him and open their hearts to disbelief…' (an-Nahl: 106). It comes after His statement: 'With the exception of those who are forced to say they do not believe, although their hearts remain firm in faith.' (an-Nahl: 106)

Allah the Exalted has permitted that a word of disbelief be uttered by a believer, who is firm in faith, to save his own life, and he is just an individual. Therefore, is it not acceptable for Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him to say in whatever manner, 'This is my Lord' to save an entire nation from worshipping idols?

Allah Himself says He will be asking sarcastically in the Hereafter: 'On the Day He asks them, "Where are my partners?"' (Fussilat: 47) Of course, Allah the Almighty knows He has no partners, but some people used to associate partners with Him. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings upon him would call out among his people, 'O God of the Gods!' since he knew that people had deified some favourable natural phenomena, and he wanted to clarify to them that there is only One True God. The Quran describes how pointless it is to associate partners in worship: 'Allah has never had a child. Nor is there any God beside Him– if there were, each God would have taken his creation aside and tried to overcome the others.' (al-Mu'minun: 91)

He also says: ‘Say, "If there were other Gods along with Him, as they say there are, then they would have tried to find a way to the Lord of the Throne."’ (al-Isra’: 42) The True Lord will also say to a disbeliever who used to take pride in his rank in this life: ‘It will be said, ‘‘Taste! Indeed, you are the honored, the noble!"’ (ad-Dukhan: 49) Is this an acknowledgement that a disbeliever is honourable and noble, or is it sarcasm? It is just sarcasm because if a disbeliever were really noble and had honoured himself, he would not have disbelieved, nor would he have ended up in Hellfire.

In the Arabic language, the sun is feminine noun, but in this verse, the masculine pronoun hadha has been used instead of hadhihi: ‘This (hadha) is my Lord’; it was also used in reference to the moon and other celestial bodies. The reason may be to keep the sentence uniform, or to avoid adding any suffixes to the word ‘Lord’ since in Arabic grammar nouns are originally masculine, and femininity is a branch. Also, the sun is grammatically feminine and not literally so. Taking this into consideration, scholars do not use the feminine form of any Attributes of Allah, even though it is sometimes the more hyperbolic form, as in the word ʿallamah. To give someone the attribute of knowledge, one says, ‘So-and-so is knowledgeable (ʿalim).’ If that person’s knowledge of things becomes like second nature, one says, ‘So-and-so all knows.'

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘... Above everyone who has knowledge, there is the One who is All Knowing (ʿaleem).’ (Yusuf: 76). If the knowledgeable becomes a master of his knowledge in a way that has never been perceived, we say ‘of full knowledge’ (ʿallaam), as the True Lord is described by ‘Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him: ‘…You alone have full knowledge (ʿallaam) of things unseen.’ (al-Ma‘ida: 116). Although the word ʿallaamah is the most hyperbolic, it is never used to describe Allah since it is in the feminine case.

When the sun set, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said: ‘…My people, I disown all that you worship beside Allah.’ (al-An‘am: 78). He explicitly said that at that time since it had been preceded by a gradually built argument that any sensible person would agree with. When the mind is awakened by the gift of guidance from Allah, a true believer, just like Ibrahim (Abraham), ceases to fool himself and thus cannot fool his people.

One can begin to engage in righteous actions only after ridding himself of corruption. Therefore, after ridding himself from worshipping anything but Allah, Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him can now declare.

إِنِّى وَجَّهْتُ وَجْهِىَ لِلَّذِى فَطَرَ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلْأَرْضَ حَنِيفًا ۖ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ مِنَ ٱلْمُشْرِكِينَ ﴿٧٩﴾

I have turned my face as a true believer towards Him who created the heavens and the earth. I am not one of the polytheists' [79] (The Quran, al-An'am: 79)

The heavens and the earth were the first scenery that man perceived when he came onto the world, where he then found out how Allah made him capable of controlling so much. However, Allah Glorified is He does not want us to think He created mankind only, for He has also created the whole universe: 'The creation of the heavens and earth is greater by far than the creation of mankind, though most people do not know it.' (Ghafir: 57)

Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him presented his proven belief to his people, why he worshipped only Allah who created the heavens and the earth. Furthermore, he rejected all corrupt beliefs in the universe since he was hanif, meaning by nature upright and a true monotheist. The root Hanaf literally means clubfoot, which is a twist in one or both feet making the affected foot appear to have been rotated internally at the ankle. When corruption overflows in the universe, the Heaven intervenes by sending messages. A Messenger can be said to 'twist himself' away from corruption, thus the root of a twisted foot or clubfoot. Also, when one twists away from a corrupt path, he is walking on a straight, upright, and correct path.

وَحَآجَّهُۥ قَوْمُهُۥ ۚ قَالَ أَتُحَٰٓجُّوٓنِّى فِى ٱللَّهِ وَقَدْ هَدَىٰنِ ۚ وَلَآ أَخَافُ مَا تُشْرِكُونَ بِهِۦٓ إِلَّآ
أَن يَشَآءَ رَبِّى شَيْـًٔا ۗ وَسِعَ رَبِّى كُلَّ شَىْءٍ عِلْمًا ۗ أَفَلَا تَتَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿٨٠﴾

His people argued with him, and he said, 'How can you argue with me about God when He has guided me? I do not fear anything you associate with Him: unless my Lord wills [nothing can happen]. My Lord encompasses everything in His knowledge. How can you not take heed? [80] (The Quran, al-An'am: 80)

To argue, or haajja, is short for hajaja where the two ja have been joined together. It means one side throws an argument, or hujjah, at another, who throws his own argument to refute it. If a discussion ends up with people refuting one another's arguments, it is called a debate hijaaj, with opposing arguments. 'His people argued with him haajja, and he said, "How can you argue with me about Allah when He has guided me...?"' (al-An'am: 80); Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him made it difficult for his opponents to argue against him since he was arguing with them by siding with them, and then proving them wrong. It is like the sole purpose of their debate was to turn Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him away from his monotheistic (hanif) religion, which he was led to through contemplation: 'I have turned my face as a true monotheist (or by nature upright) (hanif) towards Him Who created the heavens and the earth. I am not one of the polytheists.' (al-An'am: 79).

He responded, 'How can you argue with me about Allah when He has guided me?' (al-An'am: 80). In other words, the issue of faith has been finalised. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him believed in Allah the Exalted and was thus announcing to his people with courage: 'I do not fear anything you associate with Him: unless my Lord wills [nothing can happen].' This indicates that they threatened him since the word 'fear' was mentioned and he negated it. Ibrahim (Abraham) announced with strength: 'I do not fear anything you associate with Him...' (al-An'am: 80). I do not fear a celestial body that sets, be it a star, a moon, a sun, even idols (asnam) you worship. None of the idols can bring benefit or cause harm which are solely caused by Allah Glorified is He. Hence, the detailed exception in Ibrahim's (Abraham's) doctrine, '... I do not fear anything you associate with Him, unless my Lord wills [nothing can happen]. My Lord encompasses everything in His knowledge. Will you not remember?' (al-An'am: 80)

If the True Lord wills, He can send down upon a slave a celestial body that could strike or burn him. The celestial body is subject to the command of the One Who benefits and harms. It has no say and neither do those who worship it. If Allah wills, He sends down harm, and if He wills, he sends benefit. '...Unless my Lord wills...' (al-An'am: 80). There is a huge difference between the action and the one carrying it out. The instrument involved in the action is being operated by Allah the Almighty. If He wants to make a celestial body or a boulder fall on someone, it is not the celestial body or the boulder that makes itself fall. The doer is only Allah: 'My Lord encompasses everything in His Knowledge. Will you not remember?' (al-An'am: 80)

His statement 'Will you not remember?' shows that creedal teachings are a natural disposition, which is suppressed when a soul gives in to its passions. It is not required of man to come up with any doctrinal ideas. Rather, one only needs to be reminded which is an inherent ability in human nature. When Allah the Exalted brought Adam onto Earth and gave him the authority to rule it, He also taught him the theological doctrine with which he is supposed to rule. We all came from Adam who passed down the doctrine to his children who passed it down to their children. However, through time, people's personal desires interfered and doctrinal teachings were intentionally ignored because they demand people to take control of their desires and stay moral. Since doctrinal teachings can and are often forgotten, Allah the Exalted sent Messengers to remind people of the original teachings that were passed on to Adam. Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him then declares:

وَكَيۡفَ أَخَافُ مَآ أَشۡرَكۡتُمۡ وَلَا تَخَافُونَ أَنَّكُمۡ أَشۡرَكۡتُم بِٱللَّهِ مَا لَمۡ يُنَزِّلۡ
بِهِۦ عَلَيۡكُمۡ سُلۡطَٰنٗاۚ فَأَيُّ ٱلۡفَرِيقَيۡنِ أَحَقُّ بِٱلۡأَمۡنِۖ إِن كُنتُمۡ تَعۡلَمُونَ ﴿٨١﴾

Why should I fear what you associate with Him? Why do you not fear to associate with Him things for which He has sent you no authority? Tell me, if you know the answer, which side has more right to feel secure? [81] (The Quran, al-An'am: 81)

Our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him said to them, 'I fear none but Allah, and I do not fear what you associate with Him, something that does not harm nor benefits.' The word kayf (why) is used to indicate astonishment since it is only logical that we fear solely Allah, the One Who harms and benefits. When an argument goes back and forth, the personality of the debater in each party begins to emerge, and there are those who scorn the truth not because it is true but due to fearing being defeated in front of someone equal to them. Whoever wants to arrive at truth without superiority will not give an opinion that will provoke his opponent's ego. For this reason, our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him did not say, 'Is it you or I that has more right to feel secure?' Rather, he said: '...Tell me, if you know the answer, which side has more right to feel secure?' (al-An'am: 81). A similar example of this expression is what the True Lord taught His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to say: '…And most surely we or you are on a right way or in manifest error.' (Saba': 24)

This is the highest degree of impartiality in debate, for he did not declare that their way was misguidance and that his way was the correct and straight path; he trusted that when they examine his way and examine their way, they will conclude that he is upon guidance and that they are upon misguidance. This is a progressive debate. A similar example is what the True Lord taught His Messenger to say to his opponents: 'Say, "You will not be questioned about our sins, nor will we be questioned about what you do."' (Saba': 25)

Was it possible that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him would commit a sin? Allah forbid, for he was a flawless person. It is as if the Messenger is saying to them, 'Ask about me if I have committed a sin.' He did not describe their actions and say to them, 'We will not be asked about the sins you have committed.' Rather, he said: '... nor will we be questioned about what you do.' (Saba': 25). He did not attribute sinning to them, but he attributed it to himself since he is certain that if they go back and study the matter thoughtfully, doctrinally, and devotedly, they will end up believing in his way. This is the highest degree of subtlety in debate. The subtlety of debate becomes clear in the True Lord's statement: '...Tell me, if you know the answer, which side has more right to feel secure?' (al-An'am: 81)

Knowledge is a factual issue that you believe in and can prove. If any condition of these is not fulfilled, then this is not knowledge. An example of this is the lexical items of a language. Every lexical item has a meaning, and when you hear a lexical item and you know the language, you understand the meaning. When I say 'the sun', you picture the sun in your head, and the same goes for the earth, water, mountains, etc. You know the meaning of these lexical items without them being related to something else. We know that there is a difference between the meaning of a single lexical item on its own and what it can mean if it is related to something else.

If the lexical item is related to something else, then there must be a point in question. If we say that the sun is covered by clouds, then this is a point in question. Or we say, ‘The sun is setting.’ This is another point in question, and in this case, we have related something to something else. However, before we mention relative points in question, the lexical item must have a meaning itself, and this is what is called the meanings of language. Through this, one lexical item is joined to another lexical item, and this is how a point in question or a reference is formed, on condition that we know the meaning of each single item or word. After that we know the relationships, so, we say that this is a subject and that is a predicate, or a subject doer and a verb, i.e. something is related to something else.

Knowledge is a factual issue, or point in question, that you believe in and can prove. If any condition of these is not fulfilled, then this is not knowledge. If you believe in something, but it is not real, then it is a lie. When I say, 'Indeed, there are those who believe that the earth is spherical', is it really like that or not? If you believe something that is real, but you are not able to prove it, then this is taqlid (imitation). If the thing you believe in is not certain and both parties are equal, then this is shakk (doubt). If one party is more likely than the other, then, this is zhann (conjecture). The party that is preferred over is called wahm (fancy). All relative issues fall within these categories.

Ibrahim's (Abraham’s) statement: ‘Tell me, if you know the answer…’ (al-An‘am: 81) means that if you are certain of a relative issue that is real, you will believe in it and be able to prove it.

The True Lord says after that:

ٱلَّذِينَ ءَامَنُوا۟ وَلَمْ يَلْبِسُوٓا۟ إِيمَـٰنَهُم بِظُلْمٍ أُو۟لَـٰٓئِكَ لَهُمُ ٱلْأَمْنُ وَهُم مُّهْتَدُونَ ﴿٨٢﴾

It is those who have faith, and do not mix their faith with idolatry, who will be secure, and it is they who are rightly guided’ [82]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 82)

When the Companions of Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him heard this verse they were concerned about themselves since they examined their actions and found that they were not free of iniquity, so they feared that they would not be included in those ‘... who will be secure...’ (al-An‘am: 82). This troubled them, thus they took their concern to our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him when he reassuringly clarified, 'Indeed, Allah says the following about this iniquity: "Most surely polytheism is a grievous iniquity"' (Luqman: 13).

This verse shows clearly that this iniquity is related to faith, and not to action. Furthermore, we know that man's relation with his Lord is conditioned primarily on the summit of one's faith, which is to bear witness that there is no God but Allah and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is His Messenger. This means that none deserves to be worshipped except Allah. No one possesses any command in Allah's creation except Him. No one does any action from Allah's creation except from Him. No one provides power, knowledge, wisdom, constriction, or revealing of bounty except Allah, and this is the sphere of doctrinal faith.

The True Lord says: '... and do not mix their faith with iniquity...' (al-An'am: 82), so it is as if this matter is the scope of iniquity. As for action, He has differentiated for us between the faith which leads to action and the action which leads to potentials. He said: 'By the declining day, man is [deep] in loss, except for those who believe and do good deeds...' (al-'Asr: 1-3). The phrase in His statement: 'except for those who believe and do good deeds...' (al-'Asr: 1-3) needs to be broken down. Belief is one thing, and good deeds are something else. Thus, faith is an action that stems from the heart, while action leads to adhering to that which faith has legislated. The believer must understand that Allah the Exalted is One in His Essence, One in His Attributes and One in His Actions. He Glorified is He has no equal or partner. If you find that Allah has an attribute and you have a similar attribute, then you must understand that Allah's attribute is within the range of '... there is nothing like unto Him...' Thus, there is no power like His Power, no entity like His Entity, no action like His Action, and if something is missing from one's certainty in this, then this is iniquity in one's faith. For example, you do things utilising the capabilities that have been granted to you by Allah the Almighty. Before you do any action, it has to be assessed in your mind before it develops into saying or deed. This is the work dependent on you, and it is required of you. As for the works that you do not consider in your mind, you will not be asked about them. For example, you walk down a road, and you see a hole into which you almost fall. Self-preservation is something innate within man, so his feet avoid the hole, while his mind is incapable of considering it. These actions are what we call instinctive, or natural or coercive. This is why the Messenger of Allah peace and blessing be upon him said, 'Every matter of importance which is not begun with "In the Name of Allah, the Most-Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy" is devoid (of blessings).'(1) He also said, 'Every matter of importance which is not begun with "Praise be to Allah" remains defective.'(2)

The term dhu bal (of importance – literally goes through the mind) refers to everything considered in your mind before doing, and Allah's name must be mentioned therein. Many people are heedless of this matter, and we say to them, 'It makes sense that you must consider this matter in your mind since the actions that you do not consider are those which Allah has given to your natural inclinations – without you doing anything.' For example, if someone is eating and something goes down his windpipe, we see him coughing, without thinking, until this thing comes out. It is a coercive process. As for the matter that is dhu bal, you consider it in your mind before saying it if it is a statement or doing it if it is an action. What is required of you is that you begin with Allah's name; since the True Lord asks that we do not let the means preoccupy us from the Original cause.

For example, when you want to cultivate land, you plough it. Then, you plant a seed and cover it. After that you water it, and then crops grow. Do you have anything to do with this? You are doing nothing but bringing together the actions. The seed is created by Allah. The soil that you placed the seed in is created by Him. The elements in the earth that nourish the crops are created by Him Glorified is He. The nature of the seed allows it to suck up something that extends its roots, leading to the splitting of the seed; you will never have anything to do with these means. In spite of this, Allah Glorified is He considers what you do, for He says: 'Have you considered what you sow?' (al-Waqi'a: 63). Then, He says: 'Is it you that cause it to grow, or are We the causers of growth?' (al-Waqi'a: 64)

(1) Narrated by 'Abd al-Qadir Ar-Rahawi in (Al-'Arba'in), from Abu Hurayra

(2) Narrated by Ibn Majah and Al-Bayhaqi in (As-Sunnan), from AbuHurayra

It is a characteristic of faith that when you are about to do something after you ponder over it in your mind, you do not forget the One Who subjugated it for you. It is not within your power to do anything for yourself or with yourself without Allah's Will. If you do not do this and remember who subjugated this for you, then you have forgotten that the entire matter belongs to Him.

In our positive laws, when the judge presides in order to judge between people, there is an authority that enforces this ruling, so, he says, 'In the name of the people' or 'In the name of the law'. Thus, the people or the law is that which gives him the mandatory power to judge. Then, what is the power that enables you to judge whether things would respond to you or not? Therefore, you must say, 'In the Name of Allah Who subjugated this for me.' If you embark upon an action without saying this, you will be a ruiner, a fabricator and a claimer of something you are not capable of doing since it is not in your power to subjugate other created beings to you.

Indeed, the True Lord is the One Who has subjugated other created beings for you. You must remember the True Lord's name to compel other created beings to respond to you. Whoever is heedless of this has obscured their faith and mixed it with iniquity. If you see the fruits of your endeavour, beware of saying like what Qarun (Korah) said: 'I have been given this only on account of the knowledge I have.' (al-Qasas: 78) Rather, you should remember Allah and say, 'It is as Allah has willed' (al-Kahf: 39) because the reason for this is that if you were to say, 'I was given it by virtue of the knowledge that I have', the True Lord could cause you to suffer the same fate as Qarun (Korah): 'Thus, We made the earth to swallow up him and his abode...' (al-Qasas: 81). What happened to Qarun's (Korah's) knowledge that he had mentioned?

Thus, every matter must be attributed to Allah the Exalted. If there is any fault in you concerning this, then you have been subjected to confusion and you have obscured your faith and have mixed it with iniquity. The True Lord requires this from us so that His favours become truly blessed, while we are seeking them or reaping their fruits. Nothing results from an action that is begun with 'In the Name of Allah' except that which will help you obey Allah, be righteous, do good deeds and utilise His favours while enjoying well-being. Afterwards, when all these things are gathered, this will qualify you, in all your activities and actions, to gain another kind of security that is more comprehensive, complete and perfect than the security of the this worldly life. Indeed, you will attain the security of the Hereafter when you enter paradise.

Thus, those '... who will be secure...' are people who have not obscured their faith with iniquity. The True Lord wants us to constantly stick to His Way since Allah's provisions are continuous, and His mercy as well as His manifestations for His creation is ceaseless. This is due to the fact that He is All-Sustaining, in other words, with His absolute Power, His comprehensive sustenance for all existence and His Wisdom, He takes care of the means of His creation. Thus, you should always be in the company of the All-Sustaining, so that He can manifest Himself to you with the attributes of His preservation, the attributes of His Power, the attributes of His Knowledge and the attributes of His Wisdom. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to Bilal Allah be pleased with him 'Tell me about the best deed (i.e. one which you deem the most rewarding with Allah) you have done since your acceptance of Islam because I heard the sound of the steps of your shoes in front of me in Jannah (paradise).' Bilal said, 'I do not consider any deed better than that whenever I make ablution during day or night, I pray as much as was written for me after it.'(1)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him also said, 'When a Muslim or a believer washes his face in ablution, every sin which he committed with his eyes will be washed away from his face with water, or with the last drop of water. When he washes his hands, every sin which is committed by his hands will be erased from them with the water, or with the last drop of water. Also, when he washes his feet, every sin his feet committed will be washed away with the water, or with the last drop of water; until he finally emerges cleansed of all his sins.'(2)

So, the True Lord wants us to be firmly attached to His Way, in order to give to us, not to take from us since the difference between the slavery of a human being to a human being and pure slavery to Allah is that the human being takes the good of his slave, whereas our slavery to Allah gives us His goodness from storehouses that are never exhausted. We take more from Him whenever we increase in our slavery to Him. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He always wants to make us connected to Him. The phrase 'who will be secure' (al-An'am: 82) means that some will have security in the life of this world along with security in the Hereafter.

(1) Agreed upon by Al-Bukhari and Muslim and the wording is that of Al-Bukhari

(2) Narrated by Muslim

Someone might say that there are people who do not start their deeds with Allah's name, and the thought of Allah the Almighty does not even occur to them. Yet, they move about using and enjoying the powers and materials provided in the earth, along with happily enjoying what others invent by using these materials. We say that this is true, since, after exerting effort, there is a difference between enjoying a bounty and enjoying the blessing of a bounty. A disbeliever may exert effort and sow the earth, and thus, the earth gives him back. Yet, He reaps the bounty, but never will he enjoy the blessing of this bounty.

What is the blessing of a bounty? It is when the bounty you receive does not assist you in disobeying Allah Glorified is He. Rather, it consistently assists you in obeying Allah the Exalted. The status of many people is confirmed in His statement: '...You squandered the good things you were given in your earthly life, you took your fill of pleasure there...' (al-Ahqaf: 20). Therefore, beware of being misled or of saying, 'They do not say "In the Name of Allah, the Most-Merciful, the Dispenser of Mercy", but despite that they enjoy the delights of this worldly life.' Indeed, when you consider the advancements of their civilisation along with the high aspirations of their research and their discoveries, you find that they are always directed towards evil. No invention do they have except that they use it for evil, till Allah the Exalted decrees to distract them by afflicting them with torture and calamities, then, in the Hereafter, they will be chastised for their polytheism and disbelief. 'It is those...who will be secure...' (al-An'am: 82) means that, indeed, these people are the ones who did not mix their faith with polytheism. They will be granted security for the smallest details of their deeds, and security for these details combined will qualify them to be given security in paradise. Then, He Glorified is He says: '... and it is they who are rightly guided.' (al-An'am: 82)

Hidayah (guidance) is the path that takes you to an objective. You would not agree with any sort of activity unless this activity was going to lead to an objective that was drawn up in your mind, and this objective is successful after study and hard work. Nothing that is created or manufactured determines its own objective. Thus, leave it to Allah the Almighty to determine your task, for He is the One Who created you. It is common to mankind that no manufacturing ever determines its own task. Rather, it is the manufacturer who determines its objective, and that objective exists before the manufacturing. As long as the objective exists before the manufacturing, then who is he who suffers through the experience?

In a lab, scientific inventions result from the interaction of materials. The scientist is the one who exerts effort and suffers while experimenting, whereas you only know about an experiment when it has a medical outcome. Theoretical matters which weary the scientist cause weariness since they are not connected, from the very beginning, to the set materials, the full knowledge of the objective or to the means of reaching this objective. Who, then, is he who is rightly guided? The one who is rightly guided is he who knows the objective that he is striving for, along with the means that will qualify him for reaching that objective. If any fault befalls his personal faculties, he seeks help to rectify this fault along with seeking refuge in the One Who created these faculties, who is Allah the Almighty, just as someone would return a broken machine to the manufacturer. Many poets let their imaginations roam freely and said:

> Is there anyone who could show me my destination before I start my journey?
>
> And how could this be done when destinations are only reached after journeying?
>
> We say to him, 'The One Who created you showed you the objective or destination.'

The True Lord says after that:

وَتِلْكَ حُجَّتُنَآ ءَاتَيْنَٰهَآ إِبْرَٰهِيمَ عَلَىٰ قَوْمِهِۦۚ نَرْفَعُ دَرَجَٰتٍ
مَّن نَّشَآءُۗ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ حَكِيمٌ عَلِيمٌ ﴿٨٣﴾

Such was the argument We gave to Abraham against his people – We raise in rank whoever We will – your Lord is all wise, all knowing [83] (The Quran, al-An’am: 83)

Hujja (an argument) is strong evidence used for proving an issue that needs to be proved. It is as if the True Lord wants us, when we argue, to have an objective behind arguing. We know that if the objective behind arguing goes beyond the subject of the argument itself, in negation or affirmation, then it turns into jesting, and it becomes a matter of seeking victory over your opponent, and vice versa. However, whenever you participate in an argument, you must base it on its authentic objective. As it is said, define and clarify the object of controversy since the reason for this is that the truth must be dearer than you and your opponent. This is why the True Lord makes it clear: ‘Beware of arguing over a matter the way the masses argue.' Why is this? It is due to the fact that the voice of the masses mixes truth with falsehood, but Allah Glorified is He wants every person to be held accountable for his voice or what he says. An example of this is when there is a big rally and the people are shouting for the fall of someone, and no one knows who started the shouting.

What made the Arabs lose is that when they received the call for Islam, they held mass meetings, wherein they criticised the statements of the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and thus, they lost the ability to judge objectively. This is why our Lord says: ‘Say [Prophet], "I advise you to do one thing only: stand before God, in pairs or singly, and think. There is no sign of madness in your companion [the Prophet]...’ (Saba’: 46). It means that you gather and make Allah the Almighty your goal. Then, whoever has the power let him debate, using firm arguments as well as the statements of the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as a subject, and according to history and logic. No two people meet together and look into a matter, with only Allah Glorified is He in their thoughts, except that they will end up having a unified opinion. This is why we have secret negotiations in the modern age, derived from this principle of faith. ‘Such was the argument We gave to Ibrahim (Abraham) against his people. We raise by degrees whoever We will. Indeed, your Lord is All Wise, All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 83) Ibrahim (Abraham) argued with his people – among which was his father Azar- about the stars, the moon, the sun and idols. He also gained victory, with an argument, over their leader, Nimrod, who was the king or the sultan, when he wanted to debate with him about the power of giving life and causing death.

The True Lord Glorfied is He wants us to learn from the wisdom of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him. If you see your opponent going into that which will not bring an end to the debate, then take him to the level that he cannot escape from, and he will not get the better of you. King Nimrod(1) said to him, ‘I too give life and death’ (al-Baqara: 258). Our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him could have said, ‘You do not determine death. Rather, you kill, and killing is not since you are only destroying the structure, etc.’ However, he did not want to prolong the debate. He wanted to finish it. He, then, brought an argument that ended the debate as quickly as possible. Allah says: ‘... So Ibrahim (Abraham) said, "Allah brings the sun from the east. So bring it from the west"....’ (al-Baqara: 258). What was the conclusion of the debate? Allah says: ‘The disbeliever was dumbfounded.’ (al-Baqara: 258)

All of these are arguments that are clarified by Allah’s statement: ‘Such was the argument We gave to Ibrahim (Abraham) against his people. We raise by degrees whoever We will. Indeed, your Lord is All Wise, All Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 83)

Allah the Exalted gave Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him an argument over his people; in other words, he had degrees, eminence and elevation over them since establishing an argument over someone else is a victory and a victory raises the degree of your subject, and it also raises the degree of your work. He Glorified is He does not will anything except out of Wisdom, and He does not will anything except out of Knowledge since if He were to leave the will for a human being, he would do things without wisdom and without knowledge. The True Lord informs us that His will comes out of Wisdom and Knowledge for the benefit of creation since it is not based on any personal desire or on benefitting from any other. Allah the Almighty had all the attributes of perfection, majesty, and beauty before He created the creation.

(1) The story of the debate of Nimrod with our master Abraham

Indeed, creating the creation and their having faith does not increase Allah's sovereignty, and if they disobey, it does not decrease Allah's sovereignty at all. However, some people may lack wisdom, or they fail to gain it. When He imposes a command on His creation and they accept it without knowing its rationale, He shows them the wisdom behind it to make what is unacceptable to the human mind acceptable. This is because He created the creation, and He knows from pre-eternity that the creation has desires and wants. If every created being were given what he wanted, it would be at the expense of someone else, but the True Lord is Just and will not benefit an individual while tiring another.

The True Lord, the All-Wise, knows what improves the life of His creation. So, He does not respond to a slave's silly supplication. He knows that it will be of no benefit to the slave if He accedes to His request. This is why the True Lord says: 'Yet man prays for harm, just as he prays for good. Man is ever hasty.' (al-Isra': 11)

Indeed, the servant of Allah says, 'O, Lord! Do this for me. Make this easy for Me.', for, he believes that it is good for him, when it could actually be bad. Man is prone to be hasty. This is why the True Lord says: 'I will show you My signs soon, so do not ask Me to hasten them.' (al-Anbiya': 37)

Indeed, the True Lord checks the wants of mankind, and His are but for their benefit. 'We raise by degrees whoever We will. Indeed, your Lord is All Wise, All Knowing.' (al-An'am: 83)

Whenever the word rabb (Lord) is mentioned, it refers to creating as well as teaching mankind. When the word uluhiyyah (divinity) is mentioned, it refers to a commandment since Allah is the One Who is worshipped and obeyed when He commands and forbids. However, the Lord is the One Who creates, teaches, maintains, and provides you with the essentials of your life.

Therefore, the giving of rububiyah (Lordship) is one thing, and the giving of uluhiyyah (Divinity) is something else. The giving of Lordship is granted to the believer and the disbeliever, the obedient and the disobedient since Allah is the One Who summoned them into existence, and He subjugated the universe for them. However, the giving of Divinity is represented in ‘Do!’ and ‘Do not do!’, and this enters into the realm of choice. The one who disbelieves in Allah and does well in using the means gets the results of that, while the one who believes in Allah and does not do well in using the means does not take the results; the reason for this is the extracting of things from the universe is from the giving of Lordship.

The True Lord says:

وَوَهَبۡنَا لَهُۥٓ إِسۡحَٰقَ وَيَعۡقُوبَۚ كُلًّا هَدَيۡنَاۚ وَنُوحًا هَدَيۡنَا مِن
قَبۡلُۖ وَمِن ذُرِّيَّتِهِۦ دَاوُۥدَ وَسُلَيۡمَٰنَ وَأَيُّوبَ وَيُوسُفَ وَمُوسَىٰ
وَهَٰرُونَۚ وَكَذَٰلِكَ نَجۡزِي ٱلۡمُحۡسِنِينَ ﴿٨٤﴾

We gave him Isaac and Jacob, each of whom We guided, as We had guided Noah before, and among his descendants were David, Solomon, Job, Joseph, Moses, and Aaron – in this way We reward those who do good [84] (The Quran, al-An’am: 84)

We know that Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon him is the second son of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) after Ismail (Ishmael), and Yaqub (Jacob) is the son of Ishaq (Isaac) peace be upon them. When you see the word hiba (bounty), understand that it is not a right. A bounty is a gift given by the Giver to someone who does not deserve it since when you give someone what they deserve, this is not a gift but a right.

The True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear: ‘Beware of believing that any of my creation has the right on Me except what I make as a right for him, for everything is a bounty granted by me.’ The highest peak of His bounties and bestowals is, first, the highest degree of ascendancy of man over the universe. This is followed by the multiplication of his species, the male and the female, such that there is a progeny of boys and girls. Allah the Almighty says: 'Allah has control of the heavens and the earth; He creates whatever He wills. He grants female offspring to whomever He wills, male to whomever He wills...' (ash-Shura: 49).

The bounty of having children does not only come from the fact that He created man and woman and that physical contact between them produces children. Rather, the True Lord Glorified is He says: '…or both male and female, and He makes whomever He wills barren. He is All Knowing and All Powerful.' (ash-Shura: 50)

If it were nothing but a matter of mechanical procedure, children would just come, but that is not how it is. Whoever understands the malakut (greater dominion), he will be comforted by remembering that Allah's Wisdom is behind this bounty, for He is the All-Wise. Even being barren is a bounty. The one who receives it from Allah the Exalted as a bounty is pleased with it and does not look at other people's children with envy or resentment. Every child you see will become, by Allah's Will, like your child without the hardship of pregnancy and childbirth and without you having to look after them and take care of them your entire life. Whoever is pleased with Allah's bounty of having female offspring will find that they are a favour from Allah, and He will send males who will marry his daughters and will be more loyal to him than his own sons; this is all due to the fact that he has been content with what Allah the Almighty has given him. Therefore, you must contentedly take and accept the bounty in giving as well as the bounty in withholding.

The True Lord Glorified is He clarifies that He gave Ibrahim (Abraham) Ishaq (Isaac) and from Ishaq (Isaac) came Yaqub (Jacob) peace be upon them. We all know that man eventually dies, without a doubt, and when he grows old, he desires a son so that his name will live on, and it is as if he secures that. If he has a grandson, then the grandfather has secured himself another generation. However, we know the True Lord's statement: 'Wealth and children are the attractions of this worldly life, but lasting good works have a better reward with your Lord and give better grounds for hope…' (al-Kahf: 46). The continuation of a man's name (family name) in this worldly life is not a necessity for him if Allah the Exalted is going to reduce the value of man in the Hereafter! We notice that Allah Glorified is He tells about the supplication of Zakariyya (Zechariah): '..so grant me from Yourself a successor, to be my heir and the heir of the family of Yaqub (Jacob). Lord, make him well pleasing [to You].' (Mariam: 5-6). Allah the Exalted favoured Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him with not only Ishaq (Isaac) but Yaqub (Jacob) too peace be upon them. Furthermore, He Glorfied is He says: '...We gave him Ishaq (Isaac) and Yaqub (Jacob), each of whom We guided...' which means that both of them were from the people of guidance. Also, He says: '...as We had guided Nuh (Noah) before...'; this means that the guidance did not begin with Ishaq (Isaac) and Yaqub (Jacob), rather, it started with Nuh (Noah) peace be upon them before that: '...and among his descendants were Dawud (David), Sulaiman (Solomon), Ayyub (Job), Yusuf (Joseph), Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron)— in this way We reward those who do good.' (al-An'am: 84)

The True Lord Glorified is He continues:

وَزَكَرِيَّا وَيَحۡيَىٰ وَعِيسَىٰ وَإِلۡيَاسَۖ كُلّٞ مِّنَ ٱلصَّٰلِحِينَ ﴿٨٥﴾

Zachariah, John, Jesus, and Elijah – every one of them was righteous [85] (The Quran, al-An'am: 85)

The True Lord did not mention eighteen prophets consecutively; rather, He separated them out of wisdom. He Glorified is He says:

وَإِسۡمَٰعِيلَ وَٱلۡيَسَعَ وَيُونُسَ وَلُوطٗاۚ وَكُلّٗا فَضَّلۡنَا عَلَى ٱلۡعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٨٦﴾

Ishmael, Elisha, Jonah, and Lot. We favoured each one of them over other people [86] (The Quran, al-An'am: 86)

The matter is not restricted to these prophets. Rather, He the Exalted says:

وَمِنۡ ءَابَآئِهِمۡ وَذُرِّيَّٰتِهِمۡ وَإِخۡوَٰنِهِمۡۖ وَٱجۡتَبَيۡنَٰهُمۡ وَهَدَيۡنَٰهُمۡ إِلَىٰ صِرَٰطٖ مُّسۡتَقِيمٖ ﴿٨٧﴾

And also some of their forefathers, their offspring, and their brothers: We chose them and guided them on a straight path [87] (The Quran, al-An'am: 87)

When you look at these eighteen prophets that are mentioned here, you find that they are from the eighteen messengers that we have been commanded to believe in by name, and they are gathered in the statement of an-Nazhim:

In our record there are from amongst them eight
After ten; the rest are seven, and they are
Enoch, Hud, Jethro and Salih, and likewise
Dhu al-Kifl, Adam and with the Chosen One they are sealed.

The True Lord did not make any of the prophets kings except for two: Dawud (David) and Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon them in order to give us the idea that if Allah the Almighty wants to coerce a created being to do something that no one can do, He sends a Messenger king, for a slave cannot do anything to a king since the power resides with the king. Furthermore, society at that time was in need of a king to manage and regulate affairs and Allah Glorified is He does not want faith to be imposed by force, fear, and fright. Rather, He wants it to be out of choice, and this is why He made the majority of the prophets other than kings.

It was mentioned in one of the Hadiths (prophetic sayings): 'Shall He make you a prophet king or a messenger slave?'(1) He peace and blessings be upon him thus chose to be a Messenger slave since a king has authority and wealth which may cause him to transgress.

The True Lord Glorified is He wanted Sulaiman (Solomon) and Dawud (David) peace be upon them to be from amongst the prophets and to be kings, and He wanted power and the mark of sovereignty and authority to be exemplified in them. As for Ayyub (Job), he was chosen to represent a different aspect which was that of trial and patience along with prophethood. Every prophet had his portion of the shared characteristic of prophethood as well as his distinctive feature. Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him also experienced trials at first, but in the end he gained sovereignty and authority. Musa (Moses) and Harun (Aaron) peace be upon them had fame and many followers, such that we almost know of no other religions besides Judaism and Christianity. As for Zakariyya (Zechariah), Yahya (John), 'Isa (Jesus) and Ilyas (Elijah) peace be upon them, they possessed the character trait of abstinence.

As for Ismail (Ishmael), Alyasa' (Elisha), Yunus (Jonah) and Lut (Lot) peace be upon them they took what their lives were overflowing with: exalted actions, noble qualities, upright manner, setting a good example and always being mentioned with excellence.

(1) Narrated by Ahmad 2/231

Thus, there are various aspects which the prophets represented. When the scholars came across 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him, they asked if he was from their progeny, and they found those who looked into the matter, and they came to the conclusion that he is from their progeny from his mother’s side.

The mothers of a people are only Vessels

That are novel, but lineage is mainly preserved by fathers

The human element in 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is his mother, and it was with this that Abu Ja῾far Mohamed Al-Baqir, the imam of debate, argued in the presence of Al-Hajjaj ibn Yusuf Ath-Thaqafi, when it was said to him, ‘You claim that you are from the family of Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad, and from his progeny, even though Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad does not have any offspring!’ Imam Al-Baqir Allah be pleased with him said to him, ‘It is as if you have not read the Quran.’ He replied, ‘Which part of the Quran?’ He said, ‘Read "... and among his descendants were..." until you get to "... 'Isa (Jesus)..." 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him is thus from the offspring of Nuh (Noah) peace be upon him and is that from the father’s side or the mother’s side?’ He replied, ‘From the mother’s side.’ He then said, ‘Likewise, we are from the offspring of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.'

The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

ذَٰلِكَ هُدَى ٱللَّهِ يَهۡدِى بِهِۦ مَن يَشَآءُ مِنۡ عِبَادِهِۦۚ وَلَوۡ أَشۡرَكُواْ لَحَبِطَ عَنۡهُم مَّا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿٨٨﴾

Such is God’s guidance, with which He guides whichever of His servants He will. If they had associated other gods with Him, all their deeds would have come to nothing [88]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 88)

Dhalik (such) is a demonstrative for that which follows it, and what is intended by it is the guidance by which He (Allah) guided the people. We find that the word huda (guidance) refers to an objective for which a short path, that leads to it, has been laid. Our Lord Glorified is He is the One Who created, and He is the One Who set the objective. He sets, clarifies, and shows the path that leads to the objective. When guidance is attributed to Allah the Exalted then it is proof of the source and the origin, i.e. guidance is from Him. The word huda (guidance) is at one time attributed to Al-Wahib (the Giver), who is the True Lord, and in other times, it is attributed to the Prophets. The True Lord Glorified is He says: '... Follow, then, their guidance...'.

This is alluding to the way that Allah revealed to His messengers peace be upon them. Therefore, the True Lord guides all of mankind by showing them what is good. The one who devotes himself to what Allah shows, out of respect for his faith, will be helped by Him, and He will increase him in guidance. He wants to confirm for man that He has given him the ability to choose, so if you choose something you are not choosing it because our Lord is forcing you. Rather, you chose it because of the One Who created you with the ability to choose. Nothing happens in the universe that is outside of Allah's will. So, if Allah Glorified is He had wanted all of mankind to be guided, no one would be able to disobey. Rather, He wanted them to have the ability to choose. Every action that any one of them does is willed by Allah the Exalted. Yet, what He wills is not always liked by His slaves. This is why the scholars have said that there is a will in the universe and a will in the Revealed Law. As long as something is in Allah's Sovereignty then it is Allah's Will. The will in the Revealed Law is what is commanded, and what differs from it is the will in the universe. This is due to the fact that He has created you with the ability to choose.

An example of this – and to Allah belongs the highest similitude – is when you give your son a pound, and with a pound one has the ability to buy something. He takes the pound, and then goes to the market, and he is free to do what he wants with it. You say to him, 'Listen. If you buy a copy of the Quran, or a good book, or some sweets for you to share with your brothers, then I will be happy with you, and I will reward you well. If you buy a packet of playing cards, or you spend the pound on something I am not pleased with, then I will be angry with you, and I will never give you money again.'

With this statement, you have given your son freedom of choice, and when he goes to the market and buys a packet of playing cards, he does not do it out of compulsion from you because you are the one who gave him the choice. However, you spoke to him and asked him to make a good choice.

Allah Glorified is He has given man the ability to choose. If he chooses guidance, then Allah gives to him generously and if he chooses misguidance, then He will punish him.

With regards to the prophets, guidance came to them from Allah, for they were chosen, and when they devoted themselves to what the True Lord wanted, He granted them another kind of guidance which was to make righteous action beloved and dear to them. After that, Allah the Almighty makes it clear: ‘Beware of thinking that there is someone who slips away from Me’ since if they had associated partners with Him, their deeds would have all been in vain.

Thus, the True Lord did not create the creation and forced them into acts of obedience. Rather, He created them with the ability to choose, with regards to commandments, so they would enjoy the satisfaction of choosing Allah’s Way. If they had associated partners with Him, their deeds would have all been in vain. The word laww (had they) is a conditional particle for something that is impossible. This is proof that they did not associate partners with Him, and their deeds were not in vain. The word lahabita is derived from al-habt, which means the nullification of deeds.

The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُمُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ وَٱلۡحُكۡمَ وَٱلنُّبُوَّةَۚ فَإِن يَكۡفُرۡ بِهَا
هَٰٓؤُلَآءِ فَقَدۡ وَكَّلۡنَا بِهَا قَوۡمٗا لَّيۡسُواْ بِهَا بِكَٰفِرِينَ ٨٩

Those are the ones to whom We gave the Scripture, wisdom, and prophethood. Even if these people now disbelieve in them, We have entrusted them to others who do not disbelieve [89] (The Quran, al-An’am: 89)

The Book is the way and hukm (authority) is the power and authority that Allah gave to some of them. Alnubuwwah (prophethood) means that He made them role models and exemplars for humanity. 'But if the disbelievers deny it, We have entrusted it to a people who do not disbelieve.’ (al-An‘am: 89) He Glorified and Exalted is He has given us exemplars from the righty-guided messengers, the prophets and those He has chosen from their ancestors, their descendants and their brothers. These people are the ones who have come to take them by the hand and lead them out of darkness and into light. If some people refuse to be guided, then Allah Glorified is He will entrust other people to carry His Ways so that they can be the element of good that remains until the hour is established.

Who are those ‘people’? Some say that it is Quraysh that are being alluded to, and what is meant by His statement: ‘... We have entrusted it to a people who do not disbelieve.’ (al-An‘am: 89) are those from Medina, i.e. the Helpers. Or, what is meant by this noble passage is that every denier and disbeliever and likewise anyone who devotes himself to Allah and obeying Him, which could be a group of people who disbelieve in this truth, then Allah the Exalted will entrust a people who establish, defend and protect it. The reason for this is that He does not send down something good to the creation and then wipe it out. Rather, He must preserve it as an argument upon the creation. ‘... But if the disbelievers deny it, We have entrusted it to a people who do not disbelieve.’ (al-An‘am: 89) This shows that the people who do good to others are always entrusted by Allah. An example of this is the one who extends his hand to assist a weak person from among His creation, and then this weak person has been summoned by Him into existence. Whoever extends his hand to help has made himself a trustee for our Lord since he is doing what Allah Glorified is He requires, by making himself a means of it. This is because Allah is the Lord of all. He teaches all, He takes care of all and He provides for all. In this way, the one who does goodness and makes himself a trustee in Allah’s behalf becomes certain that he is spreading goodness to His creation, in addition to being certain that He will reward Him many times more than what he gave. The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

أُوْلَٰٓئِكَ ٱلَّذِينَ هَدَى ٱللَّهُۖ فَبِهُدَىٰهُمُ ٱقْتَدِهْۗ قُل لَّآ
أَسْـَٔلُكُمْ عَلَيْهِ أَجْرًاۖ إِنْ هُوَ إِلَّا ذِكْرَىٰ لِلْعَٰلَمِينَ ﴿٩٠﴾

Those were the people God guided, ‘[Prophet], follow the guidance they received.’ Say, ‘I ask no reward for it from you: it is a lesson for all people’ [90] (The Quran, al-An’am: 90)

‘Allah has guided...’ (al-An‘am: 90) also refers to the guidance of significance (that they are chosen), and the guidance of assistance. The proof is that He said: ‘Follow, then, their guidance...’ (al-An‘am: 90). Our master the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him is being addressed since the first part of the word ula’ika, ula’i (those) is a demonstrative for that which follows it, while the other part ka is for addressing the Prophet. ‘Those were the people Allah has guided. Follow then their guidance...’ (al-An‘am: 90). When we read this noble statement, we say ‘iqtadi’, and we do not say ‘iqtadih’. You do not pronounce the h unless you are stopping, and they call it the 'h of silence’. However, if you are not stopping, then you do not pronounce it. Each one of the messengers who was mentioned previously has a quality that distinguishes him. There are certain things that they all share, such as sincere slavery to Allah, faith in Him and the belief that He is One in His Essence, His Attributes and His Actions. All of them subscribe to these foundations. Each one of them is distinguished by a quality of goodness. Our masters Sulaiman (Solomon) and Dawud (David) peace be upon them had power, authority, and sovereignty. Ayyoub (Job) peace be upon him had the power to be patient with trials. Yusuf (Joseph) peace be upon him had the power to be patient, and then he became a powerful ruler. Our master Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon him had the power to submit to Allah the Exalted whilst in the belly of the whale, while Ismail (Ishmael) peace be upon him was truthful in what he promised.

What is required, then, of Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is that he followed all of them, which means that he was like Sulaiman (Solomon), Dawud (David), Ishaq (Isaac), Yaqub (Jacob), Ayyub (Job), Yusuf (Joseph) and Yunus (Jonah) peace be upon them. He was required to take the distinguishing quality of each of them and to share with them in that which is general, which is Allah’s Oneness. With this, all the distinguishing qualities of all the Prophets were gathered in our master Muhammad, the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him.

When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was commanded by His Lord, we must then believe that he has carried out the command, and as long as the virtues of the Prophets were gathered in him, then it is right for him to be the seal of the Prophets and the Messengers. ‘... (And) Say, 'I ask no reward for it (this message) from you. It is a lesson for all people.’ (al-An‘am: 90)

Why would a reward be demanded? You do not ask for a reward from someone unless the work you did for him benefitted him somehow such that you would deserve to be given something. It is as if the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him deserves to be rewarded for what he brought to his nation, but he conveys from His Lord: Say to them that, indeed, you have renounced this reward.

Compare between the one who brings some benefit to any one of you, something that does not take up more than half an hour of his time, and the one who does something for you that benefits you throughout your life in this world and beyond, in the Hereafter, then he says to you, 'I do not want any reward from you.'

Not asking for a reward can be said of all the Messengers except for two, and it is not found in the Quran that they said it. If you look in the chapter of ash-Shura, you find that the True Lord talks about Musa (Moses), and Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them. Then, He talks about the remaining messengers. The word ajr (reward) is not mentioned in the story of Ibrahim (Abraham) or the story of Musa (Moses) peace be upon them. However, reward is mentioned in regards to prophets other than them. The True Lord Glorified is He says: 'Their brother Nuh (Noah) said to them, "Will you not be mindful of God? I am a faithful messenger sent to you. Be mindful of God and obey me. I ask no reward of you from it, for my reward is only with the Lord of the Worlds.' (ash-Shu'ara': 106-109) Allah the Exalted says: 'Shu'aib (Jethro) said to them, "Will you not be mindful of Allah? I am a faithful messenger to you. Be mindful of Allah and obey me. I ask no reward of you for it, for my reward is only with the Lord of the Worlds.' (ash-Shu'ara': 177-180)

When you examine the chapter of ash-Shura, you find all the prophets, and you find 'I ask no reward of you for it...' along with all of their statements except for our master Musa (Moses) and our Master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon them. Why is this? We indeed say that the one who renounces the reward is the one who brings benefit to them.

With regards to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him we find that benefit was indeed directed towards him and brought to him by Pharaoh, who raised him. It is as if he took the reward beforehand, and this is why Musa (Moses) peace be upon him did not say to Pharaoh, 'I do not ask you for a reward.' Also, the Quran mentions Pharaoh's statement: 'Pharaoh said, "Did we not bring you up as a child among us? Did you not stay with us for many years?"' (ash-Shu'ara': 18)

Likewise, the issue of reward is not mentioned in the story of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) peace be upon him because he addressed his father Azar, and it would not make sense for him to say, 'I do not ask you for a reward.' In this way, the issue of reward is blotted from the stories of our master Ibrahim (Abraham) and our master Musa (Moses) peace be upon them but remains with the rest. This shows that the Quran has wisdom in the subtlest of its details, and this is due to the fact that the One speaking is our Lord. Our master Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is also distinguished by saying, 'I ask no reward of you for it...' except for one verse that does not contain this renouncing of reward: 'I ask no reward from you for this, only the affection due to kin....' (ash-Shura: 23).

Love is an act of goodness that comes from the love of the heart. As for an act of goodness that does not stem from love in the heart, this is a ma'ruf (act of courtesy) since man acts with courtesy with those he loves and those he does not love. This is why our Lord says: 'If they strive to make you associate with Me anything about which you have no knowledge, then do not obey them. Yet, keep their company in this life according to what is right...' (Luqman: 15).

Courtesy, therefore, is an act of superficial goodness, and when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asks that relatives be loved, is he referring to His own relatives, or the love of your relatives? It is relatives in an absolute sense and also the relatives of the one speaking, and he is the messenger who is conveying from Allah.

If we were to take '... only the affection due to kin...' (ash-Shura: 23) to mean the relatives of the speaker who is our master the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, then we would have never been able to properly reward him. However, if each one of us takes charge of showing goodness and courtesy to his people, then this is bringing together the spheres of goodness in all mankind.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '... it is a lesson for all people' (al-An'am: 90), and this is what gives us the combining of spheres, and everyone becomes concerned with his relatives, thus, competing and contending with one another to be good to them. Everyone is keen to expand his sphere of relatives. Here goodness becomes widespread, and love is made to last.

The True Lord Glorified is He says after that:

وَمَا قَدَرُواْ ٱللَّهَ حَقَّ قَدۡرِهِۦٓ إِذۡ قَالُواْ مَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ عَلَىٰ بَشَرٖ مِّن شَيۡءٖۗ قُلۡ مَنۡ أَنزَلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ
ٱلَّذِي جَآءَ بِهِۦ مُوسَىٰ نُورٗا وَهُدٗى لِّلنَّاسِۖ تَجۡعَلُونَهُۥ قَرَاطِيسَ تُبۡدُونَهَا وَتُخۡفُونَ كَثِيرٗاۖ
وَعُلِّمۡتُم مَّا لَمۡ تَعۡلَمُوٓاْ أَنتُمۡ وَلَآ ءَابَآؤُكُمۡۖ قُلِ ٱللَّهُۖ ثُمَّ ذَرۡهُمۡ فِي خَوۡضِهِمۡ يَلۡعَبُونَ ﴿٩١﴾

They have no grasp of God's true measure when they say, 'God has sent nothing down to a mere mortal.' Say, 'Who was it who sent down the Scripture, which Moses brought as a light and a guide to people, which you made into separate sheets, showing some but hiding many? You were taught things that neither you nor your forefathers had known.' Say, 'God [sent it down],' then leave them engrossed in their vain talk [91] (The Quran, al-An'am: 91)

The discussion is about those who reject and refuse to have faith in Allah the Exalted. The command comes to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to make it clear to them that they have not given Allah His true measure. The meaning of qadr (measure or rank) is knowledge of rank. His true measure cannot be fully understood by us human beings. Therefore, we understand Him according to our own ability and according to what has been asked of us, for the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Glory be to You! We cannot enumerate Your praise! You are as You have praised Yourself!'(1)

When someone praises someone else, it shows that he has evaluated the extent that this person should be praised. When we evaluate Allah's rank, then we must know that He possesses all the attributes of perfection; they do not come to an end, and they cannot be enumerated. It is from the True Lord's

(1) Narrated by Muslim in the Book of Prayer, Abu Dawud in the Book of Prayer and Witr, an-Nasa'i in the Book of Standing in the Night, At-Tirmidhi in the Book of Supplications, Ibn Majah in the Book of Supplications, Malik in the (Muwatta') in the Book of Touching the Quran and narrated by Ahmad in the Musnad 1:96,118

Mercy that He taught us how to praise Him in order for us not to fall into difficulty. Man does not have the ability to fully encompass Allah's beauty and majesty such that he could praise Him as He deserves to be praised. If a slave could encompass this – and he never will – then from where would he get an expression to carry out this praise? There is no rhetorician or man of letters who is able to compose expressions that can sufficiently articulate Allah's praise. The True Lord Glorified is He clarified for us via His Messenger: I have taken this matter upon Myself, and relieved you of it, so that you can all be equal. The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him said: 'Glory be to You! We cannot enumerate Your praise! You are as You have praised Yourself!'

In the phrase 'All praise be to Allah' alone, all of mankind is made equal. It is from His Mercy that He made all of mankind equal in knowing how to praise Him. The True Lord mentions here the situation in which it is negated that they have truly understood Allah's measure. Why, O Lord, are they not able to truly understand your measure? The answer is: '…"Allah has sent nothing down to a mere mortal"' (al-An'am: 91). This means that they denied that Allah the Almighty had chosen some of His created being and made them worthy of receiving His Way in order to convey it to the rest of the creation. The response comes from the True Lord for His Messenger to refute them: 'Say, "Who was it who sent down the Scripture, which Musa (Moses) brought as a light and a guide to people...' (al-An'am: 91).

So, the ones who say this must believe that a book was sent down to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him that the argument proves to be properly stated. The disbelievers of Mecca did not believe in any messenger, yet, they knew about the people of the Book which is proven by their statement: '... If only the Scripture had been sent down to us, we would have been better guided than them.' (al-An'am: 157)

We say that if you were to look closely at this verse of this chapter of the Quran, you will find that the matter applies to someone specific from those who were overcome by the argument. In the history of the Prophetic biography, we find that one of the rabbis was persistently saying things about Islam. His name was Malik ibn as-Saif(1), and the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings

---

(1) The story of Malik ibn As-Saif may Allah accurse him with The Messenger of Allah be upon him met him. A rabbi is a Jewish scholar, and he is supposed to be abstinent and detached for the sake of knowledge, but this man was fat. The normal habit of those who detached themselves for the sake of worship and knowledge was that they only took the provision that they needed, and this was because of a line in the Torah: 'Indeed, Allah hates the fat rabbi.' When Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him learnt that Malik ibn As-Saif, who was one of the Jewish rabbis, was saying many things about Islam, he said to him, 'Does it say in your Torah "Indeed, Allah hates the fat rabbi?"' The man was dumbfounded and he said, 'Never has Allah revealed anything unto man', meaning Allah has never revealed anything the like of what you are saying unto man. This is how we know that a statement like this came from the people of the Book. When Malik made this remark some Jewish men stood up and said to him, 'How could you say, "Never has Allah revealed anything unto man"! He said, 'Muhammad made me angry, and the anger made me respond with falsehood.' Jews who heard him said, 'Therefore, it is not appropriate for you to be a rabbi since you have dishonoured us. They ostracised him, and then put Kaʿab ibn Al-Ashraf in his place.

'... Say, "Who was it who sent down the Scripture, which Musa (Moses) brought as a light and a guide to people, which you made into separate sheets, showing some but hiding many? You were taught things that neither you nor your forefathers had known." Say, "Allah [sent it down]." Then, leave them engrossed in their vain talk.' (al-An'am: 91)

So, the divine writ here is the book that was sent down to Musa (Moses) peace be upon him which is the Torah, and they treated it like mere leaves of paper or detached pages. What they wanted from them was made manifest, and what they did not want was hidden, such as what they did regarding the matter of stoning being a punishment for adultery. Therefore, they had previously hidden what Allah the Exalted had sent down to them, and the True Lord clarifies this in numerous verses: '... but they too forgot some of what they were told to remember...' (al-Ma'ida: 14).

Those who did not forget it hid some of it and disclosed some of it. Those who did not hide it distorted it and corrupted it with their tongues. Thus, there are two kinds of forgetting: hiding and distorting. If only they had restricted themselves to this and stopped there. Instead, they came up with their own fabrications and said that they were from Allah. ‘Woe to those who write something down with their own hands and then claim, "This is from God,” in order to make some small gain....’ (al-Baqara: 79) The True Lord Glorified is He continues by saying: ‘…"You were taught things that neither you nor your forefathers had known." Say, "Allah [sent it down]." Then, leave them engrossed in their vain talk.’ (al-An‘am: 91)

If the discussion here is referring to the disbelievers of Mecca, then the Quran gave them what neither they nor their fathers knew since Islam came after a break in the sequence of messengers. If the discussion is referring to the people of the Book, then it is a true statement since when they hid things, the Quran exposed what they hid and what they distorted. The Quran came and straightened this out for them, for it is as if they had been confronted with the truth, and they had to abrogate it with the falsehood that they had changed and distorted. The True Lord’s statement: ‘Say: "Allah"...’ means that the One Who sent down the book is Allah the Almighty.

When the True Lord uses the form of a question, we know that for Him to really ask a question is impossible since He knows everything. He only uses the form of questioning known as ‘negating interrogative’ or ‘affirming interrogative’ since He wants a response of affirmation from those who stubbornly deny, and if they do not say anything or they are too confused or embarrassed to speak, then say to them, O, Muhammad: ‘Say: “Allah [has revealed that Divine Book]!”–and then leave them wading in vain discourse, amusing themselves’ (al-An‘am: 91).

The Arabic word ‘khawd’ (wading) literally means ‘stepping in a large amount of water’; the eyes cannot clearly see where the feet are being placed and the person can easily fall in a hollow. The word ‘khawd’ here is used to indicate the disbelievers’ delving into falsehood. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And then leave them wading in vain discourse, amusing themselves’ (al-An‘am: 91). Their actions are only jests of amusement on their part that cannot stand against the call to the Truth. Indeed, the call to the Truth will continue unscathed and they will remain unable to defeat it. All they are doing is delving into futile and frivolous falsehood.

However, does this mean that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him abandoned them? No, because every time he was able to get their attention, he informed and reminded them of his Message. Thereafter, after Islam had become predominant in the Arabian Peninsula and the Message had been made clear to all people there, they were given the choice of either accepting its presence or fighting its Message. The miracle of Prophet Muhammad came in the form of the Quran that the Arabs realized, was of a miraculous nature. Allah Glorified is He who had revealed the Torah and then revealed the Quran, rich in blessings, says after that:

وَهَٰذَا كِتَٰبٌ أَنزَلْنَٰهُ مُبَارَكٌ مُّصَدِّقُ ٱلَّذِى بَيْنَ يَدَيْهِ وَلِتُنذِرَ أُمَّ ٱلْقُرَىٰ وَمَنْ
حَوْلَهَا ۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ يُؤْمِنُونَ بِٱلْءَاخِرَةِ يُؤْمِنُونَ بِهِۦ ۖ وَهُمْ عَلَىٰ صَلَاتِهِمْ يُحَافِظُونَ ﴿٩٢﴾

This is a blessed Scripture that We have sent down to confirm what came before it and for you to warn the Mother of Cities and all around it. Those who believe in the Hereafter believe in this Scripture, and do not neglect their prayers [92] (The Quran, al-An'am: 92)

The Arabic word 'anzalna' ('we have revealed') arises from the Arabic root letters (nun, zay and lam). They are used to indicate the revelation of the Quran in various ways. In one instance, Allah Glorified is He says: 'Behold, We have revealed this [Divine Book] on the Night of Power' (al-Qadr: 1). In another verse, Allah Glorified is He says: '...We have revealed it step by step' (al-Isra': 106).

In one verse, Allah Glorified is He attributed the Revelation (nuzuul) to the Quran itself: 'And as a guide towards the Truth have we revealed this [Quran]' (al-Isra': 105).

In another verse, He attributed it to the one who carried the Message to the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him namely Angel Gabriel peace be upon him by saying: 'The Trustworthy Spirit [Angel Gabriel] has come down (nazala) with it (as a revelation)' (ash-Shu'ara': 193).

There are, therefore, several varied lexical expressions of the Arabic letters (nun, zay and lam). What are the reasons for their different lexical derivations in the verses mentioned above? We know that the Quran was not sent down as a whole to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him but was rather revealed as a whole to the lowest heaven when it was transported from the Preserved Tablet to the world. From that point, the Quranic verses were revealed in instalments according to worldly events. The Arabic word ‘anzala’ (have revealed) refers to the transfer of the Quran from the Preserved Tablet to the sky of this world. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Behold, we have revealed this [Divine Book] (anzalnahu) on the Night of Power’.

Thus, we can conclude that the Quran was revealed in its entirety during that first transfer from the Preserved Tablet to the sky of this world on the Night of Power. It was then sent down in instalments over the period of twenty-three years that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lived in this world after he first received the Revelation.

When Allah Glorified is He is referring to the Quran being revealed in its entirety from the Preserved Tablet to the lowest heavens, He uses the word ‘anzalnahu’, where the initial ‘a’ refers to the ‘hamza sign’ used to indicate transitive verbs. (In Arabic sentences, a transitive verb is a verb that acts upon one or more objects, as opposed to intransitive verbs that have no object.)

In another verse, Allah Glorified is He refers to the Quran being revealed successively from the sky of this world over 23 years corresponding to successive events. In this case, the word ‘nazzala’ is used, because it indicates the succession of the revealed verses throughout the life of Prophet Muhammad’s prophethood.

A third verse refers to the one who carried the revelation down to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that is Angel Gabriel. Here, the word ‘nazala’ is used.

That is, when talking about the Quran, we can say nazala, anzala or even nazzala. The word ‘nazala’ also indicates that the Quran was revealed from a higher power to be received by someone of lower status. When Allah Glorified is He wants us to listen to a ruling being sent down, He orders His Prophet: ‘Say: “Come (ta’alu), let me convey unto you what Allah has [really] forbidden to you’ (al-An‘am: 151).

The meaning of the word 'taʿalu' (come) is: 'Ascend to a higher level' because we live on the earth, and we are warned of making universal laws that govern our earthly lives by ourselves; these worldly legislations must be constructed under the light of Allah's Way, otherwise we will enter into a state of decay. Allah Glorified is He wants the exalted legislation to rule us. Thus, we must receive our laws from the highest heaven in order not to deviate and go astray with false laws that oppose the framework of Allah's Way.

Allah Glorified is He says in the chapter of al-An'am: 'And this [Quran] is also a Divine Book which We have revealed–blessed…' (al-Anʿam: 92). This is a statement that only holds true for the Quran. It is true that all the previous Divine Books laid down a way of life for its followers, but the miracles of all the previous prophets were not related to their books. As we know, the miracle of Prophet Musa (Moses) peace be upon him was the staff, and the book that laid down the rules for his followers was the Torah. The miracle of Prophet 'Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him was curing the blind and the leper and bringing the dead back to life by Allah's Will, while the book of commandments that was revealed to him was the Injil (Gospel). However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was distinguished because his miracle was his Book of commandments itself.

Each of the previous Messages was set for a limited time and place. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with the universal, invincible Religion, and thus his miracle came in the form of his Message. If Prophet Muhammad's miracle had been physical, i.e. material in form and similar in nature to the previous miracles, his miracle would have come to an end. In addition, we are only sure of the miracles of the previous Prophets because the Quran mentioned them. Each one of the previous miracles was suited to its set time and place, while Islam came for all times and places. This is why the miracle had to accompany the commandment itself. For this reason, people who embrace Islam after the time of Prophet Muhammad, even until the Hour is established, can say, 'Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah and the Quran is his miracle'.

The Quran is blessed. When we speak in our local Arabic dialect, we use the words which have the most eloquent uses in the Arabic language. There are people who say: 'By Allah, this food was surely blessed. It was made for two people, yet four people ate from it and there is still more leftover'. In Arabic, something is said to be blessed when something gives more than its perceived volume.

The blessings of the Quran are predominant and clear. If we were to compare the size of the Quran to the size of many books, we would often find that the Quran is smaller in size. Despite that disparity, the Quran leads to righteousness and benefaction, and contains blessings, legislations, miracles, and secrets that would overwhelm its number of pages, a number which is smaller than many other books. Some people have tried to interpret the meanings of the Quranic verses in numerous books, yet not one of them was able to arrive at the total and absolute reality that Allah Glorified is He intended in His Verses. Had the Quran served all its gifts during the age in which Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him lived, no other blessings would have been available for the new generations to receive and interpret. Thus, the newer generations have not lost interest in the Quran as they are presented with broader meanings.

Every concept has been clarified and every generation can take from the meanings of the Quran according to the understanding of their times. If Prophet Muhammad had completely interpreted its verses according to only his time, the Quranic meanings will have been limited to the early generations and no one after the Prophet will dare to offer any further interpretation. In fact, Prophet Muhammad knew that the Quran's gifts had no end, and he only clarified what the contemporary minds of his time were capable of understanding so that they will not deviate from it.

If the Quran had clearly said, 'Indeed, the earth is not flat and it revolves around the sun', would any mind (contemporary at that time) believe that fact? There are people nowadays who still falsely argue that the earth is a flat structure! Thus, we find that the Quran alluded to this fact subtly, so that minds can be slowly introduced to the idea. Allah Glorified is He says: 'He causes the night to wind around the day, and causes the day to wind around the night' (az-Zumar: 5).

As long as the night winds around the day, and the day winds around the night in a way that resembles a sphere, then, surely, that structure around which the day and night are revolving must be sphere-like. Allah Glorified is He gives a well-organised account in order for the minds of that time to become enlightened enough to understand this phenomenon.

Furthermore, the Quran says: 'Say (O Muhammad): "To Allah belongs the East and the West"' (al-Baqara: 142). This verse is a clear statement to all people because each one of us realizes the presence of these two directions for every specified point on earth. However, Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: '[He is] the Lord of the two farthest points of sunrise, and the Lord of the two farthest points of sunset' (ar-Rahman: 17). Now, did the minds living in Prophet Muhammad's time understand this? Yes, because he said at one point, 'Indeed, the sun rises from a certain place and it sets in another place'; when the sun is rising where you are, it is setting where I am, and when the sun is setting where you are, it is rising where I am. That is, for every moment of sunrise, there is a sunset beyond the horizon. Allah's statement is therefore confirmed: '[He is] the Lord of the two farthest points of sunrise, and the Lord of the two farthest points of sunset' (ar-Rahman: 17). Moreover, we know that the sun rises at a different angle every day, so there are many points on the horizon where the sun rises and sets throughout the year. Allah Glorified is He is Truthful when He says He is the Lord of all the points of sunrise and sunset.

Indeed, the Quran addresses us in a way that the minds of each generation can withstand. We find a reference in the Quran to new phenomena that were discovered in the present times. We also find that the new interpretation of any verse does not abrogate the previous interpretations, but actually builds on them.

Therefore, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not choose to give a complete commentary on the Quran because he had to interpret its verses by only referring to points that his contemporaries were able to contemplate which resulted in the interpretation being limited and not suitable for the later intellectuals. This is why Prophet Muhammad transmitted the Quranic verses regarding the matters concerned with of the universe which were subject to scientific reconsideration, without adding many words of explanation. But for the verses laying down commandments and rulings, his explanation was more profound as these matters were clear at that time. This is why Prophet Muhammad said about the Quran: 'Its wonders do not cease'.

The Quran gives us new wonders in every generation. Hence, the Quran is blessed due to the subtle references to the natural world that are mentioned in its verses, and will be blessed until the Last Hour is established.

‘And this [Quran] is also a Divine Book which We have revealed–blessed, confirming the truth of whatever still remains [of earlier revelations]’ (al-An‘am: 92). The earlier revelations are the books that were revealed ‘bayna yadayhi’ (literally ‘between the hands of it [the Quran]’ and translated as ‘confirming the truth of whatever still remains [of earlier revelations]’ in this verse). ‘Between the hands of something’, is an Arabic phrase that means ‘before this thing’. The books that were revealed ‘between the hands of the Quran’ are the well-known books, such as the Taurah and the Injil, since these are the two books that we still hear of today.

The Quran confirms the authenticity of the books revealed before it. This does not mean that it confirms the authenticity of what had been distorted, but rather, it confirms the integrity of the original texts. This is what 'Abdullah ibn Salam(1) and others, who were scholars of the older scriptures, acknowledged when they embraced Islam. 'Abdullah ibn Salam said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘My heart has been drawn to Islam, but I know that my people (the Jews) are a people who slander and who are arrogant. I want you (Prophet Muhammad) to ask them about me before I embrace Islam openly’. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to them (the Jews), ‘What do you say about 'Abdullah ibn Salam?’ They said, ‘He is our rabbi and the son of our rabbi, our chief and our leader’. They all mentioned his high status. ‘Abdullah ibnu Salam then said, ‘I bear witness that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah’. At this point, they began insulting 'Abdullah. ‘Abdullah then said to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘Did I not tell you, O Messenger of Allah, that they are a people who slander?’

Allah Glorified is He says about the Quran in the verse under discussion: ‘...confirming the truth of whatever still remains [of earlier revelations]’ (al-An‘am: 92). If you want an illustration of that principle, look for the Quranic ruling on any issue present in the Torah that the Jews previously had no reason to deny. You will find that the Quran agrees with the Torah on that issue.

(1) The story of the conversion of ‘Abdullah ibn Salam to Islam

An example of this is when the Quran mentioned the punishment of stoning. The Jews attempted to mitigate the ruling for stoning because a married woman had committed adultery and they wanted to be courteous with her. They raised the issue with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'Indeed, the verdict not to stone is better for us and for her'. It is remarkable that although they did not believe in Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they wanted a verdict from him. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told them, 'Bring the book (that you believe in)'. They brought the scriptures they had and found the verse regarding stoning. The Quran confirms that which came before it, without hiding, distorting or interpreting any concepts.

The fact that they hardly looked into the issues that they were addressing illustrates their corruption, deceit, and arrogance, but their falsehood does not blot out the traces of the Truth. The discussion of these issues requires a tactful investigator.

Furthermore, we find that Allah Glorified is He mentioned a parable in the Torah that describes the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Allah Glorified is He repeated this parable in the Quran, in the verse: 'Muhammad is Allah's Apostle; and those who are [truly] with him are firm and unyielding (ashidda') towards all deniers of the Truth, [yet] merciful (ruhama') towards one another' (al-Fath: 29).

When we look at the Arabic word *ashidda*ʾ (firm and unyielding) and the Arabic word *ruhama*ʾ (merciful), we might think these refer to contradictory temperaments; but in reality there is no contradiction here. An investigative person who examines the verse carefully will understand from this statement that Islam does not want Muslims to have a single, unchangeable temperament; rather, it wants them to have all kinds of normal temperaments. If their character was to be permanently firm and unyielding, they will not be able to be merciful when it is appropriate to show mercy. On the other hand, if their natural disposition and character was to be lenient at all times, they will not be able to be firm when it is appropriate to show firmness.

Moreover, Islam requires Muslims to adhere to both spiritual and material values in order for each value to safeguard its counterpart. If the Muslims were inclined only towards material laws, their civilization will become malicious. On the other hand, if they had only inclined towards intangible values, they will not have been able to establish a lasting and enduring civilization. Allah Glorified is He wants civilization to draw its culture from the spiritual and the material realms.

This is why Islam respects both spiritual and material values. In the Jewish understanding of life, the spiritual values were missing, while the Christian culture was immersed in spiritual matters but did not take care of the material world. The Quran confirmed part of what preceded it, and this is why the verse we are discussing informed us of the people of the book.

The verse also directs its warning to the people of Quraysh who reside in Mecca. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘In order that you may warn the foremost of all cities and all who dwell around it’. We know that the foremost of all cities is Mecca. Some people have tried to use this verse as a proof to say, ‘The Quran was only revealed to the Arabs, as they are the people who dwell around Mecca’. We respond by saying to these people, ‘You have not properly understood the verse’s expression. To start with, what does the word ‘around’ indicate? Around any specific point there is a circular area. The diameter of this area can be specified as twenty or one hundred kilometres, but it can also be an unspecified distance. Therefore, the word ’around’ includes everything that is around Mecca, and what is around any point can include every place in the world’.

Why was it called ‘Umm al-qura’ in Arabic, a word that means ‘the foremost’ or ‘the Mother of all cities’? After Hajar peace be upon her the mother of Prophet Ismail (Ishmael), settled with her infant son in the valley that had no vegetation and the water of Zamzam came forth, the people multiplied in that valley, and it became the foremost of all cities. Additionally, the city of Mecca contains the Ka’ba and its people closely safeguard it. During the Pilgrimage (Hajj), people travel from every direction to visit this valley, just as children rush to take refuge with their mother.

‘In order that you may warn the foremost of all cities and all who dwell around it. And those who believe in the Hereafter believe in this [warning]’ (al-An'am: 92). Therefore, who are those who believe in this book that was sent down affirming that which came before it and also warning the foremost of all cities and those that dwell around it, and who are those who adherently believe in the Hereafter? And what is the connection between warning the Meccans and those who dwell around it, and believing in the Hereafter? The reason is that no one implements the Quranic teachings except after believing in the Hereafter.

For this reason, these people will flee from disobedience and desire obedience when they have knowledge of the rewards awaiting the good deeds and the punishments prepared for the grave sins. Those who do not believe in the Hereafter will not hear you or submit in obedience to any virtuous commands. They will not desist from theft, arrogance or any other grave sin because they have no fear of the consequences. Such a person may say, 'I am not required to do anything. Nothing can restrict my freedom'.

Such a person does not consider the matter properly or deeply. They are under the assumption that the commandments of Allah Glorified is He restrict only their freedom, when in fact, these laws justly restrict everyone's freedom. When religion forbids you from committing theft or glancing unlawfully at women, it is also ordering all of mankind not to steal your belongings or harm your female family members. Thus, your rights are only secured if you live under a system of equal obligations and rights.

The people who believe in the Hereafter want salvation from punishment and the security of good rewards. Ponder this example, which is only for clarification as Allah Glorified is He is far above any comparison. When you say to your child, 'Seek knowledge', he may respond, 'I do not want any certificate'. His father may then force him to study in his early years. But after a few years we find that young people themselves start working hard without being forced, as they now seek success and fear failure; if there was no exam at the end of the year, this hard work will be futile. Thus, the ones who are closer to the calls of justice and goodness are those who believe in the Hereafter.

'And those who believe in the life to come believe in this [warning]; and it is they who are ever-mindful of their prayer' (al-An'am: 92). Why is being mindful of prayers mentioned here? Prayers are the pillars of Islam, and whoever establishes their prayers fulfils the foundation of the Religion. When we analyse people's nature, we find that they flee from obedience because it takes up time that they like to spend in playing. When you say to someone, for example, 'Take a short break from your work to pray', he may respond by saying, 'No, because leaving my work will make me lose some profit'. If you sincerely obey Allah's orders, the blessings will make up for the time you assume you have lost.

Additionally, if you look at the pillars of Islam, you will find that they do not take up much time. The first pillar of Islam, which is to testify that there is no god but Allah Glorified is He and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah, only requires you to say it once. Concerning the third pillar, which is obligatory charity (Az-zakat), it only takes a small amount of time to give to the poor on the day of harvest. There is also the obligatory charity on monetary savings that is paid at the end of the year and fasting the month of Ramadan. And although fasting takes up a part of your day, it only comes once a year. The Pilgrimage (Hajj) is obligatory only once in a lifetime if one is able. Therefore, apart from the second pillar of Islam, which is prayers, the remaining pillars of Islam are trouble-free for anyone who is interested in doing them.

Prayers are performed five times every day and it takes up more time than the other pillars. In order to perform our prayers correctly, a person must purify their self from both minor and major impurity. They must also purify their place of Prayer. This is why prayer is a deeply rooted pillar in Islam. You do not know if a person is a Muslim unless he gets up to pray after hearing the call to prayer. This is the distinguishing point between a Muslim and a non-Muslim. The prayer is different from the other pillars which are performed only at set times, but even though this is the case, they are still deeply rooted pillars as well.

Indeed, all of Islam's legislations, the pillars and the branches, were ordained through revelation, except for the prayer. It came as a direct order from Allah Glorified is He to Prophet Muhammad. Prayer is the act of worship where the Creator summons His creation into His presence. This is why it had to be legislated in a unique way in His Divine Presence.

Being the foundation of religion, the prayer gathers all of the other pillars of Islam together. The Muslim says while praying, 'I testify that there is no god but Allah and that Muhammad is the Messenger of Allah'. He also fasts by abstaining from the desires of the stomach and the flesh, and even abstains from every movement that is not included in the prayer. Praying also includes some zakat (obligatory charity) because wealth is a derivative of work and time. When you pray, you are learning to give up some of your time for Allah Glorified is He. You also face the Ka'ba during prayers, just as someone performing the major pilgrimage (Hajj) or the minor pilgrimage (ʿUmra) faces the Ka'ba. Therefore, all the other pillars of Islam are gathered in the pillar of prayer.

In addition to all the pillars of Islam being incorporated in it, social equality is also realised to reform the earth. Reformation of the earth requires various talents and various abilities. It is not possible for one reformer on earth to gather all these talents; rather, the skills needed for the world's reformation must be dispersed and distributed amongst all mankind. It is not possible for one person to be an engineer, doctor, lawyer, manufacturer, ploughman, farmer, and merchant at the same time. This is why Allah Glorified is He distributed the requirements for reforming the earth amongst the people. This would make their skills necessary for each other, and not merely a courtesy. Hence, you are in need of the skills that you do not have, and consequently you go to someone who has these skills, and that person needs your talents in the same manner.

If anyone wants to develop some skills that other people are capable of in order to be independent of them, they have to spend a lot of effort to reach this level. If plumbers charge higher wages than he can afford, and he tries to learn their trade, he has no choice but to learn it from a skilled worker. The same goes for all the other skills and professions. However, mankind only sees wealth as being the main aspect in which people differ.

Some people assume that gaining financial wealth or having wealth tied in fixed assets is the only necessary skill. For example, a student of religious jurisprudence may spend twenty years to earn and learn the necessary knowledge to become a scholar. If someone asks a scholar for his opinion on a particular issue of jurisprudence, and the scholar gives it to him for free, that answer will be the sum of the material hardships that this scholar went through for a long period of time, researching books, listening to teachers, and deriving rulings. The scholar subjugated himself for twenty years so that people can benefit from these legal opinions with ease.

If we look at someone who works polishing shoes, and we see the owner of the shoe stretching his leg while the shoe polisher works, you may say to yourself, ‘Why is there so much arrogance from the shoe owner, stretching his leg in the direction of the shoe polisher? Why does this shoe polisher accept this gloominess and misery?’ You have to realize that you are looking at the shoe owner while he is taking a break, and the shoe polisher is in his working attire. If you knew how the owner of the shoes earns his livelihood, you will know that he too had subjugated himself for a period of time to earn the money he needed to pay the shoe polisher. This is why Allah Glorified is He said: ‘So that they might avail themselves of one another’s help’ (az-Zukhruf: 32).

Some people only look at employment and subjugation in terms of being poor or wealthy. The truth is that every person on earth is employed by others due to the gift or talent he has, and that other people employ him due to the gifts and talents that they do not possess. Allah Glorified is He wanted to connect mankind together by these compulsory means, and not by mere courtesy. When a man needs money to feed his family and the only job available is to empty out the sewers, he will get the necessary tools and do his job to provide for his dependents. However, people who are not bound by necessity may not choose to do this kind of work and provide that necessary skill to society. If all of humanity were living in opulence, will anyone regularly volunteer to empty out the sewers? That would never happen. A job is done out of necessity and not courtesy.

Reformation of the earth requires people to share their available energy, but this ability may not last for a long time. A man may have a particular strength at a particular time and then, later, may become weaker. Another may currently own wealth and riches and later declare bankruptcy. This is why Allah Glorified is He has informed us that He made the days alternate among mankind. This ensures that the world is set straight by these ties of necessity. It may appear to us that some of these gifts make some people distinguished. These gifts may be in the form of their appearance, their elegance, or their modes of transport. A doctor may need to work in more than one place. If he travels by foot or by public transport, he may arrive late and tired to his various shifts, and for this reason he buys a car. Someone may perceive the car as a unique gift forgetting the fact that this car is actually helping the doctor serve and save others.

Another example is your simple cup of tea. Presume that you give a pound to an office worker to buy tea from the grocery. The worker goes to buy a packet of tea, and finds a grocer who supplies him with one. You generally do not realize that this packet of tea took the time and effort of many people to reach you. Allah Glorified is He made some people responsible for growing the tea in another country. He also made other people responsible for importing it. Then the packet of tea comes to you in order for you to make a cup of tea to drink in comfort.

All matters of life are maintained by people being employed to each other. That is why there are social differences which our jobs define, but Allah Glorified is He dissolves these differences by making the prayer a means of equality for everyone. You notice that when the caller for prayer says, 'Allah is the Greatest' (Allahu Akbar), everyone is obligated to go to prayer. The rich people are obligated to attend just as much as the poor and the prince is obligated just as much as his guards. Everyone should leave their ranks outside the mosque so that they can stand in prayer as equals. Whoever has an arrogant boss can now see him prostrating to Allah Glorified is He in the same way as his employees. In this moment of equality, everyone is equal in their reformation of this world.

Let us assume that all of us pray the Daily Prayers by ourselves, but when the call to prayer is given for the Friday Prayer, Allah Glorified is He is commanding us to stop and leave everything we are doing in order to perform prayer together. The weak person sees the strong humbling himself before Allah just like he does; and the strong person sees the weak next to him in the line. And when we return to work, the mask of power and haughtiness has fallen off because we have all stood together in front of the One Creator and we are all equal. This is indeed the path for social equality.

If you wish to meet a person who has a very important position, you have to write a request. After this, he will either agree or refuse the request. If he agrees, he will ask you, ‘What do you want to talk about?’ He will set a time for you to come and sit with him. If you sit with him and lose track of time, he may stand up to indicate that the meeting has ended. However, our Lord says to us, ‘Come to Me at any time. Talk to Me about anything. I will not end the meeting until you have finished’. This is a huge gift, and Allah Glorified is He bountifully gives it to His servants.

There is no Lordship that is better than this. Consequently, if we look at the pillar of prayer, we will find that it gathers all the virtues of Islam and leads to a virtuous society. This is why Allah Glorified is He has made it the second pillar for the establishment of Islam.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

وَمَنْ أَظْلَمُ مِمَّنِ ٱفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا أَوْ قَالَ أُوحِىَ إِلَىَّ وَلَمْ يُوحَ إِلَيْهِ شَىْءٌ وَمَن قَالَ
سَأُنزِلُ مِثْلَ مَآ أَنزَلَ ٱللَّهُ ۗ وَلَوْ تَرَىٰٓ إِذِ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ فِى غَمَرَٰتِ ٱلْمَوْتِ وَٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ
بَاسِطُوٓا۟ أَيْدِيهِمْ أَخْرِجُوٓا۟ أَنفُسَكُمُ ۖ ٱلْيَوْمَ تُجْزَوْنَ عَذَابَ ٱلْهُونِ بِمَا كُنتُمْ
تَقُولُونَ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ غَيْرَ ٱلْحَقِّ وَكُنتُمْ عَنْ ءَايَٰتِهِۦ تَسْتَكْبِرُونَ ﴿٩٣﴾

Who could be more wicked than someone who invents a lie against God, or claims, ‘A revelation has come to me,’ when no revelation has been sent to him, or says, ‘I too can reveal something equal to God’s revelation’? If you could only see the wicked in their death agonies, as the angels stretch out their hands [to them], saying, ‘Give up your souls. Today you will be repaid with a humiliating punishment for saying false things about God and for arrogantly rejecting His revelations’ [93] (The Quran, al-An’am: 93)

When Allah Glorified is He speaks in the form of a question, the question is rhetorical and Allah, the Knower of everything, is not asking to receive an answer. The reason for this form of speech is that Allah Glorified is He does not want the answer to be clearly revealed by Him. Indeed, he could have said:

'The one who invents a lie is wicked'. However, He placed it in the form of a question to emphasise the wickedness of a person who invents a lie about Allah. He is asking every believer to reflect on the matter in his mind and come up with the answer himself. Indeed, we punish or admonish a person who invents a lie about one of his colleagues or peers, so what about the gravity of inventing a lie about Allah Glorified is He? When you hear these words: 'And who could be more wicked than he who invents a lie about Allah', and you consider the matter thoroughly, you will find that no one is more wicked than such a person.

How can someone invent a lie about Allah Glorified is He? If someone claims that he is a Messenger from Allah and he is not, this is a lie about Allah Glorified is He. That false messenger is lying about Allah Glorified is He because He said that Allah had sent him when Allah had not.

The Arabic word 'iftira' (inventing a lie) refers to an intentional purposeful lie. It applies to claimed false prophecies such as the examples of Musaylamah the Liar, Sujah, Talha Al-Asadi and Al-Aswad Al-ʿAnsi. Each one of these people claimed that they were prophets. However, no one asked them for miracles to prove their message! This was because each of them brought religious rulings that were easier for the people. One of them said, 'I lessen the Prayer and obligatory charity is not compulsory'. Thus, they were followed by anyone who wanted to be relieved of religious commands and prohibitions. These followers wanted to have a religion without adhering to the requirements of religiosity. Hence, they found many supporters from among the hypocrites. One of these followers may even be well educated, but he embraces the belief in an impostor Prophet. You should ask the follower of this impostor, 'Have you asked this person who claims that he is a prophet about their miracle?' If a miracle is the first condition for believing in a Prophet, why have so many people not asked for it? It is because although religiosity is a natural disposition in the soul, what makes adhering to a religion difficult are the requirements that the religious commandments impose. Those who follow impostors are people with weak souls because they see someone who makes religious requirements easier for them. Thereafter, the matters of religion for them decay into chaos.

‘And who could be more wicked than he who invents a lie about Allah, or says, “This has been revealed unto me”, while nothing has been revealed to him?’ (al-An‘am: 93) A man claimed that he is a prophet and then said, ‘I will give you verses the like of these Quranic verses’. The Arabs were a nation whose ears enjoyed pleasant rhetoric and oration. What did this lying claimant who was called An-Nadr ibn Al-Harith, say to his followers. This liar claimed that one of his verses said, ‘By the grinders that grind (wheat), and the dough makers that produce dough, and the bakers who bake’. This is an example of his ludicrous verses. He could have tried painting a better picture by adding, ‘By the farmers when they farm, and the ploughmen when they plough. By the meals when they are eaten, and the digestive organs when they digest’. Of course, this speech is an example of empty drivel.

Allah Glorified is He only sends down His speech in a well-organised way, having a meaning that attracts the listener and conveys information that is of value as well. This is why Allah Glorified is He revealed the verse: ‘And who could be more wicked than he who invents a lie about Allah, or says, “This has been revealed unto me”, while nothing has been revealed to him?’ (al-An‘am: 93)

A man called 'Abdullah ibn Saʿad ibn Abu Sarh Al-Qurashi(1) was a foster brother of the Prophet’s Companion, 'Uthman ibn Affan, and a scribe of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He was sitting in the presence of Prophet Muhammad when this verse was revealed: ‘Now, indeed, We created man out of the essence of clay, and then caused him to remain as a drop of sperm in a well-established place (the womb). Then, we created out of the drop of sperm a clinging clot (germ-cell), and next we created out of the clinging clot an embryonic lump, and then we created within the embryonic lump bones, and after that we clothed the bones with flesh–and finally we brought [all] this into being as a new creation...’ (al-Mu’minun: 12-14). He was dazzled by the stages in which Allah Glorified is He created man, and said, ‘Blessed, therefore, is Allah, the best of creators!’ Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said to him, ‘Write it down, for these words (you uttered) have also been revealed’. The man became deluded and said, ‘If Muhammad is truthful, verses have been revealed to me as they have been revealed to him. If he is a liar, I have said words similar to his words'. He then fled and joined the ranks of the disbelievers and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him deemed his blood violable.

(1) The story of the inspiration of ʿAbdullah ibn Saʿad ibn Abu Sarh Al-Qurashi

In the year of the conquest (of Mecca) 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him brought him to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and said, 'O Messenger of Allah! Pardon 'Abdullah'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was quiet. 'Uthman Allah be pleased with him said, 'Pardon him'. Prophet Muhammad was again quiet, and when 'Uthman repeated it a third time, 'Pardon him, O Messenger of Allah', Prophet Muhammad said, 'Yes'. This is because 'Uthman had a special status with Prophet Muhammad.

When 'Uthman ibn 'Affan left with the pardoned man, Prophet Muhammad then said to his Companions, 'Did I not tell you that anyone who sees him should kill him?' Our leader, ʿIbad ibn Bishr, said, 'O Messenger of Allah, I looked towards you, waiting for a sign or hint from you to take him'. Prophet Muhammad said to ʿIbad ibn Bishr, 'It is not befitting for a Messenger (of Allah) to have deceitful eyes'. After that, Ibn Abu Sarh became a Muslim and his Islam became sound.

What is the punishment for those people who invent lies about Allah Glorified is He and claim that Allah has sent revelation down to them? Allah Glorified is He says: '...If you could but see [how it will be] when these evildoers find themselves in the agonies of death, and the angels stretch forth their hands [saying], "Give up your souls! Today you shall be requited with suffering and [extreme] humiliation for having attributed to Allah other than the Truth, and for having persistently scorned His Messages in your arrogance!"' (al-An'am: 93).

The Arabic particle 'laaw' (if) in the phrase: 'If you could but see', is a conditional particle. For example, you can say that if a particular person visits you, you will honour him. When you read the Quran, you may find the particle 'law' used several times without an apodosis (the clause expressing the consequence). Why is that? Mentioning a particular apodosis restricts the meaning in the reader's mind. But if you want an apodosis that is not restricting, you should not clearly articulate it, leaving it for the listener to imagine it instead. For example, if a criminal living in a neighbourhood is causing problems for the residents and ends up in the hands of the police, someone may describe the arrest by saying, ‘If you could have seen the face of that tough guy when the police grabbed him!’ Where is the apodosis here? It is not mentioned because it leaves the picture for it to be painted by the listener’s mind without the limitations of language. Allah Glorified is He is saying here: ‘…If you could see when these evildoers will find themselves in the agonies of death…’ (al-An‘am: 93). The word ‘ghamarat’ (Agonies) are severities that no one can free themselves from. Allah Glorified is He continues: ‘And the angels stretch out their hands [saying], “Give up your souls..!”’ (al-An‘am: 93). Are they the angels of death who say that as they take their souls from their bodies, or is this order spoken by the angels of punishment? The answer is that both the angels of death and the angels of punishment can be involved. The angels of death who will take their souls may ask them, ‘If you rejected and rebelled against many of Allah’s orders, know that Allah Glorified is He has commanded us to take your souls. Are you able to rebel against what Allah Glorified is He has willed for you?’ It could also be that the angels are ordering them to make their souls leave their bodies by their own hands. Finally, it could be a challenge for them to deliver themselves from the punishment which surrounds them.

The punishment of ‘Al-Hawn’ (suffering and extreme humiliation) is a painful punishment that involves humiliation of the disbelievers. The forms of punishment mentioned in the Quran are various. Some verses describe a shameful suffering using the Arabic words ‘al-muheen’ and ‘muheena’. Other verses show that the suffering is painful and grievous using the Arabic word ‘aleem.’

Thus, at one time the punishment is painful but contains no humiliation, and another time they have a punishment that is painful and humiliating. Why does Allah Glorified is He make them taste a shameful suffering? The answer comes from Allah’s words: ‘...for having attributed to Allah other than the Truth and for having persistently scorned His Messages in your arrogance!’ (al-An‘am: 93). The example of the lies that some of them said is claiming false prophecy. In addition to that, they arrogantly scorned the verses that the natural intellect can easily accept. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘and in their wickedness and self-exaltation they rejected them, although their minds were convinced of their Truth...’ (an-Naml: 14).

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

وَلَقَدْ جِئْتُمُونَا فُرَٰدَىٰ كَمَا خَلَقْنَٰكُمْ أَوَّلَ مَرَّةٍ وَتَرَكْتُم مَّا خَوَّلْنَٰكُمْ وَرَآءَ
ظُهُورِكُمْ ۖ وَمَا نَرَىٰ مَعَكُمْ شُفَعَآءَكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ زَعَمْتُمْ أَنَّهُمْ فِيكُمْ شُرَكَٰٓؤُا۟ ۚ
لَقَد تَّقَطَّعَ بَيْنَكُمْ وَضَلَّ عَنكُم مَّا كُنتُمْ تَزْعُمُونَ ﴿٩٤﴾

[God will say], 'Now you return to Us, alone, as We first created you: you have left behind everything We gave you, nor do We see those intercessors of yours that you claimed were partners of God. All the bonds between you have been severed, and those about whom you made such claims have deserted you' [94] (The Quran, al-An'am: 94)

Allah's statement: 'And now, indeed, you have come to Us alone…' (al-An'am: 94) means that all of you will come before Allah Glorified is He. You will be separated from whatever you had in your worldly life such as wealth, children, and followers. They will all come before Allah Glorified is He without the idols they had worshiped with Him which they used to take as intercessors with Allah. The word 'furada' (alone) is the plural of the word 'fardan' or 'fareed', just like 'sukara' (intoxicated) is the plural of 'sakraan', and 'usara' (prisoners) is the plural of 'aseer'. Indeed, they will come before Allah Glorified is He in groups and crowds, but each one of them will come detached from what they had in the life of this world; wealth, family, children and followers. The evidence for this is that Allah said: '...and you have left behind you all that we bestowed on you...' (al-An'am: 94). The words: '...bestowed on you…' (al-An'am: 94) refer to the followers and bounties Allah has bestowed on you to be of service to you such as the followers and devotees. Each one of them returns alone, detached from what they had in the life of this world. There, they will be in the same state in which Allah Glorified is He first created them, when they were delivered into the life of this world. 'And now, indeed, you have come to Us alone, just as we created you in the first instance...' (al-An'am: 94).

Allah's words: '...you have come to Us...' (al-An'am: 94) indicate that the person who sinned almost presents himself for punishment while admitting that he deserves it and acknowledging his sins. They will be expressing grief for what they had done and will reproach themselves for deviating from the Truth. ‘And you have left behind you all that we bestowed on you [in your lifetime]. And we do not see with you those intercessors of yours whom you thought to be partners with Allah regarding your affairs! Indeed, all the bonds between (bayn) you [and your earthly life] are now severed...’ (al-An‘am: 94).

‘Al-bayn’ (between) is something that either separates or joins two entities; when we find two people sitting and there is a bayn between them; this bayn separates them and also joins them together. This word indicates that they will be cut off and separated from their worldly bonds and gatherings after they used to connect themselves to the idols.

What was the connection of these people to the idols that they used to worship with Allah? They used to offer sacrifices and similar offerings to their idols. These idols and everything that they used to make partners with Allah Glorified is He (in this life) will flee from them on the Day of Resurrection. This is how Allah’s statement: ‘Indeed, all the bonds between you [and your earthly life] are now severed’ (al-An‘am: 94) will be realised in the Hereafter. Allah Glorified is He continues: ‘And all your former fancies have forsaken you!’ (al-An‘am: 94). The Arabic word used for ‘forsaken’ is ‘dalla’ (be away from), which means that their idols and worldly supporters will go astray in the Hereafter and will not be able to aid them. You can look for them, but you will not find them, in accordance with Allah’s statement: ‘[On that Day] it will come to pass that those who had been [falsely] adored shall disown their followers’ (al-Baqara: 166). Allah Glorified is He says after this:

إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ فَالِقُ ٱلۡحَبِّ وَٱلنَّوَىٰۖ يُخۡرِجُ ٱلۡحَيَّ مِنَ ٱلۡمَيِّتِ وَمُخۡرِجُ
ٱلۡمَيِّتِ مِنَ ٱلۡحَيِّۚ ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُۖ فَأَنَّىٰ تُؤۡفَكُونَ ﴿٩٥﴾

It is God who splits open the seed and the fruit stone:
He brings out the living from the dead and the dead from the living – that is God – so how can you turn away from the truth? [95] (The Quran, al-An’am: 95)

After Allah Glorified is He talks about His Oneness and the prophecies, and mentions the stories of those who opposed, resisted and denied these true prophecies, He Glorified is He wanted to turn the attention of His Creation towards what He has prepared for them to maintain their lives. He also wants to show them how He has subjugated the inanimate objects of the entire universe, plants and animals for their service. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is making it clear, 'If you still do not realise that

The Creator deserves your worship, look at the blessings and bounties He gives you. And if the created slave receives all these blessings from Allah, the Most Exalted Creator, why does he not listen to Allah's Commandments? O created being, you were raised on the sustenance of the Most-Merciful; you have to look, reflect and understand. 'Verily, Allah is the One who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel' (al-An'am: 95).

When you hear the Name of Allah Glorified is He realize that He is the One Who exists by necessity. His Glorified Name comprises all the specified and unspecified attributes of His Majesty and Beauty. This is because Allah Glorified is He created the entire universe and He is the One Who sustains it. This creation and sustenance requires the attributes of power, wisdom, vast knowledge, mercy, provision as well as withholding of sustenance, and also other attributes. Allah Glorified is He refers to all these attributes by His Name 'Allah' Glorified is He.

We say at the beginning of every action, 'In the Name of Allah', and this resembles requesting a license for whatever energy the action needs. With any action, you need power, and consequently you could say, 'In the Name of the fully Capable (Al-Qadir)'. Every action also requires knowledge, and therefore you could say, 'In the Name of the All Knowing (Al-ʿAlim)'. If it requires wisdom, you could say, 'In the Name of the All-Wise (Al-Hakim)'. If it requires might and ability, you could say, 'In the Name of the Almighty (Al-ʿAziz)'. It may require domination over your enemy, and for this reason you say, 'In the Name of the Dominant (Al-Qahir)'.

Every action requires a concentration of the Attributes of Perfection and Majesty of the Creator, Allah Glorified is He and you can refer to all these Attributes by saying, 'In the Name of Allah'.

'Verily, Allah is the One who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel' (al-An'am: 95). The One who breaks (faliq) means the One Who 'splits' (shaqiq) both the grain and the fruit-kernel into two halves. The grain (al-habb) is that which has no fruit kernel, such as barley, wheat and rice. There are other plants that have a fruit kernel, such as dates and peaches. And there is another type of plant that has seeds, such as melons, and every seed has something inside it. Allah Glorified is He makes His Might manifest in the creation of the grains and the fruit kernels.

There are grains that are split and ready to use, such as the grain of beans and the grain of lentils. If you look at the growth process, you will find it amazing. When you place the fruit kernel of a date or a barley seed in the earth in a suitable environment with a little bit of humidity, you will find that the plant will emerge from the two halves. The fruit kernel almost splits so that the weak shoot (zaban) can emerge between the two sides and the root can be formed.

The secret of life comes from these two halves, and if this root is removed, life comes to an end. Small, crumbled white pieces of seeds are found in ants' nests, and they discovered that these are the shoots (zabanat) of the seeds. If the ants had inserted whole seeds in their nests, this seed would grow if there was any humidity, develop into a tree and destroy the nest. Who guided the ants to do such a thing? Indeed it is Allah Glorified is He. We also find that ants split the seeds of the coriander plant into four pieces because if it is split into two parts it might grow. Who teaches them this? Indeed it is Allah Glorified is He: 'who creates [everything], and thereupon gave it a suitable form, and who determines the nature [of all that exists], and thereupon guides it [to its goal]' (al-A'la: 2-3).

It is amazing to see a fragile shoot, the future roots, which is weak and can be easily crumbled emerging into life, piercing the core of the hard earth. If you strike this hard earth with a knife, the knife may break or bend! Who gives the weak plant roots this ability? What power enables it to split the earth? Allah Glorified is He has indeed pierced the earth for the seed so that the plant's nourishment can be extracted from it. Indeed, it is the Power of Allah Glorified is He: 'The One who splits the grain' (al-An'am: 95) and who puts power into the two halves of a seed for it to grow roots when the environment is humid enough. The plants derive their nourishment from the two halves until they become firm and established in the earth, and then the two halves are transformed into two green leaves.

Allah Glorified is He continues: 'Bringing forth the living out of the dead, and He is the One who brings forth the dead out of the living' (al-An'am: 95). When the scholars reflected on this verse, they wanted to make clear for us what the living and dead entities were. But everyone has failed to define what life is. The life of any being is what enables it to exist and engage in carrying out its tasks and functions. The life of man has movement, sensation, and progress. There is a second type of life in animals, a third type of life in plants and another type of life that has a different character in inanimate objects. An example of this type of life is what they taught us in schools when the teacher used a magnetic rod to attract iron fillings. Even solid iron fillings have a specific kind of life. In school, we all saw the glass tubes in which we put iron fillings and how they were affected by magnetic rods. They straighten out and become an even line; and this is how we know that life is an existing force in every being so that it can carry out its tasks. Even stones have a different variant of life. There is a stone that takes the form of marble (rukham), another that takes the form of alabaster (marmar), and every type of stone has some form of life.

We read in the Quran: '[And] that he who would perish might perish in clear evidence of the Truth, and that he who would remain alive might live in clear evidence of the Truth' (al-Anfal: 42). Allah Glorified is He mentions the opposite of perishing, which is life. That is, perishing is the opposite of life and life is the opposite of perishing. Allah Glorified is He says in another verse: 'Everything is bound to perish, except His (Allah's) [Eternal] Self...' (al-Qasas: 88).

Consequently, as long as everything is bound to perish, then everything must contain life. It is a mistake to think that all life must have sensation and motion in the same ways human life has. There is a form of life in everything according to the matter itself, and this will be the case until the Hour is established. Every living thing has a life that is suitable for it, and when we hear: 'And there is not a single thing but it extols His [Allah's] Limitless Glory and Praise: but you [O men] fail to understand how they glorify Him' (al-Isra': 44)., we say that everything praises Allah's Limitless Glory. These songs of praise are not metaphorical, but we do not understand the literal form of these praises. Allah Glorified is He said: ‘But you [O men] fail to understand how they glorify Him’ (al-Isra’: 44).

Consequently, none of us understand the language with which all the things in existence glorify Allah. We know that when Prophet Sulaiman (Solomon) peace be upon him heard the statement of the ant, he smiled. We also know that he heard the hoopoe, and that the mountains used to glorify Allah along with David when he praised Him: ’Verily, Allah is the One who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel, bringing forth the living out of the dead, and He is the One who brings forth the dead out of the living. This is Allah: how, then, are you deluded away from the Truth?!’(al-An‘am: 95)

Indeed, every word has a specific indication and meaning. The word ‘knowledge’ (‘ilm) indicates that His Knowledge encompasses everything in existence, and the word ‘wisdom’ (hikma) indicates to us that everything is a result of His Wisdom. The word ‘The All-Provider’ (Ar-Razzaq) indicates that He provides us with everything in creation. There is no end to the perfection of His Essential Attributes. As long as His Essence is described with all the attributes of perfection, then every action that is issued by Allah’s Command Glorified is He is attributed with Absolute Power and Beauty.

Allah tells us this information to turn our attention to the fact that everything in existence has been created by Allah. Moreover, everything has a life which suits its job and function on earth; man has a life which suits its job on earth, animals have a life which suits their job on earth, plants have a life which suits their function on earth, and inanimate objects have a life which suits their function on earth. If we look at anything in this way we will see that all things have a form of life. But the most advanced life which is composed of all the necessary elements is present in the most developed form of created being, which is mankind. Allah created mankind with a physical life that has senses and movements. He also gave him another life by which his physical life becomes important and of value. Both the believer and the disbeliever enjoy the physical life which every man has, and the best thing about such a life is that Allah gives us senses and the ability to move throughout all our time on this world, but the other life, the life of faith which is based on the directions Allah sends through the Messengers, is a deeper and richer way of life, a life that lasts for eternity. This is the true life. For this reason Allah Glorified is He says: '...whereas, behold, the life in the hereafter is indeed the only [true] life: if they but knew!' (al-'Ankabut: 64)

This is the real life and the Lord's statement: 'Verily, Allah is the One Who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel' (al-An'am: 95) is the first introduction to life. Then He talks about life itself and states that He brings forth the living from the dead. Here He is addressing us according to our knowledge of things; something that does not have any motion or sense is what we would consider to be dead, but if we look at reality properly we find that everything in existence has life. This is affirmed by the Lord's statement: '...Everything is bound to perish, save His [eternal] self'. As long as everything is bound to perish, before it perishes it must contain life.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Say, "O Allah, and Lord of all dominion! You grant dominion to whom you will, and take away dominion from which you will; you exalt whom you will, and abase whom you will. In Your hand is all good. Verily, you have the power to will anything. You make the night grow longer by shortening the day, and you make the day grow longer by shortening the night. You bring forth the living out of the dead, and you bring forth the dead out of the living. And you grant sustenance to whom you will, without measure"' (Al-'Imran: 26-27). Why has Allah mentioned in this verse '…You [Allah] bring forth…' (Al-'Imran: 27) and in the verse that we are currently discussing we have His statement: 'and He is the One who brings forth the dead out of the living' (Al-'Imran: 27) Indeed, those who have looked into the matter have only done so superficially, thinking that the phrase in the verse: 'You [Allah] bring forth the living out of the dead…' (Al-'Imran: 27) is just the opposite of the later phrase in the same verse: 'and He is the One who brings forth the dead out of the living' (Al-'Imran: 27), not considering that it has a special meaning of its own. They forgot that He Glorified is He says that He: '…brings forth the living out of the dead…' (Al-'Imran: 27) in order to make it clear that Allah is the One Who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel in order to bring forth the living out of the dead, i.e. Allah cleaves and splits the seed and the fruit kernel in order for the living to emerge from the dead.

Then He said: '...and He is the One who brings forth the dead out of the living...' (Al-'Imran: 17) This is the opposite of the cleaver, but do not assume it to be just the opposite of the earlier phrase in the verse and that it does not have any special meaning of its own. Comparing these two verses, we should realise that the noun indicates something that is firmly established, while the verb indicates something that is happening. Allah has attributes which are apparent in His Own Self, and He has attributes which are apparent in how they affect other beings. He is the All-Provider before anyone was present to provide for. He is the All-Provider and after He has created those who He provides for, His Attribute of being the Sustainer is apparent, because He is the Creator. 'The Creator' is an attribute which is apparent in His Own Self before anyone was created. And Allah is the One Who grants life before there is anyone to grant life to because granting life is an attribute which is apparent in His Own Self. Moreover, Allah is the One Who causes death before there is anyone to cause to die because causing death is an attribute that is apparent in Allah's Own Self. And Allah is the One Who has the attribute of splitting the grain and fruit-kernel before there is any grain and fruit-kernel for Him to split. Furthermore, the attribute of being the One Who brings the life out of the dead is a firmly-established characteristic which is apparent in His Own Self before there is any dead object from which life will be brought.

If Allah wants to indicate an attribute before anything is present upon which this attribute is apparent, He uses the noun 'Faliq' (The One Who splits) and 'Makhraj' (The One Who brings forth). And if Allah wants to indicate the attribute after something upon which the attribute is apparent is actually present, He uses the verb 'yakhruj' (He brings forth). The Lord Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '...This is (dhalikum) Allah: how, then, are you deluded away from the Truth!' (al-An'am: 95)

(Dha) in the word 'dhalikum' (this is) is a demonstrative noun for that which precedes it. That is, the One Who splits the grain and the fruit-kernel, Who brings forth the living from the dead and Who brings forth the dead from the living is Allah the Exalted. The letter 'kaf' in 'dhalikum' (this is) is for those whom He is addressing, which is us. As for the letter 'lam' in 'dhalikum' it indicates distance, while the letter 'mim' indicates plurality. When the Lord

Glorified is He wants to address His Messenger, He says: 'This (dhalika) book–let there be no doubt about it...' (al-Baqara: 2). But here He is addressing us by saying 'dhalikum', a demonstrative indicating the Lord's statement, 'Allah', 'The One Who splits', and 'The One Who brings forth', and the address is for the great mass that the Quran addresses. If Allah has always had these Attributes, how can they turn away from having faith in Him and believing in His Oneness? He mentions to us what we need most to live, which are plants, and it is what we eat, and if the Lord Glorified is He is the One who created the grain and created the fruit kernel in order to bring forth the living from the dead, and He is the One Who brings forth the dead out of the living, then He is the One Who deserves to be worshipped. How can you turn away from Him? Who are you going to turn to? Who has attributes that are more exalted than these attributes? No one has attributes that are like these attributes or that are more exalted than these attributes.

When you hear the word 'anna' (how), you should understand that it is being used to express astonishment. It is a way of demanding a verification of how anyone can turn away from Allah and His Oneness in spite of all the clear proofs and evidences, because, in reality, there is no such verification.

In the Quran, Allah Glorified is He says: 'How can you refuse to acknowledge Allah...?' (al-Baqara: 28) He Glorified is He is addressing mankind and saying to them, 'How can you refuse to acknowledge Allah?' Allah, in His Essence, does not deserve to be denied because He created out of nothing and He provided out of nothing. No one has participated alongside Him or challenged Him in this matter, and to Him we shall all return. How can you not believe in Him? This is an amazing thing. This is why Allah Glorified is He says here: '...how, then (anna), are you deluded away from the Truth?!' (al-An'am: 95), i.e. how can you turn away from the Truth and abandon it in favour of falsehood and worship, with Allah, another deity after knowing that these Attributes of His Glorified is He do not belong to anyone but Him? All of this great amazement is expressed in the word 'anna'. Another example of the use of 'anna' to express amazement is the saying of the disbelievers expressed in the Lord's statement: '... "How could (anna) Allah bring all this back to life after its death?"...' (al-Baqara: 259), i.e. how can Allah bring this back to life after its death?!

To sum up, the word (anna) expresses amazement. It is as if the Attributes that are mentioned prior to the phrase in the chapter of al-An'am are Attributes that necessitate belief in Allah as being the One, the Dominant, the One Who does what He wants, the All Knowing and All-Wise, and the One to Whom we will all return. Thus, Allah tells us: 'How can you disbelieve in this Deity? Who do you go to (for help etc.) if you disbelieve in this Deity? Is there something else that has claimed that it created and provided? If something had claimed that it had created and provided we would excuse you, but nothing in existence has claimed that it created or provided anything. A claim is accepted as true for the one who makes it as long as no one objects to it.

'How, then, are you deluded away from the Truth?!' The phrase: 'How, then, are you deluded away from the Truth (tofakoon)' means 'How can you turn away, lying?' because the word 'tofakoon' refers to telling lies intentionally.

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

فَالِقُ ٱلۡإِصۡبَاحِ وَجَعَلَ ٱلَّيۡلَ سَكَنٗا وَٱلشَّمۡسَ وَٱلۡقَمَرَ
حُسۡبَانٗاۚ ذَٰلِكَ تَقۡدِيرُ ٱلۡعَزِيزِ ٱلۡعَلِيمِ (٩٦)

He makes the dawn break; He makes the night for rest; and He made the sun and the moon to a precise measure.
That is the design of the Almighty, the All Knowing [96]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 96)

He Glorified is He mentions more of His miraculous signs as He did in the first verse when He stated that He is the One Who created for us what we need for our lives.

'[He is] The One Who splits (faliq) the dawn; and He has made the night to be [a source of] stillness...' (al-An'am: 96). The meaning of 'faliq' (causes to break) means that He makes something break into two halves. These are two complementary blessings as one cannot do without the other. Hence, there must be a dawn and there must be night-time that is a source of stillness. This is because dawn is a time in which things are seen clearly with the naked eye, and we know that darkness causes man to bump into things. If you are stronger than these objects you will break them and if these objects are stronger than you they will break you. Moving about in the dark, without light to guide us, could lead to things being destroyed.

In the morning we work and move throughout the earth, and our lives are full of activity. When we are afflicted with toil, fatigue and tiredness because of all this activity, the logic thing for the living being to do is to rest, calm down and be still–not just with regards to this activity but with regards to everything around him; all things near him need to be still as well. This is because if you are still, but light reaches you, it will affect your constitution. This is why they now say that the rays that reveal the details about the inside of man's body, leave effects on the body.

Allah Glorified is He protects you at night from the rays that come from the sun for the body to have a rest from everything, from every activity emanating from within it and from every activity coming to it, and this is how the blessing of stillness at night and its darkness is like the blessing of the dawn. Each of them complements the other, and we have already noticed that the Lord Glorified is He at the beginning of the chapter, mentions darkness before light: 'All praise is due to Allah, who has created the heavens and the earth, and brought into being deep darkness as well as light...' (al-An'am: 1).

This is because you cannot benefit from your activity in the light unless you feel energetic and rested after the night. If you have not rested, you feel exhausted and you will not be able to do your work properly in the day time. For this reason, darkness is meant to be in existence, and this is why advanced civilizations are those that regulate the life of man such that he can work in the daytime and rest at night, in order for him not to resume his work in the morning feeling worn out. Unfortunately, whoever visits the Egyptian countryside these days, will be surprised because the people of the countryside stay up all night playing with their luxury items, and then they go to work in the morning feeling exhausted and worn out.

We say, 'Let us take the good characteristics of any civilization but not the bad ones'; when you go to Europe, you find the people sleeping and resting at night. Whoever walks in the streets does not hear a sound and does not see anyone leaving their house. You do not hear the sound of a microphone in the street, thereby allowing everyone to have their fair share of calm. This is not the case in our countries. The streets are filled with noise. The sick person is unable to get any rest. Whoever is studying cannot get the necessary peace and quiet. Whoever is trying to engage in worship is distracted by the noise. And still there are those who describe this country as being a model civilization!

We say, 'Let us take each of Allah's blessings in existence in a way that benefits us. When night comes you must turn off the light to be able to sleep peacefully, and for the various parts of your body and constitution not to be disturbed.

He Glorified is He says: '[He is] The One Who splits (faliq) the dawn...' (al-An'am: 96), and 'faliq', as we said previously, means the 'splitter'. Is the dawn split into two? What splits it? We say that 'faliq' is an active participle such as when we say 'the killer blow'; i.e the blow from his hand is a killer blow. '[He is] The One Who splits the dawn...' (al-An'am: 96). The phrase 'faliq al-isbah' (the One Who splits the dawn) means that the dawn splits itself from the darkness because the darkness accumulates and when the dawn comes it is as if it breaks the darkness and splits it in order to allow the light to come forth. 'Faaliq al-isbahah' can also mean that the splitting happens to the dawn, and then later, in the evening, darkness comes. This is one example of the Quran's subtle, rhetorical explanations because the One Who is speaking is Divine. Imr'u Al-Qayss, the poet, said:

Will you not, O long night, will you not vanish

With dawn (subh), although dawn (isbah) is not much better than you

The words 'Subh' and 'isbah' have nearly the same meaning. But is 'subh' when the sun rises or is it the light that appears before the sun rises? 'Al-aisbah' comes first; it is the peaceful light before the sun rises. We find ophthalmologists, after carrying out surgery on a person's eyes, start to undo the bandages that were placed to help the wound heal; they take the bandages off gradually for the light not to dazzle the eyes all at once. Similarly, it is due to Allah's Mercy that He made the period of dawn have a peaceful light first before the sun rises to give off all of its light at one time. It is as if the dawn comes to split the darkness of the night in a peaceful way. Then the sun comes and splits the dawn.

`Therefore, the dawn breaks (faliq) one time because it splits the darkness and breaks it, and another time the dawn itself is broken (mafluq) when the strong light of the sun begins to spread in the sky, and later the darkness comes after it. The active participle implies two actions. The first is when the dawn is broken; i.e. the peaceful light of the sun started to enter. If we said, 'Its dawn is breaking' it means that the first darkness of the night has been broken. Therefore the dawn breaks at one time and at another time it is broken. When He Glorified is He says: '[He is] The One Who splits the dawn; and He has made the night to be [a source of] stillness...' (al-An'am: 96), He wants to indicate two ideas; He Himself is the One Who causes the dawn to break, and that is why He uses a noun in order to show that it is an Established Attribute. But then He says: '...and He has made the night to be [a source of] stillness...' (al-An'am: 96) which indicates an Attribute acting upon something after that upon which it acts (i.e. the daytime) has actually come into existence. When He wants to indicate an Attribute that He Himself has, but that upon which the Attribute acts has not yet come into existence, He uses a noun, and if He wants to indicate an attribute after that upon which the attribute acts has come into existence, He uses a verb. This is why we find the Noble Quran illustrating a firmly established attribute in the Lord's statement: '...and their dog [lay] on the threshold, its forepaws outstretched (basit)...' (al-Kahf: 18). The dog here is established in this position and that is why a noun ('basit' meaning 'outstretched') is used, but when the Quran wants to mention an attribute that changes, it uses a verb: 'Are you not aware that it is Allah who sent down water from the skies, whereupon the earth becomes (fatusbiho) green...? (al-Hajj: 63). It is logical to say '...whereupon the earth became green...' because He said: 'sent down' in the past, but He is referring to the regeneration that takes place because of the water, and hence He uses the verb in the present tense: '...whereupon the earth becomes green...'.

The Lord Glorified is He continues: '...and the sun and the moon an [exact] reckoning (of time)...' (al-An'am: 96). We know the sun and the moon, and afterwards we have the word 'husbana' (an exact reckoning of time) on the pattern 'fu'lan'. This is what usually indicates a hyperbole, such as when you say: 'So-and-so' and I seek refuge in Allah from this, 'has disbelieved fiercely (kafara kufrana)'. Or you supplicate, 'Allah forgive you completely (ghafara ghufrana)'. Whenever you want to exaggerate something, use the pattern 'fu'lan'. The Quran mentions the word 'husban' in two places, both of which are connected to the sun and the moon. It is mentioned here in this verse that we are currently discussing '...and the sun and the moon an [exact] reckoning (of time)...' (al-An'am: 96), and also in the chapter of ar-Rahman, where the Lord Glorified is He says: '[At His behest] the sun and the moon follow their [exactly] computed courses' (ar-Rahman: 5).

What is the difference between these two expressions (the sun following its computed course and the moon following its computed course)? The word 'husban' refers to calculating things. We calculate the year by the revolution of the sun every 365 and a quarter days, and during this period it passes through its different mansions. The moon passes through its mansions every month in just over 28 days, and we calculate the day using the sun and we also use it to calculate the year. However, we calculate the months with the moon. You are not able to calculate the months with the sun; rather, you calculate the months with the moon because at the beginning of the month, the moon appears small and then it grows bigger and bigger. Similarly, our month of Ramadan is determined by the moon and not by the sun, and we determine the day using the sun.

This is what we know about the sun and the moon, and they are both used in our calculations of the days and the months; both are means of calculation. The sun's course has an exact calculation and the moon's course has an exact calculation, and whenever we look at the word 'husban' we understand that both the sun and the moon were created to calculate something because they were created according to an exact calculation, i.e. indeed, what was intended for them was for them to be used for very precise calculations because the sun was created according to an exact calculation and so was the moon.

Look at the clock that we use; is there not a hand for the hours, another for the minutes and a third for the seconds? This is the smallest fraction of time that we can make it count. If it was possible, we would divide the second into fractions as we have done in measuring lengths. There are metres, centimetres, millimetres, and after that we say micro millimetres. Whenever we make advances in scientific knowledge we are able to make more precise calculations, and the sun and the moon cannot be an exact calculation by which we calculate things unless they were created according to an exact calculation. Indeed, when you look at your watch you can see the movement of the second-hand, but you do not notice the movement of the minute hand. You also do not notice the movement of the hour hand. Each of the three hands is turned by a spring and a specific gear. If the movement in either the spring or the gear becomes defective, it is reflected in the remaining hands; the second-hand depends on the minute hand, and the minute hand depends on the hour hand.

If the clock is not made according to this exact calculation it does not work properly, and thus we only consider the clock to be a standard that is used to calculate our time if it has been created according to an exact calculation. Allah Glorified is He says: '...and the sun and the moon follow their (exactly) computed courses' (ar-Rahman: 5) i.e. we use them to calculate because they have been created according to a calculation, i.e. a precise calculation. Why did the Lord Glorified is He say 'husban' (exact calculation) here and not 'hisab' (calculation), and similarly in the verse in the chapter of ar-Rahman? It is because these calculations require great precision, and this great precision is not understood by the word 'hisab', but is understood by the word 'husban'.

Allah Glorified is He concludes the verse by saying: '... [All] this is laid down by the Will of the Almighty, the All Knowing' (al-An'am: 96). The word Almighty (Al-'Aziz) indicates domination and subjection such that no one is able to overcome Him. These masses that you see are stronger than you are, and your hand cannot pass around them. Indeed, they carry out their task for you without you going anywhere near them; you do not approach the sun in order to regulate it as you would do to a clock that a man like you invented. The sun has a power that Allah has provided it with; He created it with this power, and there is nothing in His creation that can rebel against this power in the sun; this is the Will of the Almighty, the All Knowing. He Glorified is He reassures us that the sun and moon were created according to an exact calculation, enabling us to use them to calculate time. He the Exalted created them according to an Almighty Will that cannot be overcome. He is the Almighty that has Absolute Knowledge that is endless and has no limit. The Lord Glorified is He says after that:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِى جَعَلَ لَكُمُ ٱلنُّجُومَ لِتَهْتَدُوا۟ بِهَا فِى ظُلُمَـٰتِ ٱلْبَرِّ
وَٱلْبَحْرِ ۗ قَدْ فَصَّلْنَا ٱلْـَٔايَـٰتِ لِقَوْمٍ يَعْلَمُونَ ﴿٩٧﴾

It is He who made the stars, so that they can guide you when land and sea are dark: We have made the signs clear for those who have knowledge [97] (The Quran, al-An'am: 97)

After clarifying that He Glorified is He created the sun and the moon as an exact reckoning to be used for calculations by His Will, and that He is the Almighty, the All Knowing, He Glorified is He describes for us the task of the stars, as He says: '...so that you might be guided by them in the midst of the deep darkness of land and sea...' (al-An'am: 97). The stars are luminous bodies that we see in the sky in order to be guided by them in the deep darkness of land and sea. It is due to His Mercy towards us and His Knowledge that some of His Creation will be forced by life's activity to travel on the earth, and to travel by night on land or at sea such as those who guard and spread security in the life of this world and are not able to sleep at night. Rather, they have to stay up in order to protect us. All of this is willed by Allah, according to the Will of the One Who is Almighty, Wise and All Knowing. This is why He has left the stars for us; in order for them to guide these people who stay up at night or travel on the earth or by sea in their ships, and they need a little light to guide them. This is why the Arabs were guided by the stars, and one of them would say to the other: 'Have such-and-such a star in front of you and go beyond such-and-such a neighbourhood. Have such-and-such a star on your left and keep going and you will find such-and-such, or have such-and-such a star behind you and keep going and you will find such-and-such'.

That is, had the darkness been made complete, movement by night will be impossible, and it is a movement that a living being may be compelled to do. The Lord Glorified is He has made the stars a means of guidance for those who are forced by life to move about at night.

However, the stars are not only there to be guided by them in the deep darkness of land and sea because if the intention behind them was merely to guide in the deep darkness of land and sea, they would all be equal in size, but instead we see big stars and small stars; and in reality the small star could be larger than the big star, but it is farther away. Hence, the wisdom behind the stars is not restricted to man's movement and being guided by them on land and at sea. This is not the entire wisdom. Rather, it is the wisdom that the intellect in its natural disposition realises first. This is why Allah Glorified is He mentions the stars in another noble statement to make it clear to us that we must not restrict the wisdom of the creation of the stars to being guided by them at night on land and at sea; He says: 'as well as [various other] landmarks: for [it is] by the stars that [men] find their way' (an-Nahl: 16). He Glorified is He does not say in this verse that they are guided in the deep darkness of land and sea. Clearly, the stars have another task. He also says: 'Nay, I swear by the places of the starts–and indeed, that is a tremendous oath if you only knew' (al-Waqi'a: 75-76). Every day as science advances, the Lord Glorified is He clarifies many things for us; there is the comet of which much is said and there are new stars that reveal and confirm Allah's statement: 'And it is We Who have built the universe with [Our Creative] Power; and, verily, it is We Who are steadily expanding it' (adh-Dhariyat: 47), i.e. indeed He Glorified is He has created a massive universe, but you, O man, have taken from it only according to your perceptions and ranges of natural vision that are not assisted by visual aids and the vision that is assisted by the telescope, the microscope and other things such as satellites. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: 'Nay, I swear by the places of the starts–and indeed, that is a tremendous oath if you only knew'. Some scholars say, 'Indeed, every man in existence has a star and his life is attached to this star; when the star sets, its companion on earth also sets'. There are some stars that are luminous and whose pulses we are able to notice, and other stars that are not luminous and are far from us. It is said that they are designated to people who are not known by anyone because of the minimal effect their actions have on life. Science advances every day and it connects certain things to other things for us. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is making it clear to us, 'Indeed, I have created things for you which you are able, with your intellects, to connect to some sort of wisdom therein, but do not say that this is the only wisdom for creating them'. Rather, behind it there are more profound wisdoms because He Glorified is He is the Wise, the fully Capable. Indeed, you may have grasped a simple aspect of Allah's Wisdoms, but you must know that Allah's Perfection is unlimited. In Allah's Dominion there are still things the wisdom of which we cannot and will not be able to grasp until Allah puts an end to the earth and all those who are on it.

The Lord Glorified is He says when concluding the verse: '…indeed, We have made the signs utterly distinct for people who know!' (al-An'am: 97) This verse or verbal sign is amazing, and this can also be said about the sign in the universe: 'Now, among His signs are the night and the day, as well as the sun and the moon...' (Fussilat: 37).

The word 'ayat' ('signs' or 'verses') applies to the portion of the Quran that is separated from another portion. Therefore, there are Quranic signs or verses, and there are also signs in the universe; and the signs in the universe explain the Quranic signs, i.e. verses. Some of the intricate signs in the universe include what we see of various kinds, colours, wisdoms, and objects. The profound signs or verses in the Quran include what the Lord Glorified is He draws our attention to in His Quran which is the fact that the intricate signs in the universe and the amazing, well-organized creation can only belong to a Deity that is fully Capable and Wise Who deserves to be worshipped as the Only One Deity.

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنشَأَكُم مِّن نَّفْسٍ وَٰحِدَةٍ فَمُسْتَقَرٌّ وَمُسْتَوْدَعٌ ۗ
قَدْ فَصَّلْنَا ٱلْـَٔايَـٰتِ لِقَوْمٍ يَفْقَهُونَ ﴿٩٨﴾

It is He who first produced you from a single soul, then gave you a place to stay [in life] and a resting place [after death]. We have made Our revelations clear to those who understand [98]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 98)

Allah Glorified is He speaks to us at first about the signs that surround us and which we need in order to live such as splitting the grain and the fruit kernel. After that He speaks about the sun and the moon, and then He speaks about the stars; all of these signs are around us. Then He talks about something that is in our own selves for the proof to be stronger. Indeed, He Glorified is He brings the proof for you that is in your essence and in your own self, because this proof only needs you to focus your eyes towards what is directly around you. Indeed, the evidence is in your own self and in your soul.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'just as [there are signs thereof] within your own selves: can you not, then, see?' (adh-Dhariyat: 21) That is, it is sufficient to consider our bodies as a complete world within themselves, and in this world there is everything that establishes the Lord's Power and His Superior Right to be worshipped, and His Right to be worshipped as the One Deity.

'And He [Allah] it is who has brought you [all] into being out of one living entity...' (al-An'am: 98). It is true that this information is from Allah, and that it can also be extrapolated from facts we can see in the past because if you look at the world's population in this century and then look at what it was in the last century, you will find that it is half the number. If you look at the previous century, you will find the number to be a quarter of the current population. As you go further and further into the past, you find that the number decreases and decreases until you will arrive at 'one living entity'. This is what Allah is mentioning to us. Someone might say: How can there be one living entity when He says: 'And of every thing We have created pairs...' (adh-Dhariyat: 49). We say, 'Indeed, Allah Glorified is He created the one living entity, and He also clarified that He created from the one living entity its opposite, and then multiplication began'. Therefore, a statistical extrapolation into the past proves the veracity of this issue. Likewise, everything else in existence multiplies such as plants and animals, and you find continuous multiplication. On the other hand, if you look at statistics in the past, you will find the numbers decreasing and decreasing until you end up at one source from which the multiplication began, and this source needs two to start multiplying: 'Glory to Him Who has created pairs...' (Ya Sin: 36).

But why does Allah Glorified is He say here: '...out of one living entity...' and not 'two spouses'? The scholars have clarified that this is evidence of very intense cohesion because when we are from one living entity, then all of us–all of the creation–has parts of that one living entity within them. We said before, 'If we brought a square centimetre of a red dye, for example, and then put it in a small bottle and shook it, we will find that the square centimetre of red dye has spread throughout the bottle and a portion of it would be found in every drop in the bottle. Then imagine that we take the small bottle and put it in a barrel and then shake the barrel well. Again, we would find every drop in the barrel contains a portion of this dye. If we take the barrel and throw it into the sea, the dye will spread and every drop in the sea will contain a tiny atom of this dye.

Similarly, as long as Adam peace be upon him is the source, and as long as we come from Adam peace be upon him and as long as the Lord Glorified is He took Eve from Adam peace be upon them after he was brought to life and thus she became a living being, then our lives are bound to Adam peace be upon him and we each have a portion of Adam in us. Out of Adam peace be upon him and Eve, peace be upon her, came children that contained a living part of them both, and in this way Allah Glorified is He returns us to one source to stimulate and stir within us the feelings of mutual love, mercy and affection.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...and [has appointed for each of you] a settled place [on earth for a set time] (mustaqarr) and a resting-place [after death] (mustawda)...' (al-An'am: 98). The word 'mustaqarr' (a settled place) has numerous meanings and Allah Glorified is He explains them in His Quran. In the story of the throne of Bilqis, we find Prophet Solomon peace be upon him saying: '...Which of you can bring me her throne...?' (an-Naml: 38) A bold one from the jinn responded to our master Solomon peace be upon him as did the one who had knowledge of the Book. The Lord Glorified is He says: '...And when he saw it truly 'mustaqarr' before him...' (an-Naml: 40). The word 'Mustaqarr' here means that it is present because the throne was not present in the gathering at first, but rather, it was brought to him.

With regards to the vision that Allah Glorified is He wanted for Prophet (Moses) peace be upon him: '..."O my Lord! Show [Yourself] unto me so that I might behold You!" [Allah] said, "Never can You see Me. However, behold this mountain: if it remains firm (istiqarra) in its place, then–only then–will You see Me"...' (al-A'raf: 143). We know that the mountain was firm before the speech, and thus (istiqarra) has the meaning of being present and another time it has the meaning of being firm.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...having on earth your abode (mustaqarr) and livelihood for a while' (al-A'raf: 24). This is an expression of how long we will spend in the life of this world. Likewise, the Lord Glorified is He says: '...those who are destined for paradise will be graced with the best of abodes and the fairest place of repose (mustaqarr)' (al-Furqan: 24). The Paradise is also a 'mustaqarr', and the Fire is a 'mustaqarr' for the disbelievers. Allah Glorified is He says about the Fire: 'verily, how evil an abode (mustaqarr) and a station!'' (al-Furqan: 66)

That is, 'mustaqarr' is used to mean being present or being settled and firm, or it can be used to express a period of time in the life of this world. The paradise is also a 'mustaqarr' as is the fire, and this is why scholars have differed over the use of this word, and each one of them has considered only one meaning. Some of them say that 'mustaqarr' is in the loins and then Allah Glorified is He places us in the wombs. Others hold the opinion that 'mustaqarr' refers to our remaining in the life of this world and then we are placed in our graves.

We say that the origin of the word 'istiqrar' is 'qarar' which means 'presence' or 'firmness', and everything has a certain level of 'istiqrar' (remaining firm). There is 'istiqrar' followed by 'istiqrar' followed by the final 'istiqrar', and this is what the believers desire.

This final 'istiqrar' is the one that is permanent. As for the first 'istiqrar' in life, it involves changing from one state to another. We were present in the loins of Adam and after that Allah Glorified is He placed us in the wombs. We were present in the life of this world and then Allah Glorified is He places us in our graves until we come to be present in the Hereafter. Every scholar takes one of these meanings. The poet says:

Wealth and family are nothing but a trust
It is inevitable that one day the trust must be returned

We notice that there is the word 'mustaqarr' (settled place) and the word 'mustawda'' (resting-place). The word 'mustawda'' refers to something that has been put in this place by someone else. However, the word 'mustaqarr' indicates that the matter is not subject to the will of any man, as each and every one of us can become settled (mustaqarr) in ourselves, but how we reached this state is not indicated by this word.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...indeed, We have made the signs utterly distinct for people who understand!' (al-An'am: 98) The word 'fassalna' (made utterly distinct) means that sometimes Allah brings the signs in an utterly distinct way and sometimes He brings them summarized. This is due to the fact that understandings differ, and the circumstances for accepting meanings also differ. What is meant by making the signs utterly distinct is that each detail coincides with a certain fact within the human soul. This is why Allah Glorified is He has not left any room for anyone not to understand and He has not left any room for anyone not to learn. We notice that the conclusions of the two consecutive verses are different. First, Allah Glorified is He says: '...indeed, We have made the signs utterly distinct for people who know!' (al-An'am: 97)Then Allah Glorified is He says: '…indeed, We have made the signs utterly distinct for people who understand!' (al-An'am: 98) The word 'fiqh' (understand) means that you have the ability to understand, i.e. you have the capacity to understand the knowledge that you are told. Thus, having the ability to understand is needed first before receiving knowledge.

What Allah Glorified is He means by making the signs utterly distinct in the first verse, in His statement: '...for people who know' (al-An'am: 97) is an invitation to look at the signs that are outside of man's inner self. But here, i.e. in Allah's statement: '...for people who understand' (al-An'am: 98), He wants us to look at and consider the signs that are within man's inner self.

After that Allah Glorified is He says:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنزَلَ مِنَ ٱلسَّمَآءِ مَآءً فَأَخْرَجْنَا بِهِۦ نَبَاتَ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ فَأَخْرَجْنَا مِنْهُ خَضِرًا نُّخْرِجُ
مِنْهُ حَبًّا مُّتَرَاكِبًا وَمِنَ ٱلنَّخْلِ مِن طَلْعِهَا قِنْوَانٌ دَانِيَةٌ وَجَنَّٰتٍ مِّنْ أَعْنَابٍ وَٱلزَّيْتُونَ وَٱلرُّمَّانَ
مُشْتَبِهًا وَغَيْرَ مُتَشَٰبِهٍ ۗ ٱنظُرُوٓا۟ إِلَىٰ ثَمَرِهِۦٓ إِذَآ أَثْمَرَ وَيَنْعِهِۦٓ ۚ إِنَّ فِى ذَٰلِكُمْ لَءَايَٰتٍ لِّقَوْمٍ يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿٩٩﴾

It is He who sends down water from the sky. With it We produce the shoots of each plant, then bring greenery from it, and from that We bring out grains, one riding on the other in close-packed rows. From the date palm come clusters of low-hanging dates, and there are gardens of vines, olives, and pomegranates, alike yet different. Watch their fruits as they grow and ripen! In all this there are signs for those who would believe [99] (The Quran, al-An'am: 99)

The context requires that Allah Glorified is He says, '... He has caused waters to come down from the sky; and with this means He brings forth...'.

However, here Allah says: '...We bring forth...' (al-An'am: 99) because Allah does not have any semblance of a partner when He brings everything into existence. He is the only One Who brings everything into existence. No one can say that he brought forth vegetation because the earth is Allah's that has been created for man, and He also created the seeds. Human beings think with an intellect and with an ability that has been created for them. As you attribute all your needs to the One Who initially made them, as He is the One Who initially made everything, but He respects your efforts, He clearly says to you: '...and with this means We bring forth...'(al-An'am: 99), i.e. I and the means that I have granted you have brought forth all living growth; I created the means and you are the one who uses these means. If you consider the One Who creates all the means, He is the One Who truly makes everything happen. If you consider the outward appearance of matters, we notice the means with which man has direct contact. This is why He says: '...We bring forth...' (al-An'am: 99). Allah Glorified is He at certain times states and affirms that man carries out actions because man uses the means that Allah has granted him. However, Allah negates that man can do any action which he (man) has no say in whatsoever such as in the Lord's statement: 'Have you ever considered the seed which you put in the soil? Is it you who cause it to grow–or are We the cause of its growth?' (al-Waqi'a: 63-64)

In this verse Allah Glorified is He attributes tillage (putting the seed in the soil) to us because we till but by using the means He Glorified is He gave us as He is the One Who sent down the iron from which the plough is made and He has guided us to shape it after making it pliable with fire that He has created for us and He gives us the ability to shape it. But for plants growing, none of us plays a part in this at all. And this is why Allah Glorified is He says: '[For] were it Our Will, We could indeed turn it into chaff, and you will be left to wonder [and to lament]' (al-Waqi'a: 65).

Here Allah Glorified is He uses the letter 'lam' in His statement 'laja'alnahu...' (We could indeed turn it into...). This 'lam' is used for emphasis because man partakes in this matter, that is he ploughs and takes care of what he has planted in the earth and he works hard to enable it to grow and bear fruit. However, it could be afflicted by some problem that ruins it. Thus, these means, even though they have been used, cannot guarantee that one will benefit from the fruits of this cultivation. This is because the means do not rebel or defy Allah, and they cannot escape from Him. They only carry out what Allah has willed for them, and He Glorified is He may destroy them. As for Allah's statement: 'Have you ever considered the water which you drink? Is it you who cause it to come down from the clouds–or are We the cause of its coming down? [It comes down sweet–but] were it Our Will, We could make it salty and bitter' (al-Waqi'a: 68), Allah Glorified is He did not emphasise the phrase 'ja'alnahu' (i.e. 'we could make it') because no one can partake in this matter and no one can effect it at all, and that is why He did not emphasise it with the letter 'lam'.

Allah Glorified is He says: 'Have you ever considered the fire which you kindle? Is it you who have grown the tree that serves as its fuel–or are We the cause of it growing? It is We Who have made it a means to remind [you of Us], and a comfort for all who are lost and hungry in the wilderness' (al-Waqi'a: 71-73).

Indeed, everything that the Lord Glorified is He mentions is mentioned alongside something that nullifies it. This is for man not to be enthralled by the existence of these things. Rather, he must accept these things along with the possibility of them not existing at some time. Even though man is the one who ploughs, the Lord Glorified is He with His Absolute Power, may turn the plants into chaff. Before this, He says about the matter that is involved in the reproduction of life: 'Have you ever considered that [semen seed] which you emit? Is it you who create it–or are We the source of its creation?' (al-Waqi'a: 58-59)

Then Allah Glorified is He mentions that which nullifies it: 'We have decreed that death shall be [ever-present] among you...' (al-Waqi'a: 60). But for fire, Allah Glorified is He did not say that He would put an end to it or extinguish it and put it out. Indeed He the Exalted has caused it to remain to teach us and remind us of the fire of the Hereafter: 'It is We Who have made it a means to remind [you of Us]...' i.e. we must leave it in front of you so that the punishment of the Hereafter is not hidden from you. '...And a comfort for all who are lost and hungry in the wilderness' (al-Waqi'a: 73), i.e. We leave it, without nullifying it, and this is for another matter which is its benefit in the life of this world for those who live in places that are empty and arid or for those whose stomachs, vessels and provision bags are lacking food because the fire benefits them and helps them to prepare their food to maintain their lives: '...and with this means We bring forth all living things (growth)...' (al-An'am: 99).

Any 'thing' is that which one can experience; fine dust is a thing, the atom is a thing, every object is called a thing. The meaning of all living things is absolutely every object that resembles growth. We have seen stones of which the scientists say, 'This is granite, and this is marble, and that is another type of marble (marmar)'. If you look at the basic make-up of them all, you will find that they are stones of different life spans. If a stone has a certain life span it is coal. If it has another life span it is granite, and so forth. Every object has a life which affirms for us what we mentioned earlier, which is: '...Everything is bound to perish, save His [eternal] Self...' (al-Qasas: 88).

Growth is everything in which you see development and life. The intellect in its natural disposition understands it this way, but the sharp intellect understands many more things from it; such an intellect becomes immersed in the universe and the verse lives with him and he lives with the verse.

Allah Glorified is He continues: '...and out of this We bring forth green lush vegetation. Out of this do We bring forth close-growing grain...' (al-An'am: 99). If you say the word 'khadir', (lush green vegetation), you could mean the colour that is known to us, i.e. green, but 'khadir' means slightly more than 'akhdar' (green). The word 'akhdar' only means the green colour, the colour that is seen by the eye, whereas the word 'khadir' refers to the colour and it also indicates the tenderness that we know through your senses, and when we touch it we find softness.

Clearly, 'khadir' (lush green vegetation) has many qualities; the colour is for the eye while the tenderness is experienced through the senses, and it has a softness that is known by touching. This green colour is very dark, i.e. its greenness is very strong such that it is almost black. This is why we find people who say 'Sawad al-ʿIraq' (the blackness of ʿIraq), i.e. the fertile land that is in ʿIraq, and it is called 'Sawad al-ʿIraq' because it is so green that it is nearly black. Allah Glorified is He says: 'And besides those two are two [other] gardens; which, then, of your Lord's Favours do you deny? Two [gardens] of the deepest green' (ar-Rahman: 62-64).

The word 'Mudhama' (deepest green) means that it is like the darkness of the night; that is, because of the intensity of its greenness it is as if it has become like the darkness of the night. The Lord Glorified is He continues: '...green lush vegetation. Out of this do We bring forth close-growing grain...' (al-An'am: 99). The grain is that which does not have a kernel such as the grains of barley, wheat, lentils, and beans. The word 'Mutarakiba' (close growing) means that the grain is pressed together and supports itself. 'And out of the spathe of the palm tree, thick clusters of dates hanging low and near...' (al-An'am: 99). The palm tree has an exalted rank amongst the Arabs because it gives them constant nourishment, and this is why Allah reminds them of it: '...and out of the spathe of the palm tree, thick clusters of dates hanging low and near...' (al-An'am: 99). The spathe (tal') is the first thing that appears of the palm tree. This is what we call 'al-kuz al-akdar' (the green cob) in the countryside, and it is found in the male of the date palm which is called 'al-fahl'. It is also found in the female. The first thing that appears from the fruits of the date palm is called the 'tal'' (spathe). Then the spathe splits and a bunch of dates emerges, or a root or a stem, which is the part that contains the date palm panicle from which the dates hang. The spathe is the first fruit of the palm tree before it splits and from which clusters of dates emerge, which is what we call 'as-subata' in the countryside. '...thick clusters of dates hanging low and near...' (qinwan daniyah). Allah Glorified is He describes them as 'daniyah' (hanging low and near) because when you see the spathe of the palm tree you see that it first emerges, splits and protects itself with the spikes of a stalk for insects not to eat it. And after that it moves and bends down and it almost touches the ground, such that it becomes close and near. If there is a rare cluster, you will find someone has to insert their hand between the spikes to be able to get to it and pick it. Allah Glorified is He leaves unexpected events for us so that we can appreciate Allah's blessing in making it hang down because if they were all close to us we might not appreciate this blessing. This is why Allah leaves just one between the thorns for man to exert effort in order to obtain it, and this is so that you can appreciate that Allah Glorified is He has brought the rest close for you and that this is a Blessing from Allah.

The word 'tal'' (spathe) sometimes refers to calyxes (akmam), and a calyx (kimm) is that which has fruits in its core, and sometimes it refers to the fruit itself. 'And tall palm-trees with their thickly-clustered dates (tal')' (Qaf: 10).

You can see the dates hanging down from the panicles and each panicle has a number of dates, and then you can see the panicle connected to the main part of the plant. In this you can see how great the amazing engineering in the arrangement of the fruits is. Everything concerning this is calculated according to some form of amazing engineering. When we look at what we have learned in our lives when we design a grid for irrigation and a grid for sewers, we can see that the water grid that gives us the water that we use, and the grid for sewers that takes away the excess water and excrements. When we look at this or that grid, we find that the engineering used for them is very precise because any negligence in design causes problems. When you want to transfer some water to a small neighbourhood and you use a pipe the diameter of which is an inch or so, and in this small neighbourhood there are bends, for every bend you have to bring a pipe that has a slightly smaller diameter than the first. Then you bring a smaller pipe for the houses and an even smaller pipe for each apartment. In these matters the engineers have made very precise calculations.

If this is the engineering of human beings, then what should we think about the engineering of the Creator? You find the stalk and it holds moisture which it has taken from the palm tree, and each palm tree has clusters and every cluster has panicles. Then there are dates and every date takes a tiny seed to nourish itself. This is how we find everything to be calculated with profound precision. Indeed, it is engineering in the Universe which is amazing; engineering that has been made by Allah's word: 'Be!' Allah Glorified is He speaks the Truth when He said: '[The Lord] Who creates [everything], and thereupon forms it in accordance with what it is meant to be, and Who determines the nature [of all that exists], and thereupon guides it [towards its fulfilment]' (al-A'la: 2-3).

‘And He it is who has caused waters to come down from the sky...’ (al-An‘am: 99). The phrase: ‘And He it is who has caused waters to come down from the sky...’ means that we did not know what is behind it. We only knew that the sky is everything above you and thus it overshadows you, and that the water comes from the clouds. We all see the sky raining and we all know the common expression which states, ‘The sky was cloudy and then it rained’. There are those who say, ‘The earth laughed because the sky cried because it receives the water that irrigates the seeds it contains’. But what is behind this process of rain falling?

Indeed, there is another process that happens in the universe without us being aware of it. We only came to know of it when science advanced and when we started filtering water. We put a pot of water on top of a stove. When it reached boiling point, steam was let off and the steam entered some pipes. The pipes passed through cold areas and the water thus became condensed, resulting in filtered water coming down. This is similar to what happens with rain. Look at how much has to done to make one cup of filtered water that we buy from the pharmacy. Compare that to the sky that sends down water in torrents. We do not know how it is made, and this is why the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘Is it you who cause it to come down from the clouds–or are We the cause of its coming down?’ (al-Waqi‘a: 69) This is how water comes down from the sky, and we did not use to know how this happens. Allah Glorified is He says in the verse in the chapter of al-An’am: ‘...and out of the spathe of the palm tree, dates in thick clusters; and gardens of vines, and olive trees, and pomegranates: [all] so alike, and yet so different...’ (al-An‘am: 99).

When Allah Glorified is He says ‘... [all] so alike, and yet so different...’ an example would be the grain of a peach, and there is a grain from one type of peach we call ‘al-khawkh as-sultani’; when we take one fruit, we split it for a clean seed to emerge. There is another grain that we spilt, uncovering a seed that has some flesh of the fruit and also some fibres. This one has a specific colour and the other one has a specific colour. This one has a certain taste and that one has a different taste. ‘... [all] watered with the same water: and yet, some of them We make more excellent than others to eat...’ (ar-Ra’d: 4).

This is for man to know that due to Allah’s Absolute Power, He executes what He wants. After that we find that one plant can have many different varieties. There are navel oranges, and then there are clementine, blood oranges, and tangerines. Similarly, we will find in paradise what Allah Glorified is He tells us about when He says: '...Whenever they are granted fruits therefrom as a provision to enjoy, they will say, "This is what we were fed with before (in the life of the world) as our sustenance!"–for they shall be given something that will recall that [past]...' (al-Baqara: 25).

When the inhabitant of paradise eats from the food, he discovers that the fruits of paradise have a different taste. It is due to Allah's Absolute Power that, after the analyses that were carried out by scientists in the laboratories- may Allah reward them on our behalf- on the grain of the grape, they found that the skin that covers the grape is cold and dry. However, the flesh of the grape is different; it is moist and warm. And the seed is cold and dry. These are three states within one fruit. This is an amazing arrangement. Likewise, the citron is a fruit similar to a bitter orange that has a warm and dry peel while the flesh inside is cold and moist. The question is how can there be four states, i.e. cold and moist flesh and a seed that is warm and dry, in one thing? With what power is this possible?

Indeed, the scientists toiled until they found out its constitution to make the matter clear for us. You look and you find a fruit the external of which you eat and the inside of which is a seed. There is another fruit the inside of which you eat as walnuts and bananas, and you remove the peel and throw it away. With a peach, you eat its flesh and you leave its seed. This is for you to know that the matter is not the mechanics of the created, but the fashioning of a Creator. You find something that has a definite colour but no taste, and something else with a distinct smell. All of that is evidence of Allah's Absolute Power. When Allah Glorified is He talks about the fruits of paradise, this is the reason why he mentions fruits that are similar to those in the life of this world because if He had brought fruits that bore no resemblance to those in the life of this world, man would have said: 'Had these been found in the previous life they would have had a similar taste'. However, the fruits look similar but their tastes are different. Indeed, it is due to His Absolute Power.

Allah Glorified is He says: '...Behold their fruit when it comes to fruition and ripens...!' (al-An'am: 99) The Lord Glorified is He does not just give to man in order for man to fill his stomach. Rather, He nourishes all the faculties within the human soul, even the faculties of luxury, the faculties of beauty, and the faculties of perfection. He makes it clear to you before you eat: Look at the fruit and its shape! Let your eyes be nourished by the beautiful sight when you see the fruit emerging, and keep your eye on it until it ripens. Indeed, these are amazing phases that prove that the Maker is All-Sustaining. And every day the fruits have a different shape and a different size. If you eat it today you will find that its taste is different compared to how it will taste if you ate it after today. This is proof that, as long as they have a specific shape, colour, taste and a different scent at every different moment, their Creator is sustaining them.

‘Look at [each of] its fruit when it begins to bear fruit and [when] it ripens’ (al-An‘am: 99). This means that the enjoyment of the blessings of the universe is spread to many others because looking at a fruit does not mean that I actually own it. I might see it in a neighbouring garden and I look at it and enjoy its shape. Thus, Allah Glorified is He wants to spread the benefit of His blessings even for those who do not actually grow them because no one will ever prevent another from just looking at a blessing.

A well-balanced personality requires nourishment for the different needs of the soul because the needs of the soul are not only hunger and thirst but there are also other needs. Every need has its own type of nourishment. This is why, before Allah says that horses and mules carry loads, He Glorified is He says: ‘and for you in them is [the enjoyment of their] beauty when you bring them in [for the evening] and when you send them out [to pasture in the morning]. And they carry your heavy loads to lands you could not have reached except with difficulty to yourselves. Indeed, your Lord is Most Kind and Most Merciful’ (an-Nahl: 6-7). These animals benefit me by carrying loads. But the one who does not own them sees the horse and enjoys its beauty, and thereby he becomes happy because of something he does not even own. This is how Allah’s Blessings are spread amongst His Creation.

The Lord Glorified is He concludes the noble verse by saying: ‘Indeed, in that are signs for a people who believe’ (al-An‘am: 99). These people believe that the Deity they believe in deserves to be characterized by the Attributes of Majesty and Beauty and deserves to be believed in, and whenever man sees a beautiful creation, he says, ‘Allah’. If this is the case, my faith is sound and the signs in the universe affirm the veracity of my faith in the Deity Who created all of this. Every day something amazing appears before me, and it increases my faith, and the intellect that Allah granted me guides me to have faith in this Deity.

It is amazing that there are those who set up partners for Allah; a Deity who has all these Attributes: Who splits the grain and the fruit kernel, causes the dawn to break, makes the night a source of stillness, makes the sun and the moon a means of calculating time, creates the stars by which we are guided in the deep darkness of land and sea, sends down water to us from the sky, brings forth plants for us that are lush and green; all of these points must make man realise that Allah alone is the only Creator and the only One Who deserves to be worshipped, and thereby make man never worship or have faith in anyone else besides Him. Yet, there are those who set up partners with Allah, and He Glorified is He mentions them in order to make us angry and be warned about these people, for us to take care and be wary of them.

If we are angry towards them, this means we have to praise Allah as He guided us to have faith which makes us angry at such acts, and as a result we should say, ‘Praise be to Allah who guided us to have faith’.

After that Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَعَلُوا۟ لِلَّهِ شُرَكَآءَ ٱلْجِنَّ وَخَلَقَهُمْ ۖ وَخَرَقُوا۟ لَهُۥ بَنِينَ وَبَنَٰتٍۭ
بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ ۚ سُبْحَٰنَهُۥ وَتَعَٰلَىٰ عَمَّا يَصِفُونَ ﴿١٠٠﴾

Yet they made the jinn partners with God, though He created them, and without any true knowledge they attribute sons and daughters to Him. Glory be to Him! He is far higher than what they ascribe to Him [100] (The Quran, al-An’am: 100)

The word ‘jinn’ indicates forms of covering, wrapping and enveloping. We cannot see jinn because they are covered, and the same goes for the angels. ‘But they have set up partners with Allah’. Jinn, as you know, are from Allah’s Creation because He Glorified is He created man and jinn, and He created the jinn, veiled as they are, in order for us not to believe that Allah's Creation of living beings must necessarily be material in form. Rather, He Glorified is He creates what He wants as He wants. He creates things that are veiled and not seen, and they have life and they procreate. He also creates things that are veiled but do not procreate. All of this is due to the Lord's Absolute Power, to make us understand this issue because our intellect may be confused by things that it does not comprehend or see; as we generally do not know the existence of something unless we notice it with one of our senses.

Indeed Allah Glorified is He clarifies this point; beware of thinking that you are capable of comprehending everything that Allah has created. What you notice through one of your senses is not your only means of comprehension because how you notice things has rules that govern it. You indeed see but only by following some rules; if what you are looking at is far away from you and beyond your range of vision, you cannot see it. The same is the case for hearing. If the sound or the source of the sound is remote from you, the vibration does not reach you and you do not hear it. The same can be said for the intellect, as you understand some things and you do not understand others. But Allah gives us examples in our material existence to enable us to understand this hidden creation of the jinn and angels.

We have found that the human intellect has been guided by Allah who determines the nature of all that exists, and thereupon He guided it until it discovered something called a microbe, which is a very tiny living being the naked eye cannot see, but it does exist, and it affects people significantly. It enters their bodies without them noticing how it entered. It deteriorates their health and causes destruction and death, such as the plague, cholera and so on. Despite that, the microbe exists and its existence is similar to ours such that it has a physical existence, life, and action, and it affects humans.

This is how we realize how something hidden and unnoticeable may be threatening to man, who is comparatively large and noticeable. Also, discovering microbes does not mean that we brought it into existence. Its existence is one thing and realising that it exists is something else. When we analyse the microbe, we find that it is of the same substance as man, but it is so tiny that the naked eye cannot see it. When it was discovered under the microscope and we magnified it, we came to know it. This is a living being even though you could not see it. The fact that you could not see it before does not mean that it did not exist. It did exist but you did not notice it. Then man discovered a device that helped him to notice it. When Allah says to you, 'I have angels from amongst my creation and I have jinn from amongst my creation. You do not see them but they see you'; you should say, 'I have believe it my Lord' because at first we did not see something which has the same substance as us, and then we saw it. The things that we discover now prove the veracity of the Quranic Message in relation to matters of the unseen.

Should we be astonished at those who made the jinn partners with Allah, or at the principle of setting up partners itself, whether it be a jinn or other than a jinn? Indeed, our astonishment is because of the principle itself as we not only object to the jinn being set up as partners, but we also object to the principle of setting up any partners with Allah whether they are jinn, angels or anything else. This is why the word 'partners' precedes jinn, although the usual order in a sentence is the other way round. For example, normally, you say that you made the clay into a jug, meaning that the clay existed and then you used it to make something that did not exist, which is the jug. Thus, did the concept of partners exist first and then jinn were taken from them? Or did the jinn exist first and then they were taken as partners? In this second situation, people normally say that they made the jinn partners with Allah. But what is astounding is not the jinn being partners but rather, the principle of idolatry itself (so the word 'jinn' comes second). How do we remove this idea of having partners from their minds whether these partners are jinn or whatever else? This is why Allah Glorified is He said: 'But they have set up partners with Allah';…when you hear this you say, 'I seek refuge in Allah. They have set up partners with Allah!' It does not concern you who these partners are because setting up any partner with Allah, no matter what it is, is astounding, regardless of whether it is a jinn or angel. Then, how can they set up the jinn as partners with Allah?! Did the Lord Glorified is He not relate in His Book that Ibrahim (Abraham) said: ''O my father, do not worship Satan. Indeed Satan has ever been, to the Most Merciful, disobedient' (Maryam: 44).

What is worship? Worship means that the worshipper obeys the one who is worshipped in what he commands him; and as long as they obey devils when they whisper to them, then it is as if they are worshipping them. This is why Allah Glorified is He says: ‘And [mention] the Day when He will gather them all and then say to the angels, “Did these [people] use to worship you?”’ (Saba’: 40). The reply is: ‘they (the angels) will say: “Glorified be You! You are our Lord and Protector, not them. Rather, they used to worship the jinn; most of them were believers in them”’ (Saba’: 41).

How were they worshipping the jinn? They were obeying them in what they commanded them and in what they forbade them because worship is obedience. You, O worshipper, do not invent forms of worship but rather look at what you have been asked to do to draw closer to the One Who is worshipped. Consequently, ‘Do!’ and ‘Do not do’ are the essence of worship.

‘But they have set up partners with Allah’. Why do they set up partners with Allah? Why do they not just worship the partners alone without worshiping Allah at all? It is because the existence of a partner is a proof that Allah is acknowledged as well, but why did they set up partners with Him? Why do they not just disbelieve in Allah and deny that He exists, and that would be the end of the matter? No, they do not do that because they realise that the partners do not have any requirements attached to their worship, and when they worship them, they, for example, do not say to them, ‘Do this!’ and ‘Do not do that!’ There is nothing they have to follow. However, when events take place that are beyond their means, and they are unable to prevent them from happening, to whom do they supplicate? Is it the god that they falsely believe in and does not bring benefit or harm? This is the reason they maintain their acknowledgement of Allah, to seek refuge in Him when they are unable to repel something which neither themselves nor those whom they have set up as partners can repel. This is why the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘And when affliction touches man, he calls upon Us, whether lying on his side or sitting or standing; but when We remove from him his affliction, he continues [in disobedience] as if he had never called upon Us to [remove] an affliction that had touched him.’ (Yunus: 12) It is as if they only worship Allah when it benefits them.

‘But they have set up partners with Allah–the jinn’. It is astonishing that they have set up partners with Allah, even though Allah is the One Who created the worshipper as well as that which is worshipped. The astonishment is due to two things: that they set up partners with Allah, either from the jinn or from the angels, and that 'He [Allah] has created them (the jinn), and they [falsely] attribute sons and daughters to Him, without [any true source of] knowledge' (al-An'am: 100). That is, they falsely attributed that to Him.

As for those who claim that Allah has sons, they are the people of the Book. Allah relates what they have said: 'The Jews say, "Ezra is the son of Allah"; and the Christians say, "The Messiah is the son of Allah."' (at-Tawba: 30)

As for those who ascribe daughters to Allah, they are some of the Arabs who believed that the angels were Allah's daughters. 'Then, has your Lord chosen for you sons and taken for Himself daughters from among the angels?' (al-Isra': 40) Allah Glorified is He also says: 'Has He (then) chosen daughters rather than sons? What is [wrong] with you? How do you judge?' (as-Saffat: 153-154) And Allah Glorified is He says: 'is the male for you and for Him the female?! That is an unjust division.' (an-Najm: 21-22)

Furthermore, there were from amongst the Arabs those who claimed that there was a lineage between Allah and the jinn, affirming the Lord's statement: 'and they have claimed [that there is] a kinship between Him and the jinns (as-Saffat: 158). They fabricated and claimed that there was a relationship between Allah and the jinn, and thereby the angels were created and born. 'But they have set up partners with Allah–the jinn, though He [Allah] has created them (the jinn), and they [falsely] attribute sons and daughters to Him without [any true source of] knowledge. Exalted is He and Most High, far above what they ascribe' (al-Ma'ida: 100).

Why does the Lord Glorified is He say: 'without knowledge'? It is because knowledge itself indicates the opposite of what they said. Knowledge is a matter that entails complicated investigative and realistic processes that rely on proofs. On the contrary, what they claimed is unrealistic and impossible to be proved which is therefore labelled ignorance; it is due to ignorance that they believe in something to be real when it is not, and such a belief is not based on any proof because it does not exist. Had they submitted to their natural disposition that accepts clear proofs and the proofs that are in the universe, they will recant what they believed and they will refuse to attribute partners with Allah.

Allah Glorified is He has presented an issue that is based on confusing ideas as they took partners with Allah, and for this reason He said: ‘Exalted is He’; He is Transcendent and Most High, far above having a partner in His Being, His Attributes or His Actions because He Himself is not like any other being, His actions are not like any other being’s actions and His attributes are not like any other being’s attributes. This is why ‘Exalted is He’ is mentioned with regard to every matter that contradicts the laws that exist in the universe. The understanding of everything that is connected to the True God must be formed within the framework of ‘Exalted is He’. This is why, when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went on his night journey from Mecca to Jerusalem, and then ascended into the heavens on the same night, which was amazing incident, the Lord Glorified is He commanded us to believe in this fact within the framework of the Lord’s statement: ‘Exalted is He who took His Slave by night from Al-Masjid Al-Haram to Al-Masjid Al-Aqsa, whose surroundings We have blessed, to show him some of Our signs. Indeed, He is the All-Hearing, the All-Seeing’ (al-Isra’: 1).

Indeed, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say, ‘I travelled by night from Mecca to Jerusalem’, but rather, he said ‘I was transported’. As long as he was transported, then the law governing what happened on the night journey was the law concerning the Lord. Hence you should understand it within the framework of ‘Exalted is He’. Allah says: ‘Exalted is He who created all pairs–from what the earth grows and from themselves’ (Ya Sin: 36).

Then He continues mentioning that which is beyond your comprehension by saying: ‘and from that which they do not know’ (Ya Sin: 36). It is as if we will come to know afterwards of things that contain pairs. Scientific discovery in the twentieth century has brought some of this about. We learnt the positive and the negative in electricity and electrons etc., and His statement: ‘and from that which they do not know’ widens the scope for issues of the universe that will be uncovered due to the activities of inquisitive minds. Thus, ‘Exalted is He’ declares that Allah is too Transcendent and sanctified to be compared to any living being. His Name is Exalted, He Himself is Exalted, and His Attributes and Actions are Exalted: ‘Most High, far above what they ascribe’, i.e. any attributes that do not befit Him.

After that Allah Glorified is He says:

بَدِيعُ ٱلسَّمَٰوَٰتِ وَٱلۡأَرۡضِۖ أَنَّىٰ يَكُونُ لَهُۥ وَلَدٞ وَلَمۡ تَكُن لَّهُۥ
صَٰحِبَةٞۖ وَخَلَقَ كُلَّ شَيۡءٖۖ وَهُوَ بِكُلِّ شَيۡءٍ عَلِيمٞ ١٠١

the Creator of the heavens and earth! How could He have children when He has no spouse, when He created all things, and has full knowledge of all things? [101] (The Quran, al-An’am: 101)

Allah Glorified is He said in another verse: ‘The creation of the heavens and earth is greater than the creation of mankind’ (Ghafir: 57).

If you witness several wonders within yourself, and every day physiology reveals a new secret, you should not be astonished because the heaven and the earth were brought into existence from absolutely nothing. Here, Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Originator’ which means that He Glorified is He created them without any previous example. There are those amongst mankind who create things based on previous models and experience, but the Lord is the Originator of the heavens and the earth. We know from science that the earth that we live on is a celestial body that orbits the sun, and we used to say in the past that the celestial bodies orbiting the sun are seven in number. Many scientists and thinkers were fooled into saying that these seven celestial bodies are the seven heavens, but the Lord Glorified is He wanted to abolish this matter after they had said seven. The scientists discovered an eighth celestial body orbiting the sun and then a ninth. Then the number became ten and increased further beyond our knowledge. Where is this solar system in relation to the heavens? All of it is merely ornamentation for the sky of this world. When satellites and devices used to bring the distant near were discovered, we saw the Milky Way, and we found a galaxy that contained unlimited solar systems. We found a million systems just like our solar system. This is just one galaxy and there are a million other galaxies, and you will find an astronomer who says, ‘If we had new devices, we would discover new galaxies’. Let us hear Allah’s statement: ‘With Might did We construct the heaven. Verily, We are extending the vastness of space’ (adh-Dhariyat: 47).

Consequently, you must understand that the creation of the heavens and the earth is more difficult than the creation of mankind. As long as Allah Glorified is He is the Originator of the heavens and the earth, and He, with His Essential Superior Might, created the heavens and the earth-which is greater than the creation of mankind-then if He wants a child, He would make a son be born–because a son cannot be called a child unless he is actually born; but Allah Glorified is He is far above that. Furthermore, why would He want a son? Attributes of perfection are not increased by having a son, and the universe was not deficient before some people claimed that Allah Glorified is He had a son. The universe has been created by the Lord Himself Glorified is He. Mankind needs children in order for the parents to be remembered (after their death), but Allah Glorified is He does not die, confirming His statement: ‘Everything is bound to perish, except His [Eternal] Self’ (al-Qasas: 88).

Human beings need to give birth to children in order for their children to help them. Allah Glorified is He is the Mighty One Who created, and He is the Ever-Living One Who does not die. For this reason, there is no significance behind this claim about Him; besides, it is not correct rationally to even ponder about this allegation. However, Allah Glorified is He out of benevolence towards His Creation clarified and explained matters like this.

Allah Glorified is He says: ‘when He [Allah] does not have a companion’. What would Allah Glorified is He want from a companion? Indeed, He does not want anything, so why is this insistence in the matter of His Divinity? No child and no mate will increase His Might to create; no wisdom will result and no knowledge will be brought about such relationships. There will be nothing of benefit from this. It is just a futile claim. If having partners is impossible–and the only purpose of such partners would be to assist Him in His sovereignty; one in charge of the sky, another in charge of the earth, a third in charge of darkness, and a fourth in charge of light, similar to what the ancients used to say when they set up a god for evil, a god for good, and so on and so forth– and the Lord Glorified is He is One and Unique Who does not have partners who assist Him, so what is the point of Him having a child and a companion? I seek refuge in Allah from this! Should these people not refrain and stop saying such a thing? ‘And He is, of all things, All Knowing’. He Glorified is He is the Creator of the universe and He is the All Knowing of everything, and He is not in need of anyone’s assistance.

After that, Allah Glorified is He says:

ذَٰلِكُمُ ٱللَّهُ رَبُّكُمْ ۖ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَ ۖ خَٰلِقُ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ
فَٱعْبُدُوهُ ۚ وَهُوَ عَلَىٰ كُلِّ شَىْءٍ وَكِيلٌ ﴿١٠٢﴾

This is God, your Lord, there is no God but Him, the Creator of all things, so worship Him; He is in charge of everything [102] (The Quran, al-An’am: 102)

Look at how the word ‘Lord’ comes before the phrase ‘none has the right to be worshipped but He’. The word ‘Lord’ is an introduction to ‘none has the right to be worshipped but He’ because worship involves someone being obeyed which means that there are commands and prohibitions. Why and for what reason? The reason is that He is the Lord in charge of bringing everything into existence and caring and guiding them, and it is necessary and logical that we listen to His speech. This is because He is the Lord, the Creator and the Provider. An evidence for this is that when we ask disbelievers whilst they are drunk in the heedlessness of their desires, ‘Who created the heavens and the earth?’ Their natural disposition speaks and says, ‘Allah is the One Who created the heavens and the earth’. However, if the question is posed in the middle of a heated argument, you will find deception and lies. When you want to extract from them the truth and disparage and negate their false claims, you should approach them when they are heedless and unprepared. At such a time, they will say that the creator is Allah.

We have seen the devices that have been designed to detect lying which illustrate the difficult mental process that a liar has to undergo. The truthful person does not need to exert any effort because he examines reality and articulates it, and he is not afflicted with fatigue. However, the one who lies strains himself, keeps hesitating between matters and is confused. He does not know what to say, and he gives contradictory answers to the same question.

‘That is Allah, your Lord; none has the right to be worshipped but He, the Creator of all things, so worship Him. And He is the Guardian [having charge and disposing (wakil)] over all things.’ As long as Allah is the Creator of everything and He is the Ever-Lasting One, then He is the One that most deserves to be worshipped. This is because worship, as we have said, means obeying the commands and refraining from the prohibitions. As long as Allah Glorified is He is the One Who created, He is the One Who lays down the law for preserving man and the universe. If the laws are contravened, the universe and man will become corrupted. And if the universe or man is corrupted, seek refuge by returning to the path the Creator laid down for you in order for both to return to their proper state. This is why He is the One most deserving of worship.

Such is the testimony Allah testified about Himself before He created everything, and before He created the angels. The angels bore witness to it as did those who are endowed with knowledge: ‘Allah witnesses that there is no deity except Him, and [so do] the angels and those of knowledge–[and that He is] upholding justice [in the creation]’ (Al-‘Imran: 18).

Allah bore witness to His Divinity from the outset, and one of His Names is ‘Al-Mu᾽min’ (The Believer). We are believers in Allah and our Lord believes that He is the One God; Allah gives any order He wants and He knows that nothing can contravene Him. He gives the order by saying, ‘Be, and it is’. And because He is the One [True] God, He knows that no one and nothing can contravene Him. It is why He rules over His kingdom, and He knows that everything is subject to His Command and is incapable of going against His Will. We also say that ‘Al-Mu’min’ (The Believer) means that He has granted safety and security to what He created, for He Glorified is He says: ‘Who has fed them, [saving them] from hunger, and made them safe, [saving them] from fear’ (Quraysh: 4). Allah Glorified is He has made it clear to us, ‘You are My Creation. If you adopt My Way, I will give you food to save you from hunger and make you safe from danger’.

Therefore, logic demands that we worship Him Glorified is He and the order to worship Him is in keeping with the beginning of the verse: there is none worthy of worship but Allah. He is the Creator of everything, and this is why worshipping Him is a necessity. This means we have to obey His Orders and avoid His Prohibitions. 'And He is a Guardian [having charge and disposing (wakil)] over all things'.

This is one of the Quran's subtle and eloquent expressions, for we customarily say, 'so-and-so is a guardian or proxy for so-and-so', meaning s/he does what is good for him according to what the person s/he represents wants. But Allah Glorified is He is not a Wakil for you but a Wakil over you because the wakil who is for you carries out your commands. Allah is a 'Wakil' over you just as a guardian is a wakil over a minor. The guardian says 'Do this' and he does it. He Glorified is He is a Wakil over us, and this is why we ask from Him and He is the One Who responds to our supplications by giving us good. But He does not bring about our frivolous desires. We may find a fool saying, 'I supplicated to Allah and He did not answer me'. You understand answering to mean that Allah carries out whatever you request, while He Glorified is He knows best what is suitable for you because He is a Wakil over you and He regulates your behaviour. When you ask for something, if there is good in it, He will give it to you. However, if you thought what you asked for is good for you but it will actually bring about evil, He will not give it to you.

A person who supplicates should not expect that his request has to be answered quickly. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'He responds to you as long as you do not hastily say, "I supplicated to Him and He did not answer me"'.(1) 'And He is the Guardian [having charge and disposing (wakil)] over all things', whether this thing has been chosen (by a person) or not chosen, because one's choice may be an evil and because Allah is wakil over him He says to him, 'No'. That which is not yet legally responsible has no choice and is compelled by Allah's Will, such as fire. It is commanded to burn, but He commanded it not to burn Ibrahim (Abraham) and to make Ibrahim safe.

The following verse comes to confirm the facts that illustrate the Greatness of Allah Glorified is He. He says:

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah from Abu Hurayra

لَّا تُدْرِكُهُ ٱلْأَبْصَٰرُ وَهُوَ يُدْرِكُ ٱلْأَبْصَٰرَ ۖ وَهُوَ ٱللَّطِيفُ ٱلْخَبِيرُ ﴿١٠٣﴾

No vision can take Him in, but He takes in all vision. He is the All Subtle, the All Aware [103] (The Quran, al-An'am: 103)

Why is it that no eye can perceive Allah? It is because the eye is a tool of perception which has its own law; rays are reflected from that which is seen to the one who is seeing the object, and it is thus defined. If the eye could perceive Allah, it would define and limit Him, and the one seeing Allah would have power over Him and Allah would become subject to you because He would have come within your perception. If you could perceive Allah, then Allah would be subject to your vision, and the All-Powerful can never become overpowered. That is because He is the Greatest, he cannot be perceived visually. Moreover, you may see the sun, but can you claim that you perceive it? No, because perceiving means that you fully visualize it. If human vision could perceive Allah, then human vision would become all-powerful and Allah would become overpowered. The One Who is All-Powerful in His Self, as we have already said, can never become overpowered by His Creation.

Everything besides Allah needs Him for their existence to continue, and His Existence is not in need of anyone. This is why: 'no eye can perceive Him, whereas He perceives all that the eyes see' because He has power over all sight as He Himself is All-Powerful. Everything else is subject to Him because it is created by Him. As long as it is created by Him, it is subjected and nothing new can happen to created beings that would make them all-powerful beings.

The scholars have deliberated and differed greatly here: Does man see his Lord or not whether in this world or the Hereafter? Some of them said, 'No one sees Allah according to what is written in the verse: "No eye can perceive Him"'. We say, 'But there are verses in the Quran which say: "[Some] faces that Day will be radiant, Looking at their Lord" (al-Qiyama: 22-23)'.

The verb 'looking' includes seeing, and it also signifies that meaning. Furthermore, Allah punishes those who disbelieve in Him by veiling Himself from them because He says: 'No. Surely, they will be veiled from seeing their Lord that Day' (al-Mutaffifin: 15). The disbelievers are veiled from seeing Allah as a punishment for them. If we are also veiled along with the disbelievers, then what distinguishes us as believers? Why did the scholars not draw attention to the fact that there is a difference between what the Quran says and what they say? Those scholars try to argue that seeing Allah is impossible because our Lord Glorified is He said to Musa (Moses): 'You will not see Me, but look at the mountain; if it should remain in place, then you will see Me' (al-A'raf: 143). But why did those scholars not look at the Lord's statement: 'But when his Lord appeared to the mountain, He rendered it level, and Musa fell unconscious' (al-A'raf: 143)?

Clearly, Allah reveals Himself to some of His Creation. As for the creation seeing Him in this world, the answer is no because our current human constitution is not suited to see the Lord. As a proof, the mountain which is harder and stronger than us crumbled to dust when its Lord manifested Himself to it. When the mountain crumbled to dust, Musa fell unconscious. If Musa fell unconscious after seeing that which Allah revealed Himself to (i.e. the mountain), then how would it have been if he had seen Allah Himself? He was not prepared for it.

The scholars have differed over this verse in the chapter of al-An'am. Their differing has reached the farthest limit. There are those who say that seeing Allah is possible while others deny it. I think that their differing is not really something to differ over, because they are talking about 'seeing', while the discussion here is about negating 'perception'. Perception means to fully grasp something, while seeing is something general. It is only perception that is not possible, and even if we consider seeing and perception to be the same, we can still say, 'Why is there a difference regarding the Hereafter?' If the differing concerns seeing Allah in this world, then this is a friendly discussion, but they have made the discussion focus on the Hereafter.

Indeed, the verses of the Quran are clear regarding the fact that seeing the Lord Glorified is He is one of Allah's Blessings towards the believers, and it is in addition to the other blessings, and that Allah's veiling Himself from the disbelievers is a type of punishment for them. And we also say, 'Why do you not say that perception will exist in the Hereafter in a way that it does not exist in this life because anything we do in this world depends on the means available, while in the Hereafter anything we do will not depend on any means?

In this world, if you want to drink, you ask for some water or you go and fetch some water and then drink. When you want to eat something, you tell the people of the house to make something for you, or you buy whatever it is that you want. In the Hereafter, all you have to do is think about what you want and you will find it in front of you. This is a new law that is different from any law in this world. Then, why can it not be possible that the constitution of our body in the Hereafter be such that it allows us see Allah but within the framework of ‘there is nothing like unto Him’?

Concerning the Hereafter, everyone agrees that there are matters that contravene the laws of this world and the laws of the universe that are contemporary to us regarding food and drink and being free of excretion. We will eat and drink in the Hereafter but there will not be any excrement. Now you prepare food and then ingest it, and in the process of digestion, you take some food and you leave the rest as excrement which must come out. However, preparing food and ingesting it in the Hereafter are according to the command ‘Be!’ without any excrement. It is food by the Power of the All-Powerful. In paradise, you will obtain everything that you want without it running out. In this world, whatever you take from decreases, but in the Hereafter nothing decreases because it is provided by an everlasting source.

After that, Allah Glorified is He continues by saying: ‘and He is the Subtle One, the Well-Acquainted’. The Name ‘The Subtle One’ is appropriate for: ‘No eye can perceive Him’, while ‘Well-Acquainted’ is appropriate for: ‘whereas He perceives all that the eye sees’. The Name ‘The Subtle One’ has a special meaning because it is necessary to be ‘subtle’ when creating something incredibly intricate. Ponder this example–which is only for clarification, for Allah is far Exalted above any comparison. We did not know about the microbe until recently because it is so subtle and tiny that it cannot be perceived by the naked eye. After we had invented the microscope, we could see it-but if the microbe was any smaller than what it is, we would never have seen it. We have discovered the virus and we are trying to know more about its characteristics. In short, whenever something is tiny, subtle and cannot be seen, it requires noble and sublime qualities to make it.

The first manifestation of Allah's Attribute of being the Subtle One is the management of humans' intricate affairs in a way that realises their benefits in their lives. When we just pass around a cup of water for everyone, it requires a lot of management, so what should we think about the management of the Subtle One towards His slaves?

Allah created the earth for, us and three quarters of it is water while the remaining quarter is dry. This is because He Glorified is He wants to expand the surface area of water because whenever the surface area of water is expanded, evaporation increases and becomes easier. However, when the water is deep and the surface area is small, the evaporation is only at the surface. If this were the case, the clouds would not bring sufficient water for the creation. Allah Glorified is He has expanded the surface area of the water in order for it to evaporate and then form clouds in the sky. They then pass through cold regions in order to send down fresh water for us that we can drink, our animals can drink, and from which our crops can be irrigated. All of this is the result of subtle and exact management.

Another of the manifestations of Allah's Attribute of being the Subtle One is that we find matters that cannot be described at all, and this is why each and every scholar explained one aspect of the Subtlety of Allah with His Creation. One of them says, 'One aspect of the Subtlety of Allah with His Creation is that He bestows abundant blessings on them'. Another says, 'Another aspect is that He manages everything in a subtle and precise way'. A third says, 'An aspect of the manifestations of the Lord being The Subtle One is that He regards His many blessings towards His creation as being negligible'. The blessings that Allah grants His creation are relatively few because His Storehouses are full. His Gifts are unlimited and will never be decreased. This is why Allah Glorified is He said: 'If you are grateful [to Me], I shall most certainly give you more' (Ibrahim: 7). His Countless Blessings towards His Slaves are in reality relatively few in number. In return, He considers the small amount of obedience from His Creation–out of His bounty–to be much because He is the One Who rewards one good deed tenfold.

The manifestations of the Subtle One have no limit. He is the Subtle One as when you call Him, He responds to you; if you seek Him, He accommodates you; if you love Him, He approaches you; if you obey Him, He suffices you; if you give and lend from the bounty and wealth that He has granted you, He will pardon you. And if you turn away from Him, He is the One Who says, 'O Son of Adam! If you remember Me within yourself, I will remember you within Myself. If you mention Me in a gathering, I will mention you in a gathering that is better than them. If you draw near to Me by one hand span, I will draw near to you by one cubit. If you draw near to Me by one cubit, I will draw near to you a fathoms length. If you come to Me walking, I will come to you rushing.'(1) These are manifestations of Allah being the Subtle One. He is the One Who calls: 'Turn to Allah in sincere repentance'. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who says, 'Allah is more pleased with His Slave's repentance than when one of you finds the camel that you had lost in the middle of nowhere.'(2)

Another scholar mentioned another manifestation of Allah being the Subtle One by saying, 'The One Who recompenses you if you discharge your obligations and pardons you if you fall short'. Another scholar adds, 'Whoever takes pride in Him [Allah] He exalts, and whoever needs Him He enriches'. Another scholar says, 'His [Allah's] Blessings are good, and even His Withholding is a blessing'. If He denies His slave something, then indeed He stores it for him in the Hereafter. His Subtlety penetrates that which we cannot encompass. When you analyse any matter, you may arrive at an understanding of what the blessing is, and if you do arrive at an understanding, you will not be able to praise Him enough for this blessing.

As for the word 'Well-Acquainted'; in our lives we usually hear the word 'well-acquainted' when we are faced with some problem and we find someone saying, 'We want to hear the opinion of someone who is well-acquainted about this'. In judicial matters, we find the judge summoning an expert to write a report regarding a matter that needs someone who specialises and is well-acquainted in that matter. An expert in any field is the person who knows the details of the field, so what should we think of the Most Exalted, the Well-Acquainted, for

---

(1) Narrated by Ahmad from Anas

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim from Anas

Whom nothing in His kingdom eludes His Knowledge. He is the One Who perceives all that every eye sees.

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

قَدْ جَآءَكُم بَصَآئِرُ مِن رَّبِّكُمْ ۖ فَمَنْ أَبْصَرَ فَلِنَفْسِهِۦ ۖ
وَمَنْ عَمِىَ فَعَلَيْهَا ۚ وَمَآ أَنَا۠ عَلَيْكُم بِحَفِيظٍ ﴿١٠٤﴾

Now clear proof has come to you from your Lord: if anyone sees it, that will be to his advantage; if anyone is blind to it, that will be to his loss – [Say], ‘I am not your guardian’ [104] (The Quran, al-An’am: 104)

Insight is related to abstract meanings and illuminations that come to the hearts just as sight is related to the eye. The universe gives you proofs for the physical sight, while the Quran gives you proofs to enable the person to have insight. Just as Allah has guided man and has warned him and forbidden him from being disobedient, He has also granted him light that makes things manifest for him, and thus he moves according to guidance and does not crash or collide. Likewise, He has made abstract meanings a form of light. The first light (i.e. the physical) is taken by the disbeliever and the believer, and we all have a share in it just as we do with provisions. However, the second light concerns insight, which is only grasped by the believer. This is why our Lord Glorified is He says: ‘to lead you out of the deep darkness into the light’ (al-Hadid: 9).

It is the light of guidance to be able to capture abstract meanings. He makes it clear, ‘I created you and I laid down for you laws for your preservation. The laws for preservation regarding the material world are for both the believer and the disbeliever, while the laws for preservation regarding the abstract concepts of life are exclusively for the believer’. He says: ‘for one to whom Allah gives no light has no light whatsoever!’ (an-Nur: 40)

We know that insights are abstract while the verb ‘come’ in the verse is for a tangible matter, such as when a person says, ‘Zaid came’ or ‘‘Amr came’. Can you imagine ‘insight’ coming? Allah Glorified is He said: ‘Now, there has come to you from Allah a light’ (al-Ma‘ida: 15). Indeed, Allah Glorified is He has given us a true and clear light and He brings it to us by His Will. ‘Now, there has come to you clear proofs and insight from your Lord'. Due to the formation of proofs and insights, they have become like something tangible that actually comes. It is incorrect to say that they have not reached you because they have come to us from the Lord Who created us with His Power and provided us with everything as He continuously sustains us. One of the necessary qualities of Lordship is that He gives that which guides. He has decreed that the means of insight come to us and He has decreed that His Messenger, Muhammad, has conveyed this to us. Thus, He gave to His Prophet Muhammad, and he (Prophet Muhammad), in return, served us. The Lord Glorified is He legislated and Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed, and it remains for you to carry it out given that you have no excuse before the Most Exalted Legislator Who created everything and Who is the Lord. Likewise, you have no excuse before the infallible conveyor, who is Prophet Muhammad. The Lord Glorified is He says: 'Whoever sees [them] does so for [the benefit of] his soul, but whoever is blind [to them does harm] against it'.

Ponder this example–which is only for clarification, for Allah is far Exalted above any comparison. A child enters the house and asks his mother, 'What food have you prepared for us?' She says, 'Nothing'. The child says, 'My father has given you meat, rice, and vegetables'. This last statement he made implies, 'Where's your work, mother?' Our Lord Glorified is He makes it clear, 'I created you, I laid down for you a law of preservation and I sent to you a Messenger, Muhammad, whom you know to be truthful in what he conveys. He carried out the task of conveying the Message, and that is why the rest of the matter is left to you. Everyone must carry out whatever work he has. If he chooses to see, then he does so for his own good, but if he chooses to remain blind, then he does so to his own hurt. Beware of thinking that what I have commanded you benefits Me in any way, or that it increases Me at all in My Authority because these commands are for your benefit'. I do not worry about legislation if the one who legislates does not benefit from it; however, the one who benefits from any legislation is the one who legislates for his own benefit. For the Lord Glorified is He His legislation is trustworthy and safe because He does not benefit from it.

The Messenger's job is only to convey the Message, and the Lord Glorified is He has protected him and preserved him from disbelief. Allah has created every individual with the ability to choose whether to follow or disobey. He Glorified is He did not send the Messenger as a tyrant, but rather, He sent him as mercy. This is why Allah tells the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him to say: ‘I am not a guardian over you’. Allah legislates in order to protect the creation and He wants it to be in the best and most excellent form. The Messenger is the one who conveys and the Lord Glorified is He says about him: ‘You are not domineering over them.’ (Qaf: 45)

Consequently, everyone is free to obey or disobey. The Messenger, Muhammad, waged war in order to protect this choice and the proof is that the countries that Islam liberated still have people among their populations that have remained in their disbelief without being forced to believe. Allah Glorified is He says after that:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ نُصَرِّفُ ٱلْـَٔايَٰتِ وَلِيَقُولُوا۟ دَرَسْتَ وَلِنُبَيِّنَهُۥ لِقَوْمٍ يَعْلَمُونَ ١٠٥

This is how We explain Our revelations in various ways – though they will say, ‘You [Muhammad] have been studying’– to make them clear for those who know [105] (The Quran, al-An’am: 105)

‘And thus do we explain the signs in various ways’. He brings the signs to us one after another, and He repeats the process. An event takes places and He sends down the legislation regarding it. He makes their hearts incline to Him, and He brings examples from amongst the Messengers and mentions how their nations treated them; every time the sign is repeated we find one heart is ready to accept it. This repetition is needed because if Allah had sent His Signs just once and then was silent, there could have been people whose hearts remained in error.

However, when He diversifies the events and their respective legislations and warnings, their hearts may be prepared for faith and the hearts may comprehend the guidance. ‘So the disbelievers will say, “You have learnt this (from somebody)”’, what does this mean? We know that heaven intervenes when corruption overflows, but if the human himself has a reproachful soul, then the human protects the soul and guards it; if the person sins, his soul reproaches him and he returns. But if the reproachful soul is hidden and the soul begins to command to do evil, and commanding to do good and forbidding evil is impossible in the society, this means that corruption is overflowing. At this point, heaven intervenes and a new Message comes with a new miracle.

Indeed, corruption only comes about from the existence of classes of people who wear down other classes. Those who are being worn down by the corruption are the ones who eagerly receive the Message. However, those who benefit from the corruption are those who oppose the Message. Every group that waged war against the Messenger were those who used to oppress the people, while the oppressed wanted someone to rescue them.

Therefore, Allah set up an evil enemy for every individual who brought a heavenly call because heaven only intervenes when evil that cannot be stopped is present in the society. This is how Allah sets up an evil enemy for every prophet and Messenger. This enemy is a test for the people, but those who have weak faith incline towards him. The Lord Glorified is He reveals the signs in many different ways, one after another; but only the sincere believers remain steadfast with the caller to the Truth.

You find that Islam came and made clear many matters which were previously vague. For example, there was the Night Journey, and those whose faith was shaky denied the Night Journey. This was done in order to remove the froth and leave only those who carry the Message according to the way of Truth. As for those whose faith is weak, or those who worship Allah as if it were on an edge, then Islam does not want them. ‘Had they gone forth with you, they would not have increased you except in confusion.’ (at-Tawba: 47)

The Lord Glorified is He has revealed signs in many different ways to make things clear for the oppressed and to make them victorious. But when Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him related the signs from Allah, some responded by claiming that he had stayed secluded, studying in a mountain and learning from a non-Arab. This is why we find the Lord Glorified is He saying: ‘And We certainly know that they say, “It is only a human being who teaches the Prophet (Muhammad)”’ (an-Nahl: 103). The reply to their claim comes from the Lord: ‘The tongue of the one they refer to is foreign, and this Quran is [in] a clear Arabic language’ (an-Nahl: 103).

When ʿUmar Allah be pleased with him was circumambulating the Ka’ba, he came to the Black Stone and said, ‘By Allah, I kiss you and I know that you are a stone and that you do not bring harm or benefit. If I had not seen the Messenger of Allah (Muhammad) peace and blessings be upon him kiss you, I would not have kissed you'. (1)

Our master ʿUmar did this is in order to teach us what to say if people come and ask us about the reason behind kissing the Black Stone. The immediate response should be, 'Indeed, the Messenger of Allah (Muhammad) peace and blessings be upon him did this, and this has been legislated'.

Allah Glorified is He says after that:

ٱتَّبِعۡ مَآ أُوحِيَ إِلَيۡكَ مِن رَّبِّكَۖ لَآ إِلَٰهَ إِلَّا هُوَۖ وَأَعۡرِضۡ عَنِ ٱلۡمُشۡرِكِينَ ١٠٦

Follow what has been revealed to you from your Lord, there is no God but Him. Turn away from those who join other gods with Him [106] (The Quran, al-An'am: 106)

When someone is speaking with someone else regarding a matter that the one he is speaking to is already engaged in and carrying out, we must understand the reality of what is meant. For example, Allah Glorified is He says: 'O you who believe!' (an-Nisa': 136). What is Allah calling His Believers to here? He called them because they believe and this faith requires them to be addressed about the responsibilities they have because of believing. Man is subject to change in circumstances, and therefore Allah makes it clear that the faith that you have accepted has responsibilities attached to it, and I am telling you to be persistent with this faith. The command here is to be persistent. In other words Allah is saying, 'Just as you have believed and your faith requires that you be addressed about the responsibilities you have, when I say to you: "O you who believe!" this is a command for you to cling to this belief and be persistent in your faith'. Furthermore, the Lord's statement: 'Follow [O Muhammad] what has been revealed to you from your Lord' is a statement for a Messenger who already follows the Revealed Message. Consequently, the command is understood as an order to be persistent in following it, and do not let what they say grieve you O Muhammad because your Lord is assisting you in this. He is in charge of defending you and He will dictate to you the proofs in reply to their arguments: ‘And they do not come to you with an argument except that We bring you the Truth and the best explanation.’ (al-Furqan: 33)

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim

The Lord Glorified is He then addresses Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him saying: ‘Follow [O Muhammad] what has been revealed to you from Your Lord–there is no deity worthy of worship except Him–and turn away from those who associate others with Him [Allah].’ (al-An‘am: 106)

We know that revelation (wahi) concerns informing without any third person hearing, and every revelation implies the giving of information in this way. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him received revelation in various forms, but everything that is connected and specific to the Quran came via Gabriel peace be upon him; and the Lord’s statement: ‘Follow [O Muhammad] what has been revealed to you from your Lord–there is no deity except Him–and turn away from those who associate others with Allah’ means that there is no God but Allah Glorified is He and that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is not able to change the code of life that has come down to him from His Lord. It is as though Allah is saying to him peace and blessings be upon him ‘You must turn your back on those who ascribe divinity to anything besides Me. Do not sit with them, do not mix with them, and do not befriend them’. Indeed, such avoidance indicates acumen, results in guidance (of the disbelievers) and is also an order from Allah.

The Lord Glorified is He says after that:

وَلَوْ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مَآ أَشْرَكُوا۟ ۗ وَمَا جَعَلْنَٰكَ عَلَيْهِمْ حَفِيظًا ۖ وَمَآ أَنتَ عَلَيْهِم بِوَكِيلٍ ﴿١٠٧﴾

If it had been God’s will, they would not have done so, but We have not made you their guardian, nor are you
their keeper [107] (The Quran, al-An’am: 107)

The Lord Glorified is He sheds light on a very important point that we must bear in mind as long as we have faith, which is that no disbeliever disbelieves because Allah forces him to do so. Rather, he disbelieves because Allah has loosened the reins and given him the choice, i.e. He created him with the ability to choose. This is why the disbeliever only does what he does because of the choice that Allah has given him and not out of compulsion or coercion from Our Lord. The proof is that the universe we live in is subject to His Command. It cannot choose other than what Allah has ordained for it, and everything in the universe moves according to what Allah wills.

To sum up, whoever disbelieves does not disbelieve because Allah forces him; but it is the result of the choice granted to him by Allah. When Allah distinguished man with the ability to choose, He showed man the way to follow in order to gain rewards and not be afflicted with punishment. This is why responsibility involves 'Do!' and 'Do not do!' If Allah Glorified is He wanted there to be coercion, He will have coerced all the species in the universe, He will have coerced them throughout all their lives, and they will only carry out the function that Allah wanted from them. Indeed, He coerces the sun, the moon, the stars, and the water. Everything in the universe is under His Coercion, and even the angels whom He created: 'who do not disobey Allah [in executing] the Commands they receive from Him' (at-Tahrim: 6).

That is, Allah's Attribute of Coercion (qahr) can affect anything, but does Allah want His creation to be coerced to do what He wants? No. Rather, He Glorified is He wants them to do what He loves and that they choose to do what He loves, although causing coercion in some species affirms His Absolute Power, and indeed it is not possible for any created being to deviate and act differently from what Allah wants from them. But man was left with the ability to choose to show that some people from His Creation choose to move towards Him the Almighty, while they are capable of not moving towards Him which affirms their attribute of love.

When the one who can choose, chooses obedience while he is capable of being disobedient, and he chooses faith while he is able to disbelieve, then He has come to Allah out of love, not coercion. This is why our Lord says to His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'It may be that you will kill yourself with grief because they do not believe. If it is Our Will, We could have sent down unto them from the skies a sign to which their necks will be forced to bow down in humility' (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4).

Allah orders Prophet Muhammad to have compassion on his soul and not to kill it out of grief and sorrow because his people refuse to have faith in what he has brought from Him. It is as if Allah is saying to him peace and blessings be upon him 'Do you want Me, O Muhammad, to force them (to believe)? Do you want their necks or do you want hearts? Indeed, you know, O Muhammad, the way set for you that has come down to you from your Lord wants hearts, and the hearts come out of choice. If We want them to believe, we could have sent down a miracle that will have overcome their hearts, and then they will have been forced to believe'.

This is why if a person loses any of his facilities which are needed to make a free choice, he will become no longer responsible for his actions. The proof of this is that no responsibility is attached to the one who has lost his intellect because the organ we use to choose is the mind. Likewise, no responsibility is attached to whoever is not yet an adult. Rather, the Lord Glorified is He leaves him until he becomes an adult and is thus able to give birth to someone like him and the chemical make-up of his body is fully developed. Also, he has to be not forced by anyone stronger than him to do any act he does not want to do. If all the above is the case, he will be responsible for anything he does.

Therefore, the person is responsible for what he does if three points are present: presence of intellect, as no responsibility is attached to the insane; an intellect that is mature and discerning, as there is no responsibility before puberty and no compulsion so one can make sound choices. Why? The answer comes from the Lord Glorified is He: 'That he who perishes might perish with clear knowledge of the Truth, and that he who lives (believers) might live with clear knowledge of the Truth (al-Anfal: 42).

Allah Glorified is He says:

وَلَا تَسُبُّوا۟ ٱلَّذِينَ يَدْعُونَ مِن دُونِ ٱللَّهِ فَيَسُبُّوا۟ ٱللَّهَ عَدْوًۢا بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍۗ كَذَٰلِكَ
زَيَّنَّا لِكُلِّ أُمَّةٍ عَمَلَهُمْ ثُمَّ إِلَىٰ رَبِّهِم مَّرْجِعُهُمْ فَيُنَبِّئُهُم بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿١٠٨﴾

[Believers], do not revile those they call on beside God in case they, in their hostility and ignorance, revile God. To each community We make their own actions seem alluring, but in the end they will return to their Lord and He will inform them of all they did [108] (The Quran, al-An'am: 108)

This noble verse concerns one of the manners that are needed when calling others to Allah. This call is the same as that delivered by the previous

Messengers. The Lord Glorified is He sealed it with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and He Glorified is He made it the last connection between heaven and earth. This is why it was imperative for Islam to embrace all matters that are connected to calling others to Allah, and for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to bear them as a trust which he had to deliver to the world. The followers of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him must also bear this trust; these followers have been honoured by Allah Glorified is He as those who bear the trust of delivering Allah's Message to all the creation have been placed amongst them, thereby they continue the work of Allah's Messenger Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Any Muslim who has knowledge of one of Allah's rulings is required to convey it to someone else. This is because the one who the ruling is conveyed to may understand it more than the one who heard it in the first place, even if Allah does not enable the one who conveys the ruling to act according to what he conveyed. He may convey what he has learnt to someone who has a deeper understanding than him. Even if the person who conveys the call does not act according to this information, the one who knows any matter in religion should, at least, not miss the chance of receiving the reward for conveying information from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to the creation. But it is better if he acts on this information himself to be a model for others because of his good behaviour and for him not to belong to those about whom Allah says: 'Most loathsome is it in the sight of Allah that you say that which you do not do' (as-Saff: 3). Some poets used to insist on this matter by saying:

Take my knowledge and do not rely on my action have the fruits and use the rod to poke the fire

Thus, conveying from Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a necessary matter as it is a continuation of his peace and blessings be upon him testimony. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him conveyed from the Lord Glorified is He what the Lord wants from the creation. It remains for those of mankind who follow the Messenger, Muhammad, to bear witness that they have conveyed to mankind what has come to them from him peace and blessings be upon him; 'Thus have We made you (true Muslims) a moderate midmost community to stand as witnesses to the Truth before all mankind, and for the Messenger [Prophet Muhammad] to be a witness before all of you' (al-Baqara: 143).

Likewise, Prophet Muhammad will bear witness that he conveyed the Message to us. And an essential part of the way of life Allah wants for us is that his followers will have to bear witness that they conveyed the Message to mankind. If there is any shortcoming in conveying the Message to mankind, then the guilt lies with those who follow Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him for they did not properly carry out the trust of the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him in conveying the Message to all of mankind. The way of calling to Allah is difficult because it requires that the caller takes the hand of those who are deviating from the way of life that was revealed from the heavens and who are following their earthly passions which are always attractive for the creation because they are connected to the soul's immediate enjoyment. By following the religion–as they say–one realises a delayed benefit. This statement is not fair to the religion because before the religion makes people realise a deferred enjoyment, it also makes them realise an immediate enjoyment because the people who adhere to the way of 'Do!' and 'Do not do!' live a good life without malice, exploitation, ill will, envy, suppression and tyranny, and thus all of mankind lives in safety.

That is, do not say that the fruits of the religion are only in the Hereafter. Rather, say that the aim of the religion is not related only to the Hereafter but to the life of this world as well. The Hereafter is a reward for succeeding in fulfilling these goals because in the Hereafter Allah rewards only those who excelled in their actions in the life of this world. Whoever works righteousness, thereby following Allah's Way: 'We will surely cause him to live a good and pure life' (an-Nahl: 97); and whoever turns away from His way, then indeed he will have a wretched life, and this happens before the Hereafter. Then the Day of Resurrection comes for them to receive the punishment from Allah: 'And on the Day of Resurrection We shall raise him up blind' (Ta Ha: 124).

If the aim of the religion is to take people away from their bad desires to the Path of Allah the Almighty, then the mission of the caller is going to be very difficult psychologically. This is why some have said, 'Indeed the one who advises others to goodness must be clever because he wants to make people leave the evil that they love and are accustomed to'. This is why the caller must not try to take them away from what they are used to with ways that they hate. Rather, he must influence their intellects and desires to make them follow the path of Allah, and this is why this verse says: 'And do not insult those they invoke other than Allah, lest they insult Allah in enmity without knowledge. Thus we have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them. Then to their Lord is their return and He will inform them about what they used to do' (al-An'am: 108).

The wise men have said, 'Advice is heavy, so do not make it like a mountain nor turn it into an argument. Reality is bitter, and therefore you should use gentle speech when guiding others. Using gentle speech when advising makes the heart of the one being advised soft. It is enough for you to only make him leave what he loves and is accustomed to (i.e. his desires) and turn towards that which he is not accustomed to (i.e. Allah's Way of life). This is why making him leave what he is used to should not be done with harshness'. For this reason, the Lord Glorified is He teaches us to be careful of this matter when we call antagonists who associate others with Allah in worship to have faith in Him; we must do this with leniency.

They wanted immediate pleasure by disregarding Allah's Way. But they kept their belief in Allah with their belief in these partners because they could find themselves in critical situations which earthly means are unable to repel, and it is for their own benefit that they have a Deity Who is able to save them from the situation in which they are. They are honest to themselves concerning this point. But Allah Glorified is He says about people like this who are resolute upon idolatry: 'Truly, you and all that you worship besides Allah are [but] fuel of Hell: To it you will surely come' (al-Anbiya': 98).

The fuel (hasab) of hell, therefore, is made-up of the idol-worshippers and the idols that they used to worship are with them, so they too will be fuel for the fire that is going to punish them all. Some superficial people think that this will be a punishment only for the stones. No. Rather, it (the punishment) is jealousy, vengeance, and anger on behalf of the stones that is directed at the idol-worshippers for leaving Allah's Way, which is to worship Allah alone. The stone will say, 'You were captivated by me and this is why I will be the means of burning you'. Indeed, we find for those who are captivated by supposed gods from amongst human beings, or from trees, or celestial bodies, or stones, Allah afflict them with punishment. The stones that they used to worship will say, as some have said in poetry:

They worshipped us while we are stronger worshipers
Of Allah than those who stand during the pre-dawn hours
They took our silence as proof against us
And for them we became fuel for the fire
The transgressor has his reward, and the one who is transgressed against
Will be saved by the Mercy of the All-Forgiving

For this reason, the command comes not to revile what is worshipped by those who associate partners with Allah because the idols have not committed any sin. Actually, we should be kind towards the stones because they incur no sin due to those who are captivated by them. Allah Glorified is He teaches us and makes it clear to us that we should not be aggressive against that which has been taken as a god because it is excused. To revile (sabb) means to say something vile, or something of abuse, derision, or derogation. If you revile and deride (tasubbu) what they worship besides Allah then the one worshipping it, out of his foolishness, will deride Your God. You will have reviled a false god, while they will have reviled the True God, Allah. We would not gain anything from this, and therefore we should desist.

In the Lord's statement in the Quran, Allah warns us against falling into this: 'And do not insult (tasubbu) those they invoke other than Allah, lest they insult Allah in enmity without knowledge' (al-An'am: 108). They will do this out of enmity, hostility and transgression without knowing the value of the Lord Glorified is He and His Sanctity. This is why we must guard our tongues against reviling their gods so that we do not encourage their tongues, in turn, to revile Allah.

Indeed Allah Glorified is He wants to teach us to be gentle when calling others to Him because you want to soften their hearts to make them incline towards faith, and that can only be achieved with good manners.

It is true that the believers are excused for their enthusiasm when they enter into a discussion with idol-worshippers, but the believer should bear in mind the ultimate aim which is achieving good for the call. He should ask Allah to grant him patience with the idol-worshippers. The Lord Glorified is He teaches us how to follow the correct method when calling others to Islam. For example, we find that Prophet Noah peace be upon him who remained with his people for nine hundred and fifty years, kept calling and he was tender in doing so, and even in the end they said to him, 'You invented this speech yourself'. Allah Glorified is He teaches him that he should say: 'If I have invented it, on me is this sin; but I am innocent of the sin you commit' (Hud: 35).

Teaching Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him Allah Glorified is He orders him to say: 'Who is it that provides sustenance for you from the heavens and the earth?' (Saba': 24), i.e. who is it that gives you the sustenance you need for your life? When you ask them a question which proves the error of their ways and they begin to stutter, Allah supports His Messenger, Muhammad, clarifying and commanding him to say to them: 'It is Allah; And most surely, either we or you are on right guidance or in manifest error' (Saba': 24).

The pronoun 'We' refers to Allah's Messenger and those with him. And the phrase 'or you' refers to those who disbelieve in Allah. He did not say 'I alone am on the right path and you have clearly gone astray'. Rather, he said, 'Our way and your way do not agree. There must be one way on the right path and one way that has clearly gone astray. I will not say who is on the right path and who has clearly gone astray'. This is because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him was certain that if they pondered over the matter in their minds and used their insight, they could only conclude that Allah's Messenger is on the right path and that they have clearly gone astray. Thus he left it for them to come to this conclusion.

Let us also contemplate this statement of the Lord Glorified is He: 'Say, "You shall not be called to account for what we committed, nor shall we be called to account for what you do"' (Saba': 25). Allah Glorified is He did not say that they are the ones who are guilty. Rather, he attributed crime–if there was any crime–to the believers. He attributed only doing things–even though their actions are wrong–to the disbelievers. The least matter that is required is that we shall not be called to account for the crimes you commit, in order for the two to be the same, but He did not say that. This is exalted etiquette and gentleness because the Lord Glorified is He does not want Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to leave any room for their natural inclinations to reject him or to find a means to flee from the call. This is why Allah Glorified is He teaches us this style by saying: ‘And do not insult those they invoke other than Allah, lest they insult Allah in enmity without knowledge’. (al-Ana’m: 108)

In this way we learn how to carry out a gentle debate. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Truly, all those who you call upon besides Allah are but created beings like yourselves’ (al-A‘raf: 194). If you want to unveil the reality of these idols, then they too are created by Allah and they worship Him. If you ask them for anything, they will not answer you. They do not have feet to walk with, they do not have hands to grasp with, they do not have eyes to see with, and they do not have ears with which to hear. And more than this: ‘Those who you call besides Allah cannot create [even] a fly though they all may combine together for that purpose’ (al-Hajj: 73). Is there anything smaller than a fly that you know of? Yes. Allah Glorified is He tells us: ‘And if the fly should snatch away anything from them, they cannot (even) release it from it [the fly]’ (al-Hajj: 73).

If a fly lands on what you are eating and takes from it, would you be able to get that food back from it? If you are a fearsome tyrant, then grab the fly and retrieve the food that it took; but you are not able to do that. This is why the Lord Glorified is He says: ‘So weak are both the seeker and the sought!’ (al-Hajj: 73)

This is the kind of argument that makes the one arguing feel embarrassed. However, if you rage in his face and act like a bigot, then you will give him an excuse to bear a grudge against you, feel anger and hostility towards you, and turn away from Allah’s Way. We ask Allah to grant us vast patience and forbearance, and help us to debate gently. ‘And do not insult those they invoke other than Allah, lest they insult Allah in enmity without knowledge. Thus, ‘We have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them.

Then to their Lord is their return and He will inform them about what they used to do' (al-An'am: 108). When Allah Glorified is He teaches us to keep any debate gentle when calling others to Islam, this embellishes the call and makes it pleasing. The call itself is beautiful so it must be presented beautifully.

An example from our daily life is when you go to a merchant. He has some merchandise that could be of outstanding quality, but he does not arrange them properly and does not present them well. For this reason, you may leave him and go to another merchant who may have some merchandise that is not of the same quality but is presented well. This is embellishment, i.e. improving the beauty, making it pleasing. This is why jewellery and what women use to beautify themselves are called (zinah) embellishment. A woman may already have beautiful femininity and in addition to her beauty she adorns herself with jewellery, jewels, and fine clothes. When an Arab wanted to praise a woman for being beautiful, he used to say, 'She is (ghaniyah) (i.e. has natural beauty)', i.e. because of her beauty, she does not need to embellish herself because what you are concealing with the necklace is more beautiful than the necklace itself.

Embellishment and making something pleasing therefore refers to presenting something in a beautiful way in order to make people feel attracted and inclined towards it. When we adorn anything, we make it dignified and handsomeness, and we increase it in beauty: 'Thus, we have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them' (al-An'am: 108). A community (ummah) is a group whose characteristic of belonging brings its individuals together, such as the Arab community, i.e. those who belong to it are the Arabs. There is also the English community which the English people belong to. As for the community of Islam, it includes the Arabs, the non-Arabs, the black, the white, the yellow, and it covers a large amount of territory. If the previous communities were embellished and made to appear pleasing in order to suit a defined age, a defined time, and a defined place, then We [Allah] shall embellish you in a way that suits all tastes that are present in the life of this world because you will meet all these communities, and your call must make all types of people incline towards it.

In the beginning of the Da'wah (call)–and it was weak at that time–we find Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him looking at his community;

Bilal Al-Habashi (the Abyssinian) Allah be pleased with him used to give the call to prayer. We find Prophet Muhammad saying about Salman Allah be pleased with him who was Persian, 'He is one of us; one of the Prophetic household'. (1) The Companion ʿUmar Allah be pleased with him says about Suhayb, who was a European (Rumi) Allah be pleased with him 'What an excellent slave Suhayb is. Even if he did not fear Allah, he will not disobey Him', i.e. his avoidance of disobedience was natural to him, even if he did not fear Allah's Punishment.

'If We [Allah] embellished the deeds of all the previous nations and make them appear pleasing, then embellishing your community must suit its task in terms of the time, place, race, colour, and language of the people. We must also embellish you with regards to how you should present the call. The presentation must suit the beauty of the call itself. Your embellishment is of the utmost importance because your community will deal with all the civilizations of the world and all the affiliations of the world. Thus, your embellishment must suit your task of spreading the Message to all these different types of people. 'Thus, We [Allah] have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them. Then to their Lord is their return and He will inform them about what they used to do' (al-An'am: 108), i.e. indeed He has clarified for them the way of conveying the call to others, and the reward that the obedient and the doers of good will obtain in the Hereafter. When the believers enjoy the blessings of the Hereafter, these blessings will be unlimited because they will be according to Allah's Absolute Power. And while the believers are enjoying all of these blessings, they also look forward to meeting the One Who is blessing them, and then Allah will manifest Himself to them.

Just as we have embellished the deeds of the previous nations and made them appear pleasing, we have also embellished you because you are the community that has accepted the responsibility of the call. This special embellishment nurtures those who call others to Allah's Way. If others are aware of the beauty that your way of life contains, they will have studied it and each one of them would have examined the signs that exist in front of them, behind them, on their right and on their left, and they will have realised that everything in existence has been created to do a particular task in this world, and they will also follow the life of worship: 'I only create jinn and men that they may worship Me' (adh-Dhariyat: 56).

---

(1) Narrated by At-Tabarani in Al-Kabir and Al-Hakim in Al-Mustadrak

'That they may worship Me' means that they obey Allah concerning the orders 'Do' and 'Do not do'. When the Lord Glorified is He said: 'Thus We have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them' (al-An'am: 108), it means that He Glorified is He has explained the deeds with the benefits they produce.

If you look at the people around you, you will find there are some who have been given special skills you do not have. This is because the Lord Glorified is He wanted to benefit you in particular. This is clear in all fields. The work of the skilled and proficient carpenter affects you. The best work of the expert clothes designer will affect you. It is very beneficial for every individual to find that someone else who is superior to him in his expertise, while he himself is superior to others in his work. And he praises the Lord because the benefit from his work will affect others as well. With this we will be able to live in a refined society that is made up of ideal communities and groups. As such, whoever is superior in something must not have rancour towards others in the society because his superiority will affect every individual therein, and it is beneficial for everyone to work to become superior in some skill.

When Allah Glorified is He said: 'Thus We [Allah] have made the deeds of every community appear pleasing to them' (al-An'am: 108), this means that Allah has given each of us a task in life and we will inevitably benefit from it in the life of this world and in the Hereafter as well, and each of us will receive Allah's reward for it. The one who embellishes his work and makes it look pleasing is the one who exerts effort in his work, and the one who does not embellish his work sins. Everyone embellishes their work according to what he himself wishes to attain. We see examples of this in life; we find someone who has a limited income, but he excessively enjoys luxuries that are beyond his necessary needs. He does not set anything aside and he is only concerned about attaining immediate pleasures. You then find someone else who lives fulfilling only his necessities and he sets some of his wealth aside, and afterwards we find that he has improved his lifestyle with an appropriate accommodation and other pleasures of life. The first embellished his life with immediate luxuries, while the second embellished his life with permanent luxuries. Beware of looking at short-time desires. Instead, look at the long-time benefit that comes from your work: ‘Then to their Lord is their return and He will inform them about what they used to do’ (al-An‘am: 108).

As long as the return is to the One Who has set the methodology of ‘Do!’ and ‘Do not do!’, and it is to the One Who has also laid down the rule that we have to embellish our work so that you will want to follow this noble way of life from Him, you should follow it. And according to how much you follow Allah’s way, you yourself will be noble.

The Lord Glorified is He says after that:

وَأَقۡسَمُواْ بِٱللَّهِ جَهۡدَ أَيۡمَٰنِهِمۡ لَئِن جَآءَتۡهُمۡ ءَايَةٞ لَّيُؤۡمِنُنَّ بِهَاۚ قُلۡ إِنَّمَا
ٱلۡأٓيَٰتُ عِندَ ٱللَّهِۖ وَمَا يُشۡعِرُكُمۡ أَنَّهَآ إِذَا جَآءَتۡ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ١٠٩

They swear by God with their most solemn oaths that if a miraculous sign came to them they would believe in it. Say [Prophet], ‘Signs are in the power of God alone.’ What will make you [believers] realize that even if a sign came to them they still would not believe? [109] (The Quran, al-An’am: 109)

Allah says, ‘And they swear by Allah their strongest oaths’; here there is an oath (qasam), something which is sworn by (muqsam bih), someone making an oath (muqsim), and something that is sworn about (muqsam 'alaih). That which is sworn by is Allah. Those making the oath are the group opposing Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Why are they making an oath? They made an oath when the True Lord’s logic in debate overwhelmed them. They swore by Allah after Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had already called them to worship Allah. ‘And they swear by Allah their strongest oaths’ (al-An‘am: 109) means that they had to expend great effort ‘jahd’ (strongest), which is difficult, meaning that they exaggerated in their oath to such an extent that it was difficult for them, and this was to make it clear to whoever they were swearing to that they were keen to carry out the oath. Thus they exhausted their efforts and their labour in making the oath, and this means that they declared that they were swearing an oath that was beloved to them and what is most beloved to them is to carry out this oath.

This outwardly shows their sincerity in making the oath. ‘And they swear by Allah their strongest oaths that if a sign came to them, they would surely believe in it. Say, “The signs are only with Allah.” And what will make you perceive that even if a sign came, they will not believe’. (al-An‘am: 109)

Has Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not come with a clear sign? He came to them with the greatest sign, which is the Quran. Their lack of acknowledgement of this sign is their first calamity. Did Prophet Muhammad not say to you, ‘I am a Messenger’ after he had declared the sign which is the revelation of the Quran, and you knew that he is truthful in conveying the Message from Allah? This is the peak of their petulance. They continued in this petulance when they asked for signs from Allah. Did they not say to Prophet Muhammad: ’We shall not believe in your Message till you cause a spring to gush forth for us from the earth, or you have a garden of date-palms and vines and cause rivers to gush forth in their midst in a sudden rush, or cause the skies to fall down on us in pieces, as you claim [will happen], or you bring Allah and the angels before us face to face’ (al-Isra’: 90-92)?

Allah Glorified is He in this way wanted to make it clear to us that the oath that they swore is a coward’s oath. Their saying, ‘as you claimed’ (al-Isra’: 92), (Za'm) (you claim will happen)–as we know–refers to lying, and this is the first defect in their oath. The Lord Glorified is He tells us: ‘If We [Allah] will, we could cause the earth to swallow them, or cause fragments of the sky to fall down on them’ (Saba’: 9).

To sum up, they are not believers in the original sign which is the Quran, and that is why they challenged him to prove that this Quran is revelation. But the Lord Glorified is He warns us not to believe their claim (that they would believe after receiving a sign from heaven) by informing us: ‘Even if We [Allah] had sent down to them through the Prophet [Muhammad] a written [Message] on parchment so that they could touch it with their own hands–those who are bent on denying the Truth will indeed have said, “This is clearly nothing but a deception”’ (al-An‘am: 7).

Even if a sign was sent down, they will not believe in it. Allah Glorified is He says: ‘Even if We [Allah] open out to them a gateway to Heaven and they were to continue ascending it [on and on, up to Heaven], they will surely have said, “Our eyes are spellbound! Nay, we have been bewitched!”’ (al-Hijr: 14-15) But if Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had bewitched you, how come he did not bewitch them to believe in Allah?

Thus, we see that the Lord Glorified is He has mentioned to us in His Book that everything they say about this matter is just a way to stray and flee from responding to the call. This is because there is no sign greater than that which came down to them, that is the Quran. All the signs that they suggested do not surpass this sign. Furthermore, they are a community who excelled in grammar, morphology, rhetoric, eloquence, and literature. He came to them with a miracle, but they disputed over it. They were not masters in the signs that they mentioned and suggested to be sent. We are bringing a miracle to them that is from the same field as that which they have mastery in. This is because miracles always come according to this principle. Allah brings a miraculous sign to every people that are masters in a particular field and this sign is superior to whatever they have accomplished in that field. This is in order to affirm the veracity of the Messenger in what he conveys from Allah.

We have already said that indeed the miracles come to violate the fixed laws of the universe because the laws of the universe have rules that are known to human beings, and they recur many times right in front of them. Whenever a matter comes to violate the law that is prevalent and acknowledged amongst them, it draws their attention and they start to ask one another how the law could be violated. This is for each one of them to realise that the One Who created the law is the One Who violated it, and to affirm the veracity of what is being conveyed from Him. A miracle has come to you that is in the field of your expertise. What proves this is that they did not talk about the miracle itself but rather about the way the miracle reached them and the person who brought it. Thus, Allah says that they ask: ‘Why has not an angel been sent down unto him?’ (al-An‘am: 8). The Quran makes it clear that the angel, by the very nature of its constitution, is not seen by you. He sees you and you do not see him. Hence, if We sent you an angel, how can you recognise him? Consequently, sending an angel requires that we make him like a human being. And if the Lord Glorified is He sends him down in the form of a man and if he comes down in the form of a man, you will say, ‘He is not a human being so we do not have to adhere to what he has brought’; Allah Glorified is He explains: ‘If We [Allah] had made him an angel, We will have made him [appear as] a man, but [by this] We will have caused confusion for them in a matter they already now make confusing for themselves’ (al-An‘am: 9).

The Angel Gabriel came down to Prophet Muhammad one time in the form of a man, who had arrived from a journey, and he sat and he spoke with Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Gabriel peace be upon him therefore, did not come in his true form, but rather he came in the form of a man. There is another similar creation which is called the ‘jinn’. We are not able to see the jinn. We cannot, according to our human laws and the laws of the jinn, see them. However, if a demon from the jinn wants to show himself to us, he comes in the form of something material that can be seen. He takes on the form of an animal, a cat, a camel or a man, and so forth. If this matter was not well organized to maintain a balance between the two species–humans and jinn–mankind would suffer much hardship. This is because when a jinn reveals himself to a man, stands in front of him and then conceals himself, fear spreads amongst human beings despite the fact that the jinn are more scared of man than man is of the jinn. This is because the jinn know how to take on the form of a man or anything material. And when a jinn takes on the form of a man, he is governed by the laws of man. Hence, if he comes across a man with a revolver, for example, the man may shoot him with bullets and kill him. For this reason, jinn are scared of manifesting themselves to man for a long period of time. Rather, they appear like a flash of lighting and then vanish because they are scared, as we have said, of man. Hence, a balance exists between the jinn and humans. This is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'A demon from amongst the (jinn) suddenly pounced on me yesterday in order to interrupt my prayer, but Allah gave me power over him. Consequently I seized him and intended to tie him to one of the pillars of the mosque in order that you, all together [or all of you], might look at him, but then I remembered the supplication of my brother Solomon peace be upon him “My Lord, forgive me, and give me such a kingdom which will never be possible for anyone after me to have”. Hence Allah repelled him (the jinn) in disgrace’. In another narration, it is reported that he said, ‘By Allah, if it was not for the supplication of my brother Solomon, he will have been tied up and the children of Medina would have played with him’. (1)

This is how we know that whenever a people suggested a miraculous sign and as a result Allah brought a sign but they then denied it, they were seized in a way that only the Almighty, the One Who determines and overpowers all things, can seize, and it was not deferred until the Hereafter.

The Lord Glorified is He says: ’But Allah will not punish them while you [Prophet Muhammad] are still among them’ (al-Anfal: 33). Thus, even those who disbelieve in him obtain mercy because of him: ‘and they swear by Allah their strongest oaths that if a sign came to them, they would surely believe in it. Say, “The signs are only with Allah.” And what will make you perceive that, even if a sign came, they will not believe’ (al-An‘am: 109).

Here Allah Glorified is He conveys to His Messenger Muhammad to say to them, ‘I do not bring signs from myself and I do not bring them relying on my own ability; because what governs my ability is the same that governs yours. I am not superior to you in any way other than the fact that I receive revelation and I convey to you with what I have been sent. Indeed, Allah is the One Who gives me the signs of the Quran and no creation should suggest a miraculous sign for Allah to bring. This is due to the fact that what happened with previous Messages shows that when a people do not respond and do not believe in the sign that they asked for, the Lord Glorified is He destroys and annihilates them, drowns them, sends a violent wind against them or causes the earth to swallow them up. Allah Glorified is He tells us: ‘Nothing has prevented Us [Allah] from sending [this Message] with miraculous signs [in its wake, like the earlier Messages] save [Our knowledge] that the people of former generations [only too often] belied them’ (al-Isra’: 59).

---

(1) Narrated by Muslim with this wording in the section on Prayer in the Book of Mosques..., narrated by Al-Bukhari in the section on Prayer and narrated by Ahmad... The meaning of ‘yaftaku’ is ‘to pounce on someone deceptively in a state of heedlessness’, and in one narration the word ‘tafallata’ (to bother) is used. The meaning of ‘fadhatuhu’ (I seized him) with a dotted ‘dhal’ and an undotted ‘ain’ means to choke him. In another narration it is ‘fada‘tuhu’ with an undotted ‘dal’, meaning ‘I pushed him away with force’. The meaning of ‘sariya’ is ‘pillar’.

As such, some people of the earlier Messages suggested signs for Allah to bring, and Allah brought these signs for them. But they denied them. Clearly, denial is the usual response from this type of people.

The sign comes in the way Allah wants it to come and not according to anyone's suggestion. This is why the Lord Glorified is He commands His Messenger Muhammad to convey to them, 'The miraculous signs are only with Allah.' (al-'Ankabut: 50)

After this a new address comes for those of humanity who differ with the idol-worshippers, and they are the believers. The Lord Glorified is He says to them: 'And what will make you perceive that even if a sign came, they will not believe' (al-An'am: 109). When idolaters asked for a sign, it is as if the believers wanted to reduce the adversity the idol-worshippers caused Allah's Messenger, and that is why they said to him, 'O Prophet Muhammad! Ask Allah to send a miraculous sign to them in order for us to be relieved of their stubbornness'. Allah directs His response to those who suggested this question by clearly saying, 'You are believers and your thinking is good and your idea is fine in that you want to put an end to this adversity, but what will make you realise, i.e. what will make you understand clearly, that if I bring to them the sign that they are proposing, they will still not believe'. It is as if the believers supported the statement of these idol-worshippers in demanding a sign in order to prevent such idol-worshippers' stubbornness.

Regarding the following words of Allah the Exalted as mentioned in the Noble Quran, '...they still would not believe.' (al-An'am: 109) Muslim scholars, may Allah the Exalted reward them all abundantly, have differed on what is meant here because understanding differs when it comes to matters of religion (with scholars trying their best to properly comprehend the issue). We ask, 'What is the wisdom behind this Quranic style'? The answer, as we see it, is a form of expression that is used to get us immersed in the Quran. Allah the Exalted wants us to fully comprehend its meanings, not just merely pass over it in haste. The style in Allah's statement the Exalted '…What will make you [believers] realise that even if a sign came to them they still would not believe?' (al-An'am: 109), is proof that we human beings do not have any knowledge in terms of what Allah the Exalted allows us to know. We said that shu`ur (realisation) requires awareness along with passion and wishes, so it is as if the question being asked is, 'On what foundation do you base your claim of knowledge and perception?' It is easy for anyone to be deceived by the tone of their statement (if taken on its face value), but Allah Glorified is He would never be deceived by that and He knows and encompasses all what is hidden and concealed. It is as if Allah Glorified is He is making it clear that asking for a sign (here in this context) is nothing but wrangling. You do not know that if Allah the Exalted brought a sign to them they would not believe.

Some of the scholars of Quranic exegesis have said that the Arabic letter la used in the above verse, and meaning 'not', is additional, while other scholars maintained some kind of tactical approach, said that the letter la (not) is a conjunction because they do not want to consider it as 'additional'. Some of them have made similar statements and then retracted them, and to do so is better in terms of etiquette. This is because the one speaking is Allah the Exalted and it is unconceivable to assume an 'extra' letter in Allah's speech; that if it was omitted, we would still be having a complete sentence. No. The logic is that if a word is omitted in a sentence, then that statement becomes incomplete and thus lacks the capacity to convey the intended meaning. And because we know that Allah the Exalted always has purpose behind all His statements, and His purpose and Will have to come to pass. We can draw an example from our daily lives and how we use words when someone says to you, 'I do not have money'. Or 'I do not have any money'. The phrase 'any money' means that the person does not even have the least basic of what could be called money. As for saying 'I do not have money', this means that one does not have what would be considered a significant or considerable amount of money. Rather, that person may have with him a few coins, which are of course, insignificant when referring to money as compared to someone who has quite much more than that.

The Arabic letter la is used in this verse because Allah the Exalted wants to say to the believers, 'What makes you so sure that if I brought a sign (miracle) to them (the disbelievers), they would then believe'? It is as if Allah the Exalted is rebuking the believers for endorsing the request of the disbelievers. But we need to take note that the True Lord Glorified is He (in His statement) was very calm in the way He addressed the believers (as mentioned in the above verse), for He appreciated their good intention behind the kind of an 'implicit endorsement' they showed to the request made by the disbelievers because they did not do that out of love for the disbelievers, but rather out of love for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and His message. It is as if Allah the Exalted is saying to them, 'I excuse you because your reaction was based on the mere tone used by the disbelievers as they swore by Allah, that if Allah the Exalted would send some miracles as a sign they would believe in the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him', '...Now they swear by Allah the Exalted with their most solemn oaths.' (al-An'am: 109), especially with the kind of emphasis used in this sentence. Furthermore, it is also as if Allah the Exalted was telling the disbelievers, 'I am not rebuking you for taking that solemn oath at face value because this is due to your limited knowledge; and how could you be so sure that if I did bring a sign to them they would believe'? Had Allah done that, they still would not have believed in the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, the Arabic letter la used in the Quranic verse, 'they would not believe' is very essential and not extra. To assuage the believers, the True Lord Glorified is He makes it clear to them (i.e. the Prophet's Companions) that with His vast knowledge He knows the reality of their affairs. He says:

وَنُقَلِّبُ أَفْـِٔدَتَهُمْ وَأَبْصَـٰرَهُمْ كَمَا لَمْ يُؤْمِنُوا۟ بِهِۦٓ أَوَّلَ
مَرَّةٍ وَنَذَرُهُمْ فِى طُغْيَـٰنِهِمْ يَعْمَهُونَ ﴿١١٠﴾

We would make their hearts and their eyes turn away, just as they did not believe the first time, and leave them to flounder in their obstinacy [110] (The Quran, al-An'am: 110)

When you say uqallib ('I turn over the merchandise'), it means that you examine it. So in the same context, we can understand what Allah the Exalted wants to inform us that He was making it clear that with His Infinite Knowledge, He knows what is in all hearts, so nothing is hidden from Him. So, by this, the believers (and this applies to all believers of all time) should rest assured that Allah's judgement on everything is nothing but true because His judgement results from his precise and all-informed Knowledge.

There could be another meaning here, i.e. that the Arabic word taqalub could be referring to a kind of changing. It is possible that when the disbelievers swore by Allah the Exalted with their most solemn oaths that if Allah sent to them a miracle as a sign they would submit in faith, that, at that moment, their hearts were drawing closer to faith but in a shaky way (i.e. not fully inclined towards faith just like any hearts that are not established upon any creed; such hearts would remain weak). So, since the disbelievers were in that situation, then how could the believers take their swearing by Allah the Exalted as an indication of faith, or a sign of readiness to believe if a sign could be revealed to them? Was there someone amongst the disbelievers who could possibly control himself and get rid of his arrogance and stubbornness after seeing a miracle from Allah Exalted is He? Would he possibly remain steadfast in that state or would he quickly revert to disbelief? We need understand this fact; Allah the Exalted is the One who controls man's heart, turning it around the way He wants; that is why man's dispositions and behaviours are subject to constant switch and altercation. Allah the Exalted has made this clear in this verse, 'And We will turn away their hearts and their eyes…' (al-An'am: 110). So by this, it should be clear that Allah's judgement in that case was the result of His being All-Informed and having fully encompassing knowledge.

Indeed, faith requires a kind of visual perception of universal signs. And what comes after such perception of the signs that prove the mightiness of Allah the Exalted is belief with conviction and that makes faith settled in the heart. So Allah the Exalted makes it clear that He is the One Who turns people's hearts and eyes. And this should help us verify how people get conviction, or how they arrive at a state of certainty regarding the universal signs. It is by knowing whether people look at these signs with consideration and conviction or is it just a superficial glance in which they have no understanding and ability to draw conclusions. Also, it is by verifying whether their hearts (after perceiving these signs) succeed in absorbing faith or not, whether their eyes manage to feel the light or not. All this is very important in terms of verification and ascertaining truth. 'And We will turn away their hearts and their eyes just as they refused to believe in it the first time. And We will leave them in their transgression, wandering blindly.' (al-An'am: 110)

That is how Allah the Exalted made it clear to the believers that the pagans would not believe even if a sign were to be brought to them. They would just ignore it and move on as if they saw nothing. In this verse, we also draw from it that the believers were spared from blame for having such hope and desire that the disbelievers would surrender in faith and embrace Islam if a miracle could be revealed to them, (without knowing that those disbelievers were already stone-hearted and very stubborn). Why? Because the True Lord Glorified is He said, '…just as they refused to believe in it the first time' (al-An'am: 110), i.e. they did not change and for that reason the judgement is issued against them. 'And We will leave them in their transgression, wandering blindly.' (al-An'am: 110) The Arabic word tughyan (overweening arrogance) is to overstep the bounds, and the disbelievers did overstep the bounds in the way they reacted to the signs sent to them. The signs of the Quran came to them, but they refused to believe. Just as Allah the Exalted made it clear they could not even come up with ten verses, and not only that, they were incapable of bringing up just one verse. So, with all this 'incapacity', the least that was expected of them was not to transgress and overstep their bounds in asking to be convinced of the truth of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him.

'And We will leave them in their transgression, wandering blindly.' (al-An'am: 110) The Arabic word `amah (blind) is confusion and indecision. It means that the disbelievers in their transgression waver because within them, there is a natural disposition that awakens in them a sense a belief, but at the same time, that spirit collides with another spirit that calls them to disbelief, and the latter keeps persisting, making them wonder whether to believe or not. The natural disposition that wakes up within them flashes like lightning, and so (with such a powerful ray of light) it should have been enough to sway them to the Right Path. Or 'And We will turn away their hearts and their eyes just as they refused to believe in it the first time. And We will leave them in their transgression, wandering blindly' (al-An'am: 110), refers to when they are thrown in the hell-fire because of their failure to use their senses as a means of pondering over the signs of Allah Exalted is He. The same is also with their hearts, rendering them stagnant, without using them to comprehend the words and wonders of Allah the Exalted.

The True Lord Glorified is He says after that,

وَلَوْ أَنَّنَا نَزَّلْنَآ إِلَيْهِمُ ٱلْمَلَٰٓئِكَةَ وَكَلَّمَهُمُ ٱلْمَوْتَىٰ وَحَشَرْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ كُلَّ شَىْءٍ
قُبُلًا مَّا كَانُوا۟ لِيُؤْمِنُوٓا۟ إِلَّآ أَن يَشَآءَ ٱللَّهُ وَلَٰكِنَّ أَكْثَرَهُمْ يَجْهَلُونَ ﴿١١١﴾

Even if We sent the angels down to them, and the dead spoke to them, and We gathered all things right in front of them, they still would not believe, unless God so willed, but most of them are ignorant [of this] [111] (The Quran, al-An'am: 111)

Allah the Exalted expands more on this matter; making it clear that the disbelievers were not ready to believe. Allah the Exalted did not say, 'Indeed they will believe'. Rather, He said, 'And even if We sent the angels down to them...' (al-An'am: 111), as they had claimed or even if the dead were to speak to them as they had stated previously, 'so then, bring forth our forefathers [as witnesses], if what you claim is true!' (ad-Dukhan: 36)

Let us look carefully at this verse, '...and we gathered all things right in front of them…' (al-An'am: 111). The Arabic word hashr (gathering with difficulty) such as when you put some books on a shelf and there's one more book that cannot fit in, and you have to squeeze it in. Therefore, that Arabic word refers to grouping things together with difficulty. Here Allah the Exalted makes it clear: 'If I had brought the signs to them, you would find their hearts, despite all this clear signs, still resisting faith '…and We gathered all things right in front of them…' (al-An'am: 111). Take note of this Arabic word qubula, (in front of them) is the plural form of the Arabic word qabil, just like the Arabic word that refers to bed, both in its singular and plural forms.

"...and we gathered all things right in front of them…" (al-An'am: 111). This means that if the True Lord Glorified is He brought them all the signs they were asking for, and it was as if each and every sign was like a thread linked with the other (as if they formed a group) the disbelievers still would not have believed. Or, another explanation for qubulan is that the disbelievers see the signs with their own eyes, and this can be inferred from the Arabic word because for everything there are two sides, either the front or the back. And we refer to this in Arabic with the words dubur (the back) and qubul (at the front). Per this explanation, we can take the above verse as meaning that if we gather everything in front of them, in front of their own eyes, the disbelievers still will not believe. So in any of the two explanations, the outcome is the same. If we understand the verse per the first meaning, it indicates that (even) if Allah Glorified is He were to gather all the signs in this world for the disbelievers, more than what any ordinary person would need, they still would not believe (this is one explanation). If you understand it to mean that even if the disbelievers were to see the signs in front of them, with their own eyes, they still would not believe, is the other explanation. 'And even if We sent the angels down to them, and the dead spoke to them, and We gathered all things right in front of them, they still would not believe, unless Allah the Exalted so willed, but most of them are ignorant [of this].' (al-An'am: 111)

There is something else we must notice here. The True Lord Glorified is He used here a kind of 'soft' phrase that indicates a power of 'choice' given to mankind, i.e. instead of demonstrating His Absolute Power in making anything happens whenever He wills such that if He wanted to force anyone to believe in Him, no one would be able to repel that. Instead, Allah the Exalted used the expression that indicates a right or freedom to choose because forcing someone to have faith rules out the possibility of having a choice regarding matters of religious responsibility in the context of Islam. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says: '[O' Muhammad], are you going to worry yourself to death because they will not believe? If We had wished, We could have sent them down a sign from heaven, at which their necks would stay bowed in utter humility.' (ash-Shu'ara': 3-4)

But as the previous verse shows, Allah the Exalted does not want subjugated necks but rather, He wants submissive hearts. For this reason, the True Lord Glorified is He concludes that verse by saying, '...but most of them are ignorant [of this].' (al-An'am: 111) But let us be clear, jahl (ignorance) is different from lack of knowledge. Rather, ignorance is a lack of proper knowledge or information, i.e. on a given subject, an ignorant person knows what contradicts it. If one does not know the subject at all, then such a person is uneducated, and it suffices for that person to be properly lectured on that given topic so that he understands it promptly. However, to reform an ignorant person, there are two issues; first, we need to remove from his understanding the false information filling his mind; secondly, we need to replace it with the correct knowledge. So, the Quranic phrase in the above verse indicating, ‘But most of them are ignorant’ means that the disbelievers have followed misguidance.

Then, the True Lord Glorified is He says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ جَعَلْنَا لِكُلِّ نَبِيٍّ عَدُوًّا شَيَٰطِينَ ٱلْإِنسِ وَٱلْجِنِّ يُوحِى بَعْضُهُمْ إِلَىٰ بَعْضٍ
زُخْرُفَ ٱلْقَوْلِ غُرُورًا ۚ وَلَوْ شَآءَ رَبُّكَ مَا فَعَلُوهُ ۖ فَذَرْهُمْ وَمَا يَفْتَرُونَ ﴿١١٢﴾

In the same way We assigned to each prophet an enemy, evil humans and evil jinn. They suggest alluring words to one another in order to deceive – if it had been your Lord’s will, [Prophet], they would not have done this: leave them to their inventions [112]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 112)

With the phrase ‘And thus it is...’, the True Lord Glorified is He referred to the previous messengers and prophets in order to give Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the example of his brothers who preceded him in the procession of prophethood and divine messages, in order to stress the fact that he is not unprecedented, i.e. he is on the same Straight Path brought forward by the previous messengers of Allah the Exalted and so also in the aspect of being subject to severe criticism and enmity; that is the norm for all the prophets of Allah.

But the question is, did these enemies of those previous messengers prevail and weaken the spirit and power of those people sent by Allah the Exalted for guidance? Did the enemies succeed in wearing out the messengers of Allah the Exalted sapping their strength and their determination and turning them away from their mission, or were the messengers able to withstand and resist all that with bravery and courage? Indeed, they were brave and defiant and Allah the Exalted helped them and gave them victory over their enemies. So Allah the Exalted wanted to make this clear to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that the same good outcome would be his in the end, especially given the fact that he is the seal of all the prophets. He is the one given the honour of bringing the final Message of Allah the Exalted no other divine message will come after him. By this, Allah the Exalted wanted to make it clear to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him that based on this, the enmity he would face would proportionally be on par with the magnitude of his great prophetic mission, and he should not be thinking that the intention behind this enmity was to let him down, or it was just for the sake of enmity. No. Rather, the opposition and enmity faced by the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him was for the benefit of strengthening his Message because whoever is on a right path and committed to righteousness should never be weakened or disturbed by any evil scheme; rather, he should be more active and emboldened to move on with his good deeds. Therefore, we normally see much of religious awakenings whenever believers are challenged by enemies (the real man always gathers strength from distress and grows brave). So, if it had not been for pressure from enemies, there would be no awakening and the faith would have remained stagnant. This is what we see when there are enemies of Islam of any kind, who challenge some matter of the religion; in this situation, we find that even those who do not adhere to the way of Islam are fiercely protective over their religion.

Therefore, enmity has benefit, so one must not indulge in thinking that there is something that can prevent Allah's will the Exalted and plan from taking effect as He wills. Thus, it must be clear that there is a divine wisdom behind evil, otherwise, there would not be any passion for goodness if evil and harm did not exist; and (part of) what makes people enthusiastic for doing good is to pose resistance against evil (per Allah's design the Exalted and plan for the universe). We have explained before that falsehood is one of the factors that bring about truth because when falsehood strikes and causes turmoil amongst people they ask one another, 'When will this falsehood disappear and be replaced with truth? We really need a saviour'! Whenever you see someone suffering from pain, do not ever think that the pain is without reason. Rather, the pain is an important factor that will trigger a rigorous search for a cure. In a metaphorical sense, it is if the pain says to its victim, 'O man, take note of a disease in this part of your body, and find a cure for it'. Therefore, we find that (in some cases), the most severe, vicious and malignant diseases are those that are not preceded by any pain, and the mystery behind that does not get unravelled until several medical efforts and examinations have been exhausted by experts who leave no stone unturned until they get treatment for such diseases. This is what I mean by saying that pain is an effective means of recovery.

When you have an enemy in the neighbourhood or in the town, and his sight is focused on you, you fear yourself slipping into some fault or mistake that would allow him to expose you. For this reason, you try to adopt a proper strategy to avoid falling prey to him. An ancient poet said, as he tries to enlighten you with his poetry on this subject,

My enemies do me a favour, and I admire their kindness
    For their benefit to me, I am really grateful to them
They are like medicine and the cure that is bitter
    And thanks to Allah (the Most-Merciful) not sparring me my enemies
They were looking for me to slip but I avoided it
    And I became free of having my dignity defiled
They made me expend great effort with their hatred
    They turned to foes against me, but victory was mine over them, as well as continuing success

For this reason, you must look at everything in terms of the wisdom behind it; everything has a certain purpose that Allah the Supreme Wise has for bringing it into existence, just like the True Lord Glorified is He willed that the Islamic Message will face severe challenges and resistance so that it fortified with strength that will pave way for its eternal victory. Hence the statement of Allah the Exalted in this verse, ‘And thus it is that, against every prophet We have set up [as enemies] the evil forces from among humans as well as from among invisible beings that whisper unto one another glittering half-truths meant to delude the mind. But they could not do this unless thy Sustainer had so willed: stand, therefore, aloof from them and from all their false imagery!’ (al-An‘am: 112)

So the True Lord Glorified is He set up enemies for the prophets in a way that this created some disturbances for the prophets and their followers, and the wisdom behind this was to fill the mind of the believers with a strong power of resistance which would naturally strengthen their resolve to defend themselves, warding off any feeling or sense of letting up or defeat. Therefore, the True Lord Glorified is He said: ‘And thus it is that against every prophet, We have set up against every prophet [as enemies]...’ (al-An‘am: 112), i.e. they did not volunteer to be enemies but rather, they were utilized to be enemies.

But how does Allah the Exalted set up an enemy for every prophet? Indeed, He does so by way of the choice that He places within mankind. So long as man has a right and ability to choose, whoever chooses to follow the divine guidance and Right Path would automatically feel inclined to supporting a prophet sent to them, and those who choose misguidance are, by that very fact, the enemies of the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him. Therefore, the aspect of enmity here is not just something that happens by chance; rather, it is through the power of will and right to choose which Allah the Exalted has placed in every human being.

Since Allah the Exalted is the One Who gives man the ability to choose, then we should understand that the reason He does that is made clear in the following verse, ‘...[and] that he who would perish might perish in clear evidence of the truth, and that he who would remain alive might live in clear evidence of the truth...’ (al-Anfal: 42).

If Allah the Exalted had wanted the prophets not to have enemies, He would have done so, that is quite easy and simple for Him because He has absolute power over everything, but this would have been tantamount to compulsion, i.e. subduing everything and everybody, thus erasing power of choosing. But Allah the Exalted does not want to force human beings. Rather, He wants them to go to Him purely out of their own will, i.e. while they are just as capable of not going to Him. The Arabic word `aduw (enemy) seems to be singular, but it is used for both singular and plural. Thus you can say, ‘This person (a male) is a `aduw of mine’, and for a female you can equally say, ‘This sister is a `aduw of mine’, the Arabic word does not have a feminine word (singular) on its own. It is also used for two people, ‘These two men are a `aduw of mine’, or ‘These two women are a `aduw of mine’ because the word `aduw can be used for both male and female and be used for the singular, the dual and the plural. Take for instance the words of the True Lord Glorified is He ‘They are enemies to me, except for the Lord of the worlds.’

(ash-Shu'ara': 77) Another example is the saying of the True Lord Glorified is He: ‘Go down, both of you, from here, as enemies to one another.’ (Ta Ha: 123) Also in another verse, Allah the Exalted says, “...Did I not forbid that tree unto you and tell you, “Verily, Satan is your open foe (`aduw)?”’ (al-A‘raf: 22)

Allah the Exalted did not say `adaa` which is the plural form of the word `aduw. So the word `aduw can be used for male/female singular, or for two persons, male and female, and for male and female plural.

However, some of those who love to think they can correct Allah’ Speech say to one another, ‘How can Allah the Exalted use the Arabic `aduw in its singular form in all the above-mentioned verses’? Satan is an enemy `aduw and they are an enemy `aduw, i.e. by using a singular form of `aduw in all these cases whereas after that, the True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘...And remember the blessings which Allah has bestowed upon you; how, when you were enemies (`adaa`), He brought your hearts together, so that through His blessing you became brethren...’ (Al-‘Imran: 103).

We say to those people, ‘You have forgotten that the one speaking is Allah the Sublime. Enmity is of two kinds. If there is a plurality of enemies and with a common interest in taking someone as enemy such that they are united in their enmity, then they are one enemy (`aduw) because they share a common purpose. However, if the reasons for enmity are varied, then the matter is different. Your good handsomeness may cause enmity between you and someone, while being intelligent can create enmity between you and someone else, and your wealth may be the reason why others take you as enemy and so on. If the reasons are varied then each one of them becomes an enemy in his own right, and thus gathered together they are considered enemies, thus the Arabic word `adaa` is properly applied here. ‘And thus it is that, against every prophet We have set up [as enemies] the jinn from among humans as well as from among invisible beings that whisper unto one another...’ (al-An‘am: 112).

Devils, human beings and jinn, as Arabic grammarians say, are a substitute for an enemy. And the Arabic word shayatin, (devils) is the plural of the Arabic word shaytan the accursed, rejected, and the loathsome, whether he is from the human beings or the jinn ‘...that whispers unto one another glittering half-truths meant to delude the mind...' (al-An'am: 112). The Arabic word wahi means to pass on information secretly, so why do they, the devils whisper unto one another? It is because the predominance of truth had not made them capable of speaking openly to one another. Therefore, they conspire with each other, but people who say truth have nothing to hide, so they move about it openly.

'...They whisper unto one another...' (al-An'am: 112). Who is the one whispering? Who are they whispering to? We do not have any say on this subject; the word wahi means to pass on information secretly, whether it is inspiration of the soul, by way of indication, by way of scheming, by way of whispering or through a messenger that we do not see. All these are means and mechanisms of what the word wahi stands for, for both good and evil purposes.

If the whispering is from the devils amongst the jinn*,* do not expect anything from their whispering except evil; that is a fact. Likewise, there are devils amongst human beings who are also evil whisperers, and this is confirmed by the True Lord in His statement, '...that whisper unto one another glittering half-truths meant to delude the mind...' (al-An'am: 112). What is meant here is that the devils enter matters and try to change their form through adornment, and so they do to man by filling him with deceptive desires. That is why Allah the Exalted called what devils do 'whispering' (waswasa in Arabic). As we know, tangible words are used to have our expressions meaningful and clear, so part of the meaning of waswasa refers to the rustling sound of jewellery. And so Allah the Exalted chose that word to refer to what the devils from amongst man and jinn engage in; He deliberately chose that specific expression because with its rustling (waswasa) sound, jewellery also dazzles and entices people with its preciousness and its great value. Waswasa is also done secretly.

'...whisper unto one another...' (al-An'am: 112). This refers to the devils amongst man and jinn*,* as man whispers to man by embellishing sin and disobedience for him, as well as getting obsessed with deceptive desires, jinn whisper to jinn because they are also legally responsible. Likewise, jinn whisper to man: '...that whispers unto one another glittering half-truths...' (al-An'am: 112).

Zukhruf (glittering half-truth) is something that is outwardly embellished but is inwardly corrupt. The Almighty, said, “And gold ornament. But all that is not but the enjoyment of worldly life. And the Hereafter with your Lord is for the righteous.’ (az-Zukhruf: 35), i.e. things that are outwardly embellished, but they do not have any profundity, or longevity or value.

‘...that whispers unto one another glittering half-truths meant to delude the mind...’ (al-An‘am: 112). This is to delude and deceive them into doing and saying things of disobedience, and if the devils did not present disobedience with adorning and embellishing words, their tricks would not work; they would never be able to get people to engage in it. They show and present charms of disobedience in a very deceptive fashion. For example, you will not find someone saying to another, ‘Drink wine so that you can get liver cirrhosis’. Rather, he will try to deceive him by saying, ‘Drink wine so that you can forget your worries, be happy, and enjoy yourself’.

‘...glittering half-truths meant to delude the mind...’ (al-Ana’m: 112), i.e. the devils employ deception to delude their victims, making them believe that everything is fine, and there is no harm in committing disobedience and sinful acts.

Allah the Exalted then continues, ‘...But they could not do this unless thy Sustainer had so willed...’ (al-An‘am: 112). Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He is the One Who has given His creatures the choice to be either believers or disbelievers, guided or misguided, to follow His light or be led astray by the devil (by wallowing in darkness); and there is day, i.e. the Day of Judgment when everybody will be called to account, and the outcome will either be a blissful reward from Allah the Exalted for whoever is righteous and faithful, or severe punishment for the disbelievers. That is why Allah the Exalted does not force people when it comes to the issue of faith because it would amount to injustice to force people to disbelieve and then punish them for that; no, that is not what Allah the Exalted does, He is the Supreme, the Just. But we find those who say, ‘Why is there punishment when nothing in the universe takes place without Allah’s will? We say, ‘Yes, everything is from Allah’s doing because the cause of choice is from Allah the Exalted the One Who created choice. Thus, it would be impossible for a person to turn a disbeliever without predestination (divine decree and afore-time knowledge of Allah), yet it is required of him to believe because his nature, as created by Allah the Exalted can choose either disbelief or faith.

Therefore, with the power of choice that Allah the Exalted created in man, he can choose between doing and not doing in certain matters. Thus, those who maintain an argument that every action is from Allah the Exalted, i.e. there is nothing man can do without the power of Allah the Exalted we say to them, ‘Your point of argument is correct’. And as for those who say that, ‘all of man’s actions (including belief and disbelief) are a product of his own doing not from Allah the Exalted’, we would also say to them, ‘Your position is correct’; but the truth is: it is the Almighty Allah, Our Lord Who created man with the ability to do certain things as if he was the one directing all the will and power to have them done. To prove this further, take note of the fact that every action comes from Allah Exalted is He. It is neither you, for example, that created the power that allows your hands to lift things, nor did you create the power that allows your hands to grasp. When you want to grasp with your hand, which muscles do you move to do so? You do not know. You grasp with your hand simply because of your will to do so. But take note that Allah the Exalted the One who filled you with this power commands you not to use them to subjugate others (or to be unjust to them). Rather, He wants you to use those powers for the benefit of mankind. The hand can strike and it is also able to do good work, and you neither have any control on the power that controls your hand (or muscles that move it), nor did you create the means for that power to be affected by your will.

‘...But they could not do this unless thy Sustainer had so willed...’ (al-An‘am: 112), i.e. if Allah the Exalted had wanted it (the devil’s whisper) not to be done, He would have done so because He has absolute power and no one is ever able to escape from His Will. We see that the sky, the earth and everything created, apart from human beings, is subjugated to the Will of Allah Exalted is He. So, why do we take examples from the sky, the earth, plants, inanimate objects, and animals? Take the example of yourself. You have things within your body over which you have no control and you have no choice regarding them. Can you choose, for instance, to be sick or remain healthy? No. If you are struck by a stone while walking, is that by your choice? Or if you get hit by a drunk driver, is that what you willed for yourself? Do you have any control in that?

And with regards to death, is that a matter of choice for you to die or not to die? So, what we need to understand clearly is that Allah the Exalted in His Absolute Power disposes His affairs on you in two ways: He subjects you, on some issues, to His absolute control so that you do such things instinctively, while at the same time He allows you have some kind of control over other things, and being able to choose here is a strong proof that man is responsible from the Islamic legal perspectives.

Allah the Exalted continues by concluding the above verse, '...therefore, aloof from them and from all their false imagery!' (al-An'am: 112). This shows that their false imagery, lies, and deceptions will never change the reality of the matter at all. Contrary to their belief, nothing of their evil scheme will hinder the Message. Rather, what will their false scheme, plotting and enmity to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him turn to? All this will turn to fuel that will ignite strong light of belief and passion for the message of Islam; and this will also purify the message from all defects and defilements, so that this will bring forth true and strong believers completely purified and filled with the attributes of goodness: '...for, as far as the scum is concerned, it passes away as [does all] dross; but that which is of benefit to man abides on earth...' (ar-Ra'd: 17).

If it were not for such awakening, emanated from the above-mentioned process of indirect purification, the message of Islam would have been filled with useless and worthless people (for being ignorant about the religion), and Islam would have been high jacked by people with no sound knowledge about the value of faith and religion. So, it happens that (sometimes) Allah the Exalted uses Islam's enemies and antagonists as an indirect means of purification for the adherents of the religion in a way that the Message of Islam would be purged of people with weak belief and unsound faith, who would have been otherwise a burden to the religion, rather than being its supporters. So at the end of the day, what will remain are the true adherents of Islam. I mean the residual of this purification process will be those who are sincere in their truthfulness with Allah the Exalted and steadfastness in their belief. Allah the Exalted said, 'Had these [hypocrites] set out with you, [O believers,] they would have added nothing to you, save the evil of corruption...' (at-Tawba: 47).

It is from Divine Wisdom of Allah the Exalted that He frustrated the plan of the hypocrites and weakened their desire, so that they could not go out and fight with the believers. 'For, had they been [truly] desirous of setting out [with thee], they would surely have made some preparation therefore, but Allah was averse to their taking the field, and so He caused them to hold back when it was said, "You may stay at home with all [the others] who stay at home."' (at-Tawba: 46)

In the previous verse, the True Lord Glorified is He says, '...whisper unto one another glittering half-truths…' (al-An'am: 112). The phrase 'glittering half-truths' (zukhruf al-qawl) is a form of deceptively sugar-coated talk that sways some listeners. One may get away with it at first instance without having any effect on the hearts or souls, but once it is repeated and it keeps recurring, it may have negative effects on people with weak belief and thus leading them astray. How do these people proceed?

وَلِتَصۡغَىٰٓ إِلَيۡهِ أَفۡـِٔدَةُ ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ بِٱلۡأٓخِرَةِ
وَلِيَرۡضَوۡهُ وَلِيَقۡتَرِفُواْ مَا هُم مُّقۡتَرِفُونَ ﴿١١٣﴾

So that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit, be pleased with it, and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate [113]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 113)

This indicates that the people who believe in the Hereafter will never have anything to do with such deceptive talk and they will not get inclined towards it. Whenever they are exposed to such sinful atmosphere, no matter how exciting and alluring it is, they will never get deluded by it, as if they ask themselves, 'How long will the pleasure of this disobedience last, two minutes, an hour, a month? What will I do on the Day of Resurrection when I am subject to questioning in front of the Mighty Lord; and upon that my fate will either be Paradise or be thrown into the Hell-Fire'? Therefore, the ears and heart of the one who believes in the Hereafter do not accept such glittering half-truths. No one accepts them except one who does not believe in the Hereafter, and is only obsessed with the enjoyment of the worldly life; and tricks himself by getting indulged into the 'temporary enjoyment' of life'. So by this, if every Muslim could picture the kind horrifying punishment behind committing disobedience, they would not do it. It is just only then one is heedless of the punishment that Satan succeeds in leading one to sinful acts. But surprisingly, how come, that in this worldly life, we fear punishment from one another though our ability to punish is quite limited, and we take the incessant warning of punishment from the Mighty Allah the Exalted the One Who has All-Dominant Power to punish lightly? That is why we find those who remember the Hereafter remembering the punishment and thus stay away from it whenever disobedience is presented to them 'so that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit, be pleased with it, and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate' (al-An'am: 113).

The Arabic word al-isgha`, (inclining towards) refers to the act of paying attention, that is, the inclination of the ears towards someone speaking because you could hear someone speaking without paying attention to him. For instance, walking in the street, one hears lots of things, but he does not stop at everything he hears, and that is normal. Rather, one tends to pay attention only when the ears hear something very important. This is why it is called, in this case, tasammu` (listening) and not sam` (hearing), so, that is what is meant by al-isgha`, and this is why the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, in one of his Ahadith, 'Whoever listens to a woman who sings with moral depravity (ghaniyah)...' – he did not say, 'Whoever hears...' Another example is what happens whenever someone moves around and hears a song on the radio, He hears with his ears, a normal human tool for encompassing sound within a certain range, so it is not an open-ended tool. Thus, in such case, we do not refer to that person by saying, 'he lends his ear'. The same thing applies to the eyes, another tool for man encompassing sight. And as we know, the eye does not see when it is shut, it only sees when it is open. But the ears do not have lids, so they cannot be told to hear something and not hear something else.

Therefore, man has no choice with regards to hearing, but he does have a choice with regards to what he listens to so '…that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit, be pleased with it, and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate.’ (al-An‘am: 113) This verse also refers to something in the heart that makes one seek to hear, i.e. it resonates with one’s core. But at the same time, it happens that one passes by something else and does not look at it, one just passes by it with sheer disregard. The Arabic word al-f'ida refers to the hearts, and though it is true that with the ears, one pays attention, but it is the hearts that listen to what is said and perceive it. So, this verse strengthens the fact it is with the whole body (heart and soul) the disbeliever uses to pay attention to such words of deceit, thus disbelieving that there is a Hereafter and by being completely indulged in the pleasure of the worldly life; his heart and soul will never consider the Hereafter. This is why the True Lord Glorified is He uses this expression that refers to the flow of attentiveness from the ears to the heart, and this is perception.‘…so that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit…’ (al-An‘am: 113). Then the second and third phases are mentioned: ‘(so that the hearts)….be pleased with it, and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate.’ (al-An‘am: 113)

It is possible that someone might listen to something and, being alerted by his reproachful self, then becomes unable to respond. However, there are those who listen to something and feel happy and pleased with what they hear. Then they move towards action and committing sin. These are three phases. The first is, ‘…so that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit…’ Then the second phase is, ‘be pleased with it,’ and then the third phase is, ‘...and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate.’ (al-An‘am: 113), i.e. that they commit sin.

This matter has defined for us, the conscious phenomena studied by psychologists, i.e. the symptoms or levels of feeling. One of them is ‘aptitude’, i.e. having fondness for something, as expressed in the above verse, ‘...may incline towards’, the other one is, ‘strong feeling of joy’, also expressed in the verse, ‘be pleased with it’, and the last one is, ‘being emotionally drawn to it’ as the verse also clarifies, ‘…and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate.’ (al-An‘am: 113)

Look at how the Quran remarkably preceded psychology in describing the different phases of human nature namely, aptitude, strong feeling of joy and then acting upon those feelings. It is to be clarified that Islamic Law does not intervene when feelings manifest themselves, except when someone moves towards action, but this is only when it is possible to separate between acting upon the feeling, having feelings and realisation. This is one of the very critical areas, and the law intervenes right from the beginning, and this is what happens in the process of man staring at women because what normally follows a lustful gaze is an emotional attraction in the sense that the person feels attracted to the woman, feeling passionate about her and then captivated by her beauty, charm etc. But in Islamic Law, it is not permissible for the person to act upon those feelings in a sinful way. If you take a step towards her, the law says to you, 'No!' This is because the law realises the fact that all those steps are linked together normally, so this might automatically lead to a sinful act. So, given the fact that these emotional parts of human nature are normally interlinked; feelings follow perception, which also ultimately lead to actions. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He commanded Muslims to keep away, taking precautionary steps right from the beginning: 'Tell the believing men to lower their gaze... And tell the believing women to lower their gaze...' (an-Nur: 30-31).

So we see from this verse, that lustful looks towards the opposite sex is categorically prohibited from the outset, and in Islamic Law, there is no waiting for the feelings to be acted upon, if the aim and objective behind that is unlawful. Why? It is because the outcome of perceiving beauty in everything is different from that of getting attracted to a woman's beauty, which, whenever it occurs, produces a kind of chemical process in the body of the person, and drives him under the impulse of emotion to act upon that feeling. As we have said, the process is completely inter-related and can never be broken down.

Allah says: 'So that the hearts of those who do not believe in the Hereafter may incline towards their deceit, be pleased with it, and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate.' (al-An'am: 113)

Whenever we use the Arabic word ma, and followed by a sense that indicates vagueness, this shows that the sentence is about something great in number or magnitude. This is why Allah the Exalted says, '...and they were overwhelmed by the sea which was destined to overwhelm them' (Ta Ha: 78), i.e. it is a matter that cannot be defined in words, just like the words of Allah the Exalted in the above verse, '...and so perpetrate whatever they perpetrate', and the meaning of this is, everyone commits, earns, acts and perpetrates whatever their soul is inclined to; such as those who slander, or harbour grudges, envy, steal etc. and the verse strengthens the fact that passions of the soul are unlimited. Therefore, a term is used to indicate generality.

So, as long as the matter regards prophecy and challenges facing the act of adhering to the Divine Message preached by Allah's prophets and also considering the fact that satanic enemies, from man and the jinn, form evil schemes against this message, whispering unto one another glittering half-truths meant to delude people's mind, then this is a serious matter, i.e. a very challenging situation which is expected to continue until there is a divine intervention from the Mighty Allah Who gives a verdict. It is as if Allah the Exalted is making it clear to his Prophet peace and blessings be upon him saying, 'O Muhammad! I have sent you and you will have enemies that will plot against you, they will exert every conceivable effort to harm you and those who follow you. Thus, beware of seeking a verdict from other than Me, because I am the Legislator and I am the Most Just. I am the One who dispenses reward'.

Why? This is because the subject matter here is about what Allah the Exalted has legislated, and it is not right or correct for someone to come along and try to insinuate what is not intended by Allah the Exalted. It is inconceivable for man, with his limited faculty, to act as if he is able to outmanoeuvre Allah the Exalted in the matter of legislation, disregarding the fact that this is outside the scope of man-made law. No. This is a matter that falls exclusively in the jurisdiction of Allah the Exalted the Most-Wise and the One Who laid down the law, and He knows best what He intends by them. He knows what the clear truth is and He is the One Who is the best to judge. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'I am only a human being, and you people come to me with your cases; and it may be that one of you is able to present his case eloquently in a more convincing way than the other, and I give my verdict per what I hear. So, if ever I judge (by error) and give the right of a brother to his other (brother) then he (the latter) should not take it, for I am giving him only a piece of the Fire.'(1) So no one should take this as a basis for claiming that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave a judgment (so how come are we saying this is not within human's mental capacity?) No. What Prophet Muhammad did is to judge this case per what was presented to him, i.e. based on the evidence and proofs presented by the litigants, and as we know, one party may have a stronger case, while the other is not very good in expressing themselves. Therefore, even in this case, the real judge is Allah the Exalted (not the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him) because He is the One Who legislated. As long as He is the One Who legislated, then He is the One Who judges between us, so whoever has any case against someone should not have any panic about the verdict because he should have faith that the One Who will render the judgement is Allah the Exalted whose Judgment is of absolute Justice.

The True Lord Glorified is He says:

أَفَغَيۡرَ ٱللَّهِ أَبۡتَغِي حَكَمٗا وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِيٓ أَنزَلَ إِلَيۡكُمُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ مُفَصَّلٗاۚ وَٱلَّذِينَ
ءَاتَيۡنَٰهُمُ ٱلۡكِتَٰبَ يَعۡلَمُونَ أَنَّهُۥ مُنَزَّلٞ مِّن رَّبِّكَ بِٱلۡحَقِّۖ فَلَا تَكُونَنَّ مِنَ ٱلۡمُمۡتَرِينَ ﴿١١٤﴾

[Say], 'Shall I seek any judge other than God, when it is He who has sent down for you [people] the Scripture, clearly explained?' Those to whom We gave the Scripture know that this [Quran] is revealed by your Lord [Prophet] with the truth, so do not be one of those who doubt [114] (The Quran, al-An'am: 114)

This verse shows that Allah the Exalted is the One Who judges and He is the One Who legislated. He knows the law and He knows who follows the law and who contravenes the law. So the above verse, 'Say, "Am I, then, to look unto anyone but Allah for judgement...' shows that having strong belief in the meaning and connotation of that verse makes one confident in the divine support of Allah the Exalted because He never fails anyone who relies on Him, just as He orders us, 'Do not seek judgement from other than Allah Exalted is He', He will never fail you if you heed His instruction. This is why the matter is presented in the form of a question. The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says conveying from his Lord, '...when it is He who has bestowed upon you from on high this divine writ, clearly spelling out the truth...' (al-An'am: 114). Notice that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him did not say, 'He is the One Who has bestowed the Book upon me'. Rather, in conveying from the Mighty Lord, he said, '...when it is He who has bestowed upon you from on high this divine writ, clearly spelling out the truth...'. The message here is that it is as if the enmity is not only directed towards Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but rather, the enmity is toward the entire Muslim community, and Allah's judgement. Even though the Quran was revealed to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, his mission was to convey the Divine Message to all mankind, and therein a great objective for the believers, all of them, to carry forth the message. This is how enmity directed at Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is enmity to all his followers. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He revealed the above verse in the form of a question, and telling His Prophet to say to them, '…Am I, then, to look unto anyone but Allah the Exalted for judgement...' (al-An'am: 114), in line with His other remarkable message in the previous verse, 'And thus it is that against every prophet, We have set up [as enemies] the evil forces from among humans as well as from among invisible beings...' (al-An'am: 112).

(1) Narrated by Malik, Ahmad, Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, An-Nisa`i, At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah

Therefore, an enemy of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is also an enemy of those who believe and follow him, but the peak of enmity is the one directed against Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who is sent by Allah the Exalted '...And those unto whom We have given revelation a foretime know that this one, too, has been bestowed from on high, step by step, by thy Sustainer, setting forth the truth. Be not, then, among the doubters.' (al-An'am: 114)

The phrase '...by thy Sustainer, setting forth the truth...' is an impetus for the believers to realise that every matter behind this divine message comes back to them with benefit because the main objective of sending down the Book (the Glorious Quran) is for them to be guided; they are the first target (but from them and through them the light of message will beam throughout the universe). So, the believers should know that they have many benefits to gain behind the revelation of the Glorious Quran; it will not add anything to Allah the Exalted in His majesty and Glory. It will neither add anything to Allah the Exalted in His divinely beautiful attributes nor increase Him in His Sovereignty. Rather, you, the believer, should know that you are part of the main objective.

‘Say, “Am I, then, to look unto anyone but Allah the Exalted for judgment [as to what is right and wrong], when it is He who has bestowed upon you from on high this divine writ...’ (al-An‘am: 114). This indicates that Allah, Glorified is He did not send down the Quran without spelling out the truth, so there is no any cause for confusion whatsoever. ‘...And those unto whom We have given revelation a foretime know that this one, too, has been bestowed from on high, step by step, by thy Sustainer, setting forth the truth. Be not, then, among the doubters’ (al-An‘am: 114).

The phrase ‘those who were given revelation a foretime’ is referring to the Jews and Christians because they are supposedly equipped with knowledge about Prophet Muhammad’s peace and blessings be upon him attributes. They know your description and they know a lot about your Book (the Quran). Therefore, everything that is connected to you is not strange to them, but the bane is that they have adopted two different aspects of faith; they openly practice one of these two versions, forthcoming in any questions related to it, but the other one is hidden. In this form of faith (for them), they make secret everything hidden, and they forbid any questioning about it. They do not even accept any discussion about it. If you get a fact, a very undeniable fact, and try to convince them with it, they will not accept it. What is it that has made them so? It is because they have gone through two situations: first, when they were the bearers of the divine message brought to them by the previous messengers, they were opposed by those who disbelieved in heavenly revealed religions such as idol-worshippers and polytheists. Allah the Exalted has this to say about them, ‘...and [bear in mind that] a foretime they used to pray for victory over those who were bent on denying the truth...’ (al-Baqara: 89). So, you can see per this verse, they took the disbelievers (the pagans and idol worshippers) as enemies and their main concern at that time was to achieve victory over these disbelievers. And they used to say, ‘Very soon a prophet will come and we will follow him, and with him we will destroy the disbelievers the way the People of `Ad and people of the city of Aram were destroyed.

But surprisingly, when what they knew (and were waiting for) came to them they disbelieved in it because 'They have exchanged the signs of Allah for a small price and averted [people] from His way. Indeed, it was evil that they were doing. (at-Tawba: 9)

The bargain they conducted was for having the prophethood remain in their own ancestry, but the advent of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him drew the curtain down on their prophetic lineage, removing from them any kind of religious authority, especially given the fact that in Islam there is no authority for the priesthood or the clergy. They wanted to remain in their positions of leadership, but they bartered Allah's signs for a trifling gain. '...And those unto whom We have given revelation a foretime know that this one, too, has been bestowed from on high, step by step, by thy Sustainer, setting forth the truth. Be not, then, among the doubters.' (al-An'am: 114)

They (the Jews and the Christians) know that the Quran was sent down from Allah the Exalted setting forth the truth. They know that what they are divulging is false – therefore, as I have said above, there are clear facts they know about the religion brought by Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and this is a well-established fact among them, but rather than coming forth with this truth, they go out proclaiming falsehood, contrary to what they know is the truth. Hence, Allah the Exalted in the following statement, was alerting Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him "…Be not, then, among the doubters' (al-An'am: 114), i.e. do not have doubt that the people of the Book know that the Quran is sent down from your Lord, setting out the truth. This is an address to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and we know, in grammatical terms, that in a communication between two people, when a second person tense is used to request something that is already being done, then what is meant is that such action needs persistence with no relenting efforts. The objective behind this is to ward off anything that might shake confidence and belief. So Allah the Exalted used that tense to strengthen Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, belief and steadfastness. Another meaning for the above verse might be that it is used to spur him up into taking further action, or it might also be a means of warning the believers from being distracted, as Allah the Exalted told them not to have any doubt or scepticism.

Then Allah the Exalted says after that:

وَتَمَّتۡ كَلِمَتُ رَبِّكَ صِدۡقٗا وَعَدۡلٗاۚ لَّا مُبَدِّلَ لِكَلِمَٰتِهِۦۚ وَهُوَ ٱلسَّمِيعُ ٱلۡعَلِيمُ ﴿١١٥﴾

The word of your Lord is complete in its truth and justice.
No one can change His words: He is the All Hearing, the
All Knowing [115] (The Quran, al-An’am: 115)

The phrase tammat (been fulfilled) indicates that the subject matter here has a beginning and an end. But let us pause and ask this question, ‘What is meant by the word kalima (word) has been fulfilled’? Is it Allah’s Exalted Promise to eventually give victory to Islam, and put an end to all this kind of antagonism posed against it, or is it referring to the complete fulfilment of the Message of Islam (i.e. being provided with all what it needs to be strong and solid), as this can be inferred from the words of Allah the Exalted when He said, ‘’This day have I perfected your religion for you and completed My favour unto you, and have chosen for you Islam as your religion” (al-Ma‘ida: 3)? Or is it referring to the Quran? What we can say here is that the meaning of ‘been fulfilled’ encompasses all the issues of life, and this will remain a fact forever, i.e. nothing is beyond Allah’s control. And this also means that nobody will be able to amend any ruling stated and clarified in His Book (the Noble Quran) because the rulings cover all matters. Let us take note also that the Arabic word kalima here is singular, but it can have a plural meaning. When you hear someone saying, ‘So-and-so gave an excellent speech’, described in Arabic as kalima tayyiba, ‘and was received with approval and applause’, what is intended is that the person spoke words (kalimat in Arabic) but the normal and correct expression used for that is kalima in the singular to indicate that ‘he gave a speech’. Therefore, what is meant by ‘And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled…’ (al-An‘am: 115) is the way that comprises all of life. Read the words of Allah, ‘...Dreadful is the word that comes out of their mouths...’ (al-Kahf: 5).

Is it a word or words? It is indeed a statement that contains words; therefore the Arabic word kalima can be used and intended for a singular term and it can also be used and intended for speech (as we say in Arabic kalaam). Originally, kalima is a singular word, i.e. there is no other word with it, but it needs to give a meaningful sentence. If the meaning is not independently understood and it needs a supplement for us to understand it then is a particle. Take for instance, the Arabic letter fi which means 'in' in English. It indicates an adverbial of time or place, but it is not independently understood. This is because it is a preposition, and a preposition requires a deposition (mazhruf) and an adverbial complement (in Arabic, mazhruf fi). You say in a sentence, for instance, 'The water is in the cup', showing that the meaning can be independently understood. Likewise, when you hear a sentence where the preposition 'from' (min, in Arabic) you understand that this gives a sense of beginning, just as the preposition 'to' (`ila in Arabic) gives a sense of an end. If the word indicates a meaning that is independently understood, but it is not connected to time, then this is a noun, if time is part of its indication then it is a verb. As for the Arabic word kalam (speech), it refers to words that carry complete meaning.

When you hear the word 'sky' you understand the meaning, and the same goes for when you hear the word 'earth'; in such words, the intended meanings are independently understood. When you hear the phrase kataba (he wrote), it indicates a meaning that is independently understood, and time is a part of the verb. 'He wrote' indicates the past tense, 'he writes' indicates the present tense, while 'he will write' indicates an action of writing in the future. Therefore, kalima is a term that indicates a meaning. If it is not independently understood, it is a particle, and could also mean 'speech' (kalam).

So, the statement of the True Lord Glorified is He 'And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled…' (al-An'am: 115) means many things. If it refers to the Quran, then what is meant is His word. We call Allah's speech (kalam) because what it indicates is one word, and this divine word is a complete expression of its own, with no discrepancy therein. So, if we understand the above verse as referring to the Quran, then we should understand that the noble Quran contains every matter and every issue in existence, and it is a complete expression of Allah's rulings and orders, with no letter to be omitted or altered in it. Rather, it has remained perfectly comprehensive, and will remain as such ever since it was revealed, unlike what happened to the previous heavenly revealed Books, they got distorted by the people sent to, as they tampered with them, concealing, and altering some of what was revealed in them. The people upon whom those books were revealed were entrusted with the task of preserving them; i.e. they were made religiously responsible to take care of these scriptures. And as is natural with any religious obligations, they are sometimes obeyed and sometimes disobeyed. So, what happened is that these people (followers of the previous prophets) were not consistent in observing the obligation of preserving these scriptures, and the proof is what Allah the Exalted said in the following: ‘Lo! We did reveal the Torah, wherein is guidance and a light, by which the prophets who surrendered (unto Allah), judged the Jews, and the rabbis and the priests (judged) by such of Allah’s Scripture as they were bidden to observe...’ (al-Ma‘ida: 44).

Notice the phrase ‘…bidden to observe...’, it means that they were asked to preserve it (the scripture). So, there is a sense of being religiously responsible, and this obligation can be obeyed or disobeyed. However, the matter is different with regards to the Quran. The True Lord Glorified is He said: ‘Behold, it is We Ourselves who have bestowed from on high, step by step, this reminder: and, behold, it is We who shall truly guard it [from all corruption].’ (al-Hijr: 9)

Allah Glorified is He is the One Who preserves the Quran. So, this is not a duty for human beings because the Quran is a miracle and those who are religiously responsible never have anything to do with something of a divine magnitude and a miracle like the Quran.

Therefore, what is meant by the words of Allah the Exalted ‘And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled…’ (al-An‘am: 115) is that you should rest assured that the Quran is already divinely preserved, and that it is going to remain as a fact until the Day of Judgment; nothing is going to change that; it is not going to be tampered with, not even a word. The proof for that is the fact that one always gets amazed by the Quran. One of these amazing aspects is that when one finds a verse from the Quran, which is similar to another, one will quickly notice that the context is different. Allah the Exalted says, ‘No! Indeed, the Quran is a reminder. Then whoever wills will remember it.’ (al-Muddaththir: 54-55).

In another verse, He says: ‘Nay, verily, these [messages] are but a reminder and so, whoever is willing may remember Him.’ (‘Abasa: 11-12). And also in another verse, He says: ‘Indeed, this is a reminder, so he who wills may take to his Lord a way.’ (al-Insan: 29). This is a type and kind of similarity between some of the verses, but what are we requested to do to properly comprehend the Quran? Allah the Exalted says: ‘So when We have recited it [through Gabriel], then follow its recitation.’ (al-Qiyama: 18)

The True Lord Glorified is He says, ‘Truly, a happy state shall attain the believers. Those who humble themselves in their prayer and who turn away from all that is frivolous and who are intent on inner purity and who are mindful of their chastity, not giving way to their desires with any but their spouses – that is, those whom they rightfully possess [through wedlock]: for then, behold, they are free of all blame, whereas such as seek to go beyond that [limit] are truly transgressors; and who are faithful to their trusts and to their pledges, and who guard their prayers from all worldly intent…’ (al-Mu’minun: 1-9). In another verse, He repeats same wording saying, ‘and who guard their prayers [from all worldly intent].’ (al-Ma’arij: 34) All of this shows you that every word has come to you as it was sent down, and this is how the promise of your Lord has been fulfilled.

Or, another meaning for the statement of Allah the Exalted ‘And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled…’ (al-An‘am: 115) is that it is directed at strengthening the fact that Allah’s word is supreme, but it is worth mentioning that the issue about the supremacy of Allah’s, words, as an ordinary statement (in the context of condemning the words of disbelievers as falsehood), but rather, it was mentioned as an established fact that should not be taken with a grain of salt. About the words of the disbelievers, Allah the Exalted says: ‘...and brought utterly low the word of those who were bent on denying the truth...’ (at-Tawba: 40).

In the grammatical context, there is a brief deliberate departure from the norm here. If this statement would have been out the context of the Quran, it would have been put this way, ‘And He made the word of Allah supreme' (as if Allah the Exalted was trying to prove His words are supreme, no!) rather than that, He says, '…and brought utterly low the cause of those who were bent on denying the truth, whereas Allah's cause remained supreme.' (at-Tawba: 40)

By this Allah the Exalted wants us to understand that His word is always supreme and dominant, and it is not something He has just done, nay; Allah's words have been perfectly supreme since the beginning of time, and so this will remain eternally, and this is a strong proof that His promise and decree will always come to pass, sooner or later.

We notice that the statement of the True Lord Glorified is He 'And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled…' (al-An'am: 115), comes after, 'Say, "Am I, then, to look unto anyone but Allah for judgment [as to what is right and wrong]...' (al-An'am: 14). So, try to examine the procession of Allah's divine messages right from the time of Adam peace be upon him up to the time of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and look how Allah the Exalted judged between those who attempted to suppress the Message of Truth, and those who remained steadfast upholding the Truth, and how He judged between those who are guided and those who are misguided. Indeed, the True Lord Glorified is He says, 'For every one of them did We take to task for his sin: and so, upon some of them We let loose a deadly storm wind...' (al-'Ankabut: 40).

The Arabic word al-hasib refers to a blowing and strong wind that carries stones, and it was a punishment for the people of `Ad. Also Allah the Exalted says, '...and some of them were overtaken by a [sudden] blast...' (al-'Ankabut: 40). This is referring to the people of Thamud. One time Allah the Exalted calls it a sayha (blast) and another time He calls it taghiya (a violent upheaval): 'Now as for Thamud – they were destroyed by a violent upheaval [of the earth].' (al-Haqqa: 5)

And in another occasion, what happened is that the earth swallowed up the disbelievers such as what happened to Qarun (Korah), 'And thereupon We caused the earth to swallow him and his dwelling…' (al-Qasas: 81). And likewise, '…and some of them We caused to drown…' (al-'Ankabut: 40). And, in another instance, Allah the Exalted caused the people of Pharaoh to drown, and likewise He caused to drown – before them – the people of Noah peace be upon him. Therefore, considering the above, it is clear every people (who dared to stage antagonism and enmity against the Message of Truth) received their due judgment from the Mighty Allah Exalted is He. And in a context of directing this message to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, as if Allah the Exalted is telling him, 'But you O Muhammad, are different from them (from those people of the previous prophets', and so likewise the followers of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who have become entrusted with the great task of carrying forth the light of the Divine Message. This is why Allah the Exalted says: 'Moreover, We would never chastise any community for the wrong they may do until We have sent an apostle [to them].' (al-Isra': 15)

After the True Lord sent Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him He said, 'But Allah would not send them punishment while you [Prophet] are in their midst, nor would He punish them if they sought forgiveness.' (al-Anfal: 33) Therefore, 'And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled in truth and in justice. None can alter His words, and He is the Hearing, the Knowing.' (al-An'am: 115)

'And Our word has already preceded for Our servants, the messengers; that indeed, they would be those given victory and [that] indeed, Our soldiers will be those who overcome. (as-Saffat: 171-173) You are the ones who will gain victory because you belong to the dominant religion, and to attain victory as a dominant religion you are required to be faithful. If you support this religion by following it, then the One who sent it down will grant you victory, for Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says, '...Allah has written, "I shall most certainly win, I and My Messengers…"' (al-Mujadala: 21). What Allah Glorified is He says becomes a reality and what we see as a reality conforms to His words.

'The Word of your Lord is complete in its truth and justice. No one can change His Words: He is the All Hearing, the All Knowing.' (al-An'am: 115) This means that the real universe matches what Allah Glorified is He says. How can reality be true and just at the same time? Let us suppose that you have brought a tutor for your child, and this tutor is, by chance, your child's teacher at school. You told the teacher that you wanted your child to pass the exams.

The teacher promised you to fulfil this. When the exams came, the child passed. Thus, the teacher's promise came true, but is it just? The teacher could have prepared the questions of the exams and informed the child on them beforehand. In this case, it is unjust to have the child pass the exams. In contrast, Allah's Promise corresponds to what He says and the fulfilment of this promise on the ground conforms to what He says. This promise is also just because Allah Glorified is He makes recompense and punishment clear: 'The Word of your Lord is complete in its truth and justice....' (al-An'am: 115) This is because there is no power that could alter Allah's Words and there is no other deity to oppose Him; thus, He has absolute power.

With regards to human beings, Allah Glorified is He teaches His servants to adhere to truth in their speech, advising them, 'Do not say of anything, "I will do that tomorrow," without adding, "Allah willing…"' (al-Kahf: 23-24). Doing things tomorrow is a matter related to the future over which we have no control. Thus, protect yourself and say, 'Allah willing', if something does not happen, you should say that Our Lord has not willed what you have promised to do. You thus prove yourself truthful and safeguard yourself from being a liar. You should only speak per your potential and means because when you say that you will do something tomorrow, you do not guarantee that you are going to live until then in the light of changing events and circumstances. Meanwhile, if Allah Glorified is He says that He will do something, He has absolute power to do so.

'The Word of your Lord is complete in its truth and justice. No one can change His Words: He is the All Hearing, the All Knowing.' (al-An'am: 115) Since words are fulfilled and judgements are issued, then this is evidence that Allah Glorified is He is All-hearing of what they have said in their enmity, and He is All Knowing of the plots that they have hatched. Allah Glorified and Exalted is He is the One Who says in the same chapter, '...The evil ones incite their followers to argue with you...' (al-An'am: 121). This means that those devils teach their followers in secret. If their speech is clear, then it can be heard; and if it is in secret then it can be known.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says after that:

وَإِن تُطِعۡ أَكۡثَرَ مَن فِي ٱلۡأَرۡضِ يُضِلُّوكَ عَن سَبِيلِ ٱللَّهِۚ إِن
يَتَّبِعُونَ إِلَّا ٱلظَّنَّ وَإِنۡ هُمۡ إِلَّا يَخۡرُصُونَ ١١٦

If you obeyed most of those on earth, they would lead you away from the path of God. They follow nothing but speculation; they are merely guessing [116]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 116)

“If you obeyed those on earth...” are those who are legally competent because they can choose and they have commands and prohibitions. Commands apply only to man. The opposite of akthar (most) does not necessarily mean ‘little’ or ‘lesser’. Mentioning of ‘most’ could mean, per Arabic, that the rest may be many (katheer). This latter adjective (katheer) indicates that a given thing has a quantity of its own and does not depend on another thing. In this regard, we have heard several people say that the following phrase was once written at the country’s main train station, airport or harbour, ‘O you visitor of Egypt, there are many like you’. This means that if you are a good man, you will find many like you; and if you are wicked, you will also find many like you.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘Do you not realise [Muhammad] that everything in the heavens and earth submitted to Allah; the sun, the moon, the stars, the mountains, the trees and the animals? So do many human beings, though for many others punishment is well deserved....’ (al-Hajj: 18) All beings are subjected and subjugated. Concerning mankind, there is a difference as they are granted free will to choose. Some people obey and some people disobey. The True Lord Glorified is He does not say, ‘all human beings’, but He says, ‘many human beings’. Similarly, Allah Glorified is He does not say, ‘though for a few others punishment is well deserved’ but He, says, ‘though for many others punishment is well deserved’. Thus, these are many and those are many too. If you look at each group of people, you will basically find them many. Why does the True Lord then say, ‘If you obeyed most of those on earth, they would lead you away from the Path of Allah…’? (al-An‘am: 116) ‘Obedience’ means responding to the command of ‘do’ and the prohibition of ‘do not do’. When the True Lord Glorified is He orders man to do such and such, he has the choice to do or not to do. And when the True Lord Glorified is He orders man not to do such and such, he has the same choice. If there is something beyond your power, Allah Glorified is He will never order you to do it. Man is always commanded to do or not to do for his own benefit. Man can also benefit from those things that do not contradict the Divine Way of Life because Allah Glorified is He has given him the freedom to do or not do. The True Lord Glorified is He wants to tell us to this effect: It is from My Mercy that I have laid down legislation for you because if I had left people to their desires, powerful people would have commanded others to do whatever they desire. Therefore, we resolve this matter through the divine way of life so that human desires do not come into conflict and one's whims do not collide with another's. It is a real benefit to mankind to have only one God Who must be obeyed and Who has no desires. It is also a real benefit to have one way of life suitable to all humans which tells them to 'do and not do'. This is discussed in detail so that we can all best understand matters. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: "If you obeyed most of those on earth, they would lead you away from the path of Allah…' (al-An'am: 116).

There are people who believe in Allah Glorified is He; these are the ones who have good nature. Man is disposed to do good deeds by nature. Legislation has come to develop and enhance this good nature and rectify evil inclinations and put right deviating dispositions. What do people going astray from the path of Allah Glorified is He follow? The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says, 'They follow nothing but speculation….' (al-An'am: 116)

Each one of them thinks that this misguidance benefits them at that moment, while they are unaware of the bad consequences that will come upon them afterwards.

Zhann (speculation), as we might know, is realisation of the most possible thing; and the opposite is disregard, which means realisation of the least possible thing. However, speculation is here motivated by desires.

'…they are merely guessing and falsifying (facts).' (al-An'am: 116) Those people either follow speculation or falsify facts by means of guessing. A kharis in Arabic is someone who falsifies facts; he always guesses and makes conjectures. It is as if someone asks another one at a market about the weight of a pile of wheat. The latter responds that it is about ten or twelve bushels. He just guesses without definite proof or strict standards; he utters inaccurate words.

If you follow the advice of most people, they will lead you astray because they do not have any tangible proof or hard facts. They rather follow speculation when things are most possible, while they guess and falsify facts when things are less possible.

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He then says:

إِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ أَعْلَمُ مَن يَضِلُّ عَن سَبِيلِهِۦۖ وَهُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِٱلْمُهْتَدِينَ ﴿١١٧﴾

Your Lord knows best who strays from His path and who is rightly guided [117] (The Quran, al-An'am: 117)

Whenever you see 'He', be sure that it has a unique significance. You can judge someone through his behaviour and actions; but you learn nothing about his emotions and thoughts regardless of the information you have about him because your knowledge is limited as a human being. On the contrary, the True Lord Glorified is He knows best since He is the All Knowing of everything in this universe. He knows both what is open and what is hidden. In this verse, He says, 'knows best' which is different from 'know'. That is why Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him dealt with people per how they acted, while leaving what they concealed to Allah Glorified is He. When a Muslim killed a man who had declared Islam, he peace and blessings be upon him asked him why. The Muslim replied that the man insincerely declared Islam. He, peace and blessing be upon him said, 'Have you cut his heart open?' Allah Glorified is He knows best because He knows what is open and what is hidden, and is aware of the most secretive of glances and of all that hearts conceal.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted says:

فَكُلُوا۟ مِمَّا ذُكِرَ ٱسْمُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْهِ إِن كُنتُم بِـَٔايَـٰتِهِۦ مُؤْمِنِينَ ﴿١١٨﴾ وَمَا لَكُمْ أَلَّا تَأْكُلُوا۟ مِمَّا
ذُكِرَ ٱسْمُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْهِ وَقَدْ فَصَّلَ لَكُم مَّا حَرَّمَ عَلَيْكُمْ إِلَّا مَا ٱضْطُرِرْتُمْ إِلَيْهِ ۗ وَإِنَّ كَثِيرًا
لَّيُضِلُّونَ بِأَهْوَآئِهِم بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ ۗ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ هُوَ أَعْلَمُ بِٱلْمُعْتَدِينَ ﴿١١٩﴾

So [believers] eat any [animal] over which God's name has been pronounced, if you believe in His revelations [118] Why should you not eat such animals when God has already fully explained what He has forbidden you, except when forced by hunger? But many lead others astray by their desires, without any true knowledge: your Lord knows best who oversteps the limit [119] (The Quran, al-An'am: 118 - 119)

Why is this issue mentioned in this context? The True Lord Glorified is He shows that there are enemies for every prophet who always try to find faults with his religion so that they can attack him. This is their mission for which Allah Glorified is He has chosen them. When they raise suspicions, we find that this religion refutes them; thus, the call of this religion gets stronger until the Coming of the Hour.

An example of this is the group of people who opposed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him regarding the Night Journey and Ascension, when he said to them, 'Indeed I was taken to Al-Aqsa Mosque (in Jerusalem) and I was made to ascend into the heavens in one night.' They tried to find faults with him to lead people astray. They said to him, 'Are you claiming that you have done this journey in one night, while we beat the livers of camels (meaning that they hasten and travel upon them) for one month?!!' Meanwhile, Abu Bakr As-Siddiq Allah be pleased with him said, 'If he said so, then he spoke the truth'; this is the kind of faith that is perfect about accepting matters that contravene physical laws. When this group argued with Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him he said, 'I believe that he receives revelations from the heavens, so how can I deny this? Since he has told of this, it is true.' This is a logical statement.

Again, the opponents of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Are you claiming that you have done this journey in one night while we strike the livers of our camels for one month?' He peace and blessings be upon him then gave them signs of the mosque and description of the trade caravans that he passed, as well as other evidences that decisively proved the event until the Day of Resurrection. If the issue of the Night Journey and Ascension had not been subject to such opposition from enemies, we would not have found such eagerness to affirm it.

Nowadays, we find people saying, 'Is it reasonable that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him went to Jerusalem and came back in one night? It must have been a dream'. If they had not said such words, we would not have known how to refute them in a way that can deter opponents from going ahead with their accusations until the Hour is established. We repeat that this is the mission that Allah Glorified is He has set for the enemies. If Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him had said to them, 'Indeed I dreamt that I went to Jerusalem', would have there been anyone to object to his dreams, even if he said that he had gone to the remotest part of the world? No one would dare deny it. But since they considered him a liar and denied the Night Journey, then this is proof that they understood it to be a real journey, not a dream. They realised that he had been taken in person from Mecca to Jerusalem; and that is why they disbelieved the whole story. Their denial benefits us now as we use it to refute opponents today. Thus, the existence of enemies has always been a motivation for combatting doubts and suspicions.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says here, 'So [believers] eat any [animal] over which Allah's Name has been pronounced, if you believe in His revelations.' (al-An'am: 118) This verse has a story that clarifies how enemies try to find faults to attack the religion. Some of them once said, 'The Prophet says to you, 'Indeed dead animals are not permitted for you to eat, while what you slaughter with your hands you can eat from'. They threw doubt on this Hadith, claiming that slaughtering is a form of death. First, this is a misleading linguistic argument because dead animals are not slaughtered or killed. Meanwhile, animals are slaughtered to be purified of blood. When we discuss this issue from scientific and academic perspectives, those enemies are easily defeated because there is a difference between death and killing. Death is removal of life without destroying the physical constitution. Killing is the destruction of the physical constitution first, and then death follows with blood remaining in the body. After all, does the Legislator, Who is the Most High Lord, take wisdom from us or does wisdom belong to Him alone?

It has become clear in our time that non-believers have begun to realise that a dead animal or flesh contains many harmful wastes that must be removed before its meat can be eaten. This is because the body of an animal is like that of a man; animals eat, digest, and absorb the nourishing elements that constitute their blood and energy. It is well known that there are organs and systems inside the body which clean and purify it from harmful toxins. For example, the kidneys cleanse blood of urea and other harmful waste so that blood can flow easily to the lungs to get oxygen. Moreover, blood vessels in both man and animals contain healthy and spoilt blood. The spoilt blood is that which has not been purified yet. When an animal is slaughtered, the spoilt blood comes out along with other bad compounds. This means that we sacrifice healthy blood to protect ourselves from unhealthy blood. On the other hand, if an animal is not slaughtered, the traces of both kinds of blood as well as waste remain. We avoid all this when slaughtering animals. Thus, we must trust in our True Lord Glorified is He when we learn that a ruling is surely ordained by Him.

Again, those enemies argued to this effect, ‘You eat what you have killed while you do not eat what Allah has killed. Thus, you think that you are better than Allah’. This is a false statement. When an animal dies, the Name of Allah Glorified is He is not pronounced over it, while we pronounce the Name of Allah over a slaughtered animal. It is as if the True Lord puts it this way: Eat what the Name of Allah has been pronounced over, i.e. neither dead animals nor what has been slaughtered for idols.

‘So [believers] eat any [animal] over which Allah’s Name has been pronounced, if you believe in His revelations.’ (al-An‘am: 118) Whenever we receive a ruling from the True Lord Glorified is He we must never look for the wisdom behind it first and then believe in it. Rather, we must trust that it is from Allah Glorified is He Whom we believe in. Therefore, we must follow every ruling coming from Allah Glorified is He. ‘Why should you not eat such animals when Allah has already fully explained what He has forbidden upon you, except when forced by hunger? But many lead others astray by their desires, without any true knowledge: your Lord knows best who oversteps the limits.' (al-An'am: 119)

These two verses – as we have known – were sent down to expose the opponents of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him who stood in denial of the call and strived to put an end to it. Those opponents spread rumours amongst the believers, which targeted their belief and faith. To raise doubts, they presented this issue that proved groundless. Let us look at it once again. Who is the one who has killed (such an animal)? They said, 'Indeed Allah has killed it'. So, is Allah Glorified is He the One Who has slit its throat? Has Allah Glorified is He struck its head and caused the brain to die? Has He directed something into its heart? Allah is Exalted above such human actions. So, how can they call death 'killing'? Referring to death as killing is wrong. They stick to faulty reasoning when they say, 'How can you legalize for yourselves what you have killed, i.e. what you have slaughtered, while not legalizing what Allah Glorified is He has killed, i.e. what He has caused to die'? Allah Glorified is He intends to grant the believers immunity from these suspicions raised by opponents. He said, 'So [believers] eat any [animal] over which Allah's Name has been pronounced, if you believe in His revelations.' (al-An'am: 118)

What is the meaning of 'pronouncement' or 'remembrance' (dhikr in Arabic)? There is a great deal of difference among scholars since they have not defined what is meant by (dhikr). Imam Malik Allah rest his soul is of the opinion that if you slaughter an animal and do not pronounce Allah's Name unmindfully or intentionally, it is not permissible for you to eat a slaughtered animal. Imam Abu Hanifah Allah rest his soul views that if you forget to pronounce Allah's Name, you can still eat a slaughtered animal, but if you intentionally do not pronounce it, then you cannot eat it. Imam Ash-Shafi`i Allah rest his soul says that as long as you are a believer and you are engaged in slaughtering in such a state of faith, then eat what Allah's Name has not been pronounced over, whether unmindfully or deliberately, because your faith includes pronouncement of the Name of Allah (dhikr).

We ask: What is dhikr? Is dhikr something which is said by the tongue, or is it something that occurs to one's mind? If you say that dhikr is something voiced through the tongue, then let us consider this Divine Hadith in which Allah Glorified is He says, 'I am near to the thought of My servant as he thinks about Me, and I am with him as he remembers Me. And if he remembers Me within himself, I also remember him within Myself, and if he remembers Me in an assembly, I remember him in an assembly that is better than his.'(1) Therefore, our Lord, has called the thoughts within oneself dhikr, so, Imam Ash-Shafi`i Allah rest his soul was right in his statement.

Therefore, I believe that we must define the meaning of dhikr first so that we can put an end to the difference of opinion in this issue. It does not make sense to have an argument over the meaning of dhikr because dhikr is something that occurs to the mind and may be pronounced by the tongue at the same time; or it may occur to the mind only as mentioned in the aforesaid Hadith.

A believer may find among the things around them, that some of them are beautiful, while others are not related to beauty at all. For example, a buffalo may be less beautiful than some animals that Allah Glorified is He has declared impermissible to eat. However, we find believers keep slaughtering buffaloes to eat their meat, while we have never heard of a Muslim coming to an animal, which Allah Glorified is He has declared unlawful to eat, to slaughter it; why? The reason is that the believers only engage in what Allah Glorified is He has permitted; this is proof that they remember within themselves that the One Who declares things permissible or impermissible is Allah Glorified is He. Therefore, a Muslim's choice of an animal to slaughter is evidence that he remembers Allah Glorified is He within himself or by his tongue. Hence, we agree now that a believer's dhikr is in their heart, whether they say it or not; accordingly, the dispute of this issue is settled. As we have shown, Imam Ash-Shafi`i adopted this viewpoint because when Prophet Mohammad peace and blessings be upon him was asked about a Muslim eating a slaughtered animal, while neither knowing who has slaughtered it nor whether Allah's Name was pronounced over it, he peace and blessings be upon him clarified, 'Say Allah's Name and eat.'

One cannot always be present at the time of slaughtering; so, it is enough for us to call to mind the One Who declares things permissible or impermissible when we eat the meat of a slaughtered animal. The True Lord Glorified is He commands us to 'mention Allah's Name over it'. Allah Glorified is He knows that you intend to do things; these things are divided into two categories: things that you think about before you do them and others that you do not think about, but you rather do them automatically without thinking, such as all reflexive actions. If someone tried to put their finger in another's eyes, this other person would automatically close their eyes. This is not the case in actions that one thinks about before doing. An action that is thought of before being done is an action which is important; that is why Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him wanted to save us trouble by saying, 'Every matter of importance that is not begun with "In the Name of Allah, the Lord of Mercy, the Giver of Mercy" is devoid (of blessings).'(1)

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and At-Tirmidhi

An important matter is a one that you think about before doing or not doing it. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He does not hold us accountable about any action so long as it does not occur to our minds because when you embark on an action, it responds to you the way you want to do it. This is from Allah's Bounty to you. When you slaughter a calf or a lamb, contemplate how Allah Glorified is He has granted you power over this living being and that you would not be able to do this unless Allah Glorified is He subjugated everything in existence for you. You slaughter such an animal in the Name of Allah Glorified is He.

Thus, there are many important matters and actions that occur to your mind, which you must embark upon in Allah's Name as recommended by good manners and faith. Some people are mistaken when they think that when they slaughter animals, they do harm them. No, an animal concludes its mission in life by being slaughtered since it is created and subjugated for such a purpose.

We previously stated that there is a wonder found concerning practices in this regard: when you try to kill an animal that Allah Glorified is He has not made permissible for man, such as a donkey, for example, by tying a rope around its neck, it chokes to death without stretching its neck forward. On the other hand, the animals that Allah Glorified is He has declared permissible to eat, such as buffaloes, lambs, or calves, stretch their necks forward when they are strangled to death. People in the Egyptian countryside say, ‘It is seeking the lawful (halal) action’, i.e. to be slaughtered. So, having an animal slaughtered is not considered transgression against it because it is created for this mission. Thus, the meaning of ‘In the Name of Allah’ is that I dare not do such an act unless it is within the framework of the Name of Allah Glorified is He Who has allowed me to do so.

(1) Narrated by `Abd Al-Qadir Ar-Rahawi in Al-Arba`in from Abu Hurayra

Afterwards, The True Lord Glorified is He says to the believers to this effect, ‘Do not listen to what the disbelievers say’ through this question for denial, ‘Why should you not eat such animals…’ (al-An‘am: 119) which means: what prevents you from eating the animals which Allah’s Name has been pronounced over when He has already fully explained what He has forbidden upon you. Thus, what Allah’s Name has been pronounced over is not included in what is prohibited by Allah Glorified is He. Our Lord is the One Who declares things permissible or impermissible. Some might say, ‘Why has Allah Glorified is He created things that He has declared impermissible for us?’ We answer as follows: Whoever thinks this way is oblivious of the fact that not every animal is created to be eaten. Every animal has a mission; when you slaughter an impermissible animal, you thus transgress its mission. The pig, for example, has been declared unlawful by our Lord Glorified is He because when you slaughter it, you violate its mission. This animal is created to collect dirt not easily seen by the naked eye; when you slaughter it, you take it away from its original job. The True Lord Glorified is He is the One Who has created man and He knows best what kind of nourishment suitable for him as far as energy and good health is concerned. So, Allah Glorified is He has declared some things permissible and others impermissible for us. Beware of saying: Allah Glorified is He only forbids the things that are harmful because He wants us to decently comply with the Commands of ‘do and not do’. This is why the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: ‘For the wrongdoings done by the Jews, We forbade them certain good things that had been permitted to them before....’ (an-Nisa’: 160)

In everyday life, do you say that those who harshly train our sons in the army are cruel to them? No, they actually prepare them to undertake difficult tasks and teach them good manners, obedience, and discipline. Likewise, The True Lord Glorified is He has permitted what He wants and has forbidden what He wills so that the universe can be kept in order with the Power of the Most Wise, the All-Capable. Allah Glorified is He has forbidden things such as drugs which we sometimes use to treat some illnesses. Thus, if a healthy person unjustifiably uses them, they will destroy their body and eliminate their health. If this person uses them afterwards for the sake of treatment, they will not have the desired effect. That is why we find doctors, before carrying out delicate surgeries, ask patients whether they have taken drugs, to determine anaesthetics appropriate for them.

Astonishingly enough, Allah Glorified is He has forbidden us from using such things that affect our minds, while we may need them at the time of suffering and illness.

Then, The True Lord Glorified is He has linked all rulings of halal and haram (lawful and unlawful things) to '...if you believe in His revelations...' which can be explained as follows: 'O you who have believed in Allah, the Most Wise Lord Who only commands you for your benefit, refrain from such actions'. If you embark upon anything that Allah Glorified is He has permitted for you, then embark upon it in the Name of Allah Glorified is He. Allah Glorified is He has basically taught us some of His Names That He has sent down in His Book (the Quran) and the Sunnah of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, while He has taught some of His servants other Names and kept other Names for Himself as unseen knowledge. These Names are Allah's Attributes of Perfection that only concerns Him. If we want to call to mind the Name that gathers all these Attributes of Perfection, we say: 'In the Name of Allah'. When scholars discussed the issue of forbidden and permitted things, some of them said, 'The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says at the beginning of the chapter of al-Ma`ida: 'You are forbidden to eat dead animals [flesh]…' (al-Ma'ida: 3). And Here in the chapter of al-An`am Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says: '...when Allah has already fully explained what He has forbidden you...' (al-An'am: 119).

Scholars who showed more interest said that the chapter of al-Ma`ida is Medinan which means that it was sent down in Medina after the Meccan chapters; the chapter of al-An`am is Meccan. Does the True Lord Glorified is He say in this Meccan chapter '...Allah has already fully explained what He has forbidden you…' in Medinan chapters? Some scholars of inspired vision said that '…Allah has already fully explained…' in the chapter of al-Ma`ida as well as in this Meccan chapter of al-An`am when He says, '[Prophet Muhammad], say, "In all that has been revealed to me, I find nothing forbidden for people to eat, except for carrion [dead animals], flowing blood, pig's meat—it is loathsome—or a sinful offering over which any name other than Allah has been invoked." But if someone is forced by hunger, rather than desire or excess, then Allah is Most Forgiving and Most Merciful.' (al-An'am: 145)

One of those who are hell-bent on making objections or one of the opponents of Islam might ask why this verse has not mentioned all the impermissible things. We answer that the Quran includes the guidelines of the religion, while the Sunnah has the details: '...so accept whatever the Messenger [Muhammad] gives you, and abstain from whatever he forbids you....' (al-Hashr: 7)

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says here: '...when Allah has already fully explained what He has forbidden upon you, except when forced by hunger....' (al-An'am: 119)

Compulsion is a state in which you are forced to resort to unlawful means. In such a condition, man is compelled to depend on impermissible things, just as when a person searches for anything to eat to stay alive; if he cannot find anything lawful, he is under compulsion. We advise such a person, saying, 'take from that which Allah has not permitted for you according to your dire need; so, eat from carrion if necessary and do not satisfy your appetite.

The True Lord Glorified is He says: '...but if any of you is forced by hunger to eat forbidden food....' (al-Ma'ida: 3) When people are forced to eat forbidden food, this means that they are facing a famine. You resort to impermissible means and alternatives when you are forced or compelled. Allah Glorified is He gives man permission to consume what is forbidden if they are under compulsion as in '...except when forced by hunger? But many lead others astray by their desires, without any true knowledge....' (al-An'am: 119) Those who lead others astray by their desires without any true knowledge are those who want to cast doubt in the hearts of Muslims. The meaning of leading others astray by desires means that one is fully aware of a given issue, but his passions drive him away from what the True Lord wants people to do concerning this issue. Thus, the True Lord Glorified is He describes His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him: 'He does not speak from his own desire.' (an-Najm: 3)

When the True Lord says: '...But many lead others astray by their desires, without any true knowledge...' (al-An'am: 119), it means that there is a form of leading astray without desires; this is when man cannot get to reality because he does not know how to reach it. Meanwhile, leading astray with desires means that you learn reality quite well but you turn away from it.

'...But many lead others astray by their desires, without any true knowledge....' (al-An'am: 119) When you see the phrase '...by their desires...' coming after '... lead others astray...', you may say that there can be a form of leading astray without knowledge which is not blameworthy because the person in question does not know the ruling related to a given issue. This is different from the person who goes astray while he knows the ruling; this means that he goes astray by his desires. When we understand this matter this way, misunderstanding has no room. The phrase: '...without any true knowledge...' means that the people in question here, do not have knowledge of this given issue and its rulings. The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He concludes this verse by saying: '...your Lord knows best who oversteps the limits.' (al-An'am: 119)

Allah Glorified is He shows us in many verses of the Glorious Quran that some of His Creation can discern the ones who are rightly guided and those who are not rightly guided. However, many people cannot distinguish the rightly guided people from the wrongly guided people. After all, Allah Glorified is He knows best.

After that, The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَذَرُوا۟ ظَـٰهِرَ ٱلْإِثْمِ وَبَاطِنَهُۥٓ ۚ إِنَّ ٱلَّذِينَ يَكْسِبُونَ
ٱلْإِثْمَ سَيُجْزَوْنَ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَقْتَرِفُونَ ﴿١٢٠﴾

Avoid committing sin, whether openly or in secret, for those who commit sin will be repaid for what they do [120] (The Quran, al-An'am: 120)

This is the Heavenly Legislation which provides the society with self-protection, so that one may not see violations committed by others. If you see violations committed by some people, be sure that these are some evident examples and do not constitute all instances of corruption in the society. The corruption of the society is caused by many motives of that we might not be aware. There are motives instilled in the deepest part of the human soul that controls desires. Before an outward sin is committed, there is surely an inward sin. This means that an inward sin precedes an outward one. All human laws protect us from outward sins, whereas the religion of Heaven protects us from the corruption of both open and secret sins.

The True Lord Glorified is He shows us the difference between human legislation and Allah's legislation. He observes your feelings, emotions, and secrets; so beware of committing inward sins. It is not enough to protect yourself from laws reaching you because the biggest thing a law can do is to prevent people from committing crimes in public. The difference between the Legislation of Heaven and the legislation of Earth is that the latter protects people from open sins, while the former protects people from both open sins and secret sins, which are the most dangerous.

Some of the people who are accustomed to doing evil find it so easy to do evil deeds; a daily routine.

The verb 'commit' in this verse is the translation of the Arabic verb kasab which is originally related to good deeds and easier when uttered in comparison with another Arabic verb of the same root iktisab which is used for evil deeds. Doing things that are permissible is a natural practice by all human faculties. When someone wants, for example, to buy something at a shop, all they need to do is to go to that shop in broad daylight and buy that thing. Meanwhile, when someone wants to steal a shop, they must make other abnormal arrangements.

However, such abnormal practices could become natural after getting accustomed to them and gaining experience, thus turning to easy jobs compatible with the verb kasab which indicates, per Arabic, that you get profits in addition to your capital. When man does good deeds, he grants himself the essentials of life and he gets the rewards of the Hereafter as extra. This is the highest yield.

The True Lord Glorified is He wants us during our endeavours in life, to realise the benefits we need for ourselves. But we may be harmed when doing so. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He protects the believers by the religion’s way of life so that they can distinguish between that what fulfils them their present goal as well as permanent benefits with no harm on one hand, and what brings them instant benefits, disastrous consequences and real suffering on the other. We find around us that those who do evil and follow their desires, get temporary benefits for themselves, just like a student who does not care for his lessons and sleeps most of the time or goes out wandering in the streets. Outwardly, such a student finds some comfort for himself; in fact, he heads towards failure and regret. In contrast, a hardworking, diligent student fulfils himself great everlasting benefits.

‘...for those who commit sin will be repaid for what they do.’ (al-An‘am: 120). In this worldly life, we find humans reward and punish each other per their power, but what about the moment we stand before Allah Glorified is He the All Knowing of open and secret sins? Thus, what safeguards the society is the Legislation of Heaven. The religion’s way of life not only protects man from dangers but also sets laws for man’s movement on earth.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He then comes back to the issue of food, saying:

وَلَا تَأۡكُلُواْ مِمَّا لَمۡ يُذۡكَرِ ٱسۡمُ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيۡهِ وَإِنَّهُۥ لَفِسۡقٞۗ وَإِنَّ ٱلشَّيَٰطِينَ
لَيُوحُونَ إِلَىٰٓ أَوۡلِيَآئِهِمۡ لِيُجَٰدِلُوكُمۡۖ وَإِنۡ أَطَعۡتُمُوهُمۡ إِنَّكُمۡ لَمُشۡرِكُونَ ١٢١

And do not eat anything over which God’s name has not been pronounced, for that is breaking the law. The evil ones incite their followers to argue with you: if you listen to them, you too will become idolaters [121] (The Quran, al-An’am: 121)

Here, The True Lord Glorified is He calls what Allah’s Name has not been mentioned over fisq (sinful offering) which is explained in the following verse of the same chapter: '[Prophet Muhammad], say, "In all that has been revealed to me, I find nothing forbidden for people to eat, except for carrion [dead animals], flowing blood, pig's meat—it is loathsome—or a sinful offering over which any name other than Allah has been invoked." But if someone is forced by hunger, rather than desire or excess, then Allah is Most Forgiving and Most Merciful.' (al-An'am: 145)

Thus, the word 'fisq' (sinful offering) is conjoined to carrion, flowing blood and pig's meat, but Allah Glorified is He separates between the second conjunct (ma`tuf in Arabic), which is fisq and the first conjunct (ma`tuf alaih in Arabic) with a description that is specific to the first conjunct. This description is 'being loathsome' (rijs); thus these three impermissible things take the description of (rijs) and conjoined to them is that which is slaughtered and other than Allah's Name is pronounced over it, such as idols. Here, rijs and fisq have been brought together.

The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says: '…The evil ones incite their followers to argue with you...' (al-An'am: 121). Allah Glorified is He intends to show us that a good nature that does not follow whims will recognize the reality of goodness. That is why we find that those who incite each other to do evil and teach one another in secret play the role of Satan in regards to whispering and instigation for the sake of people's disobedience and disbelief. Good nature rejects such deviant dispositions. When a man commits a grave offence, he deceives others and takes an indirect course to commit such an offence; he may whisper to someone else and direct them towards corruption. Thus, such a person assumes the position of devils who whisper secretly to their followers, while people of good nature, who control their whims and desires, reject and combat evil things. Thus, when a devil from amongst the mankind or jinn, wants to make people's deeds fair seeming, he does not declare it directly; rather, he uses deceitful, crooked discourse.

'...The evil ones incite their followers to argue with you: if you listen to them, you too will become idolaters.' (al-An'am: 121) Here, there is an indication to the statement voiced by idolaters: 'You eat what you have killed and not eat what Allah has killed, while it would be better for you to eat what Allah has killed'.

If ‘...you listen to them, you too will become idolaters.’ (al-An‘am: 121) It is as if merely obeying these polytheists is a type of idolatry because worship means that a worshipper obeys and carries out the commands and prohibitions of that which he worships. Thus, if you receive a command from one other than Allah Glorified is He you are driven away from His True Religion because of having associated partners with Him.

After that, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted says:

أَوَمَن كَانَ مَيۡتٗا فَأَحۡيَيۡنَٰهُ وَجَعَلۡنَا لَهُۥ نُورٗا يَمۡشِي بِهِۦ فِي ٱلنَّاسِ كَمَن مَّثَلُهُۥ فِي
ٱلظُّلُمَٰتِ لَيۡسَ بِخَارِجٖ مِّنۡهَاۚ كَذَٰلِكَ زُيِّنَ لِلۡكَٰفِرِينَ مَا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ﴿١٢٢﴾

Is a dead person brought back to life by Us, and given light with which to walk among people, comparable to someone trapped in deep darkness who cannot escape? In this way the evil deeds of the disbelievers are made to seem alluring to them [122] (The Quran, al-An’am: 122)

The True Lord Glorified is He as we have earlier learned, presents some issues in the form of questions, not statements because Allah is fully aware that when He presents you a question, you will find only one answer after long thought; this answer is that what the True Lord Glorified is He wants. Thus, the Quran sometimes uses statements, and in other times it uses affirmative or negative questions. The most effective of these styles is that of a negative question. When Allah Glorified is He presents a given issue, He states that the only way you should look at this issue is what the True Lord Glorified is He wants since He is the All-Knower of what you do.

In this glorious verse, we find death and life and darkness and light. What is life? Life is the existence of beings in a state that allows them to carry out their missions; and so long as a being is in a state enabling it to achieve its task, then it sustains life. The most elevated level of life is that which combines motion, senses, and intellect. All these components are found in man. Concerning animals, they have motion and senses, but not intellect; however, they have natural instincts that may be sometimes stronger than man’s instincts. Man is governed by instincts in some aspects and by choice in others. You have nothing to do regarding instincts, while you have the say in the sphere of choice. You can either do or not do.

Thus, life means that a being is in a state that qualifies it to fulfil its mission. Hence, there is life in man, plants, and inanimate objects; there is even life in life itself. As science advances, it proves that there are forms of life in so many things that we have thought had no life, even if the nature of some things is sometimes changed due to chemical interactions. For example, an animal has life; but after we slaughter and eat it, and throw away the bones, it has another kind of life. These inanimate bones still maintain life until they break into pieces and go smashed.

In the country, we used to milk animals and keep milk in clay vessels put in storehouses. Milk stayed in those storehouses for a week, and each day it got sweeter. The sweetness of milk increased every day. Then, a farmer's wife brought the remaining cream to make cheese and butter of wonderful taste; but after boiling milk, we found that it had gone off few hours later. This means that when you put milk in clay vessels in storehouses, you put it with the life it contains, whereas when you boil it, you kill its very life. Hence, if you do not put it in a fridge, it will inevitably rot. Rotting here denotes that milk no longer has its original mission. Rather, it changes to another life due to bacteria and other factors. Destruction eventually eliminates all forms of life, as stated by The True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He: '...Everything will perish except His Face....' (al-Qasas: 88)

Thus, do not look at dead things as having no life; they rather move to another life. 'Is a dead person brought back to life by Us, and given light with which to walk among people....' (al-An'am: 122) It is as if man has life of his own, then The True Lord Glorified is He grants him light to walk with, as though life moves from one a state to another. Man needs a life and a light so that he can see things. In earlier times, people used to believe that man sees when rays are emitted from his eyes towards objects, until the Arab Muslim scientist Al-Hassan ibn Al-Haytham came along and said that this theory had not been quite correct as far as the laws of light are concerned. He said man sees because of rays emitting from objects towards the eyes, providing compelling evidence since man can see objects in the light, not in the dark.

If rays emitted from man's eyes, then he would be able to see things in both light and darkness. Hence, all theories of light were modified at the hand of this Muslim scientist to make the way open for photography and cinema. Again, we repeat that light is a means of making things visible.

The True Lord Glorified is He presents us evidence related to concrete issues in the universe to prove abstract issues. For instance, tangible light represented in the sun, the moon, a lamp or anything else, makes man see objects. Man's seeing of things means that he interacts with them in a very useful way. We use an electric lamp when the natural light of the sun is away. When we turn lamps on, we see things and interact with them without hitting them or being hit by them. Each one of us takes the light he needs. Thus, each one uses a means to illuminate dark places in the absence of the natural light as much as he can. When the sun appears again, we all switch our lamps off. This can be a proof from the tangible, sensory universe that Allah gives light to the values He likes. So, we must not produce values for ourselves since His values are existence.

Allah Glorified is He enlightens us that a valueless man is a moving dead one. The religion's way of life is sent to him to grant him a superior life. Allah Glorified is He addresses every man as if saying, 'Strive for the other eternal life that will never end; this only comes about by adhering to the religion's way of life'. Beware of thinking that life is only what you see in this existence because if this life was our ultimate objective, man would feel unhappy. If the worldly life was our final goal, this would necessitate that all our fortune, lifetimes and circumstances would be one and the same. Difference in all these aspects is evidence that this life is not the end because the end of equals must be equal.

Thus, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He says the truly decisive statement in this verse: '...the true life is in the Hereafter, if only they knew....' (al-'Ankabut: 64) This is the life that neither misses you nor you miss it; and its goodness neither escapes you and nor do you escape it. Again, the one who lives the first sensuous life, through Allah's breathing into the spirit to produce motion, is a moving dead person. 'Is a dead person brought back to life by Us, and given light with which to walk among people…" (al-An'am: 122) This means that Allah Glorified is He has given such a slave an eternal life and light with which he walks; he neither harms other beings nor is harmed by them.

In regards to those who say that life with its worldly meaning does not differ from life in the light of Faith, we answer that they are totally different and not equal at all, since The True Lord Glorified is He says: '...Believers, respond to Allah and His Messenger [Muhammad] when he calls you to that which gives you life....' (al-Anfal: 24)

Allah Glorified is He is addressing the believers; and since He is addressing them, then they are alive per the laws of this life. But Allah Glorified is He revealed to Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him the true religion that gives the believers a superior life. Note that the True Lord Glorified is He grants the first spirit which He breathes into the motionless body to move and feel this worldly life, to both the believers and the disbelievers. Meanwhile, there is another spirit that gives eternal life. Thus, Allah's way of life for His Creation is called a spirit: 'So We have revealed a spirit to you [Prophet Muhammad] by Our Command....' (ash-Shura: 52)

Religion's way of life leads to an eternal life. So, the True Lord's Statement: 'Is a dead person brought back to life by Us...' (al-An'am: 122) means, 'Is a lost person guided by Us...' or 'Is a disbeliever brought to Faith by Us…

'Per Arabic, there is the word (mayt) and the word (mayyit) with doubling the 'y' letter; both generally mean 'dead'. Mayyit refers to someone who is ordained to die, even though they are still alive. So, each one of us is mayyit even though we are alive. Meanwhile, mayt, is someone who has died and their spirit no longer exists. That is why the True Lord Glorified is He addresses His Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him by saying, 'Yet, verily, you are bound to die…' (az-Zumar: 30).

This means that you will eventually die (mayyit), even though you are alive now since each one of us continues to live until we take on the state of non-existence. The True Lord Glorified is He says, '...brought back to life by Us...' i.e. through the religion's way of life that gives such a man another life. This is why the Quran is called a spirit, the same word attributed to the angel who brought down the Quran (Gabriel).

‘...and given light with which to walk among people...’ (al-An‘am: 122). Why does he walk among people only, and not among everything? You can be careful concerning other things, while the word ‘people’ expresses uneasy interaction since they are subject to changing circumstances. The True Lord Glorified is He continues to say, ‘...comparable to someone trapped in deep darkness who cannot escape...’ (al-An‘am: 122). The answer for the question raised by this verse is no, i.e. the two persons are not equal. This question is similar to our saying, ‘Is a blind person like one who can see’? Natural disposition tells us no, just as it underscores that darkness and light are not equal, and shade and heat are not equal. In this verse, the True Lord Glorified is He trusts us with the answer because He knows that this question has only one answer which is what the True Lord Glorified is He wants.

The True Lord Glorified is He concludes this verse by saying: ‘...In this way the evil deeds of the disbelievers are made to seem alluring to them.’ (al-An‘am: 122). This means that the True Lord Glorified is He has left them liable to allurement and temptation. Allah Glorified is He has not protected them from committing mistakes while choosing because He has given man the freedom of choice, ‘...let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so...’ (al-Kahf: 29).

Then, the True Lord Glorified and Exalted is He says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ جَعَلۡنَا فِي كُلِّ قَرۡيَةٍ أَكَٰبِرَ مُجۡرِمِيهَا لِيَمۡكُرُواْ
فِيهَاۖ وَمَا يَمۡكُرُونَ إِلَّا بِأَنفُسِهِمۡ وَمَا يَشۡعُرُونَ ﴿١٢٣﴾

And so We have put chief evildoers in every city to perpetrate their schemes there – but they scheme only against themselves, without realizing it [123] (The Quran, al-An’am: 123)

‘And so...’ indicates that something is likened to something else; just as there are in Mecca enemies who oppose you, show hostility towards the Call of Allah Glorified is He and hinder the path of Truth, the same thing happened with the former messengers in the procession of Faith. There is nothing new. ‘And so...’ also means, ‘Just as We have placed in Mecca evildoers who mastermind plots against you, We did the same thing with the greatest criminals who conspired against their messengers in their cities. You are not anything new among Allah's Messengers. So, be steadfast like those messengers of firm resolve. You should even have more patience and exert more efforts because your mission is greater since you are a messenger to the entire world, while other messengers were sent only to their communities to purify them from definite evils at definite times. You have been sent for all nations, times and places until the establishment of the Hour. Thus, the hardships that confront you must match the universality of the Message Allah has chosen you for'.

'And so We have put chief evildoers in every city...' (al-An'am: 123). Per Arabic, ijram (evildoing or crime) is taken from the three radical letters in Arabic jim, ra` and mim, from which we get the words jarm, jurm and jareema which all have the meaning of cutting. Mujrimeeha (their 'evildoers') is the plural of mujrim or 'evildoer'; a mujrim is someone who has committed a jurm or a jareema (a crime). This means that such a person, by committing a crime, has cut himself off from his society. He thus separates himself for no one's benefit except his own, as if he is engaged in a process of social isolation. He has made everything for himself while making himself for none to realise his own desires, paying no heed to consequences.

Again, ijram means hasty engagement in the evils that make man isolate himself from the goodness of his society because he wants everything for himself. Since he wants everything for himself, he tends to be unfair and corrupt. Being corrupt, he wants all the members of the society to commit immoral acts so that none may be better than him '...to perpetrate their schemes there—but they scheme only against themselves, without realizing it.' (al-An'am: 123)

Per Arabic, makr (scheming) is related to the branches when they are wound around one another, in a way that you cannot learn if a certain leaf belongs to a definite branch because boughs and branches are intertwined and twisted closely together. A schemer behaves in a twisted manner because he wants to hide his plots lest anyone expose them. Acting this way, he proves to be of weak character. Only weak people are the ones who tend to conspire and scheme, while strong people never conspire or scheme; they rather meet others face to face. A poet says:

Though being weak, the cunning person always has a deceitful stance
This is the power of the powerless; he kills whenever he seizes the chance

When the weak person has the upper hand, he is convinced that he should finish off his enemy because if he passes up this chance, he will regret it for the rest of his life. However, when the strong person confronts his enemy, he has the choice to forgive him the first time. Whereas, when the enemy repeats the irresponsible action, he deserves to be faced. Thus, he who cunningly conspires against others is the weak person. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He refers to the evildoers of the most powerful people, i.e. those who demonstrate authorities over others and spread corruption where no one can stand against or to oppose them. There are many debatable verses related to this concern. It is astonishing that this controversy among Muslim scholars has not been settled yet, as each group sticks to its opinion. The verse under discussion goes together with Allah's saying: 'When We decide to destroy a town, We command those corrupted by wealth [to reform], but they persisted in their disobedience; Our sentence has passed, and We destroyed them utterly.' (al-Isra': 16)

This verse is somehow ambiguous; the matter which stirred up a debate among the scholars. Some of them wondered, 'How can Allah the Almighty command people to sinfulness'? They tried to find an interpretation so they said, 'Indeed, Allah compels and forces the most powerful people to be engaged in sinfulness'. The other team of scholars said, 'Definitely, Allah does not compel human beings to be engaged in sinfulness; but rather, His Command can likely be obeyed or disobeyed by the man who is legally responsible for his choice. Therefore, sinfulness is the consequence of the man's choice. In this way, the most powerful people disobey Allah's Command'; yet, Allah the Exalted says, 'Though all they are commanded to do is to worship Allah alone...' (al-Bayyina: 5).

On looking over the meaning of 'Allah's Command', it is represented in the working of the universe where no creation can disobey Allah. As He the Almighty says: 'When He wills something to be, His way is to say unto it, "Be" and it is done.' (Ya Sin: 82)

Allah's Command is also represented in the Heavenly Legislation whereas, the human beings to whom this Legislation is sent down have the choice to obey or disobey. Allah Glorified is He says about His Command to human beings to follow the Heavenly Legislation, ‘Though all they are commanded to do is to worship Allah alone...’ (al-Bayyina: 5).

Referring to this verse: ‘When We decide to destroy a town, We command those corrupted by wealth [to reform], but they persisted in their disobedience…’ (al-Isra’: 16), Allah the Exalted does not destroy a community oppressively. However, He guides the evildoers to the right path; if they obey they will be rewarded, but if they disobey they will be punished.

The scholars, who thought that sinfulness was a consequence of Allah’s Command overlooked that the Command came in the Quran in two types. The first is the subjugating irreversible command regarding the working of the universe where human beings are disallowed to contravene it. This subjugating command is mentioned in Allah’s saying: ‘When He wills something to be, His way is to say unto it, “Be” and it is done.’ (Ya Sin: 82) Since the world of eternity, Allah’s Command has been decreed and is ready to be manifested when He the Almighty wills. The second is the legislative command where man is legally responsible for his choice either to obey or disobey. Within this framework, we can understand Allah’s saying: ‘When We decide to destroy a town, We command those corrupted by wealth to reform, but they persisted in their disobedience; Our sentence has passed, and We destroyed them utterly.’ (al-Isra’: 16)

Thus, it is indisputable that Allah the Exalted does not command to sinfulness; He sets a doctrine to all human beings to sincerely worship Him alone. However, the most powerful people of this community refused to obey Allah’s Command and choose sinfulness and disobedience as a way of life. Hence, they deserve being destroyed by Allah’s punishment. If the command is regarding the working of the universe, then they are not legitimately responsible. As for the legislative command, then we should understand that there is a choice.

Using a cross-reference approach, this verse sheds light on the meaning of the other verse under discussion. In the first one, Allah Glorified is He shows that He decrees to destroy a community to whom He previously has shown the right path because the most powerful people of the community disobeyed

Allah's Command to lead the right path; thus, they are punished by being destroyed. Likewise, Allah the Almighty tells in this verse, '... but they scheme only against themselves, without realising it.' (al-An'am: 123), that the cunning person is scheming to attain his goal by twisted means because he is weak and is unable to accept truth. This truth is only perceived by a sound natural disposition, inversely to his falsified disposition which gets him bent out of shape. Such a cunning schemer aims to realise immediate benefit and temporary pleasure for himself, but if he calls to mind the punishment that will be in store as a result for himself and, likewise, for the others whom he has led astray, he will realise how evil comes about. As Allah the Exalted tells us about the schemers, '... but they scheme only against themselves, without realising it'; i.e. the schemer does not identify the repercussions because he does not weigh matters properly to achieve actual benefit.

Subsequently, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَإِذَا جَآءَتۡهُمۡ ءَايَةٞ قَالُواْ لَن نُّؤۡمِنَ حَتَّىٰ نُؤۡتَىٰ مِثۡلَ مَآ أُوتِيَ رُسُلُ
ٱللَّهِۘ ٱللَّهُ أَعۡلَمُ حَيۡثُ يَجۡعَلُ رِسَالَتَهُۥۗ سَيُصِيبُ ٱلَّذِينَ أَجۡرَمُواْ
صَغَارٌ عِندَ ٱللَّهِ وَعَذَابٞ شَدِيدُۢ بِمَا كَانُواْ يَمۡكُرُونَ ١٢٤

When a revelation is brought before them they say, 'We shall not believe unless we ourselves are given a revelation as God's messengers were.' But God knows best where to place His messages: humiliation before God and severe torment will befall the evildoers for their scheming [124] (The Quran, al-An'am: 124)

This verse shows that even the Quran, sent by Allah the Almighty with His Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to prove prophethood, did not persuade, or suffice the disbelievers; conversely, they demanded more miracles. As Allah says: 'They say, "We will not believe you [Muhammad] until you make a spring gush out of the ground for us or until you have a garden of date palms and vines, and make rivers pour through them or make the sky fall on us in pieces, as you claimed will happen; or bring Allah and the angels before us face to face…."' (al-Isra': 91-93) They do not believe; but rather, they want to be engaged in wrangling and arguing to avoid having faith. This is the cause behind their fabricated arguments against the call of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. They said that he is a magician separating between man and his wife, as well as between the child and his father. Moreover, they alleged that he uses his powers which he claimed to be from Allah to cause sedition within families. However, they do not bother themselves to think that if he had the power to bewitch others, so why has he not bewitched them as well? Have they had the power of choice to refuse being bewitched? Indeed, the evildoers were deceitful in this concern.

Subsequently, they said that Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is a poet. If other people said this allegation; it would be plausible from unacquainted strangers who did not know him, and who were, also, uninformed of the sciences of eloquence, rhetoric, and oration, whereas, it is known that the Arabs excelled in poetry, prose, oration and writing.

There were sporadic individual voices amongst them declaring, ‘By God, it is neither the speech of a soothsayer nor the speech of a poet’. For those individuals, Allah Glorified is He asks them to specifically utter their opinion away from the collective consciousness because the shared beliefs within society operate as a unifying force and confuse truth with falsehood. As Allah the Exalted says: ‘Say [Muhammad], “I advise you to do one thing only: stand before Allah, in pairs or singly, and think”: there is no sign of madness in your companion [the Prophet]...’ (Saba’: 46). Allah the Almighty tells them not to utter their opinion collectively, while they are agitated, and accusing the Messenger peace and blessings be upon him of being mad because their opinion would be based on the collective consciousness. However, they are required to take the witness stand before Allah in pairs; each pair observes the status of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him whether he is a soothsayer, a sorcerer or a poet. The truth is never lost between two people as they are discussing with each other, and the defeated party in the discussion will not be exposed in front of others. However, in a multi-party (three or four people) discussion, each defends himself, fearing of being defeated in front of the others. For this reason, Allah commands them to stand before Him in pairs or singly; each delivers his testimony about the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him on whether he is mad or not.

Indeed, the actions of the insane are neither coherent nor proper; whereas, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is indeed on an exalted standard of character. This is never the trait of an insane because the reactions of the insane are unexpected and incoherent. On the contrary, being on an exalted standard of character means that the character of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is governed by values; they are not a camouflage for deception, but rather, they are outstanding inherent traits. If someone is said to be bountiful, this means that the attribute of generosity is deeply rooted so that he willingly and easily makes sacrifices, especially when the trait is inherently possessed. On the level of semantically immaterial actions, it is called khuluq (trait); whereas, on the level of material actions, it is called 'behaviour'; i.e. mechanism showing the inherent traits through actions.

It is known that if someone wants to learn driving, he studies the mechanism that runs the car until he gains proficiency and can drive without difficulty. The same illustration is applicable to the character; when the man manifests actions with experience and proficiency, this simply shows that this is his inherent trait. Another example, in case that someone is a jurisprudent and is asked about the ruling for a specific matter; if he spends a long time examining the matter from all aspects, he is still an inexperienced beginner. However, when he is experienced and professed in jurisprudence, he has the trait of being an inherently expert jurisprudent who does not have to toil to find a ruling.

Hence, Allah Glorified is He tells them that before they accuse Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him of madness, they should sit in pairs or alone and to study his behaviour. They will find that his behaviour is, unlike the insane, governed by rationality and coherence. Likewise, it is impossible for Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be a poet because they would have known because they are acclaimed in poetry. Similarly, it is impossible for him to be a soothsayer because fortune-tellers may tamper with Allah's words for a paltry sum. Contrariwise, he is the one who declared his rejection of any power, wealth, or eminence. However, they argued, as Allah the Almighty says: 'When a revelation is brought before them they say, "We shall not believe unless we ourselves are given a divine) Message as Allah's messengers were…."' (al-An'am: 124)

Al-Walid ibn Al-Mughirah privately claimed prophethood within himself. He told himself that he had all the elements to be a messenger; in terms of age, he was older than Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him; in terms of wealth, he was affluently rich and as per ancestry, he had a strong lineage. He weighed the matter using the parameters of human beings, overlooking the concept that prophethood is completely different from leadership. Assuming that he exclusively had all these bounties, he did not have the traits and natural disposition of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him granted by Allah. Nevertheless, some of them kept on saying: ‘And they said, “Why was this Quran not sent down to a distinguished man, from either of the two cities?”’ (az-Zukhruf: 31)

The Quran responds: ‘Are they the ones who share out your Lord’s grace…’ (az-Zukhruf: 32). Allah explains that they share out His worldly graces, but they cannot share out His mercy. There is a difference between mercy in sending messages which is a divine gift and mercy in supplying nourishment and wealth which are Lordly gifts. In this life, if someone is distinguished by wealth, children, and gardens, there is nothing peculiar about him, but this is the working of the universe that needs complementary, rather than repetitive talents. If all mankind received all worldly graces such as lands and wealth, there would be no one to cultivate the land and no one to saddle the horses. This is the reason that Allah the Almighty has made wealth alternate; no one has them perpetually.

When people asked Abu Jahl about the message, he said, ‘We have competed with Banu Abd Manaf in honour; so that we became like racehorses’. They said, ‘There is a prophet amongst us to whom Allah gives revelation with whom we will not be pleased and we will never follow him until we get some revelation as he does’. The meaning of racehorses is that when horses were released in a race at the same time, they would drive a stick into the earth at the end of the race and whoever pulls it out of the earth, would achieve a great success. The stick of success is the objective of the competition so that no competitor can claim that the other one scarcely precedes him or something like that.

Allah the Exalted says, ‘When a divine message is brought before them…’ (al-An‘am: 124), and, in another instance, says, ‘We have brought you a divine message from your Lord.' (Ta Ha: 47) Thus, the divine message, due to its clarity, independence, identity and peculiarity is personified as a human being who is indeed coming and brought before them.

Afterwards, Allah the Almighty quotes the disbelievers' saying: '…They say, "We shall not believe unless we ourselves are given a divine message as Allah's messengers were…' (al-An'am: 124). Yet, Allah, in refutation of their words, warns them not to suggest this heresy because '...But Allah knows best where to place His messages...' (al-An'am: 124). The message only comes to spread goodness amongst people, but it refrains itself from taking benefit from this goodness. The Messenger peace and blessings be upon him has come to convey goodness for others, while he himself obtains nothing from it, whereas, ordinary people firstly want this to themselves and then leave some to the others. For example, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him before he died, ordered his family not to receive zakat (the obligatory charity) and to give any money left after his death as sadaqah (voluntary charity) to the needy. He peace and blessings be upon him did not get any benefit from the prophethood in this life, as well as, he did not want to leave any money to his family to inherit; this is the reason that he was entrusted with it. Likewise, Allah Glorified is He sets His goodness to be for all mankind; thus, the message is a responsibility rather than an achievement. The reward and compensation for Prophethood is not in this life, but it is in the Hereafter.

When Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him made the Pledge of Aqabah with the disbelievers, they said, 'Stipulate something for your benefit.' He said, 'I would be deprived of what you deprive yourselves of and you should do such-and-such.' They said to him, 'What is the reward for doing this? You have stipulated for yourself, so what about if we abide by this? What is the recompense?' The Messenger said, 'You would have paradise.' This is the recompense that the Prophet has; paradise for whoever chooses faith, and whoever wants something other than paradise has no place with the believers. Although, he gave them other glad tidings of many things afterwards; he did not tell them this at the beginning because some people amongst them did not see goodness in this life in adopting Islam; they died while Islam was in its infancy and its followers were few. That is why he offered them the reward guaranteed for all of them. He peace and blessings be upon him was teaching them that the pleasures of this life are of less value to be a reward for righteous action. The righteous action is duly rewarded by an eternal dedicated recompense.

Reflecting on their saying, '…We shall not believe…' (al-An'am: 124), it is an insisting statement showing that they will not believe even in the future. They have made up a decision about the future. Allah disgraced them; some died as disbelievers and others become believers after the beginning of the Islamic reign in Mecca. It is amazing that the expression they are articulating is out of agitation; it does not fit with their disbelief. They said, 'We shall not believe unless we ourselves are given a divine message as Allah's messengers were…"' (al-An'am: 124). Their saying expresses their bitter opposition associated with stupidity; as they believe in Allah's messengers and that Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the seal of the prophets. If they recognise that Allah has selected messengers, how can they attempt to determine Allah's will regarding whom He chooses?

Although Allah's messengers did have universal, tangible, visible, and credibly timed miracles, they were not everlasting. For example, whoever witnessed the miracle of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him striking the sea with his staff causing it to split apart, would never deny this universal miracle, so long as he experienced it. However, whoever did not witness the miracle, but rather, heard it as a transmitted piece of information, would notice that the miracle was timed as being suitable to the limited message of Musa (Moses) peace be upon him to the children of Israel. Likewise, the miracle of `Isa (Jesus) peace be upon him when he cured the blind and the leper with Allah's permission was also limited to a certain time. These miracles worked for a limited time and for a particular people. However, Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him came with the miraculous unlimited message that would remain everlasting until the Day of Resurrection. Hence, miracles are of two kinds; the tangible which targets only particular people witnessing this unrepeated timed matter. On the other hand, the intangible unlimited miracle of Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him which perpetually remain until the Hour of Resurrection. This is the reason that made the miracle intangible, conceptual, and perpetual regardless of various nations or times. Nevertheless, they wanted a tangible miracle and another conceptual to easily deny either of them. Putting an end to the matter, Allah the Exalted says, '…But Allah knows best where to place His messages….' (al-An'am: 124)

Allah's words 'knows best' indicate that He the Almighty may enable some of His creation to know the reason of choosing Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him to be a messenger. As per the believers of the call of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him they did not wait for a miracle. They believed him at once because they used to recognise him as the ever truthful and trustworthy in worldly accounts, so he ought to be trusted with the news from the Heavens. Hearing about the message, Abu Bakr Allah be pleased with him believed this at once, saying, 'You have spoken the truth'; as well as the Mother of the Believers, Khadija Allah be pleased with her who immediately believed Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him as he spoke of signs of prophethood. Her belief was based on the anticipated early stages of his life, where she set the first example on the jurisprudential derivation in Islam. Before jurisprudence (fiqh) was known in its modern terminological sense, Khadija Allah be pleased with her originated this science and indicated that derivations of proofs depend on sound, natural, dispassionate and intellectual disposition, which can investigate the matter and inevitably be guided. As Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him told her that he feared that he had been afflicted by some illness, or by some jinn, as she contested this, since he maintained the ties of kinship, helped, and supported all people against calamities of life. She said to him, 'By Allah, He will never disgracefully desert you.'

Thus, she anticipated that Allah will never forsake him because of his outstanding merits and the sublime human virtues appeared, before the heavenly message came, due to his sound natural disposition. This first jurisprudential derivation in Islam was the reason of Allah's choice to Khadija Allah be pleased with her to be the first wife of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. During this period, not only did he need a supportive wife, but also a mature woman, having a comprehensive sanity to be able to perceive the signs of prophethood, to bring him food when he went to the cave and to accompany him to Waraqa ibn Nawfal. But for his first wife Khadija, no younger woman could have given the first model of jurisprudential derivation in Islam.

As Allah says, '…But Allah knows best where to place His messages…' (al-An'am: 124); yet, they persisted in overlooking the truth even though it made them conclude that he had the qualities of a messenger. Subsequently, Allah says: '... humiliation before Allah and severe torment will befall the evildoers…' (al-An'am: 124). In this verse, there is a transitional breach in the reference; beforehand, Allah refers to them as the most powerful people as they called themselves, whereas, He currently mentions them as evildoers who will encounter humiliation. The meaning of humiliation is not only the shame publicly brought upon them by others; but rather, it is the humiliation and shame from within each one of them such that each of them feels humiliated in front of himself. Thus, this humiliation that befalls man within himself and comes from Allah will never cease because there is no other power that can put an end to Allah's Preordainment. Hence, constant unavoidable humiliation will befall them, in addition to being afflicted with severe torment, even though they are the most powerful people.

Why is the torment characterised by being severe? It is previously said that torment is occasionally described as 'grievous', sometimes as 'shameful' and other times as 'severe'. Man has a physical structure and abstract self; the shameful torment is that which bears humiliation to the self; however, the grievous torment is that which causes pain to one's physical structure. In terms of physical structure, he is afflicted with torment, whereas, in terms of psychological abstraction, he is afflicted with humiliation. There are people who experience pain but cannot be humiliated; they bear the hardship with fortitude and the more they are subjected to humiliation, the more they regard themselves as noble for having endurance. In this concern, a poet said,

I show my endurance to those who celebrate at my misfortune
Indeed, with the passing of time, I will not become insubstantial

This is the reason that Allah's Preordainment decrees torment of two types; the first type causes pain to the physical structure and the second type bears humiliation to the abstract self. This is the humiliation and the severe unbearable punishment which Allah does not set upon the evildoers haphazardly, but rather due to their cunning schemes. He the Almighty says, '...We did not wrong them; yet, they persistently wronged themselves.' (an-Nahl: 118)

Allah Glorified is He clarifies that He does not enforce, with His Preordainment, any of His creation in matters of choice within the scope of legal responsibility. He the Almighty establishes a framework of this issue in the verse, ‘... “Let those who wish to believe in it do so, and let those who wish to reject it do so...”’ (al-Kahf: 29). Thus, Allah the Almighty makes it clear in this verse, ‘...humiliation before Allah and severe torment will befall the evildoers…’ (al-An‘am: 124). As for the matter of legal responsibility, He does not punish them compellingly; but rather with consideration for the evil deeds resulting from their own choice. Hence, the punishment and the humiliation were a reward for their scheming.

Sequentially, Allah the Exalted mentions an issue causing justificatory argument among some people who have sinned. They claim that this transgression against themselves is subject to Allah’s will. They quoted this verse to support their viewpoint:

فَمَن يُرِدِ ٱللَّهُ أَن يَهۡدِيَهُۥ يَشۡرَحۡ صَدۡرَهُۥ لِلۡإِسۡلَٰمِۖ وَمَن يُرِدۡ أَن يُضِلَّهُۥ
يَجۡعَلۡ صَدۡرَهُۥ ضَيِّقًا حَرَجٗا كَأَنَّمَا يَصَّعَّدُ فِي ٱلسَّمَآءِۚ
كَذَٰلِكَ يَجۡعَلُ ٱللَّهُ ٱلرِّجۡسَ عَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ لَا يُؤۡمِنُونَ ١٢٥

When God wishes to guide someone, He opens their breast to islam; when He wishes to lead them astray, He closes and constricts their breast as if they were climbing up to the skies. That is how God makes the foulness of those who do not believe rebound against them [125] (The Quran, al-An’am: 125)

Someone may ask that if Allah wills to open a man’s heart to grasp Islam, so what about Allah’s guidance concerning the sins of those who are legally responsible?

In response to this, it should be notified that guidance has two meanings. The first meaning is that of indicating direction to the right path; the matter which is desired and required, even for the disbeliever. Thus, Allah’s guidance for the disbeliever implies showing him the right path. The other type of guidance is that of support presented to the believers who deserve Allah’s assistance to lessen the burdens of the commandments, make them passionately abide by all commands and intensely detest and avoid all prohibitions.

Some of the righteous people say, ‘O Allah, I fear that you will not reward me for my obedience because I have come to passionately demand it’. The righteous person no longer sees any burden in fulfilling commandments. Thus, he is afraid because he expects to encounter some hardships in fulfilling commandments. Such persons have become accustomed to worship and obedience in a reciprocal attractive relation. He took Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him a role model. As Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him noticed that people performed prayers in an inactive laziness when they were called to it, as he ordered Bilal Allah be pleased with him at the time of prayer (to call for it), ‘O Bilal! Call for the prayer, provide relief to our souls with prayer.’(1)

Paradoxically, this concept of comfort is contrary to what some people say nowadays when they perform the prayer, ‘Let us hurry up and get this over with’; they perform it as if it is a burden, whereas, when something beyond the scope of reason afflicts those who have become used to comfort their souls with prayer, they will perform further prayers to draw nearer to Allah by way of optional extra acts of worship. This is the reason that Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him rose for prayer whenever something inflected him; i.e. something that humans were incapable of dealing with. Thus, rising for prayer represents a logical matter in times of distress. Similarly, on childhood, we used to go to our parents to solve some problems beyond our means; surely, to Allah ascribed the utmost example of perfection.

Therefore, ardently sticking to the commandment shows that the person has tasted the sweetness of obedience. It may be possibly hard on him because it detaches him at first from what he was habitually accustomed to. By then, he says, ‘Indeed, Allah causes this hardship to deserve an excellent reward’. As he comes to ardently desire the prayer as it becomes beloved to him. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him gave an example when he said, ‘None of you [truly] believes until his desires are subservient to that which I have brought,’(2) i.e. his desires come in accordance with Allah’s commandments, and then he is indeed a sound believer.

(1) Related in Sunan Abi Dawud

(2) Narrated by An-Nawawi

If the person is induced by the guidance of indication to the right path and he believes in Allah Glorified is He then He the Almighty will ease his ardently fulfilling of commandments. Thereupon, the people of righteousness conceive that He the Exalted deserves to be prayed for more than five obligatory times a day, as well as more than the stipulated 2.5%-quota-share of zakat (obligatory charity) because He is the Giver of everything. This is the ardent fulfilment of the commands in Allah's verse, 'Whomsoever Allah wills to guide, He opens his heart to Islam…' (al-An'am: 125).

This verse means that He the Almighty shows His right path to all human beings, but He will ease the fulfilment of the commandments for those who are induced by the guidance and believe in Him, as Allah says, 'But Allah gives more guidance to those who are guided, and good deeds of lasting merit are best and most rewarding in your Lord's sight.' (al-'Ankabut: 76)

This is the guidance of support and assistance where there is a difference between 'being Muslim' and 'having faith'. Faith does not only involve creed; but also, it incurs the self with the requirements of faith. Accordingly, the most prominent figures of Quraysh refused to declare that there is no god but Allah because they knew that these were not mere words uttered, but rather, they entailed fulfilling the requirements of faith that would embarrass them by inconvenient subsequent obligations and prohibitions! The commandment would drive them to fulfil difficult obligations and evade desirable prohibitions. To that end, Allah says, 'Whomsoever Allah wills to guide, He opens his heart to Islam…' (al-An'am: 125).

Allah Glorified is He opens man's heart to Islam after admitting Allah's monotheism. Afterwards, he complies with the commandments because his faith entails compliance with the commandments. Whoever takes the first guidance and believes in His Lord, Allah opens man's heart to Islam and makes his actions easier as a reward for his faith. As Allah says, 'Have we not opened up your heart?' (ash-Sharh: 1)

The verse shows that Allah rewards the believer with this because he persists with the truth; thus, he seeks to know the required commandments. As Allah finds that he is exceptionally prepared to accept the commandments, as He the Almighty makes them easier by making him desire them. He may willingly restrain himself with more requirements beyond Allah's Commandments to seek to be among the superior people of divine manifestation who have affection and desire with Allah. He considers his decreed acts of worship insufficient as compared to Allah's bounties; thus, he increases his acts of obedience as per the Qudsi Hadith, 'Whosoever shows enmity to a friend of Mine, then I have declared war against him. And My servant does not draw near to Me with anything more loved to Me than the religious duties I have obligated upon him. And My servant continues to draw near to me with supererogatory deeds until I Love him. When I Love him, I am his hearing with which he hears, and his sight with which he sees, and his hand with which he strikes, and his foot with which he walks.'(1) Allah speaks about extra acts that go beyond the commanded requirements from the stipulated prayer, obligatory charity, fasting, and pilgrimage.

Therefore, the verse, 'Whomsoever Allah wills to guide, He opens his heart to Islam…' (al-An'am: 125) means that He the Almighty facilitates and eases matters on those who ardently desire these acts of worship and embarks on them with submissiveness. These acts are thought to be laborious because of the persistence of some people with them. Thus, Allah Glorified is He gives examples in His creation; for instance, wealth is eagerly beloved by humans especially when it comes by a legislative and permitted way through toil and hard work. Therefore, Allah fills the righteous' heart with compassion to give and spend from this beloved bounty.

Indeed, the believer donates to the needy because the needy is a bridge for the giver to attain a reward from Allah. Thus, the believer is grateful to the needy who carries his provision to the Hereafter without any charge; i.e. the needy gives him causes to be recompensed in the Hereafter for his bounties. When a Muslim came to Ali Allah be pleased with him asking him, 'How can I know whether I am one of the people seeking for the pleasures of this worldly life or the people seeking for the rewards in the Hereafter?' Ali Allah be pleased with him set a standardised measure for assessing faith of every believer. He said to the man, 'Upon receiving two kinds of people; a needy asking for a donation, and a giver coming to offer you something, if you are courteous towards the giver then you are from the people seeking for the pleasures of this worldly life. If you are courteous towards the needy then you are from the people seeking for the rewards in the Hereafter; because the man loves the one who grants him what he loves.’

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari

Therefore, this verse under discussion means that Allah Glorified is He makes the laborious aspects of the commandment easier for the believer such that there is no hardship. After that he is elevated to another rank in which he ardently desires the commandment and Allah guides him to Paradise because there is guidance to the right path and guidance to the reward for choosing the path. To this end, the Quran says about those who have gone astray, ‘Allah will not forgive those who have disbelieved and do evil, nor will He guide them to any path except that of Hell….’ (an-Nisa’: 168-169)

Thus, there is guidance to action and another to reward, as Allah says, ‘...That is the way, Allah could have defeated them Himself if He had willed, but His purpose is to test some of you by means of others. He will not let the deeds of those who are killed for His cause come to nothing. He will guide them in the hereafter as well and put them into a good state. He will admit them into Paradise He has already made known to them.’ (Muhammad: 4-6)

Somebody may ask: How does Allah guide a human being who has been killed? Is there any legal responsibility after being killed? It is the guidance of reward as per Allah’s saying, ‘He will guide them in the hereafter as well and put them into a good state. He will admit them into Paradise He has already made known to them.’ (Muhammad: 5-6) Whoever perseveres in doing righteous actions, Allah rewards him with paradise, whereas, whoever does evil actions, Allah punishes him in the worldly life and the Hereafter, as per Allah’s saying, ‘…And whomsoever He wills to send astray, He makes his chest tightened and constricted as if he is climbing up the skies. That is how Allah makes the foulness of those who do not believe rebound against them.’ (al-An‘am: 125) Someone may wonder: Is this considered an oppressive behaviour from Allah towards His creation? Certainly, this is not the case because Allah has called all people to have faith, yet only some of them do and become worthy of divine manifestations; whereas, others disbelieve and become worthy of heavy-heartedness. The meaning of ‘tight’ is that something is too small to carry out its function. When a family says that its house has become tight for itself, this means that the two-room house was relatively spacious in the beginning for the two spouses; whereas, it became tight after they had several children. Certainly, no change has taken place to the surface area of the house, but when the number of individuals increased, they felt that the house had become too small or tight.

There are various derivatives from the term ‘tight’ used in the Quran in various ways; ‘tight’, ‘tightened’ and ‘being tightened’. Allah says, ‘... Do not be distressed (have tight chests) by their scheming’ (an-Nahl: 127). Additionally, there is the word ‘tightened’ used in the verse under discussion. Moreover, the third term appears in Allah’s saying, ‘Is it, then, conceivable [O Prophet] that you are going to abandon any part of what is being revealed to you because the deniers of the truth dislike it, and because your chest is being tightened....’ (Hud: 12)

It is known that the chest is the place where the two fundamental organs; the heart and the lungs, are located, where life without them cannot go on. Concerning the intestines, they might slow down or partially stop, while man can survive without food for a long time depending on his own storage of fats or flesh. Likewise, he can survive for a shorter time without water; however, he cannot survive without air for more than a few minutes. No human being can leave off inhaling and exhaling.

As previously mentioned, Allah may allow some people to have the right to control other people’s need of food, and allow fewer people to control other people’s need of water, but He does not allow anyone to control other’s right to breathe. It is well known that pleasure and anger are subject to human vicissitudes; thus, if someone is angry with another and he owns his air, he can withhold it from him and the other person will die before their differences can be resolved. For this reason, Allah has never allowed any of His creation to own air.

Therefore, the entire matter is explained in His saying, ‘…He makes his chest tightened and constricted…’ (al-An‘am: 125). It is known that the chest is the place where lung takes in oxygen and take out carbon dioxide. When a man is afflicted with a cold, he has a difficulty breathing, as if his chest has become smaller and more tightened, i.e. there is not enough air getting in to make the lungs operate. The doctors diagnose this as being a case where the patient wants to inhale his need of oxygen and thus he gasps for breath because the chest has become more constricted. Likewise, when man ascends a staircase, he also gasps for air because the ascent requires effort to resist the earth's gravitational force that pulls man downwards. Whoever ascends upwards needs strength to move higher and resist gravity. On the contrary, descending the staircase is easy because coming down goes with gravity. If the chest becomes constricted, it means that the space within the chest is not able to inhale enough air that suffices the body. That is why it is said that 'this person has a tight chest'.

In the currently discussed verse, 'constricted' means that the one is prevented from doing something, as if you say, 'I prevented someone from doing something', i.e. I constricted and hindered him from carrying out this work.

Allah Glorified is He says, '…As if he is climbing up the skies….' (al-An'am: 125) 'Climbing up' means to move the entire body in that direction with exhaustion. That overtiredness caused on climbing up is due to opposing gravity. This requires two forces; one for doing the action itself and the second for resisting gravity.

This verse shows that man always feels exhausted on adopting acts of commandments because of the difficulties of legal responsibility; he does not embark upon them with ardent love. No one embarks upon the difficulties of legal responsibility except the believer, and he is the one who accepts these commandments with an open heart while remembering the reward which facilitates the difficulty of actions. For example, the scholar who is diligent in his studies calls to mind the pleasure and the fruits of success on himself and his family in the future. As for the one who does not call to mind the fruits of his work, the action becomes difficult for him.

The sky is everything that is above and overshadows the human being, so the atmosphere and the clouds above are among the sky. Allah Glorified is He has made it clear that He the Almighty has established the seven skies. In that respect, some scientists wanted to use this current verse to prove the veracity of the Quran as being incorporating universal miracles until the Hour is established. They used an emphatic form to demonstrate that Allah's verse is the first reference signifying that the person climbing up into the atmosphere becomes tired and needs two efforts; the first is for doing the action and the second is for resisting gravity. This is the reason that makes man’s chest constricted because he cannot find sufficient air to give him energy.

In reacting to their view, certainly, there is nothing that prevents the derivation of a universal issue from the Quran to prove Quranic veracity, but let us restrain ourselves from connecting the Quran to all universal issues. If we use the commentary of a verse to confirm an existing theory, then the verse is liable to be refuted afterwards by any scientist who may uphold the mistake of this theory in the future.

It is obligatory upon those who are sincere to connect the verses of the Quran with the universal miracles to be attentive in order not to connect the verses to any refutable issue but to scientific facts only. There is a difference between the theory and the fact because the theory is hypothetical and may be refuted. Thus, do not expose the Quran to uncertainties or doubts; do not connect it to any refutable theories, but rather to scientific facts whose veracity has been approved by scientific experiments.

Allah is the Creator of the universe, and therefore there is no contradiction between the Quran and the universal facts. Therefore, you should not restrict Quranic facts to your understanding, and you should be well aware that the Quranic fact remains as pure as the universal fact.

Per Allah’s saying, ‘…That is how Allah makes the foulness of those who do not believe rebound against them’ (al-An‘am: 125) Allah makes ‘foulness’ to be their punishment. It only comes to them because of their disbelief and their non-acceptance of legal responsibility. Subsequently, Allah says:

وَهَٰذَا صِرَٰطُ رَبِّكَ مُسۡتَقِيمٗاۗ قَدۡ فَصَّلۡنَا ٱلۡأٓيَٰتِ لِقَوۡمٖ يَذَّكَّرُونَ ﴿١٢٦﴾

[Prophet], this is the path of your Lord, made perfectly straight. We have explained Our revelations to those who take heed [126] (The Quran, al-An’am: 126)

The demonstrative pronoun ‘this’ refers to the preceding verses from the Quran, which opens the heart to accept faith. The Quran is the bearer of Islam, and the demonstrative pronoun refers at times either to the Quran, or to Islam. There is no difference between the Quran and Islam.

'This is the path of your Lord, made perfectly straight…' (al-An'am: 126). The path is straight; it could be twisting in some parts, but it goes straight as a whole. We know that the straight path is the shortest way that takes someone to the sought destination. Thus, the word 'path' should come with 'straight' to infer the meaning of the shortest way to the sought destination without any obstacles. Similarly, the engineers calculate the dimensions and measure the length of the way, as well as they bring specific tools to straighten and pave a road. The straightness of the road may be exposed to hindering obstacles such as mountains, for example. Thus, engineers either drill a passageway through the mountain to make sure that the road is straight, or bend the road around the mountains to ensure the quality of the road's construction. This is the case so that the vehicle can avoid obstacles.

However, if the path has been paved by Allah, will there be any obstacle? Absolutely no; therefore, it is a straight path. It is noticeable that Allah says, '... The path of your Lord…' (al-An'am: 126), i.e. it is the path that comes as a gift from Allah, the Lord and the Exalted. He is the Creator and the Warrantor Who supports His creation in their mission and makes it easy for them. This is the right, paved and straight path granted by Allah, that is, the easiest shortest way driving us to a good ending of life.

In this verse '[O Prophet!] This is the path of your Lord…' (al-An'am: 126), Allah the Almighty has associated the word 'Lord' to 'Muhammad'; i.e. Allah, for Prophet Muhammad's sake, has made the path straight because He the Almighty is the Lord of Prophet Muhammad, as He is the Lord of the entire universe. Messenger Muhammad is the most important being in the universe.

Allah's verse, '…We have distinctly explained in details Our revelations...' (al-An'am: 126) means that everything in this universe is distinctly created for what suits it, and that Allah has created everything in the universe to achieve its objective without any difficulty or adversity. The path that Allah has drawn is only to rectify the universe and make everything therein suited its mission. All human beings, per Allah the Exalted are equal because He does not grant life to any creation in the universe without providing him with the necessary tools needed for leading it. Every person has a tool, either a talent or an ability, granted by Allah Who makes them as numerous as the number of human beings. When someone wants to build a house, does he learn in an engineering school how to draw a design for a house? Does he learn how to be a technician, electrician, or wall painter? Obviously, the individual cannot specialise in all these, and that is why Allah has distributed talents amongst His creation. This is how society complements itself so that individuals do not overlap one another.

If we were all doctors or engineers, we would not have any benefit to the world. Those, whom we accused of being unsuccessful in education, are undertaking indispensable tasks. Indeed, Allah has created them with limited mental abilities to grant them other abilities suiting their tasks. If the entire society was highly educated, the pyramid would become inverted. That is why Allah has attached every task to the need for it. Whoever being excellently satisfied with Allah’s preordainment for him, will be granted all goodness in his work.

It is noticeably remarkable that any employee is subjected to a fixed salary, whereas, the plumber, for example, self-reliantly estimates his work and freely earns his wage in remuneration for effort exerted. The great suffering and toil afflict those whose work is estimated and controlled by someone else.

By examining every issue in the universe kept from the interference of the human being, it remains sound and proper, whereas, every corruption is found in the matters where man poked his nose deviating them away from Allah’s path. If we settle every issue per Allah’s Law, the universe would be entirely proper and organised. Allah the Almighty draws man’s attention towards the superior order of the universe from which human’s interference is denied. Definitely, man has no control over the skies, celestial bodies, sun, moon, or the movement of the earth, whereas, they work per a superior order organised by Allah. Allah informs us, ‘He has raised up the sky. He has set the balance so that you may not transgress the due balance.’ (ar-Rahman: 7-8) Man should refer everything under his choice to Allah’s Law; without any interference, he would find that these matters would be carried out as should be.

Therefore, man should remember how to use the available preliminary measures that lead him to results. Should sound preliminary measures be taken, he would inevitably reach the objectives liable to natural disposition. The simplest truth he can reach after deep contemplation of, ‘Who created you’? ‘Did you create yourself’? ‘Certainly, you did not.’ ‘Were you created by some creatures like you’? ‘Definitely, you were not’. ‘Has any creature claimed – and how many are their claims – that he created you or created your soul’? ‘Unquestionably, there are no claims’. Consequently, we, and the entire universe are Allah’s creation. Thus, Allah is the Only One Who has the right to lay down the law of human being’s maintenance. Further, mankind will remain tired and weary until they become submissive to their Creator.

As Allah the Almighty says, ‘We have distinctly explained in details Our revelations to people who take heed.’ (al-An‘am: 126) He the Almighty does not explain revelations to only one person, but rather, he says ‘to people’. Accordingly, when one of believers deviates or is heedless, another one will give an advice to correct him. They have mutual responsibility of reminding each other so that everyone should protect the other from himself. If there is any inadequacy, out of forgetfulness or heedlessness or personal desires, another believer will give an advice to correct this. This is a universal issue; by examining all existences, it never differs. The objective that Allah has mentioned in the subsequent verse should be remembered:

لَهُمۡ دَارُ ٱلسَّلَٰمِ عِندَ رَبِّهِمۡۖ وَهُوَ وَلِيُّهُم بِمَا كَانُواْ يَعۡمَلُونَ ١٢٧

They shall have the Home of Peace with their Lord, and He will take care of them as a reward for their deeds [127] (The Quran, al-An’am: 127)

Allah promises those people who were patient in adversity, were vied in patience with others and were ever ready to do what is right (having prayer, or warding off an attack), by having the abode of peace. The Quranic style brought forward those who deserve paradise for a specific reason that Allah intends. He the Almighty mentions them at first to indicate that this abode is specified for them alone and no one else. It is purely specified for them alone on the Day of Resurrection. ‘Abode’ is the place where man dwells and which contains everything that needed in his stay. It has a slightly broader meaning than the word ‘home’ which simply refers to the dwelling-place.

The word bayt means a place for lodging, but the word dar means a place to live in that contains all the necessities of life. Here the word dar is affixed to the word as-salam which refers to one of Allah's Magnificent Names. Allah clarifies that those who deserve the reward will have an abode of peace which belongs to Allah. Therefore, it is expected to contain bounties and facilities that suit the status of Allah, to Whom this abode belongs. Allah has not said, 'the abode of Allah' because He has willed to mention one of His Attributes that give them the feeling of peace, security and tranquillity. There is a difference between the abodes of the worldly life and this abode of peace; the abodes of the worldly life contain pleasures, but you have two options: either you leave these pleasures or they leave you. Therefore, there is no security in the worldly life because you may be subjected to enmity and hostility or suffer from diseases. All these sufferings disturb your peace and security in the worldly life; therefore, Allah made the Hereafter an abode of peace for the people who believe in Him, and will let them feel secure from all the problems of the worldly life.

"For them will be the home of peace with their Lord." (al-An'am: 127) The verse indicates that the abode of peace is not just a promise from Allah of something that does not exist now, but Allah has already prepared it for the believers. Allah Glorified is He has created paradise that can accommodate all the believers from among His servants, and He has created Hell that can accommodate all the disbelievers from among His servants. The believers will be rewarded with the abode of peace which has been prepared for them, and will inherit the abode which has been prepared for the disbelievers if they had believed 'Those are the inheritors. Who will inherit al-Firdaus (Heaven), they will abide therein eternally' (al-Mu'minun: 10-11). Allah has not created limited gardens; rather, He has prepared gardens that could accommodate all of mankind if they believed and has created hell that could accommodate all of mankind if they disbelieved. As long as these abodes of peace are attributed to Allah, they are secure. Then, Allah will not leave the believers in the abodes He has prepared for them without guardianship, He says, '...and He is their guardian because of what they did.' (al-An'am: 127)

Allah prepares paradise for the believers and he becomes their guardian. We should note that guardianship in the worldly life is provided through the means that Allah has created and subjected to the believers. However, in the Hereafter this guardianship will not be provided through the previously mentioned means, but it will be directly provided by Allah to the believers because He will give them immediately whatever will cross their minds. People are not familiar with this pleasure because in the worldly life people enjoy the means which Allah has created for them, but in the Hereafter, no one will possess anything except Allah. Therefore, Allah Glorified is He says, '...to whom belongs all sovereignty this Day?' (Ghafir: 16) The answer to this question is His saying, '...To Allah, the One, the Subduer of all.' (Ghafir: 16)

Allah will guard the believers and He will be close to them to provide them with all that they want to the extent that they will not need to call on Him, but in the worldly life, the believers ask Allah to bestow bounties on them and to keep harm away from them. He will be the guardian of the believers as a reward for what they used to do in the worldly life. People will reap in the Hereafter the rewards of their deeds in the worldly life. Allah gives the believers rewards in return for their patience because whatever good deeds the believers may do will not measure up to even a very small amount of Allah's bounties and will not be enough to show gratitude to Him. In addition, Allah's rewards in return for the believers' good deeds are considered grace from Him. Therefore, Allah clarifies that when you manage to make success, beware of being tempted by your deeds; rather, you must remember that it is a grace from Allah, 'Say, "In [this] bounty of Allah and in His grace – in that they should rejoice; it is better than that which they gather."' (Yunus: 58)

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him explained this matter saying, 'The good deeds of any person will not make him enter Paradise.' That is none can enter paradise through his good deeds. They (the Prophet's Companions) asked, 'Not even you, O Messenger of Allah?' He said, 'Not even myself, unless Allah bestows His favour and mercy on me.'(1)

Therefore, success is achieved by Allah's grace, provided that one does righteous deeds. A person does righteous deeds and our Lord gives him double the reward of his deeds, which certainly, do not benefit His Majesty and do not increase any of His Attributes or Sovereignty. However, He rewards the believers in return for their deeds to benefit them.

Therefore, Al-Razi Allah be pleased with him said, 'Doing righteous deeds cause happiness and spiritual ease, which are regarded immaterial matter that exists in a physical form (human beings). Psychological issues affect the physical form; when a person becomes angry, this anger affects his physical appearance as his face turns red, and his body may shake. Likewise, if something that pleases you occurs, happiness affects the outward appearance and is reflected in the facial expressions. Therefore, deeds affect the physical form and vice versa.' Then, Allah says:

وَيَوۡمَ يَحۡشُرُهُمۡ جَمِيعٗا يَٰمَعۡشَرَ ٱلۡجِنِّ قَدِ ٱسۡتَكۡثَرۡتُم مِّنَ ٱلۡإِنسِۖ وَقَالَ
أَوۡلِيَآؤُهُم مِّنَ ٱلۡإِنسِ رَبَّنَا ٱسۡتَمۡتَعَ بَعۡضُنَا بِبَعۡضٖ وَبَلَغۡنَآ أَجَلَنَا ٱلَّذِيٓ أَجَّلۡتَ لَنَاۚ
قَالَ ٱلنَّارُ مَثۡوَىٰكُمۡ خَٰلِدِينَ فِيهَآ إِلَّا مَا شَآءَ ٱللَّهُۗ إِنَّ رَبَّكَ حَكِيمٌ عَلِيمٞ ﴿١٢٨﴾

On the day He gathers everyone together [saying], 'Company of jinn! You have seduced a great many humans,' their adherents among mankind will say, 'Lord, we have profited from one another, but now we have reached the appointed time You decreed for us.' He will say, 'Your home is the Fire, and there you shall remain'– unless God wills otherwise: [Prophet], your Lord is all wise, all knowing [128] (The Quran, al-An'am: 128)

'And [mention, O Muhammad], the Day when He will gather them together...' (al-An'am: 128). The word "yawm" which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse is an adverb of time, i.e., the verse tackles an event. This means that all creatures will be gathered. When we consider the next part of the verse, we find that it does not tackle the event; rather, Allah says, 'O assembly of jinn…' (al-An'am: 128). This is a vocative case, which requires the presence of someone calling – Who is Allah in this case - and someone being called, which is the assembly of jinn and human beings. This saying means that the Day when Allah gathers all creatures, He will say, 'O assembly of jinn…' The word hashr means 'gather' and the word ma`shar means 'an assembly of individuals who mix and coexist with each other while having all the elements necessary for life.' The word 'ma`shar can also refer to a group of people who share a certain profession, such as the company of merchants, scientists or ministers. However, the expression 'ya ma`shar al-misriyyin' (O Egyptians) refers to a group of individuals who mix and coexist with each other.

'O assembly of jinn, you have misled many of mankind….' (al-An'am: 128)

The Arabic verb 'istakthar' which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means 'to take a great deal of something', such as the person who takes or gathers a great deal of money or makes many friends. What does 'istakthartum min al-ins' mean? We know that some of the jinn are obedient and some are disobedient, and the reason for disobedience amongst the jinn is Satan who vowed, 'By Your Might, I will surely mislead them all…' (Sad: 82). Allah clarifies that the assembly of jinn have strived to mislead humans and have increased the number of the disobedient by doing so. At the beginning, the disobedient were only the devils from among the jinn, and then they have attracted some humans to the side of the disobedient. Therefore, they have increased in number and thought that by doing so, they would gain might and dominance because if the humans obeyed their whisperings, the jinn would become their masters; that is what happened. When someone entered a valley, he would say, 'I seek refuge in the Master of this valley from the jinn' and would ask Allah to protect him and his property. However, when the jinn whispered something to him, he rushed to carry it out. Accordingly, the jinn were increasing in number by attracting the humans to their side.'…And their allies among mankind will say, "Our Lord, some of us benefited others..."' (al-An'am: 128).

Not only did the jinn benefit the human beings, but humans also benefit from the jinn. Therefore, there is an exchange of benefits between the jinn and humans in contradiction with Allah's law. The first group have tempted and dominated the second as they have ordered them to carry out deeds that contradict with Allah's law, while the second group benefit from the first group as they help them attain their desires in a manner relevant to creed and religion. The second group urge the first to worship idols, the sun, or the moon, and they obey them, as this satisfies their natural inclination towards religious obedience because everyone is created with an instinct to resort to a higher power; when man considers his status and that of other humans, he will realise that they are subject to changing circumstances. Their statuses change between health and illness, and wealth and poverty, so what guarantees protection for the human from these vicissitudes of life?

A person loves to attach himself to certain powers so that they can support him during the vicissitudes of life. The believers seek power in religion, rely on Allah Glorified is He and have faith in Allah while observing the instructions of religion regarding the commands and prohibitions. However, the associates that some people worship instead of Allah do not give any instructions or commands, except that which they consider complying with their vain desires. This is regarded as lying to oneself which does not last long because man does not cheat himself. Faith protects oneself if something happens beyond his means. No one can invoke the sun, the moon, the devil, or the stone because he would never lie to himself. An example on this meaning is Allah’s saying, ‘And when affliction touches man, he calls upon Us, whether lying on his side or sitting or standing; but when We remove from him his affliction, he continues in disobedience as if he had never called upon Us to remove an affliction that touched him....’ (Yunus: 12)

Allah says about humans in this verse, “...and their allies among mankind will say, “Our Lord, some of us benefited from others, and we have [now] reached our term, which you appointed for us...” (al-An‘am: 128). This means that this exchange of benefits has a certain term and will end with the end of life. Then the reckoning of their deeds will begin and they will hear Allah’s saying, ‘…He will say, “The Fire is your residence, wherein you will abide eternally, except for what Allah wills.” Indeed, your Lord is Wise and Knowing.’ (al-An‘am: 128)

The word mathwa means residence and the word mathwakum which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means ‘your place of residence’. Then the exception in the following part of the verse, ‘...except for what Allah wills...’ (al-An‘am: 128), was a cause for long discussions among scholars. Some scholars said that it means that Allah has absolute power and will and does what He wills. However, he has specified the misdeeds which He will not forgive and those He will forgive to whom He wills, ‘Indeed, Allah does not forgive association with Him, but He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills....’ (an-Nisa’: 48)

Here Allah has specified that 'what He wills' applies to any sin other than idolatry which He will not forgive. Some scholars understand from the part of the verse '...except for what Allah wills...' (al-An'am: 128), that as soon as those polytheists will be resurrected and gathered, they will abide in hell, but this will happen only after they will be held to account. This exception indicates that no one will enter paradise or the hell until the reckoning of their deeds; therefore, the time of resurrection and reckoning and is excluded from the time of eternity in Paradise or in Hell.

There is also '...except as your Lord pleases...' in the chapter of Hud in which Allah says, 'As for those [who were destined] to be wretched, they will be in the Fire. For them therein is [violent] exhaling and inhaling. They will be abiding therein as long as the heavens and the earth endure, except what your Lord should will. Indeed, your Lord is an effecter of what He intends. And as for those who were [destined to be] prosperous, they will be in Paradise, abiding therein as long as the heavens and the earth endure, except what your Lord should will - a bestowal uninterrupted.' (Hud: 106-108)

The verse shows that there is the exception regarding residence in both Hell and Paradise. Allah says, 'They will be abiding therein as long as the heavens and the earth endure except what your Lord should will....' (Hud: 107) The fact that the exception comes after stating the eternal residence in both Paradise and Hell indicates that there is a time excluded from the eternal residence in both Paradise and Hell although it has been indicated that the dwellers of paradise will remain eternally in paradise, and the dwellers of the Hell will remain eternally in Hell. How can this happen? The dwellers of hell will not only suffer from the torment of the fire eternally, but they will also be punished by freezing cold and other types of torment besides the fire. These types of torment also include Allah's wrath and curse upon them, and their dismissal and humiliation. The dwellers of paradise will have a reward greater and more distinct than paradise: Allah's goodly pleasure, as He says: 'Allah has promised to the believing men and the believing women gardens beneath which rivers flow, to abide in them, and goodly dwellings in gardens of perpetual abode; and best of all is Allah's goodly pleasure; that is the grand achievement.' (at-Tawba: 72). In addition to paradise, Allah bestows on them bounties which no one other than Him knows. This is the purpose of the use of exception in this verse, which is proved by Allah's saying, '...a bestowal uninterrupted.' (Hud: 108) As for the dwellers of hell, Allah says, '…surely your Lord is the mighty doer of what He intends.' (Hud: 107) This means that Allah punishes the dwellers of hell as He wills just as He gives to the dwellers of paradise uninterrupted bestowal.

Allah ends the verse saying, '...Indeed, your Lord is Wise and Knowing.' (al-An'am: 128). He is Wise in His punishment, All Knowing of the person who deserves punishment and the extent of the punishment he receives. He is also All Knowing of the person who deserves rewards and bounties and the extent of the rewards and bounties he receives. He is also Wise regarding showing mercy. Then Allah says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ نُوَلِّي بَعْضَ ٱلظَّٰلِمِينَ بَعْضًۢا بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَكْسِبُونَ ﴿١٢٩﴾

In this way, We make some evildoers have power over others through their misdeeds [129] (The Quran, al-An'am: 129)

The word wa kadhalika which is mentioned in the Arabic text refers to the debate that took place between the jinn and human beings, so Allah says quoting the humans as saying, '...Our Lord, some of us made use of others...' (al-An'am: 128).

He has not mentioned what the jinn said because this is stated in another verse. Allah says, 'And Satan will say when the matter has been concluded, "Indeed, Allah had promised you the promise of truth and I promised you, but I betrayed you. But I had no authority over you except that I invited you, and you responded to me. So do not blame me; but blame yourselves. I cannot be called to your aid; nor can you be called to my aid....' (Ibrahim: 22)

In addition, Allah has stated what Satan says in another chapter, 'The hypocrites are like the example of Satan when he says to man, "Disbelieve." But when he disbelieves, he says, "Indeed, I am disassociated from you...."' (al-Hashr: 16)

Allah also has mentioned in other verses the sayings of people who have gone astray, '...And those who disbelieved will [then] say, "Our Lord, show us those who misled us of the jinn and men [so] we may put them under our feet that they will be among the lowest.'" (Fussilat: 29) '…And thus will We make some of the wrongdoers allies of others....' (al-An'am: 129)

This means that as the jinn have increased the number of the deviant people by attracting some people to their side, and as they have benefited from one another in misguidance, temptation, and submission, Allah causes wrongdoers to be their allies and does not let any righteous people to be their allies. This is because the righteous people's hearts are filled with mercy and do not have the ability to punish the wrongdoers because they adopt the approach of Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him with the disbelievers on the day of the liberation of Mecca, as he said, 'Go, you are free.' Allah honours the righteous people, so He does not entrust them with punishing the wrongdoers; rather, He causes them to see the wrongdoers punishing one another. History has proved this point; wrongdoers have inflicted a great deal of sufferings on one another, but if their real enemies had gained the upper hand, they would have shown them mercy because their hearts are filled with mercy.

It was narrated on the authority of Malik ibn Dinar, who was a righteous person, that he said, 'I read in the athar (narrations from the Companions) a Divine Hadith (Revelation from Allah in the Prophet's words) in which Allah says, 'I am the King of kings; the hearts of the kings are in My Hand.'(1)

The tyrant ruler should not believe that he has assumed power because of his intelligence or strength; rather, Allah has brought him to power in order for him to discipline the wrongdoers. The evidence is that when Allah wills to put an end to the reign of this ruler, He removes fear from the hearts of his guards, and instead of using their rifles to defend him they aim their rifles at him. Thus, no one should think that a king assumes power against Allah's Will; rather, when the slaves of Allah oppress and transgress Allah causes a tyrant ruler to rule and oppress them. Therefore, it is said, 'The oppressive ruler is considered as Allah's sword on earth, as He takes revenge on wrongdoers using him, and He takes revenge on him.'

"…And thus will We make some of the wrongdoers allies of others for what they used to earn." (al-An'am: 129) This indicates that the great evil which Allah causes to dominate the life of some people is due to their misdeeds. One of the righteous people said, ‘I know whether my Lord considers me righteous or not from the behaviour of my riding beast. If it bolts while I am riding it, I ask myself about the reason for that and consider my sins the reason for the beast’s behaviour’. This is how Allah deals with righteous people; when they commit a sin, they are held to account for it immediately so that their record of deeds can constantly be free of sins. Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘There is no trouble that comes to a believer except that it obliterates from his sins, even if it is the pricking of a thorn.’(1)

---

(1) Tadhkira Al-Mawdu`at by Ibn Al-Qisrani

When a righteous person commits some misdeeds, Allah holds him to account for them by afflicting him with an illness in his body or depletion in his wealth, as Allah does not want him to be punished severely in the Hereafter. Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him says, ‘A believer does not undergo (the trouble) of running a thorn or more than that when Allah effaces his sins in the manner tree leaves fall.’ (2)

‘And thus will We make some of the wrongdoers allies of others for what they used to earn.’ (al-An‘am: 129) The wrongdoers believe that Allah is not aware of their sins, but Allah will hold all people to account, and will either reward or punish them, depending on their deeds. Then, Allah says:

يَٰمَعۡشَرَ ٱلۡجِنِّ وَٱلۡإِنسِ أَلَمۡ يَأۡتِكُمۡ رُسُلٞ مِّنكُمۡ يَقُصُّونَ عَلَيۡكُمۡ
ءَايَٰتِي وَيُنذِرُونَكُمۡ لِقَآءَ يَوۡمِكُمۡ هَٰذَاۚ قَالُواْ شَهِدۡنَا عَلَىٰٓ أَنفُسِنَاۖ وَغَرَّتۡهُمُ
ٱلۡحَيَوٰةُ ٱلدُّنۡيَا وَشَهِدُواْ عَلَىٰٓ أَنفُسِهِمۡ أَنَّهُمۡ كَانُواْ كَٰفِرِينَ ١٣٠

‘Company of jinn and mankind! Did messengers not come from among you to recite My revelations to you and warn that you would meet this Day?’ They will say, ‘We testify against ourselves.’ The life of this world seduced them, but they will testify against themselves that they rejected the truth [130] (The Quran, al-An’am: 130)

We notice that Allah says in this verse, ‘O company of jinn and mankind...’ because He wants to establish the proof against them that He has incriminated their actions and has set punishments for them only after He sent messengers to convey His commands and prohibitions. Thus, Allah Glorified is He has not oppressed them.

---

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari, Muslim and Ahmad

(2) Related by Al-Bukhari and Muslim on the authority of Ibn Mas`ud

Both the jinn and human beings are addressed by this verse, '…did there not come to you messengers from among you….' (al-An'am: 130) Some of the scholars said that the jinn have messengers and human beings have messengers, while others said that the messengers are only from amongst human beings because the Quran states that they said, '…indeed we have heard a [recited] Book revealed after Moses…' (al-Ahqaf: 30). Therefore, the jinn stated that a book was revealed after Musa (Moses) which they knew about. This means that the jinn received their message from human beings, and that Allah sent messengers only from among human beings and conveyed the message to the jinn. Allah Glorified is He says in this verse, 'O company of jinn and mankind, did there not come to you messengers from among you....' (al-An'am: 130)

When you come across two people, the first of whom has a hundred pounds and the second has nothing, you may say that these two persons have a hundred pounds. Thus, His saying, '...did there not come to you messengers from among you..." (al-An'am: 130) means the humans and jinn in general. It may also mean that the messengers came to human beings then one of the jinn conveyed the message of the messenger to the other jinn, 'And [mention, O Muhammad], when We directed to you a few of the jinn, listening to the Quran. And when they attended it, they said, "Listen quietly." And when it was concluded, they went back to their people as warners.' (al-Ahqaf: 29) This means that warners from the jinn received the message from the human messengers and conveyed it to the jinn.

Did '...messengers not come from among you to recite My revelations…' (al-An'am: 130)? The word ayat which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to the miracles that affirm the veracity of the messengers and proofs from the universe that prove the veracity of the messengers. The phrase '...to recite My revelations...' (al-An'am: 130) means that the messengers related to them about all the messengers, starting from Adam until Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. The part of the verse, '...recite My revelations to you...' (al-An'am: 130) is a statement that shows accurate wording relevant to history because the word qas is derived from 'qas al-athar' which means to follow someone's footsteps exactly without any deviation. Therefore, the story should be inspired by history.

'...recite My revelations to you and warn that you would meet this Day….' (al-An'am: 130) It is the day of disgrace on which they will stand before Allah Who will remind them that they were warned against what will happen in the Hereafter. '...They will say, "We testify against ourselves."' (al-An'am: 130) The life of this world seduced them, but they will testify against themselves that they rejected the truth.

Their saying, '…We testify against ourselves…' (al-An'am: 130), is an acknowledgement against themselves. They will bear witness that they received the messengers; what prevented them from believing the messengers and having faith? Allah answers this question saying, '…The life of this world seduced them' (al-An'am: 130). The thing that causes seduction should be influential; it is described in this verse as being 'dunya' (literally means 'most inferior', but the intended meaning is the worldly life). Therefore, seduction caused by the worldly life is due to the lack of insight. '…but they will testify against themselves that they rejected the truth.' (al-An'am: 130) There is a verse in the Quran that reads, '...By Allah, our Lord, we have not set up partners beside Him!'

Therefore, one time they negate that they have disbelieved and another time they affirm that they are disbelievers due to the confusion that will take place in different situations. The statement, "…they will testify against themselves…" (al-An'am: 130) means that their limbs will bear witness against them because in the worldly life man has a will which controls his limbs and abilities enabling him to carry out voluntary actions. However, the involuntary actions are not subject to man's will. For example, no one can order his heart to beat a certain amount of times per hour or his intestines to move in a certain way, but he can walk to the mosque or to the bar. He is also able to read the Quran or a book of no benefit.

Therefore, man has control over the limbs to carry out voluntary actions while observing Allah's commands. However, on the Day of Resurrection man will not have any will over his limbs which will become free. In the worldly life, the limbs are subjugated to man’s will and are forced to do whatever he wants, but in the Hereafter they will not accept to do whatever he wants and will bear witness against their owner; the skin, the hands and the feet bear witness against people, saying, ‘And they will say to their skins, “Why have you testified against us?” They will say, “We were made to speak by Allah, Who has made everything speak....”’ (Fussilat: 21)

They will say, ‘…we have not set up partners beside Him…’ but their limbs will bear witness against them and will state all their misdeeds,

Then, Allah says:

ذَٰلِكَ أَن لَّمۡ يَكُن رَّبُّكَ مُهۡلِكَ ٱلۡقُرَىٰ بِظُلۡمٖ وَأَهۡلُهَا غَٰفِلُونَ ﴿١٣١﴾

Your Lord would not destroy towns for their wrongdoing if they had not been warned [131]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 131)

The word dhalika which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse refers to what was stated in the previous verses, clarifying that Allah sent messengers who conveyed Allah’s message so that no one can have any pretext for their disbelief. They will affirm that Allah sent messengers to them and will bear witness against themselves. Therefore, this confirms that Allah would never destroy towns if they had not been warned because before Allah punishes for a sin, He sends down divine text via messengers. This means that Allah will not destroy them for their wrongdoing unless He has sent revelation. ‘...if they had not been warned.’ (al-An‘am: 131) The word ghaflah (heedlessness and the mind’s inattentiveness) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the word is the opposite of yaqazhah (heedfulness and constant attentiveness). Therefore, if they were heedful and attentive, they would not need messengers because when Allah created the creatures, He sent Adam to his offspring. Parents should instruct their children about means of sustenance in which they may be creative, they should also teach them the values of their religion, so that the values remain associated with people’s lives in the manner the other means of sustenance do.

Why have the means of sustenance survived and we have passed them on to one another and added things to them? Because religion is that which people may be heedless to, as it restricts them by its commands and prohibitions, while they seek luxury in their lives. Why is man keen to further luxury in life but he is not keen to promote values? In the past, people used to drink water from springs with their hands, afterwhich they made cups to use them for drinking, purified the water of impurities, and transferred it from springs to tanks. People are keen to make their life luxurious, but they do not pay attention to the values of religion.

If they had been heedful of their religion, every father would have taught his son the values that he learned from his father. However, Allah has shown mercy for this heedlessness and He has warned them again by His messengers. Whenever the values of religion get lost, Allah Glorified and Exalted is He sends a messenger out of His Mercy, Grace, and Justice and does not destroy towns while their people have not been warned.

Therefore, if they had been heedful to religious values, there would not have been any need for messengers because parents would teach their children the religious values just as they teach them worldly matters. This is the case up to now. For example, a father will censure his son if he is absent from school one day, neglects his lessons or fails. This is out of earnest concern for the son's future, while he has no concern for the son's performance of religious obligations. If people had as much concern for their religious values as they do for their worldly matters, the religious values would be maintained in their lives and they would be accustomed to observing them. Then Allah says,

وَلِكُلٍّ دَرَجَٰتٌ مِّمَّا عَمِلُوا۟ ۚ وَمَا رَبُّكَ بِغَٰفِلٍ عَمَّا يَعْمَلُونَ ﴿١٣٢﴾

Everyone is assigned a rank according to their deeds; your Lord is not unaware of anything they do [132] (The Quran, al-An'am: 132)

This means that all human beings and jinn have ranks according to their deeds, and this means that deeds differ; externally they may appear to be similar, but they differ in case of the abundance of deeds or according to the sincerity of the one doing them. Someone may perform a deed with complete sincerity, while someone else may perform it without showing complete sincerity. This issue of sincerity is not defined by regulations or laws, but it is only defined by Allah Glorified and Exalted is He. Therefore, Prophet Muhammad conveyed from Allah the following Qudsi Hadith (Revelation from Allah in the Prophet's words): ‘Sincerity is one of My secrets that I place in the heart of whomever I love of My slaves.’(1) Therefore, only Allah Glorified and Exalted is He knows the degrees of sincerity, according to which people are assigned ranks. The ranks also depend on the amount of supererogatory deeds the slave of Allah performs; an example, is when the slave of Allah performs ten supererogatory units of prayer in addition to the five obligatory prayers which Allah has enjoined. Another example is when the slave of Allah fasts on Mondays and Thursdays in addition to fasting in Ramadan.

If a person performs only obligatory deeds, Allah rewards him according to the degree of sincerity in performing his deeds. When a nomad asked Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him about the position of the person who only carries out his obligations, he said to him, ‘He will be successful if he is true to what he affirms.’(2) The one who performs supererogatory deeds in addition to the obligatory deeds will be more successful, and no one can reach the rank of more successful people unless he attains a higher degree. The Arabic word darajat (degrees) indicates elevation, while the word darakat indicates descent. Allah is All-Aware of the inward and outward intention of the deeds of every slave. Allah Glorified is He says:

وَرَبُّكَ ٱلْغَنِيُّ ذُو ٱلرَّحْمَةِ ۚ إِن يَشَأْ يُذْهِبْكُمْ وَيَسْتَخْلِفْ مِنۢ
بَعْدِكُم مَّا يَشَآءُ كَمَآ أَنشَأَكُم مِّن ذُرِّيَّةِ قَوْمٍ ءَاخَرِينَ ١٣٣

Your Lord is self-sufficient and full of mercy. If He pleased, He could remove you and put others in your place, just as He produced you from the offspring of other people [133] (The Quran, al-An’am: 133)

Allah Glorified and Exalted is He endears His worship, commands, and obedience to us for our benefit, and out of merciful Lordship. He makes us earning to attain His reward and He encourages us to perform good deeds for our own benefit because all our deeds - as previously mentioned - do not increase Allah's sovereignty by a mosquito's wingspan, and all our acts of disobedience do not decrease Allah's sovereignty by a mosquito's wingspan. He created us with having all the attributes of perfection and we have not increased Him in anything. He brought the worldly life into existence from nothing, and differentiated between an attribute that is ascribed to Allah's Essence and the creation of the creatures to whom Allah's attributes are related; Allah has been the Most-Gracious, the Most-Merciful, the Supreme and the Creator even before the creation of His creatures. He has created His creatures because He is the Creator, and He has been the Bestower of sustenance before the creation of the creatures that receive sustenance. Certainly, He has the Attribute of providing sustenance which has caused Him to provide His creatures with sustenance. As He has all these attributes, He tells anything to be and it is, and the entire universe belongs to Him. He has no need of His slaves and to Him belongs the entire kingdom. He also accepts repentance. Messenger Muhammad, peace and blessings of Allah be upon him, says, 'Allah is more pleased with the repentance of a believing servant than of a person who set out on a journey with a provision of food and drink on the back of his camel. He went on until he came to a waterless desert....' (1)

Allah continues to bring things into existence out of nothingness proving that Allah's attribute, the Creator exists.

Adam cannot be - by logic - the first creature in the universe,

By inductive analogy, many creatures were created before him. Thus, the entire universe was created before Adam, and it submits to Allah Who subjugated it to Adam as a vicegerent on earth. If He wills He can get rid of the creation and bring a new one.

(1) Related by Al-Bukhari in the chapter on Invocations, Muslim in the chapter on Repentance and At-Tirmidhi in the chapter on Invocations 'Saqata `ala ba`irahu` which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the Hadith means 'he found it expectedly'

Then Allah says:

إِنَّ مَا تُوعَدُونَ لَآتٍ ۖ وَمَآ أَنتُم بِمُعْجِزِينَ ﴿١٣٤﴾

What you are promised is sure to come, and you cannot escape [134] (The Quran, al-An’am: 134)

As Allah is the only God, when He promises, His promise will inevitably be fulfilled; and when He threatens, His threat will inevitably be carried out. The word wa`d (promise) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse indicates goodness while the word wa`id (threat) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse indicates evil. It may occur that a person does not fulfil his promise or threat because he is subject to changing circumstances, so his opinion may change and he may no longer deem his promise suitable because perhaps he promised to do something thinking that it is within his capacity, afterwhich it turned out to be beyond his capacity. He does not have control over things, but if the one who makes the promise is fully capable, and there is no other god who can oppose him regarding his promise or threat, it will inevitably be fulfilled. Therefore, when Allah gives a judgement, the believer should take it for granted because no deity besides Allah can change the judgement. In addition, Allah is not subject to change, a fact that is proved by Allah’s saying, ‘May the hands of Abu Lahab be ruined! May he be ruined too! Neither his wealth nor his gains will help him. He will burn in the Flaming Hell— and so will his wife, the Hell wood-carrier, with a palm-fibre rope around her neck.’ (al-Masad: 1-5)

This is a threat regarding a voluntary matter; however, they did not embrace Islam. Every Muslim should be confident of Allah’s sayings and should never think that Abu Lahab and his wife could have repented and become Muslims, as Hind and Abu Sufyan became Muslims. However, Allah Glorified is He always knew what Abu Lahab and his wife would choose to follow, as both had the ability to choose. There is no other god who can alter what He says. ‘Say, ‘He is Allah the One.’ (al-Ikhlas: 1) This means that there is no other god to change what Allah says.

‘What you are promised is sure to come, and you cannot escape.’ (al-An‘am: 134). Some people think that Allah may bring about what He has promised, but they may escape from it; yet this is simply not the case. The promise will come and they will not be able to escape, and no one can prevent Allah from fulfilling what He has promised or threatened, and they will never escape His promise or His threat. Also, they will never overcome Allah, or escape from Him or incapacitate Him for Allah is Predominant.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

قُلْ يَٰقَوْمِ ٱعْمَلُوا۟ عَلَىٰ مَكَانَتِكُمْ إِنِّى عَامِلٌ ۖ فَسَوْفَ تَعْلَمُونَ
مَن تَكُونُ لَهُۥ عَٰقِبَةُ ٱلدَّارِ ۗ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُفْلِحُ ٱلظَّٰلِمُونَ ﴿١٣٥﴾

[Prophet], say, 'My people, you carry on as you are, and so will I: you will come to realize who will have a happy homecoming in the Hereafter.' The evildoers will not prosper [135] (The Quran, al-An'am: 135)

The word qawm which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse means (a group of people), and it usually refers to men because they are working and life tasks are assigned to them, as the original matter regarding women is that they stay at home to take care of the household affairs. When the word qawm is mentioned in the Quran, it refers to a group of men who are related to each other. An example is the Allah's saying, '...let not a people ridicule [another] people; perhaps they may be better than them; nor let women ridicule [other] women; perhaps they may be better than them....' (al-Hujurat: 11)

As long as the opposite of qawm is women, then qawm refers to men, and the words 'al-qiyam bilmuhimmat' (fulfilling tasks) and 'al-qawamah' (protective care) are derived from it.

A poet said:

I do not know and I do not think I know,

Are the tribe of Hisan "qawm" (men) or women?

'[Muhammad] say, "My people, you carry on as you are…."' (al-An'am: 135)

The word makan means the space which someone's body occupies. Every organism has a 'makan' whether in the standing or sitting position, and makan is a piece of the land that is occupied and assigned to a certain person. When you stand in a place, no one else can stand in the same place where you stand, as he must move you from it. If a certain space can only contain one person, then it cannot be occupied by two people at the same time, a fact which is known innately. You also find when a little child with limited knowledge wants to sit on the chair on which his brother or sister is sitting he pulls whoever is sitting on it because he innately knows that two things cannot exist in a specific space.

We also find this outside the visible realm; when we put a bottle in water, we hear air coming out of it because water cannot enter the bottle unless the air comes out. As water’s density is higher than the air’s density, it presses the air and forces it out. This proves that there is no overlapping between two things in the same place, i.e., two things cannot occupy one specific space. The word ‘makan’ also means the space which a person takes hold of; therefore, even regarding armies and wars, plans are formulated by different forces to take control of different spaces.

‘…you carry on as you are...’ is a saying that addresses the group who opposed the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him and adopted the stance of rejection towards him. Allah tells them, as a threat and rebuke, that they will never be able to harm Messenger Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. He also tells them to do whatever they can do and to persist with the opposition and resistance because Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is also carrying out his mission. Their persistence in opposition will not prevent him from carrying out his mission. They act per their capacity and he acts per his capacity and faith which were bestowed on him by Allah. ‘[Muhammad], say, “My people, you carry on as you are, and so will I; you will come to realise who will have a happy homecoming in the Hereafter.” The evildoers will not prosper.’ (al-An‘am: 135)

‘...you will come to realise who will have a happy homecoming...” (al-An‘am: 135). The word lahu which is mentioned in the Arabic text indicates that the believers will have the happy homecoming because the other party will receive a bad outcome. As the letter ‘lam’ is mentioned in the word ‘lahu’, it indicates good outcome, but if the word ‘`ala’ was mentioned in this context, it would indicate that they would receive a bad outcome. Therefore, the evildoers will not receive a good outcome, and they will not prosper.

Then, Allah Glorified is He says:

وَجَعَلُواْ لِلَّهِ مِمَّا ذَرَأَ مِنَ ٱلْحَرْثِ وَٱلْأَنْعَٰمِ نَصِيبًا فَقَالُواْ هَٰذَا لِلَّهِ
بِزَعْمِهِمْ وَهَٰذَا لِشُرَكَآئِنَا ۖ فَمَا كَانَ لِشُرَكَآئِهِمْ فَلَا يَصِلُ إِلَى ٱللَّهِ ۖ وَمَا
كَانَ لِلَّهِ فَهُوَ يَصِلُ إِلَىٰ شُرَكَآئِهِمْ ۗ سَآءَ مَا يَحْكُمُونَ ﴿١٣٦﴾

They apportion to God a share of the produce and the livestock He created, saying, ‘This is for God’–so they claim! – ‘and this is for our idols.’ Their idols’ share does not reach God, but God’s share does reach their idols: how badly they judge! [136] (The Quran, al-An’am: 136)

This verse tackles those who oppose Allah’s religion. The word dhara`a means ‘create and spread out’. The crops are called ‘harth’ because they are obtained only through cultivation, and the word al-An`am (livestock) which is mentioned in the Arabic text of the verse is represented in eight mates which will be mentioned subsequently in another verse. They are the camels, cows, sheep, and goats.

‘They apportion to Allah a share of the crops and the livestock He created...’ (al-An‘am: 136). This means that they only cultivated the land, but Allah causes the plants to grow; He gives the seed its nutrients from the soil so that it can make roots to absorb the nutrients from the soil. He also creates all the nutrients that exist in the soil, and causes the seed to take the elements that are beneficial to it and leaves that which is not beneficial, per the following verse, ‘Who creates, then makes complete, and Who destines and [then] guides.’ (al-A‘la: 2-3) They imagine that they can act freely regarding the crops and livestock which Allah has created although Allah is the One Who has created them and can do what He wills.

They apportion to Allah a share of the crops and the livestock He created, claiming that a share of the crops and livestock is assigned to Allah and another to their idols. It would be fairer and more appropriate that the One Who has created the crops and livestock to make this division instead of them because they have taken that which is not their right to take. Furthermore, they did not give the poor, as a charity, the share which they assigned to

Allah. The other share which was assigned to the partners they worship besides Allah was given to the idols and the custodians who surrounded them along with the servants, and those who drew marked arrows. They did not make a fair division, and the reason is mentioned, '...Their idols' share does not reach Allah, but Allah's share does reach their idols....' (al-An'am: 136)

They were not even honest about the share they assigned to Allah. If there was crop failure, they had a specific way of allotment, and if the crops provided a surplus to sell, they followed another way of allotment. When there was a crop failure they would give what was apportioned to Allah, to the partners they worshipped beside Allah, and would say that Allah is free of need. Although they divided the shares, but they did not give the poor the share they claimed to apportion to Allah.

They adopted the same approach when they dealt with the livestock; they counted the number of livestock and apportioned a share to Allah and another to the idols. However, if an animal which had been apportioned to Allah died, they would not replace it. If an animal which had been apportioned to the idols died, they would replace it by taking an animal from the share apportioned to Allah. Furthermore, if a spring flowed to irrigate the crops that belonged to Allah's share, they would take some water from it to irrigate the land cultivated for the idols. Therefore, it is an unjust allotment from the outset, and they did not abide by it. Therefore, their judgement was bad and corrupt.

Then Allah says:

وَكَذَٰلِكَ زَيَّنَ لِكَثِيرٖ مِّنَ ٱلۡمُشۡرِكِينَ قَتۡلَ
أَوۡلَٰدِهِمۡ شُرَكَآؤُهُمۡ لِيُرۡدُوهُمۡ وَلِيَلۡبِسُواْ عَلَيۡهِمۡ دِينَهُمۡۖ وَلَوۡ
شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مَا فَعَلُوهُۖ فَذَرۡهُمۡ وَمَا يَفۡتَرُونَ ١٣٧

In the same way, their idols have induced many of the pagans to kill their own children, bringing them ruin and confusion in their faith: if God had willed otherwise they would not have done this, so [Prophet] leave them to their own devices [137] (The Quran, al-An'am: 137)

They also adopted the same unfair approach regarding their children. The idols they worshipped besides Allah induced many of them to kill their children. The word tazyin means beautification of a certain matter due to strong attraction to it, a process which may be accidental. If the pagans were poor, they would think of killing their children so as not to be poorer; and if they were rich, they would think that their children will squander their wealth and will impoverish them. Therefore, the point is that there was either an actual state of poverty or fear of poverty. Hence, the verses that tackle this meaning have two styles; the ending of the verse differs according to its beginning. Some people may not understand clearly the reason for the Quranic styles used in the following two verses, ‘And do not kill your children for fear of poverty. We provide for them and for you...’ (al-Isra’: 31), And ‘...We will provide for you and them....” (al-An‘am: 151)

What is the difference between the two expressions? ‘We will provide for you and them’ and ‘We provide for them and for you’ are parts of two different verses. If the beginning of each of the two verses is matched with its ending, we will find that its ending is suitable for its beginning. As long as the beginning of each of these two verses differs from the other, the ending should differ. In the following verse Allah says, ‘...and do not kill your children in fear of poverty....’ (al-Isra’: 31) This means that there is an actual state of poverty, so the poor people referred to in this verse are more preoccupied with their own sustenance than that of their dependents. Allah says to them: ‘We will provide for you and for them.’ (al-An‘am: 151)

Therefore, Allah reassures them that He will provide for them and for their dependents. However, if there is not an actual state of poverty, Allah says, ‘And do not kill your children for fear of poverty. We provide for them and for you....’ (al-Isra’: 31) This means that Allah orders people not to kill their children out of fear of poverty. In this case, they have their own sustenance, and when they beget children, Allah will provide for the children and them. Therefore, the ending of the two verses differ because their beginnings differ. The idols whom the pagans worshiped beside Allah made killing children pleasant to the pagans. This process is very tough because humans innately love their children and love to have offspring, as they understand that no matter how long they live, they will die. Therefore, a person wants his remembrance to last and survive in the future generations, so he becomes full of joy when he has a grandson, as he guarantees to be remembered for the next two generations. He forgets that his deeds, not his children and love for extending the progeny, will cause him to be remembered. Killing children requires a severe kind of persuasion, as the pagans' associates may persuade them that if they begot children, they would impoverish and humiliate them because of raids and wars in which their nation were engaged. In addition, their children may cause them to be involved in fighting, and they would have two options: either to lose their children or their wealth. If they had daughters, they would be taken as captives after their death. This is an exaggerated incitement for the people to go against human instinct which urges them to have children. 'In the same way, their idols have induced many of the pagans to kill their own children, bringing them ruin and confusion in their faith....' (al-An'am: 137)

Many '…of the pagans…' (al-An'am: 137) indicates that some of them refused to kill their children and bringing them ruin. And '...confusion in their faith...' (al-An'am: 137) means that these associates brought them confusion in their religion. These people had inherited some of the religious values of the religion of Islam which were followed by the people who preceded them. Then, they deviated from this religion and turned towards idolatry. The idols induced the pagans to do some misdeeds bringing them ruin and confusion in the residual religious values they had.

If '...Allah had willed otherwise they would not have done this, so [Muhammad] leave them to their own devices.' (al-An'am: 137) This is because burying children alive and killing them contradicts the idea of creation because Allah has created people, and no one has the right to kill any person.

It seems that they are in conflict with Allah's will to bring beings into existence. However, if Allah Glorified is He had not willed, He would not have done so. He gave them the choice, per which they carried out everything they intended to do. If Allah had not created them with the ability to choose, they would not have done this because if He had willed for them not to go astray, they would not have done so. Allah has indeed brought into existence living beings that do not disobey Him, and [always] do what they are commanded to do: the angels.

Thus, this matter is not difficult for Allah, and when He imposes His will, it is only for the benefit of the creation. When He leaves man to choose, the Creator grants him this freedom of choice. Yet, when man chooses, he does not do anything despite Allah's disapproval or in defiance of His will because divinity requires two things. It requires power that is manifested in coercive matters that the servants cannot oppose, and man is the only being that has the right of choosing between alternatives within his own will. As for the rest of the universe, it is under the law of subjugation and they have no choice.

Subjugated creatures are a proof of Allah's absolute power, but they do not prove the creation's love for Allah because love can only exist when the being has free choice. Man prefers Allah's will to his own will. (Yet, unless Allah had so willed, they would not be doing all this: stand, therefore, aloof from them and all the falsehood they invent.)

`Iftira` (inventing of falsehood) means to invent and lie on purpose, and they are intentionally fabricating because they wanted to change the truth of the matter regarding procreation. Indeed, Allah created two mates – the male and the female – for the sake of procreation.

Allah the Exalted then says:

وَقَالُوا۟ هَـٰذِهِۦٓ أَنْعَـٰمٌ وَحَرْثٌ حِجْرٌ لَّا يَطْعَمُهَآ إِلَّا مَن نَّشَآءُ بِزَعْمِهِمْ
وَأَنْعَـٰمٌ حُرِّمَتْ ظُهُورُهَا وَأَنْعَـٰمٌ لَّا يَذْكُرُونَ ٱسْمَ ٱللَّهِ عَلَيْهَا ٱفْتِرَآءً عَلَيْهِ ۚ
سَيَجْزِيهِم بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَفْتَرُونَ ﴿١٣٨﴾

They also say, 'These cattle and crops are reserved, and only those we allow may eat them'– so they claim! There are some animals they exempt from labour and some over which they do not pronounce God's name [during slaughter], falsely attributing these [regulations] to Him: He will repay them for the falsehoods they invent [138] (The Quran, al-An'am: 138)

This is persistence in idolatry; for they divided the animals and crops and allotted a share for the idols. These cattle were secured for the idols and no one could do anything to them. No one could take milk from them or ride them, or use them to benefit people in any way. They did not realise that these cattle were a blessing from Allah and should be benefitted from. It does not make sense to do nothing with animals that has been subjugated for your benefit. They indeed did this, and the True Lord tells us about them: ‘And they say, “These animals and crops are forbidden; no one may eat from them except whom we will (to do so)”, so they (falsely) claim...’ (al-An‘am: 138), i.e. cattle that were forbidden to use, and they were also forbidden to ride.

‘And there are those [camels] whose backs are forbidden [by them]….’ (al-An‘am: 138) They persisted in disbelief and pronounced the names of the idols over them, ‘and those upon which the name of Allah is not mentioned - [all of this] an invention of untruth about Him….’ (al-An‘am: 138)

This is a type of fabrication that they did and they attributed it as being from Allah claiming that He commanded it. If they had said that these matters were from them, then the fabrication would not be so bad, but it is a severe fabrication because they put these assumed rules and attributed them to Allah. They deviated from the religion and said that some of their practices were from the religion, and that is why Allah will requite them for what they fabricated as confirmed by His statement: ‘He will punish them for what they were inventing.’ (al-An‘am: 138)

The True Lord says after that:

وَقَالُواْ مَا فِي بُطُونِ هَٰذِهِ ٱلۡأَنۡعَٰمِ خَالِصَةٞ لِّذُكُورِنَا وَمُحَرَّمٌ عَلَىٰٓ أَزۡوَٰجِنَاۖ وَإِن
يَكُن مَّيۡتَةٗ فَهُمۡ فِيهِ شُرَكَآءُۚ سَيَجۡزِيهِمۡ وَصۡفَهُمۡۚ إِنَّهُۥ حَكِيمٌ عَلِيمٞ ١٣٩

They also say, ‘The contents of these animals’ wombs will be reserved solely for our men and forbidden to our women, though if the offspring is stillborn they may have a share of it.’ He will punish them for what they attribute to Him: He is all wise, all aware [139] (The Quran, al-An’am: 139)

A falsehood leads them to another falsehood. They claimed that what was in the wombs of these cattle such as milk or foetuses if they came out alive, they would be for the males only and the women would not eat any of them. If anything from the wombs died both the men and the women would eat it, and this shows a split in the allotment.

The True Lord concludes the verse with the noble statement, ‘He will punish them for their description. Indeed, He is Wise and Knowing’ (al-An‘am: 139), i.e. He will requite them for their lies and fabrications with a suitable punishment for liars because He is wise in His actions, statement, legislation and power. He is All Knowing of the good and evil that they do, and He will punish them for what they have done in the most perfect and complete way.

The True Lord says after that:

قَدْ خَسِرَ ٱلَّذِينَ قَتَلُوٓاْ أَوْلَٰدَهُمْ سَفَهًۢا بِغَيْرِ عِلْمٍ وَحَرَّمُواْ مَا
رَزَقَهُمُ ٱللَّهُ ٱفْتِرَآءً عَلَى ٱللَّهِ ۚ قَدْ ضَلُّواْ وَمَا كَانُواْ مُهْتَدِينَ ﴿١٤٠﴾

Lost indeed are those who kill their own children out of folly, with no basis in knowledge, forbidding what God has provided for them, fabricating lies against Him: they have gone far astray and have heeded no guidance [140] (The Quran, al-An'am: 140)

The purport of loss is that they did not realise that Allah provides sustenance for them and He also provides sustenance for their children. Perhaps a father, killed his child, and he was making a living in the vastness of his sustenance. Many children have an abundant provision and it is said about these children that their faces are faces of goodness, felicity, and blessings (their presence is the cause of good things to happen). From the day they are born, goodness is also born, and this is so that man is not ungrateful for Allah's gifts, for when you show lack of gratitude for Allah's gifts, you deprive yourself form His gift by thinking that it is not a gift, and this is a massive loss.

Indeed, we notice that the Arabs were in an environment that responded to and answered cries for help. Whenever someone cried for help, they would find someone to rescue them, and the first people to help were men and their sons. An example(1) of this is what happened to the grandfather of Allah's Messenger peace and blessings be upon him when he wanted to dig a well. The people of Quraysh came and stopped him from digging and he said, 'If I had ten sons I would sacrifice one of them' (referring to the famous story concerning the father of our prophet, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Thus, having many sons in such situations provides family support and increases the number of sounds seeking help. This is only effective among people who are naturally disposed for helping others.

(1) The story of `Abd Al-Muttalib the prophet's grandfather digging the well of Zamzam and his vowing to sacrifice one of his sons

If you kill a child for fear of poverty, then you may lose the blessings correlating with the offspring you kill. More than this, you lose the joys of having ancestry as well as family succour. In this verse, at the very least, they have lost because they have gone against Allah’s will of procreation and bringing new children into existence. ‘Those will have lost, who killed their children in foolishness without knowledge....’ (al-An‘am: 140) Safahan, 'in foolishness' means that they acted recklessly and out of stupidity and ignorance. And ‘…prohibited what Allah had provided for them, inventing untruth about Allah. They have gone astray and were not [rightly] guided.’ (al-An‘am: 140) When they prohibit the cattle that Allah has provided for them as sustenance, they are indeed people of misguidance and loss. If they made use of them they would have benefitted from them, in carrying their loads, providing them with milk as well as meat. Because of their ignorance, they lost a great deal. They did what they did and deliberately lied about Allah. They went astray and they were not people of guidance. It would be sufficient to describe them as ‘gone astray’ but He added ‘and were not [rightly] guided.’ (al-An‘am: 140) This is because going astray means that one is not heading towards the intended destination and this could be due to not knowing the route. However, the True Lord showed them the way and they preferred to go astray even though the path of truth was available.

Then, the True Lord says:

وَهُوَ ٱلَّذِىٓ أَنشَأَ جَنَّـٰتٍ مَّعْرُوشَـٰتٍ وَغَيْرَ مَعْرُوشَـٰتٍ وَٱلنَّخْلَ وَٱلزَّرْعَ مُخْتَلِفًا
أُكُلُهُۥ وَٱلزَّيْتُونَ وَٱلرُّمَّانَ مُتَشَـٰبِهًا وَغَيْرَ مُتَشَـٰبِهٍ ۚ كُلُوا۟ مِن ثَمَرِهِۦٓ إِذَآ
أَثْمَرَ وَءَاتُوا۟ حَقَّهُۥ يَوْمَ حَصَادِهِۦ ۖ وَلَا تُسْرِفُوٓا۟ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ لَا يُحِبُّ ٱلْمُسْرِفِينَ ﴿١٤١﴾

It is He who produces both trellised and untrellised gardens, date palms, crops of diverse flavours, the olive, the pomegranate, alike yet different. So when they bear fruit, eat some of it, paying what is due on the day of harvest, but do not be wasteful: God does not like wasteful people [141] (The Quran, al-An’am: 141)

In the True Lord’s statement, ‘…causes gardens to grow…’, `ansha`a means that He brought things into existence originally and there was no previous example. Allah did not use any illustrating models. He started them without there being any previous model because there is no creator besides Him. If there is no other partner or equal besides the Creator, then when He creates He brings a creation into existence for which there is no prior example or likeness.

The word jannat ‘gardens’ indicates what we know of as a defined space in which there are different kinds of plants and fruits that we eat, and it is called both *jann*a and jannat because the three radical letters all imply covering and veiling. From these letters, we have the word junoon (madness) which is the covering and concealment of the intellect, and we also have the jinn who are veiled from our eyes. There is also al-mijann (a shield) because it protects man from the attacks of enemies.

A garden is a place that is filled with plants and fruits. The trees tower over from above and the branches and twigs intertwine such that they veil whoever is inside and they veil him from all other places, because he has no need for other places. In the garden, there are all the essentials of life such as food, fruits, pasture, water, verdure, enjoyment etc. It contains everything. Likewise, a massive house that is complete and has all the necessary rooms is called a qasr (palace) because it limits your need ‘qasarak’ for any other place. Everything you need is there, and you do not need anything else.

‘And it is He who causes gardens to grow, [both] trellised and untrellised…’ (al-An‘am: 141). He says, ‘ma`rooshaten wa ghayri ma`rooshaten’ (trellised and untrellised). The word `arsh indicates height. The ceiling can be called `arsh and the word `arsh can also refer to a throne ‘sarir’ such as in the True Lord’s statement, ‘And he raised his parents upon the throne…’ (Yusuf: 100), `arsh is (throne). `Arsh can also apply to kingdom, such as in the True Lord’s statement, ‘and hers is a mighty throne’ (an-Naml: 23), where `arsh is (throne).

All of this indicates height and elevation. Here, the True Lord says, ‘trellised and untrellised...’ (al-An‘am: 141), i.e. there are plants like grapes that require stands and supports that we provide when we take care of them because their branches are very supple and cannot stand on their own. However, there is another type of plant that stands by itself and we call ground grapes. It is as if the statement refers to vines. If you look at plants that do not have a stem such as watermelons, cantaloupes, and courgettes, you find, that all other plants that do not have a stem are, spread out on the earth, and they are not held up by any stands or supports, even though, nowadays, we try to elevate them to enhance their ability to produce. The verse here is describing what was present in the Arab lands, at the time of the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘And it is He who causes gardens to grow, [both] trellised and untrellised, and palm trees and crops…’(al-An‘am: 141), zar`a refers to the grains and seeds that we eat.

‘…of different [kinds of] food and olives and pomegranates, similar and dissimilar.…’ (al-An‘am: 141) When we look at this verse, we find that it has been preceded by a verse that contains all these meanings. He says, ‘And it is He Who sends down water from the cloud, then We bring forth with it buds of all (plants), then We bring forth from it green (foliage) from which We produce grain piled up (in the ear); and of the palm-tree, of the sheaths of it, come forth clusters (of dates) within reach, and gardens of grapes and olives and pomegranates, alike and unlike; behold the fruit of it when it yields the fruit and the ripening of it; most surely there are signs in this for a people who believe.’ (al-An‘am: 99)

Some people have tried to criticise the Quran by saying that it repeats the same meanings because they do not have the shrewdness to realise that the One speaking is Allah, and He talks about everything for a wise reason. Here, He is talking about these things as a proof of His existence and His oneness, and this is proven by how He concludes the verse, ‘…Verily, in all this there are messages indeed for people who will believe!’ However, the discussion in the verse that we are currently looking at, has to do with taking benefit from them. He says, ‘…Eat of [each of] its fruit when it yields….’ (al-An‘am: 141)

There is no doubt that having proper faith by believing in the One Creator, Allah, requires evidence first and foremost because its benefit is more inclusive, more general, more profound and longer lasting than eating for example. The most that eating can do is nourish us in this life. However, first proofs give us lasting rewards and abiding blessings. Therefore, the first verse is connected to proof, whereas this verse relates to benefit. Here we notice that He says, ‘…Eat of [each of] its fruit when it yields…’ This contains permission to consume fruits before they ripen without causing any kind of harm as a result;

if so, we should treat it with any way we are capable of, to remove, and negate the harm. Whenever you find food that has not ripened yet, you can eat it. The True Lord has not placed any restriction on us in tilling, sowing, or irrigating. Yet, Allah is the One Who causes things to grow and we are the ones who eat from it. We find that people of the countryside barbecue corn before it ripens. The True Lord says, '…and give its due (zakat) on the day of its harvest….' (al-An'am: 141)

Some said that the verse specifically refers to crops that are harvested. It does not include plants which are not harvested such as fruits. However, Imam Abu Hanifa Allah be pleased with him rejected this and said that everything the earth grows comes under the application of this context because it is not correct to take the meaning of hasad (harvest) from custom. Rather, it should be understood from the language.

What does hasad mean in Arabic? Linguistically, hasad means to cut, and when we split the desired fruit this is hasad. However, the harvest day 'yawm al-hasad' is for grains, when they are still on the ears. Imam Abu Hanifa Allah be pleased with him is of the opinion that, from the beginning, you give to whoever is present at the time of division. Likewise, when you thresh and scatter you give, and when you filter the grains you should also give. The harvest begins from the moment you weigh and what precedes it is not counted. Whatever right you give on the harvest day is not obligatory, because He does not state that it is 'a known right' (al-Ma'arij: 24). In this way, the sphere of goodness expands to others who are not farmers.

'…And be not excessive….' (al-An'am: 141) `Israf (wasting) means to exceed the bounds, and some people have explained wasting as merely an increase, but the truth is that any exceeding of the bounds, whether an increase or a decrease, is called `israf, because it is taken from saraf al-ma`a (the wasting of water) which is releasing water and letting it be wasted and not used for any benefit. Mujahid said, 'If someone had an amount of gold the size of Mount of Abu Qabis, and he then spent lawfully, it would not be considered wasting, but if he spent a single dirham on disobedience it would be considered wasting.'

Therefore, the meaning of ‘…And be not excessive…’ contains two matters; do not exceed the bounds that the True Lord has legislated by using this in disobedience, or do not waste by giving the poor less than they deserve.

Hatim At-Ta`i was very generous, and people blamed him for this generosity. One of them said to him, ‘There is no goodness in wasting’, to which he replied, ‘there is no wasting in goodness’. That is, so long as it is in goodness it is not waste.

If we consider the matter according to the two meanings, decrease and increase, then what prevents us from giving more to the poor? There is a story related to some people who were overcome with generosity, sacrifice, and munificence when they saw the abundance of their crops, and the returns from their land that Allah had given them. They gave a lot as Thabit ibn Qays(1) had done, who had fifty date palms and gave them all to the poor and did not leave anything for his children. This matter was raised in front of Allah’s Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and he said, ‘Give and do not waste’. Why? It is due to the fear that afterwards you might need that which you have given and thus you will regret having given.

The True Lord then says:

وَمِنَ ٱلْأَنْعَٰمِ حَمُولَةً وَفَرْشًا ۚ كُلُوا۟ مِمَّا رَزَقَكُمُ ٱللَّهُ
وَلَا تَتَّبِعُوا۟ خُطُوَٰتِ ٱلشَّيْطَٰنِ ۚ إِنَّهُۥ لَكُمْ عَدُوٌّ مُّبِينٌ ﴿١٤٢﴾

[He gave you] livestock, as beasts of burden and as food. So eat what God has provided for you and do not follow in Satan’s footsteps: he is your sworn enemy [142] (The Quran, al-An’am: 142)

After talking about His blessings upon us in cultivation and His blessings upon us in livestock, He says, ‘And of the cattle...’ which are camels, cows and sheep, ‘...beasts that carry loads...’ i.e. those which carry loads ‘humula’. It is also said that a person can be ‘hamool’, i.e. he is tolerant and bears a lot of burdens. The True Lord says: ‘And they carry your heavy loads to regions which you could not reach but with difficulty to yourselves….’ (an-Nahl: 7)

---

(1) The story of the palm tree of Thabit ibn Qays

That which they carry on their backs is also called ‘humula’, and that is why we say about a car that carry goods from a place to another that it has a load capacity ‘humula’ of such-and-such number of tonnes. ‘And of the cattle (He created) beasts that carry loads and those which are fit for slaughter only….’ (al-An‘am: 142)

On camels’ backs we carry men, and all our necessary things. The meaning of ‘farshan’ is the opposite of ‘hamula’. ‘Hamula’ are the strong animals that can carry loads. Every other grazing animal that cannot carry due to its small size, or because it has not been prepared for such a task, when you superficially look at it, you see it as something that covers the ground. The statement, ‘And of the cattle (He created) beasts that carry loads….’ (al-An‘am: 142) It may also mean animals that carry your goods to a place that you would be unable to reach without great hardship to yourselves. ‘Farshan’ refers to animals which you use to make a carpet that covers the ground, by knitting its fur, wool, and hair. ‘And of the cattle (He created) beasts that carry loads and those which are fit for slaughter only; eat of what Allah has given you and do not follow the footsteps of Satan; surely, he is your open enemy.’ (al-An‘am: 142)

In the discussion about cattle there is mention of those that carry loads, those that do not; and the fact that we eat them because we consume their flesh, milk and all the derivatives of their milk. This is how their benefits are multiplied. They carry us and we take their wabar (fur), their wool, and their hair to make carpets. Wabar is the hair of camels and soof (wool) is the hair of sheep, while the hair of goats is distinguished by lustre and a separation between its hairs.

We notice that He the Almighty says in the first verse ‘Eat!’ and in the second verse ‘Eat!’ and that is because it came after discussion about Allah’s provision on earth that they had deemed impermissible for themselves, so this meaning had to be emphasised, and He makes it clear, The One Who created is Allah, and the One Who commanded is Allah, so do not declare anything permissible or impermissible unless it is from the One Who created and commanded.

‘…eat of what Allah has given you and do not follow the footsteps of Satan; surely, he is your open enemy.’ (al-An‘am: 142) Satan is the one who whispers to them to make them contravene Allah’s way, and Satan’s enmity is manifest. If this enmity is from the past - as Adam and Eve peace be upon them descended from the rank of obedience to the rank of disobedience after he enticed them to contravene, and thus they left paradise - we must be on our guard against accepting his whispering.

The True Lord then distinguishes for us between the animals that carry loads and the animals that do not. He says:

ثَمَٰنِيَةَ أَزۡوَٰجٖۖ مِّنَ ٱلضَّأۡنِ ٱثۡنَيۡنِ وَمِنَ ٱلۡمَعۡزِ ٱثۡنَيۡنِۗ قُلۡ ءَآلذَّكَرَيۡنِ
حَرَّمَ أَمِ ٱلۡأُنثَيَيۡنِ أَمَّا ٱشۡتَمَلَتۡ عَلَيۡهِ أَرۡحَامُ ٱلۡأُنثَيَيۡنِۖ نَبِّـُٔونِي بِعِلۡمٍ إِن
كُنتُمۡ صَٰدِقِينَ ١٤٣

[God gave you] eight animals, in [four] pairs: a pair of sheep and a pair of goats – ask them [Prophet], ‘Has He forbidden the two males, the two females, or the young in the wombs of the two females? Tell me based on knowledge if you are telling the truth’ [143] (The Quran, al-An’am: 143)

The word azwaj (pairs) is the plural of the word zawj (one pair). Zawj refers to something that has something else that goes with it, such as a pair of sandals or shoes. In our customary language, we understand it to mean two, but originally it refers to one which has another that goes with it except when there is no difference between the two; we cannot benefit from one except when it is put with the other, and one might not be distinguished from the other like socks. In cases like this we have allowed for the language to call both together a zawj, but if there is a difference between the two we do not refer to the two as a zawj.

The male and the female are both human beings, and it is true that both are linked in that each one of them is a person, but the male has a task and the female has a different task. As for socks, either sock can be put on either foot as there is no difference between them.

Therefore, the word zawj refers to a singular thing that has something else that goes with it. The True Lord says, ‘And We said, “O Adam! Dwell you and your wife in the garden…”’ (al-Baqara: 35). He says ‘zawjuka’ (your wife). And the word zawj here applies to Eve peace be upon her because Adam peace be upon him is a ‘zawj’ and Eve peace be upon her is a ‘zawj’. The True Lord says: ‘And that He creates the two mates - the male and female…’ (an-Najm: 45) He says, ‘al-zawjaini’ (the two mates). He does not say that both together are a ‘zawj’. Otherwise, He would say that He created a ‘zawj’ that comprised of a male and a female. Therefore, the word ‘zawj’ refers to one that has something else that goes with. It is similar to the word ‘tawa`m’ (twins), which is never said for two people but rather, for one along with another. If there are two, we say ‘tawa`man’ (twins).

‘They are eight in pairs - two of sheep and two of goats...’ (al-An‘am: 143). ‘…two of sheep...’ means the male and the female. The male is called a kabsh (ram) and the female is called a na`jah (ewe). As for the two sexes of goats, we call the male tais (buck) and we call the female `anza (doe). All in all, there are four, and from this we understand that the word zawj indicates an individual that has something else that goes with it. ‘Say, “Has He forbidden the two males or the two females or that which the wombs of the two females contain? Inform me with knowledge if you are truthful.”’ (al-An‘am: 143)

If you are the ones declaring things to be permissible and impermissible, and you say that this is from Allah, then tell us: has He forbidden the two males or has He forbidden the two females? They will not find an answer, because Allah has not forbidden this and He has not forbidden the other. Therefore, the matter is accentuated by being put in the form of a question. When something is presented in the form of a question it means that the matter is decided; such that when you ask your opponent, he will only say what you would expect him to say. This is called a rhetorical question. The True Lord says, ‘...Inform me with knowledge if you are truthful.’ (al-An‘am: 143), i.e. tell me what knowledge you have of prohibition if you are people of truth because you are not able to prohibit anything. Indeed, only He the Exalted Who created and legislated can declare things permissible and impermissible. If you have any knowledge of this, then let us know about it.

Then the True Lord mentions the four remaining types of cattle by saying:

وَمِنَ ٱلْإِبِلِ ٱثْنَيْنِ وَمِنَ ٱلْبَقَرِ ٱثْنَيْنِ ۗ قُلْ ءَآلذَّكَرَيْنِ حَرَّمَ أَمِ ٱلْأُنثَيَيْنِ
أَمَّا ٱشْتَمَلَتْ عَلَيْهِ أَرْحَامُ ٱلْأُنثَيَيْنِ ۖ أَمْ كُنتُمْ شُهَدَآءَ إِذْ وَصَّىٰكُمُ
ٱللَّهُ بِهَـٰذَا ۚ فَمَنْ أَظْلَمُ مِمَّنِ ٱفْتَرَىٰ عَلَى ٱللَّهِ كَذِبًا لِّيُضِلَّ ٱلنَّاسَ بِغَيْرِ
عِلْمٍ ۗ إِنَّ ٱللَّهَ لَا يَهْدِى ٱلْقَوْمَ ٱلظَّـٰلِمِينَ ﴿١٤٤﴾

And a pair of camels and a pair of cattle – ask them [Prophet], ‘Has He forbidden the two males, the two females, or the young in the wombs of the two females? Were you present when God gave you these commands?’ So who is more wicked than he who fabricates lies against God with no basis in knowledge in order to lead people astray? God does not guide the evildoers [144] (The Quran, al-An’am: 144)

And ‘…two of cows’ are also male and female. We call the male a thawr (bull), and some people make the mistake of calling the bovine female a baqarah. Baqarah is the name for both; the male and the female. The ta`a in baqara(t) is to indicate one. The female is actually called a thawra. ‘And two of camels and two of cows. Say, “Has He forbidden the two males or the two females...”’ (al-An‘am: 144). They said, ‘We have not been following a messenger. We are living in a period in which no messenger has appeared for a long time, and that no messenger has been sent to us’. So, there can be no prohibition except from Allah and Allah will only convey a prohibition to them via a messenger. Were they witness to this prohibition? Did they witness their Lord and see Him when He commanded them with this prohibition, or are they prophets? Indeed, they are deliberately lying about Allah to lead people astray. Therefore, the True Lord does not guide those who wrong themselves and wrong others.

The True Lord Glorified is He and then says:

قُل لَّآ أَجِدُ فِي مَآ أُوحِيَ إِلَيَّ مُحَرَّمًا عَلَىٰ طَاعِمٖ يَطۡعَمُهُۥٓ إِلَّآ أَن يَكُونَ
مَيۡتَةً أَوۡ دَمٗا مَّسۡفُوحًا أَوۡ لَحۡمَ خِنزِيرٖ فَإِنَّهُۥ رِجۡسٌ أَوۡ فِسۡقًا أُهِلَّ لِغَيۡرِ
ٱللَّهِ بِهِۦۚ فَمَنِ ٱضۡطُرَّ غَيۡرَ بَاغٖ وَلَا عَادٖ فَإِنَّ رَبَّكَ غَفُورٞ رَّحِيمٞ ﴿١٤٥﴾

[Prophet], say, ‘In all that has been revealed to me, I find nothing forbidden for people to eat, except for carrion, flowing blood, pig’s meat – it is loathsome – or a sinful offering over which any name other than God’s has been invoked.’ But if someone is forced by hunger, rather than desire or excess, then God is most forgiving and most merciful [145] (The Quran, al-An’am: 145)

The True Lord the Exalted has spoken about prohibition in several verses, as there is the verse in which he says: ‘Forbidden to you is that which dies of itself, and blood, and flesh of swine, and that on which any other name than that of Allah has been invoked, and the strangled (animal) and that beaten to death, and that killed by a fall and that killed by being smitten with the horn, and that which wild beasts have eaten, except what you slaughter, and what is sacrificed on stones set up (for idols)....” (al-Ma‘ida: 3)

In the verse that we are currently discussing, we find that prohibition is restricted to only four things. He says, ‘Say, “I do not find in that which has been revealed to me anything forbidden for an eater to eat of except that it be what has died of itself, or blood poured forth, or flesh of swine - for that surely is unclean - or that which is a transgression, other than (the name of) Allah having been invoked on it”; but whoever is driven to necessity, not desiring nor exceeding the limit, then surely your Lord is Forgiving, Merciful.’ (al-An‘am: 145)

So, how does this passage agree with the other passage? We say to whoever says this: You are not distinguishing between brevity and verbosity, and you are not distinguishing between the general and the specific. What has been left in this verse can be classed under carrion because the animal that has been strangled, killed by a fall, gored to death or savaged by a beast of prey, as well as that which has been slaughtered on idolatrous altars or as a sinful offering for other than Allah, can all be considered carrion.

Then, to whoever says: 'Is not the Quran the sole source of legislation?' we say that legislation is also for Allah's Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him because Allah gave him authority to do so in His statement, '...and whatever the Messenger gives you, accept it, and from whatever he forbids you, keep back....' (al-Hashr: 7)

Thus, do not say that what is prohibited is confined to this verse because there are many forbidden things, and the proof is that sometimes Allah generalises. For example, He declares evil things khaba`ith impermissible for us, and every evil thing is impermissible. We said before that blood poured forth is impermissible, and blood poured forth is the fluid that pours out, flows, and emerges at the time of slaughtering. Is there blood that does not pour forth? Yes, and it is the blood that has acquired the ability to hold itself together to be an organ in the body, such as the liver and the spleen. That is why the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'Two kinds of carrion and two kinds of blood have been made permissible for us. The two kinds of carrion are the hoot (fish) and locusts, and the two kinds of blood are the liver and spleen.'(1) In another narration it says, '...samak' (fish) and locusts.'

According to the logic of prohibiting carrion and blood we would not eat the carrion of fish or the liver and the spleen, but Allah has declared fish, locusts, liver, and the spleen permissible for us because they do not harm the body. Fish and locusts do not have any blood that flows so whenever we slaughter them no blood flows out. As for the liver and the spleen, they are made of blood that is formed to be an organ in the body, and no organ in the body that carries out a task is composed of corrupt blood. Rather, they must all be composed of pure blood.

The True Lord who has legislated, considers the propitious circumstances of His commanded servants, and the situations in which they will find nothing to eat but carrion, and in this case, they only eat out of necessity to stave off harm and hunger, but the Muslim must not fill his stomach with these things.

'...but whoever is driven to necessity, not desiring nor exceeding the limit, then surely your Lord is Forgiving, Merciful.' (al-An'am: 145) Idtirar (necessity) is of different types; if you cannot find anything permissible to eat, or there is permissible food to eat, but someone is forcing you to eat impermissible food, and force is classed under necessity, necessity urges you to protect yourself in a life-threatening situation, so you eat certain food to nourish yourself and avoid dying out of starvation. If Allah has allowed you to eat carrion if you think you are going to die of starvation, then what about being forced to eat under the threat of being killed instantly? Indeed, this situation is direr. He is the One Who gives and commences dispensations, which means that this is considered a commandment. Allah loves that his servants make use of His dispensations just as he loves that they abide by His rules. So long as dispensations are within the scope of the commandment, then there is forgiveness and mercy.

(1) Narrated by Ibn Majah, Al-Hakim and Al-Bayhaqi from Ibn `Umar

The True Lord says after that:

وَعَلَى ٱلَّذِينَ هَادُوا۟ حَرَّمْنَا كُلَّ ذِى ظُفُرٍ ۖ وَمِنَ ٱلْبَقَرِ وَٱلْغَنَمِ
حَرَّمْنَا عَلَيْهِمْ شُحُومَهُمَآ إِلَّا مَا حَمَلَتْ ظُهُورُهُمَآ أَوِ ٱلْحَوَايَآ أَوْ مَا
ٱخْتَلَطَ بِعَظْمٍ ۚ ذَٰلِكَ جَزَيْنَٰهُم بِبَغْيِهِمْ ۖ وَإِنَّا لَصَٰدِقُونَ ﴿١٤٦﴾

We forbade for the Jews every animal with claws, and the fat of cattle and sheep, except what is on their backs and in their intestines, or that which sticks to their bones. This is how We penalized them for their disobedience: We are true to Our word [146] (The Quran, al-An'am: 146)

Here the True Lord mentions the second prohibition which is a prohibition for correction and discipline. An example is what Allah says in a previous chapter of the Quran: 'Wherefore for the iniquity of those who are Jews did We disallow to them the good things which had been made lawful for them and for their hindering many (people) from Allah's way.' (an-Nisa': 160)

Zhufur (claw) is that which is apparent when we look at the feet of certain animals and birds, as there are animals whose digits are clearly distinguished and separated from one another, and these were not forbidden for them. There is another kind in which we find that the digits are not clearly distinguished and separated from one another, such as camels, ostriches, ducks, and geese, and they are all considered animals that have claws. All animals that have claws were forbidden for the Jews, and they were not declared forbidden because of any harm in eating them but rather to discipline them because they transgressed by taking what was not their right. For this reason, Allah forbade for them some of that which was permissible for them, just as a father would punish his son who has wrongfully taken something from his brother, and thus he denies him his pocket money, even though pocket money is not intrinsically impermissible, but it is denied for the sake of discipline. The True Lord says: ‘Wherefore for the iniquity of those who are Jews did We disallow to them the good things which had been made lawful for them and for their hindering many (people) from Allah's way. And their taking usury though indeed they were forbidden it and their devouring the property of people falsely....’ (an-Nisa’: 160-161) It was because they did all of this, prohibition comes to them as a form of punishment and discipline: ‘And to those who were Jews We made unlawful every animal having claws, and of oxen and sheep We made unlawful to them the fat of both, except such as was on their backs or the entrails or what was mixed with bones: this was a punishment We gave them because their rebellion, and We are surely Truthful.’ (al-An‘am: 146)

When you slaughter an animal, you find some fat on the kidney and inside you find something called the fatty tissue, also the fat tail of a lamb. When you cut the head, you find that it contains a kind of fat. The True Lord forbade them from consuming the fat of cows, sheep, and goats. Likewise, all beasts that have claws were forbidden and there is an exception in the case of cows, sheep and goats, which is ‘...except such as was on their backs or the entrails....’ (al-An‘am: 146)

The fat that is on the backs was declared permissible for them, as well as the fat that is in the entrails. Al-hawaya (entrails) is the plural of hawiya, or haawiya or hawiya`a, and it is that which contains the intestines, i.e. it gathers and wraps around. In the countryside, a woman who has a piece of cloth that she twists and rolls up to making a round spiral, then, places it on her head to protect it when she is carrying other things on top of it, will say, ‘I made a hawaya. Hawaya here is the large intestine, and it is about a metre long. Due to Divine Wisdom, the intestine is in the form of a spiral that revolves around its centre. That is why it is called ‘al-hawaya’. We also call it ‘al-mombar (in Egypt). Likewise, they were permitted to eat whatever is mixed with the bone in the legs, sides, head and eyes as well as any fat that is mixed with a bone in the buttock because the buttock clings to the end of the tail, i.e. its starting point. It is the molecule in the starting point of the tail at the head of the coccyx. Due to Allah’s Mercy, He sends down a punishment that contains mercy, as He permits something and He forbids something else.

The True Lord concludes the verse by saying, ‘this was a punishment We gave them because their rebellion, and We are surely Truthful.’ (al-An‘am: 146) This prohibition is not a transgression against them or rigidity in dealing with them, but rather, it is because they acted unjustly, and the one who acts unjustly must have his share of the sanction, so that he reflects on what benefit acting unjustly brings about, and what benefit of which he deprives himself. When he compares between the two he may adjust his persistence on acting unjustly. They had turned away from the path of Allah, taken usury to increase their wealth, and wrongfully devoured other people’s wealth. That is why the True Lord declared some permissible things to be impermissible for them, and He is truthful in everything He conveys. We know that the rationale behind prohibiting some permissible things was because of their wrongdoing and disobedience; it was a punishment for them.

The True Lord says after that:

فَإِن كَذَّبُوكَ فَقُل رَّبُّكُمۡ ذُو رَحۡمَةٖ وَٰسِعَةٖ وَلَا يُرَدُّ
بَأۡسُهُۥ عَنِ ٱلۡقَوۡمِ ٱلۡمُجۡرِمِينَ ١٤٧

If they [the disbelievers] accuse you [Prophet] of lying, say, ‘Your Lord has all-encompassing mercy, but His punishment cannot be diverted from the evildoers’ [147] (The Quran, al-An’am: 147)

It was necessary, when they denied you regarding what you had conveyed to them from Allah, that Allah would hasten their punishment. Yet, the True Lord did not do so because He is the Lord of All-Encompassing Mercy. ‘...say: “Your Lord is the Lord of All-encompassing mercy….”’ (al-An‘am: 147)

However, beware of greedily desiring constant mercy; it is only a mercy of deferment. His punishment will never escape you. Here, He is also softening their hearts because He is saying, '...All-Encompassing Mercy...' It is as if He is saying to them, 'Check yourselves, have shame before Allah, and do not delude yourselves from the fact that he is the Lord'. He created out of nothing, provided out of nothing, He is in charge of educating, and disciplining you, but His punishment and chastisement will not be withheld from the criminals that are amongst you.

He the Glorified says after that:

سَيَقُولُ ٱلَّذِينَ أَشْرَكُوا۟ لَوْ شَآءَ ٱللَّهُ مَآ أَشْرَكْنَا وَلَآ ءَابَآؤُنَا وَلَا حَرَّمْنَا مِن شَىْءٍۢ ۚ
كَذَٰلِكَ كَذَّبَ ٱلَّذِينَ مِن قَبْلِهِمْ حَتَّىٰ ذَاقُوا۟ بَأْسَنَا ۗ قُلْ هَلْ عِندَكُم مِّنْ
عِلْمٍۢ فَتُخْرِجُوهُ لَنَآ ۖ إِن تَتَّبِعُونَ إِلَّا ٱلظَّنَّ وَإِنْ أَنتُمْ إِلَّا تَخْرُصُونَ ﴿١٤٨﴾

The idolaters will say, 'If God had willed, we would not have ascribed partners to Him – nor would our fathers – or have declared anything forbidden.' In the same way, those before them continually denied [the truth] until they tasted Our punishment. Say, 'Have you any knowledge that you can show us? You follow only supposition and tell only lies' [148] (The Quran, al-An'am: 148)

Whenever you read a verse that contains the words 'will say', then know that it comprises one of the Quran's inimitable secrets, and the one who this secret is conveyed through is an opponent, so that you know how the enemy of Allah conveys proof of Allah's veracity, which would indicate that he is in a state of heedlessness. In a previous verse, the True Lord says: 'The fools among the people will say...' (al-Baqara: 142). The meaning of 'will say' is that they do not say this now. The Quran tells that they will say it, and the Quran does not hide or conceal this verse. Rather, the Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him conveyed it as part of the Quran that is read and recited in prayer. If they had reflected on the matter they would have concealed the statement so that they could show that the one conveying and reciting the Quran did not tell the truth, or at least say, 'he said, "The fools among the people will say", but we are not fools and we do not say this'. But they uttered this foolish statement even though the verse preceded them by informing that they will say it because the One informing is Allah and no one from Allah’s creation can take precautions to find fault with Allah’s veracity. They heard these words from the Quran, and despite that they did not remain silent. Rather, the words just slipped their tongues, to corroborate the Quran.

Every individual who sins beyond measure against himself by not following Allah’s way says, ‘Indeed, our Lord is the One Who guides and He is the One Who leads astray’. They say this out of disdain and insolence to justify their foolish deeds. Those who sin beyond measure against themselves as well as the polytheists will go on saying this and they will try to make permissible what Allah has prohibited. The polytheists raised two issues: one issue regarding faith and another issue regarding the onus. They said, regarding the issue of faith, ‘If Allah had pleased we would not have associated [anything with Allah]…’ (al-An‘am: 148) as if they had associated with Allah’s will. They said about what they prohibited though Allah had made permissible, that what they did was also out of Allah’s will, to excuse themselves. This statement is illogical because if it were logical, it would have to apply to both good and evil. Someone could say, ‘Our Lord foreordained for us – and we seek refuge in Allah – that we would do evil, so why should he punish me’? This person will never say, ‘Allah foreordained for me to do goodness’. This is what logic would assume and require, but they are only talking about evil and not saying anything about goodness.

Their statement, ‘If Allah had pleased we would not have associated [anything with Allah]…’ (al-An‘am: 148) is correct in meaning because if He had willed that all mankind be guided to the right path, He would have done so, but He willed for us to have the ability to choose and within the framework of this choice, no matter goes beyond His universal will. It is disbelief and evil actions that are outside of His legislative will, and we know from before that there is a difference between the universal and the legislative. The disbeliever’s disbelief does not take place forcibly and coercively against Allah’s will. Rather, it occurs simply due to free will that Allah has allowed for man, for man is capable of choosing among various options.

Let ‘...him who so pleases believe, and let him who so pleases disbelieve...” (al-Kahf: 29). Man can direct the energy that Allah had granted him towards goodness or towards evil. Thus, either man’s choice will bring him to faith or it will lead him to disbelief. Therefore, the True Lord says about those who claim that their disbelief is out of His will: ‘...even so did those before them reject until they tasted Our punishment...’ (al-An‘am: 148). Those who had come before them had said this and they had denied the truth just as these people denied the truth, and a severe punishment and chastisement had come to them from Allah. Therefore, the True Lord commands Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him ‘…Say, “Have you any knowledge with you so you should bring it forth to us? You only follow a conjecture and you only tell lies.”’ (al-An‘am: 148)

Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him asked them for some knowledge to confirm the truthfulness of what they were claiming, i.e. ‘do you have something that Allah has conveyed to you’? The truth is that they do not have any knowledge and they do not have any proof. They are merely following conjecture and guessing; i.e. what they are saying does not have any clear purport. It is just guessing, conjecturing, and lying. He then says:

قُلْ فَلِلَّهِ ٱلْحُجَّةُ ٱلْبَٰلِغَةُ ۖ فَلَوْ شَآءَ لَهَدَىٰكُمْ أَجْمَعِينَ ﴿١٤٩﴾

Say, ‘The conclusive argument belongs to God alone.
Had He so willed He would have guided you all’ [149]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 149)

Certainly, if Allah the Glorified had so willed, He would have forced them to be guided and not even one of them would have been able to escape this guidance, but He did not will that. Rather, Allah wanted people to have faith in Him and follow His commandments as part of their (granted by Allah) ability to choose. He created creatures who ‘they do not disobey Allah in what He commands them but do what they are commanded.’ (at-Tahrim: 6) Has He not created a universe that is entirely under His command? ‘Say, “Then Allah's is the final evidence (of all truth)...”’ (al-An‘am: 149).

Al-hujja (the final evidence) is the proof you establish to support what you say in a dispute, and that is why we call our contracts hujjat al-milkiyyah (the evidence that proves our possession of something), or the ‘final evidence’ is that which can never be penetrated or have its purport negated by anything.

The True Lord says after that:

قُلْ هَلُمَّ شُهَدَآءَكُمُ ٱلَّذِينَ يَشْهَدُونَ أَنَّ ٱللَّهَ حَرَّمَ هَٰذَا ۖ فَإِن شَهِدُوا۟
فَلَا تَشْهَدْ مَعَهُمْ ۚ وَلَا تَتَّبِعْ أَهْوَآءَ ٱلَّذِينَ كَذَّبُوا۟ بِـَٔايَٰتِنَا وَٱلَّذِينَ
لَا يُؤْمِنُونَ بِٱلْءَاخِرَةِ وَهُم بِرَبِّهِمْ يَعْدِلُونَ ﴿١٥٠﴾

Say, 'Bring your witnesses to testify that God has forbidden all this.' If they do testify, do not bear witness with them. Do not follow the whims of those who have denied Our revelation, who do not believe in the Hereafter, and who set up equals with their Lord [150] (The Quran, al-An'am: 150)

If you do not possess any knowledge, then it is possible that you have witnesses to what you are saying. The statement, 'halumma shuhada`kom' 'Bring your witnesses', is addressed to a group, and the verb halumma (bring) equally applies to the masculine singular, the feminine singular, the masculine and feminine dual and the masculine and feminine plural. Thus, we can say, 'halumma (Bring yourself to me) O Zayd!', or 'halumma (Bring yourself to me) O Hind!' You can also say 'halumma' to a group of males or to a group of females, and this is the language of the people of the Hijaz. It is different from the language of the tribe of Banu Tamim, who add to this verb by saying, 'halumma O man!' and 'halumma O woman!', as well as 'halumma' (masculine and feminine dual), 'halummu' (masculine plural) and 'halumamnna' (feminine plural). The Quran was sent down in the language of the Hijazi people of Quraysh. The True Lord says, 'halumma' (bring) your witnesses that He has prohibited this. Indeed, you have no knowledge and, likewise, you have no witnesses to what you are claiming. If you do have witnesses then bring them.

What if they bring false witnesses? Indeed, He warns His Messenger, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him and makes it clear to him that even if they do bring witnesses, he should be wary of believing them because they are liars.

It is as if Allah wants to shame the witnesses as well in front of the audience before whom the witnessing will take place, and He also introduces two issues. He refutes and invalidates their argument, and He disgraces the witnesses that they brought. It is as if He says, 'Bring these people who said this to you', and thus shames those who dictated these orders on them.

The True Lord commands Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him not to follow those who have denied His signs Glorified is He. The word ahwa`a (vain desires) is the plural of hawa and it is that which ripens in the mind to turn man away from the truth. Thus, it is desires that cause the mind to deviate from the truth. '…and follow not the low desires of those who reject Our communications and of those who do not believe in the hereafter....' (al-An'am: 150)

They do not only deny Allah's signs, but they also do not believe in the Hereafter because if they had believed in the Hereafter, they would have known that they would be requited with a punishment that is appropriate for their crimes. If they understood this matter, it would have prevented them from yielding to their vain desires.

The True Lord concludes the verse with His noble statement, '...and they make (others) equal to their Lord.' (al-An'am: 150) We understand that the word ya`dil (regard as equal) is from `adl, meaning justice. If it is said that someone '`adala' in such-and-such, or someone '`adala' between so-and-so, or `adala in giving a verdict, or `adala in such-and-such, it means that he made it equal and equivalent. This meaning appears in another verse in which the True Lord says: 'All praise is due to Allah, Who created the heavens and the earth and made the darkness and the light; yet those who disbelieve set up equals with their Lord.' (al-An'am: 1)

They make that which is not equal to Allah be equal and equivalent to Allah. This is what was done by those who associated partners with Allah and the same goes for those who do not believe in Allah. One of them turns away in relinquishment of his Lord and he inclines and turns away from him, associates partners with Him and regards others as equal to Him. We notice that in the articulation of the word tawhid (monotheism), which is, 'there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah', we must not stop at 'there is no deity' because this would be a denial and negation of the existence of any God, and this - we seek refuge in Allah - is disbelief. Therefore, we must connect it to that which comes after it by saying, ‘there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah’. Or, when we utter the words ‘there is no deity worthy of worship but Allah’, our hearts have firm belief in His Oneness and the attributes of Majesty and Perfection that are due Him the Almighty. The meaning of ‘there is deity worthy of worship but Allah’ is that none deserves to be worshipped except Allah because those that are wrongly worshipped are many such as the idols, the stars, the jinn, human beings, angels and others.

The phrase ‘...and they make (others) equal to their Lord’ (al-An‘am: 150) indicates that they are people of idolatry. Likewise, whoever denies Allah’s existence is also regarding others as equal to Our Lord and is turning and deviating from acknowledging Him as a God.

The True Lord says after that:

قُلْ تَعَالَوْا۟ أَتْلُ مَا حَرَّمَ رَبُّكُمْ عَلَيْكُمْ ۖ أَلَّا تُشْرِكُوا۟ بِهِۦ شَيْـًٔا ۖ
وَبِٱلْوَٰلِدَيْنِ إِحْسَٰنًا ۖ وَلَا تَقْتُلُوٓا۟ أَوْلَٰدَكُم مِّنْ إِمْلَٰقٍ ۖ نَّحْنُ نَرْزُقُكُمْ
وَإِيَّاهُمْ ۖ وَلَا تَقْرَبُوا۟ ٱلْفَوَٰحِشَ مَا ظَهَرَ مِنْهَا وَمَا بَطَنَ ۖ وَلَا تَقْتُلُوا۟
ٱلنَّفْسَ ٱلَّتِى حَرَّمَ ٱللَّهُ إِلَّا بِٱلْحَقِّ ۚ ذَٰلِكُمْ وَصَّىٰكُم بِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَعْقِلُونَ ﴿١٥١﴾

Say, ‘Come! I will tell you what your Lord has really forbidden you. Do not ascribe anything as a partner to Him; be good to your parents; do not kill your children in fear of poverty’– We will provide for you and for them –‘ stay well away from committing obscenities, whether openly or in secret; do not take the life God has made sacred, except by right. This is what He commands you to do: perhaps you will use your reason [151]
(The Quran, al-An’am: 151)

When we consider this verse, we find that what is forbidden does not include any of the foods that contain the essentials of life. However, we find that it contains forbidden things that if we follow, we will ruin our abstract values that are the essentials of our spiritual life. Indeed, they are values which are the essentials of life: ‘Say, “Come, I will recite what your Lord has (really) forbidden to you”’ (al-An‘am: 151). Here the Quranic rendering uses the expression ta`al (come) which goes deeper than the direct meaning of the word which is 'coming'. It is as if the True Lord says, 'Come to Me as someone who wants to come to elevate himself by receiving My commands would do'. You approach Allah's commands to be raised and elevated above the state of decay of human legislations. Do not take your laws from the decay of human legislation because the necessary condition for the Legislator is that he must not be equal to the one He is legislating for. Otherwise, He stands to benefit from some of what he has legislated. Furthermore, it is a must that He be all encompassing so that He would miss nothing or overlook it. The created legislator does not legislate unless he is fully mature and his intellect is fully developed, and he is not able to prevent himself from benefitting from the legislation.

A capitalist, for example, legislates to derive benefit. A Marxist legislates to derive benefit, and each of them legislates with bearing his own personal desires in mind. Afterwards, legislations are amended when we notice that they have become insufficient and do not cover all the issues of life. It is as if the first legislator, due to the inadequacy of his knowledge, was unaware of certain realities that society revealed when issues came up. He looked at his statute and found that there was nothing covering those issues, so he says, 'We will amend the law and correct it'. Correcting the law means that there was something that he was unaware of when he made the law.

Therefore, it is necessary for the legislator not to be equal to the one he is legislating for, and no issue should be hidden from him so that he would have to supplement it later. Furthermore, he should not stand to benefit from the legislation, and this is never found amongst human beings. The True Lord made it clear, 'Leave the state of decay of human legislation, and elevate yourselves to the heavens to take your legislation from it'. When Allah calls, 'Come...', He is telling us to raise ourselves above the decay of our human legislation and to take our legislation for our daily activities from above because He does not benefit from what He has legislated, but rather, we are the ones who benefit. This is because nothing is hidden from Him. He is the Creator and He is the most entitled to legislate us.

'Say, "Come, I will recite what your Lord has (really) forbidden to you..."' (al-An'am: 151). 'Atlu (recite) is from the word tilawa (recitation) '...what Allah has (really) forbidden to you...', i.e. what He has made impermissible or what is forbidden for you to do "...that you do not associate anything with Him..." (al-An'am: 151). Here Allah Glorified is He mentions the prohibition of polytheism, by way of a linguistic arrangement that affirms to us that we should not associate partners with Him. When you give orders to someone you oversee you say, 'Listen to what I forbid you from doing, and follow my rules'. Then, you will start going into detail. The True Lord mentions the first clause of that which is forbidden and prohibited which is that we must not associate anything with Him. He conveys to us the prohibition of polytheism. This is the first thing to be prohibited. We must declare Allah to be One. Every prohibition of something is a command to do the opposite and every command is a prohibition to do the opposite. Thus, every command necessitates a prohibition and every prohibition necessitates a command. So, do not confuse commands and prohibitions. The meaning of 'alaykum' ('to you') is actually 'upon you' and it is the beginning of a new sentence, i.e. it is obligatory upon you not to associate anything with Him, and it is obligatory upon you to show kindness to your parents, and not to slay your children, and not to draw nigh to indecencies etc., i.e. adhere to this.

Then He says, '...and show kindness to your parents...' (al-An'am: 151). Here, He commands with emphasis that parents must be treated with goodness, and as it is an affirmative command, it necessitates that the opposite is prohibited which is to show disrespect to parents. Not showing goodness to parents is part of what Allah has prohibited. Then He says, '...and do not slay your children for (fear of) poverty - We provide for you and for them...' (al-An'am: 151).

Preserve the lives of your children. If you want to consider it as a prohibition, then it is a prohibition of killing children. If you want to consider it an affirmative command, then say, 'preserve life'. The statement '...for (fear of) poverty...', means impoverishment, as if they are poor and poverty is present, man will work to provide for himself before working to provide for those who come after him. So, to the people of poverty, remember that Allah shall provide sustenance for you and He will provide sustenance for those who come afterwards, and these are the children.

Allah the Almighty says, '...and do not draw nigh to indecencies, those of them which are apparent and those which are concealed...' (al-An'am: 151). This is a prohibition against approaching or even drawing near to accompanying circumstances and situations that could lead to the action. It is not just a prohibition of the action itself. When Allah wanted to forbid Adam and his wife peace be upon them from eating from the tree He says, '...but do not go near this tree...' (al-A'raf: 19).

This is because going near or approaching the tree could lead to eating from it. The same goes for '...and do not draw nigh to indecencies...' (al-An'am: 151), i.e. avoid antecedents that lead to indecencies, by having a glance or even staring at that which is forbidden. The same applies for the woman who adorns herself - in front of men other than her husband and unmarriageable kin - for indeed, by doing so, she approaches antecedents that lead to indecencies. If she refrains from this, she will be safe from tribulation and committing sins. The Messenger of Allah, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, 'What is lawful is clear and what is unlawful is clear, but between them are certain doubtful things which many people do not know. So, he who guards against doubtful things keeps his religion and his honour blameless. But he who falls into doubtful things falls into that which is unlawful, just as a shepherd who grazes his cattle near a pasture declared prohibited by the ruler; he is likely to stray into the pasture. Mind you, every ruler has a protected pasture and Allah's involved limits are those which He has declared unlawful. Verily, there is a piece of flesh in the body, if it is healthy, the whole body is healthy, and if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. Verily, it is the heart.'(1)

The True Lord is prohibiting you. (Do not approach) means to distance yourself from situations in which things will entice you, and this is similar to 'shun' totally. He says, 'So shun the abomination (worshipping) of idol, and shun lying speech.' (al-Hajj: 30) Here Allah says, 'And do not approach immoralities - what is apparent of them and what is concealed.' (al-An'am: 151) All shameful deeds that are manifest are the actions of the limbs that commit grave sins while ‘concealed’ refers to hidden actions such as hatred, rancour, and envy.

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nisa`i and Ibn Majah from Nu`man ibn Bashir

He continues, ‘…And do not kill the soul which Allah has forbidden [to be killed] except by [legal] right.’ (al-An‘am: 151) People differ over the meaning of the word soul which can only refer to the spirit encountering the material. The spirit, in its essence, is a good thing, and the material in its essence is a good thing that glorifies and worships ‘And there is not a thing except that it exalts [Allah] by His praise.’ (al-Isra’: 44)

Life starts when both the material and the soul meet, which makes the killing a mean that separates the spirit from the material by destroying the physical structure; and this is not death because Allah is the One Who causes the soul to die, whereas man kills the soul by means of killing the material structure [preserving] it. The One Who grants life is Allah and no one takes life except Him. Allah legislated for us to take life as retribution, or for adultery, married men, or women or for apostasy. This is killing in pursuit of justice, but He curses those who destroy what Allah has built without right. Man is what Allah has built, so do not transgress against it. Therefore, Allah has commanded us to take retribution for someone killing someone else so that everyone protects his own life, and when man protects every life, he himself is safe and secure.

This is how Allah commands us to kill the married adulterer, whether a male or a female. The same goes for the apostate. We are vigilant over freedom of belief, and the proof is that we do not kill an original disbeliever for their disbelief. However, the individual must understand that having faith in Islam requires that he studies it exhaustively and sufficiently, and he must know that his life is inviolable so long as he does not leave this religion. If he knows this, he will never enter it unless he is absolutely convinced. We defend choice, and we declare to whoever approaches Islam, ‘Beware of entering with merely an outward statement without understanding the meaning of Islam because if you enter and then apostate, you will be killed’. If the price of something is life, the individual must be extremely cautious. Furthermore, we are also confident that whenever an individual researches and studies the evidence they will become convinced that they truly have Allah, but we do not kill a disbeliever that has not entered Islam.

Therefore, killing the apostate is protecting the sanctuary of choice. So, beware of entering without deliberation because if you enter and then apostate, you will be killed. With this, the True Lord settles the matter in a way that it makes it necessary for the one approaching Islam to consider all the arguments and then enter having this knowledge. In any contract the individual attempts to know his obligations and to have these obligations made clear to him. He does not enter the religion in a foolhardy, thoughtless, or hasty manner. Rather, it is necessary for him to enter it unhurriedly and with deliberation.

In the case of marriage, the individual enters it with a simple phrase and exits with a simple phrase, which is 'you are divorced'. For this reason, the woman is cautious, and as long as she knows that the continuance of her marriage is the security of a simple phrase, then she must be careful not to put this right except in the hands of someone who is trustworthy. When her father says to her, 'Listen to me. It is for you to choose a husband who will honour you if he loves you and if he does not like you, he will not oppress you'; married life comes to an end with a simple phrase. Therefore, the woman must think about someone who can be trusted with this simple phrase.

Considering all this, there is still a caution against heedlessness. A man marries with a simple phrase and it is only said once. However, in the case of divorce, there are three stages; so watch out for heedlessness. A man marries a woman with a simple phrase, 'I marry you to myself', or her guardian marries her off and the husband accepts; by then, the marriage contract is completed. However, in the case of divorce, Allah has allowed, due to man's heedlessness and thoughtlessness, to divorce once and then overturn the decision without anyone coming in between them. Then he can give a second divorce and overturn it, but after the third divorce he finds the notice from the True Lord, 'We have made provisions for you by watching out for your heedlessness, but now if you want her to be your wife this cannot happen unless she marries someone else; and after that, she may go back to you or she may stay with whomever she has married'. Thus, you must be very careful with the matter you are embarking upon and the contract to which you are bound. If this is the case with contracting a marriage, then what about it regarding apostasy? Indeed, killing the apostate is only observable after he has believed, declared his faith, and become one of the believers, so that he knows that if he abandons Islam, he will be killed. In this way, entering Islam is made difficult and at the same time choice is defended.

He continues, '…This has He instructed you that you may use reason." (al-An'am: 151) The instruction is only for important matters without which life cannot be carried out properly. They are the main issues that cannot be neglected. This is why when we look at the Prophet peace and blessings be upon him, we find he spent twenty-three years receiving revelation and conveying it to the people on earth. He then went to his farewell pilgrimage, and he concentrated all the principles of the religion within His statement, 'This has He instructed you that you may use reason.'

'Instructed' is not the same as legislating because legislating requires full coverage of all related details, while instruction includes the main issues of the legislation. The intellect must comprehend the matter from the beginning to the end, and if you used your intellect regarding everything that is prohibited or commanded in the verse, you will find discernment giving you balance in decisions. The True Lord concluded the five things that He mentioned in this verse with, 'This has He instructed you that you may use reason.' These matters are agreed upon amongst all divine messages and amongst all religions, and they call them 'The Ten Commandments'.

The five things that He enjoined are:

- Do not ascribe divinity, in any way, to others beside Him.
- Do good unto your parents.
- Do not kill your children for fear of poverty.
- Do not approach any shameful deeds, be they open or secret.
- Do not take any human being's life – [the life] which Allah has declared to be sacred – except in the pursuit of justice.

We would expect Him to have said, 'These things have He instructed you' but He said, 'this has He instructed you', as if all of Allah's commands and prohibitions are one inseparable entity and all of them are embodied in 'adhere to what Allah has commanded and shun what Allah has prohibited'.

His statement, ‘that you may use reason’, means that if intellect was free to consider these things, independent of the way of the heavens, it would find that life on earth requires the existence of these things.

Therefore, how do we prevent people’s personal desires from clashing? There must be one Allah so that everyone does not follow his/her own personal desires. Indeed, we know that the origin of man is from the father and the mother. That is why He enjoined regarding this origin by saying, ‘and to parents, good treatment.’ He enjoined that we do not kill children for fear of poverty because life continues through them. After that life must be clean and pure for all individuals and must never be contaminated by filth; and this can only happen when we leave off shameful deeds, open or secret. This is because we notice that all illegitimate children are neglected. The True Lord wants progeny to be pure in life so that everyone bears responsibility for their lineage and they are reckoned for it in front of society. He warns us against taking a human life without right because the soul is the source of life’s perpetuation.

Then the True Lord, in the following verse, mentions that which completes the enjoinments:

وَلَا تَقۡرَبُواْ مَالَ ٱلۡيَتِيمِ إِلَّا بِٱلَّتِي هِيَ أَحۡسَنُ حَتَّىٰ يَبۡلُغَ أَشُدَّهُۥۚ وَأَوۡفُواْ ٱلۡكَيۡلَ
وَٱلۡمِيزَانَ بِٱلۡقِسۡطِۖ لَا نُكَلِّفُ نَفۡسًا إِلَّا وُسۡعَهَاۖ وَإِذَا قُلۡتُمۡ فَٱعۡدِلُواْ وَلَوۡ كَانَ ذَا
قُرۡبَىٰۖ وَبِعَهۡدِ ٱللَّهِ أَوۡفُواْۚ ذَٰلِكُمۡ وَصَّىٰكُم بِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تَذَكَّرُونَ ﴿١٥٢﴾

Stay well away from the property of orphans, except with the best [intentions], until they come of age; give full measure and weight, according to justice’ – We do not burden any soul with more than it can bear – ‘when you speak, be just, even if it concerns a relative; keep any promises you make in God’s name. This is what He commands you to do, so that you may take heed’ [152] (The Quran, al-An’am: 152)

We know that the orphan is the one who has lost their father and has not yet become an adult, and this is the case with man. As for an orphaned animal, it is the one that has lost its mother. The True Lord says, ‘And do not approach the orphan's property except in a way that is best…’.

Allah the Exalted presupposes that the orphan has wealth and He did not say, ‘Do not consume the wealth of an orphan’. Rather, He has commanded you not to approach it, or even desire it or think about it. You must distance yourself from this. Yet, does this mean that it is an absolute command? No, because after that He added, ‘except in a way that is best.’ In other words, we invest their wealth profitably so that it suffices for their livelihood, while the original amount and profit belongs to them. That is why He said in another verse, ‘but provide for them with it.’ (an-Nisa’: 5)

Thus no one should take the wealth of an orphan, save it, give them a monthly allowance until they grow up, and then finds that the wealth has decreased or disappeared. That is why He did not say, ‘but provide for them from it’. Rather, He said, ‘but provide for them with it’, i.e. provide them with sustenance that is profited from it which would not exist unless invested for the benefit of the orphan. Trusteeship of an orphan to manage their wealth is not prohibited when it is administered by those qualified for business administration and trusteeship. A qualified businessman and a trustee may be established, but his situation does not support him to bear the responsibilities and troubles of his own life and administer the wealth of the orphan. Allah says regarding this, ‘and whoever amongst guardians is rich, he should take no wages.’ (an-Nisa’: 6) The guardian should volunteer this custodianship for the sake of Allah without taking a wage in return for it; this guarantees that if there is an orphan in his progeny, until the Day of Resurrection, he will find someone who will support him voluntarily for the sake of Allah, and his wage will be with Allah. The True Lord says, ‘And let those [executors and guardians] fear [injustice] as if they [themselves] had left weak offspring behind and feared for them. So, let them fear Allah and speak words of appropriate justice.’ (an-Nisa’: 9)

When an orphan finds someone to take care of him and society shows compassion to every orphan in it, and the affairs of the orphans are taken care of by people who are trustworthy and able to administer their affairs, people will be less worried about dying and leaving their children behind. People fear death because they have children who are dependent on them and they can see that society does not take care of orphans. However, if someone finds an orphan being honoured, and sees that he has numerous fathers from amongst the Muslims, then he will feel at ease regarding his children when death comes. However, do not wait for society to rectify itself. Rather, you must rectify yourself and act righteously towards any orphan, as this will allow you to be at ease regarding your children as they will find somebody to take care of them after you die. There is a clear example of this in the chapter of al-Kahf between the righteous servant and Musa (Moses) when they passed by a village, 'So they set out until when they came to the people of a town, they asked its people for food….' (al-Kahf: 77)

They did not ask for money, but had asked for food to stave off hunger, and this is a pressing need even though they asked the people of the village for food, the people of the village refused to take them in as guests. The meaning of this is that it was a village of wicked people. Despite the righteous servant receiving such a response and being refused food, when he found a wall and realised, with his intuitive knowledge, that the wall wanted to fall, he rebuilt it. Musa (Moses) reproached him and as he was looking at the situation logically. He and his sheikh had asked the people of the village for nothing but food and they refused; how can you respond to them by building a wall for them? You should take a payment for building it, as they are wicked people, and this is what Musa (Moses) said. However, the righteous servant rewarded them with what they deserved because by building the wall, he had made it impossible for them to gain access to the treasure. If he had left the wall to collapse, the treasure underneath it which belonged to two orphans would have been discovered. This is how the righteous servant knew how to raise them. After that, Allah explained to us that the wall belonged to two orphan boys living in the town. 'So, your Lord intended that they reach maturity and extract their treasure, as a mercy from your Lord.' (al-Kahf: 82)

It is as if bringing forth the treasure is to coincide with reaching puberty, and it is as if the righteous servant built the wall to last for a limited period such that it would not collapse until the boys reached the age of reason. The righteous servant built the wall in such a way that it would not hold together once the two boys had come of age which at that point, they would bring forth their treasure. After that He mentions to us the reasons behind all of this. He said, '…and their father had been righteous….' (al-Kahf: 82)

It is as if the righteousness of the father is what the True Lord wanted to use to show us how He protected the children's treasure. Thus, the righteous servant and Musa (Moses) came to the wicked people of the village and asked for food, but they did not feed them. Then the righteous servant rebuilt the wall as a temporary measure to protect the treasure from these wicked people. The True Lord says here, 'And do not approach the orphan's property except in a way that is best.' Whoever is not able to approach the wealth of an orphan and use it in a way that is best should stay away from it.

And so that people do not become wary of taking care of an orphan's wealth, He said, 'whoever amongst guardians is rich, he should take no wages, but if he is poor, let him have for himself what is just and reasonable.' (an-Nisa': 6) The words 'what is just and reasonable' means that the wealth should never be stored away or hidden from him. Rather, he should consume only what he needs to stave off hunger and clothe himself with what he needs to cover his body. In this case, we know that the orphan's intellect has not yet fully matured and the same goes for the adult who is weak-minded, as he is also unable to act independently. That is why the True Lord says in His eloquent rendering where He conveys the expression that reveals vast meanings, 'And do not give the weak-minded your property.' (an-Nisa': 5)

The True Lord classed the wealth of the weak-minded in the same category as the wealth of a legal guardian because a weak-minded person abuses his possessions and may squander them. However, the wealth can be returned to this person once they regain their intellect. The True Lord says, 'if you perceive in them sound judgement, release their property to them.' (an-Nisa': 6)

Indeed, the Quranic rendering is amazing. It encourages people not to leave a weak-minded person to squander his wealth as it will be a loss for the whole society. Thus, as long as the person is weak-minded, then regard his wealth as your wealth, and be a trustee over it as you would do over your wealth. When you find the person to be mature of mind, and you are confident of that, then the True Lord commands you to give their wealth back to them, and we return it to the orphan. Here the True Lord says, 'And do not approach the orphan's property except in a way that is best.'

This is if he has wealth, so what about the orphan that does not have wealth? Here the enjoinment is stronger. It is narrated from Sahl ibn Sa`ad Allah be pleased with him who said, ‘Prophet Muhamad said, “I and the carer of the orphan are like this in paradise.” He indicated with his index finger and middle finger and separated between them.’(1)

It is narrated from Abu Hurayra Allah be pleased with him who said, ‘Prophet Muhamad said, ‘The one who strives to take care of widows and the poor is like the one who fights in Allah’s cause, and he is like the one who fasts during the day and prays during the night.’(2)

Be careful, and make sure that supporting an orphan is done for Allah’s sake, because it is possible for an orphan to have a beautiful mother and a guardian may want to get closer to her by means of the child. Beware of this because, in addition to incurring Allah’s wrath and anger, it is vileness, wickedness, and depravity.

‘And do not approach the orphan's property except in a way that is best until they reach maturity.’ It is to stress the importance of vigilance over an orphan’s wealth until they reach maturity, at which point they will have an independent identity. How do we determine this? It is when an individual can reproduce. This is how we measure maturity. It is similar to when a fruit ripens, i.e. it contains a seed and we can place that seed in the ground and it will eventually grow into a tree. If you pick a fruit before it has ripened, it will not have a sweet taste. You will not enjoy its taste until it contains a seed and is ripe.

‘Reach maturity’ means that the individual has become capable of reproducing and this is what we call maturity. He is also able to act independently with regards to his wealth and everything else. The True Lord continues, ‘And give full measure and weight in justice.’ (al-An‘am: 152)

Measures are the means for measuring a size, while scales are the means for calculating density, so there is a criterion for size and a criterion for density. The criterion for size is measures and the criterion for density is weight. There are also just calculations in measurement. For soft goods, for example, and the measurement therein are done in metres. Therefore, everything has its own way of calculation. If you want to weigh something, then you must do so with justice.

---

(1) Narrated by Al-Bukhari, At-Tirmidhi and Abu Dawud

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in Al-Adab Al-Mufrad

This matter is difficult to achieve. That is why scales differ according to the preciousness of things. When we weigh beans, or lentils or potatoes, we weigh them with a large scale. Conversely, when we weigh things that are slightly costlier, we use a more precise scale. If the thing being weighed is gold, we surround the scales with glass walls because a gust of wind could decrease or increase the weight.

Indeed, we attempt to prevent air currents from affecting it, and when we weigh chemical substances we use a scale that functions according to the atom. Therefore, everything that is weighed, is weighed according to its preciousness and the degree to which it can be affected by external factors. This is because achieving justice in weighing is a difficult matter, and the same goes for measures. When someone measures the size of something, they take the scale and they shake it so that the measure can be precise and clear. If he wants to ignore his conscience and take more than his right, he fills the measure with more than it can bear and holds up the extra weight with his hand so that it does not fall. Our Lord says, ‘Woe to those who give less [than due]. Who, when they take a measure from people, take in full. But if they give by measure or by weight to them, they cause loss.’ (Al-‘Imran: 1-3)

When he is to receive his due, he demands that it be given in full and takes more when he is making a purchase, but when he is selling, he decreases the measure or the weight and takes a price that exceeds whatever is being weighed or measured. The foundation of exchanges, in most cases, is between two parties. Some obstinate people say, ‘How can the True Lord say, “Woe to those who give less [than due]”, when giving short measure in any matter has to do with increase and not decrease’? Bear in mind that the One speaking is Allah, and giving short measure leads to an increase for one party and a decrease for the other. Every transaction between two people consists of a sale and a purchase, and if one of the two parties wants the other to lose out and for himself to be given in full, then he is giving short measure.

That is why the subtle Quranic rendering comes from our Lord, 'And give full measure and weight in justice. We do not charge any soul except [with that within] its capacity.' The True Lord says this because He knows that weighing and measuring with justice is a matter that is very difficult because the True Lord, due to the vastness of His Mercy in legislating for us, did not make the scope of our ability something that can be dominated by things that are beyond our ability. Regarding the accuracy of measures and weights He said, 'We do not charge any soul except [with that within] its capacity' because weighing and measuring are two matters dominated by circumstances which man has no control over. That is why we said that when we weigh things that we know are not precious, we use a certain tool. If it is slightly more precious, then another tool is used. If the things are very precious such that they can be affected by the tiniest of external factors, then we use an accurate tool that is protected from these factors so that not even a current of air can affect it. As a result, any increase or decrease that is beyond our capacity is excused. He then says, 'And when you testify, be just, even if [it concerns] a near relative.'

Is justice limited to one's statements or is it extended to action as well? In a dispute between two people, justice can be achieved by speaking not by just taking an action. When justice has become the norm in your speech, you become accustomed to it and you love it until it permeates all your other actions.

Speaking justly includes admitting something one has in a manner conforming to justice and truth, like when you bear witness, give a verdict, bequeath, give a fatwa, speak truth. Thus, being truthful in speaking has a place in several circumstances. This balance is shaken when falsehood is preferred over truth because if you judge in someone's favour who is not deserving, you have given them what is not rightfully theirs. Indeed, this action of yours restricts others in their life. However, if you protect the interests of everyone, and everyone takes their share of life according to their actions, then all matters are balanced and there would be no one living off the efforts of others. Therefore, speaking the truth is that which anchors life's interests.

That which affects justice is personal desires which prejudices one's decision away from truth. Justice is most required when you or one of your relatives is involved. One may be leaned to unjustly favour one's relative to please them. This, however, is not giving your relatives their right because the right of your relatives requires that you deny them all that is forbidden and you protect their honour and religion before securing for them any temporary benefit. That is why the True Lord commands you to speak with justice even if it is for, or against a relative because when you judge wrongfully, you are actually judging against them and not for them.

'And the covenant of Allah fulfil.' We know that Allah's covenant is that which He has contracted with us, and the first bond and the peak of bonds is to have faith in Him which consequently requires the reception of commandments from Him. This is because every commandment that Allah gives His creation is considered a bond within the framework of faith since Allah does not give a ruling or clarify it for those legally responsible unless He says beforehand, 'O you who have faith.' (al-Ma'ida: 1) It refers to those who have believed in the original bond underpinning all values, which is creed; 'You have believed in Me as your God; thus, take commandments from Me because you have entered into a bond with Me which is the bond of faith'.

That is why Allah does not give commandments to someone who does not believe in Him. We must accept the proof for every ruling from our faith in the One Who gave it, so do not look for proof in every ruling. The rationale behind every ruling is only that you believe in the One Who commands you to do such-and-such which makes the rationale of everything is the ruling itself.

The True Lord concludes the noble verse with His statement, 'This has He instructed you that you may remember.'

Ibn `Abbas Allah be pleased with him said about these verses, 'Indeed they are firm principles that are not abrogated in any of the revealed Books. It has been said that they are the mother of the Book. Whoever acts in accordance with them will enter Paradise but whoever abandons them will enter the Fire.'

No legislation has come to abrogate any one of these enjoinments. That is why Ka`ab Al-Ahbar (a Jew who became Muslim) said, 'By the One who has Ka`ab's soul in His hand, indeed these verses are the first thing in the Torah, "Say, '"Come, I will recite what your Lord has prohibited to you."" Then we find that this last enjoinment gathers everything. We find that nine enjoinments have already been dealt with; five of them are concluded with, 'so that you might use your reason', the other four are concluded with, 'so that you may take heed.' For the tenth one, He said, 'you may become righteous.' This tenth enjoinment gathers all the kinds of virtues that have been commanded, and it is in the following statement of the True Lord:

وَأَنَّ هَٰذَا صِرَٰطِى مُسْتَقِيمًا فَٱتَّبِعُوهُ ۖ وَلَا تَتَّبِعُوا۟ ٱلسُّبُلَ فَتَفَرَّقَ
بِكُمْ عَن سَبِيلِهِۦ ۚ ذَٰلِكُمْ وَصَّىٰكُم بِهِۦ لَعَلَّكُمْ تَتَّقُونَ ﴿١٥٣﴾

This is My path, leading straight, so follow it, and do not follow other ways: they will lead you away from it –' This is what He commands you to do, so that you may refrain from wrongdoing' [153] (The Quran, al-An'am: 153)

He concluded the nine enjoinments with this statement because the straight path includes the nine preceding enjoinments and includes whatever else He did not mention here. I referred above to the ending of the previous commandments; so what is the difference between reason, taking heed, and becoming righteous?

Indeed, the first five things which the True Lord stated are, 'Say, "Come, I will recite what your Lord has prohibited to you. [He commands] that you not associate anything with Him, and to parents, good treatment, and do not kill your children out of poverty; We will provide for you and them. And do not approach immoralities - what is apparent of them and what is concealed. And do not kill the soul which Allah has forbidden [to be killed] except by [legal] right. This has He instructed you that you may use reason.' These matters were present in the environment in which the Quran was sent down. People were associating partners with Allah, showing disrespect to their parents, killing their children, yielding to shameful deeds and killing human beings that Allah had forbidden to kill (except in the pursuit of justice). He made it clear to them: use your reason regarding these things. If you use your reason, you will find that Allah's commandment prohibits you from those things. It is a matter that requires a sound intellect that can make sound conclusions. However, the other four are things they used to do and regard as praiseworthy which included dealing with the wealth of orphans, giving full measure in weights and measures, speaking justly and observing bonds; He said, ‘so that you might take heed’, i.e. beware of neglecting them. If you are doing them in a state of ignorance, then do them and attach more importance to them now that you are in Islam. Then the conclusive commandments, ‘And, [moreover], this is My path, which is straight, so follow it; and do not follow [other] ways, for you will be separated from His way. This has He instructed you that you may become righteous.’

Seeing as this commandment comprises all rulings, positive and negative, prohibitions and commands, He made it clear to them that they must follow the straight path to protect themselves from the consequences of the True Lord’s attribute of Power, and the first of His soldiers is the fire.

The path is a paved way leading to the Hereafter, which is – as has been said – finer than a hair and sharper than a sword. What does this mean? It means that it is walked upon with absolute wakefulness. If one leans right or left, he will fall. It is a path that has been made with precision and it is not a wide road, so you must walk along Allah’s path and His straight way. Do not deviate towards the right or the left because leaning – as we have said – will take you further away from the objective. If you begin from a place, and then you make a mistake of one millimetre in balancing yourself, and then wherever you go the imbalance will become greater, i.e. the slightest deviation at the starting point will make the abyss bigger and the distance farther.

The same goes for religion. Whenever we come together and we draw closer to one another, we travel along the straight path. Whenever we distance ourselves from the legislation, we divide ourselves into different paths.

The Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him illustrated clearly what was intended in this verse when he sat amongst His Companions and drew a line. He then said, ‘This is Allah’s path.’

Then he drew lines going towards the right and lines going towards the left. Then he said, ‘These are paths and at the head of every path is a devil, calling to it.’ He then read this verse, ‘And, [moreover], this is My path, which is straight, so follow it; and do not follow [other] ways, for you will be separated from His way.' That is why whenever the people of truth and the people of goodness come closer to the centre, the meeting continues to get closer and closer until it disappears and they will be all standing at a single point.

Look at the True Lord's majesty when He lays down the straight path in His religion and He attributes it to Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him 'this is My path, which is straight.' The Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him adheres to this path. The one doing this and walking in it, is commanding you to walk along. He is not commanding you to something, while he himself abstains from it. Even if he was cheating all of us, he would never cheat himself. This is his straight path to which he adheres.

The 'way' here is known because it is to Allah, so it is as if Allah's 'way' is the path of Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him, but the action is attributed to Allah alone. Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has not made that path for himself but rather, Allah wanted it to be for all the believers, and the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him is the one who takes them by the hand and leads them to it.

When we look at all the disputes that have come about between the various religions; for example, between the Jews and the Christians, 'The Jews say, "The Christians have nothing [true] to stand on," and the Christians say, "The Jews have nothing to stand on."' (al-Baqara: 113) The idol-worshippers said, 'neither of those people are upon anything.' 'Thus, the polytheists speak the same as their words.' (al-Baqara: 113)

We are faced with three statements. The Jews say that the Christians have no valid ground for their beliefs and the Christians say that the Jews have no valid ground for their beliefs. The people of Mecca said the same thing. Then we find that the one religion they had between them, has divided into numerous sects, and each sect has something to which is fervently adhered. Each sect regards what it says as the truth and whatever is said by anyone else is falsehood. How did this come about when the source is one and the divine revelations that the messengers were sent with is one message? Indeed, desire for temporal power is the source of this dissention. Everyone wants to have status, influence and a dynasty to succeed them. This person wants to be the leader of a group and that person wants to be the leader of a group. If they had united upon the one path, there would not be any groups.

Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘The Jews divided into seventy-one sects, and the Christians divided into seventy-two sects. My nation will divide into seventy-three sects….’ (1)

In another narration, he said, ‘All of them are in the Fire except one, and they are the group. The group is Ahl as-Sunna wal-Jama`ah (Muslim Orthodoxy). In another narration he said, ‘…what I and my companions are upon.’

We notice the precision of this statement in the number of denominations and sects, even if you have not heard of some of them because they died out after the death of those who fervently adhered to them as well as of those who wanted to bask in its glory.

Therefore, the problem arises whenever there is a ruling under consideration. One person will have an opinion and another will have another opinion, for no reason except to differ. We say to them, ‘You should take note of the difference between a decisive ruling and a ruling that Allah has left to be an object of independent legal reasoning (ijtihad)’. When Allah wants a ruling to be decisive, He sends it down in an unequivocal manner, and this text puts an end to any differing. When Allah wants a ruling that will be alleviation in one way or another for those who are legally responsible, He brings a text that can be subject to independent legal reasoning. When the legislator brings a text of that nature, it means that it is allowed to apply independent legal reasoning to it because if He had wanted a ruling that was not differed over, He would have brought a decisive text.

A continuing example is what the Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him left for us in his noble Sunnah. When the True Lord wanted him to maintain the condition of war to discipline Banu Qurayza, who fought alongside the idol-worshippers of Mecca, Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him said, ‘None of you should pray `asr (the mid-afternoon prayer) before reaching Banu Qurayza.’(2)

The Companions then made their way to the tribe of Banu Qurayzha and the sun gave notice that it was setting while they were still travelling. The companions then split into two camps. One camp said, 'We will pray `asr before the sun sets.' The other camp said, 'The Messenger of Allah told us not to pray until we had reached Banu Qurayza.' Thus, some of them prayed `asr before the sun set, while the others did not pray until they had reached Banu Qurayzha. This matter was brought before the legislator, (Prophet Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him), and he gave consent to both positions because the text allows for such.

---

(1) Narrated by Abu Dawud, At-Tirmidhi, An-Nisa'i and Ibn Majah from Abu Hurayrah

(2) Narrated by Al-Bukhari in the chapter on Military Expeditions Al-Maghazi and Al-Bayhaqi in Ad-Dala`il and (As-Sunnan)

Why? It is because every event must occur within a time and a place, so those who said that the sun was about to set and they had to pray `asr before it set were looking at the time. Those who said that they would not pray until they had reached Banu Qurayza were looking at the place. When the matter was brought to the legislator who knows best, he gave consent to both positions.

Therefore, if a ruling carries a decisive text, there is no possibility for a difference of opinion. If Allah has left it to be subject to independent legal reasoning, the text is not decisive, and we cannot condemn someone for following either position. That is why we have been left the etiquette of the imams whose schools are still in existence now. We find one of them saying, 'The position I took is correct with the possibility of it being incorrect, and the one who takes the opposite position is incorrect with the possibility of being correct'. It is their beautiful etiquette that has allowed their schools to last this long.(1) The lack of etiquette of others caused their schools to become obsolete and vanish. You do not know about them and may Allah be praised that you do not know about them. The True Lord says after that:

ثُمَّ ءَاتَيْنَا مُوسَى ٱلْكِتَـٰبَ تَمَامًا عَلَى ٱلَّذِىٓ أَحْسَنَ وَتَفْصِيلًا
لِّكُلِّ شَىْءٍ وَهُدًى وَرَحْمَةً لَّعَلَّهُم بِلِقَآءِ رَبِّهِمْ يُؤْمِنُونَ ﴿١٥٤﴾

Once again, We gave Moses the Scripture, perfecting [Our favour] for those who do good, explaining everything clearly, as guidance and mercy, so that they might believe in the meeting with their Lord [154] (The Quran, al-An'am: 154)

Whenever we hear the word 'then' we know that it is a conjunction. There are many conjunctions and each conjunction has a meaning that it conveys.

---

(1) From Proofreader: This information is per the knowledge and belief of Sheikh Ash-Sha`rawi Allah rest his soul, and it was stated by him to further clarify certain points, but it does not necessarily confirm to the scientific facts and information proven true.

Here we have ‘Then We gave Musa (Moses)’, and Musa (Moses) was given the Book before this statement of Allah, ‘Say, “Come, I will recite what your Lord has prohibited to you…’ The Torah came before the Bible while the Quran came as the final Book; so how can this statement be preceded with ‘then’ when Musa (Moses) was given the book before the True Lord’s statement, ‘Say, “Come, I will recite what your Lord has prohibited to you…”’?

We say to the people who have this understanding: You have understood ‘then’ to indicate a sequence of actions and events but forgotten that ‘then’ can also indicate a sequence of information. Someone could come up to you and say, ‘How come you do not ask about so-and-so and you do not give him his right that he has over you, such as the right of kinship’. You respond, ‘How can this be? I did such-and-such for him. Then, I did such-and-such for his father, and then I did such-and-such for his grandfather’.

Thus, you are giving a sequence of information and you are adding to that sequence. The Arab poet said,

Indeed, whoever is a leader, then his father was a leader
And then, before that, his grandfather was a leader

Leadership first belonged to the grandfather, then to the father and then it was inherited to the son. ‘Then’ in this case does not indicate a sequence of events, but rather a sequence of information, i.e. the sequence of conjoined elements is according to the order that they are spoken of, not according to any chronological sequence of events.

Look at the perfect rendering of the Quran when it says, ‘And We have certainly created you, [O Mankind], and given you [human] form. Then, We said to the angels, “Prostrate to Adam”; so they prostrated, except for Iblis. He was not of those who prostrated.” (al-A‘raf: 11) We know that Allah commanding the angels to prostrate to Adam was in the beginning, so He, in this noble statement, wants to put our state into sequence; He created us after He formed us, and He formed us after He told the angels to prostrate to Adam.

‘Then We gave Musa (Moses) the Book…’ Since this is the story of Musa (Moses), then the Book is the Torah. When the Book is used in an undefined sense, it applies to the Quran because it is the book that gathers and supersedes everything that is in the other books. For example, if it is said, 'We sent down the Book to Musa (Moses)', the book being referred to is the Torah. If it is said, 'We sent down the Book to `Isa (Jesus)', then the book being referred to is the Bible.

'In fulfilment' means the containment of all the attributes of goodness. That is why the True Lord says, 'This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favour upon you.' (al-Ma'ida: 3)

This means that nothing is left out and nor will there be any reconsideration [of what is laid down]. Why did it come in fulfilment upon he who persevered in doing good with regards to Musa (Moses)? It is because those who confronted him peace be upon him with stubbornness and argumentation were the Jews. Thus, it is appropriate here to mention the story of Musa (Moses).

When Musa (Moses) peace be upon him came with the Torah as Allah had sent it down to him, people who lived with him believed in what the Torah contained. They were granted salvation and then died. As for those who were alive when the Messenger of Allah peace and blessings be upon him came, it was obligatory upon them to believe in Him because the True Lord had made it clear to them in the Torah that a messenger was coming, and they must believe so that the blessing of you persevering in good can be given to you in fulfilment. This is because if they truly believed in Musa (Moses) peace be upon him and acted according to his way, then they must have faith in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Those who preceded you persevered in doing good in the age of Musa's (Moses's) peace be upon him message, and now Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him has come with the final message. So, if you want Allah to fulfil His blessings, Generosity and Perfection upon you, you must declare your faith in Muhammad peace and blessings be upon him. Amongst you are those who have perfected their adherence to Musa (Moses) and believed in Muhammad, and their blessings have been fulfilled, '…and as a detailed explanation of all things, and as guidance and mercy, that perhaps in [the matter of] the meeting with their Lord, they would believe.'

'A detailed explanation of all things' means that it is suited to its time - and to Allah belongs the highest of example - when you have a young child, you can say, ‘I have tailored his clothes for him’. When he grows up, he will no longer be able to fit into his old clothes. The verse asserts that all things refer to the values fitting for the age that they were living in. So, whenever we find a new detail in the Quran, it is appropriate for its time. Someone could say, ‘Here is a detail and here is detail, so what is the difference between this detail and this detail’? We say, ‘Every detail is appropriate for its time, and the verses of the Quran are spelled out, ready and prepared for every age and for all of mankind until the Hour is established.

The bane – always – is with those who legislate because when they come across someone who has power and authority, they attempt to prepare and spell out a ruling that suits them. We say to this kind of man, ‘You are spelling out the ruling even though the rulings are ready, prepared, and clear’. Indeed, we find that our physical bodies differ so our clothes need different specifications, but in an abstract sense we find that there is equality amongst all of mankind. Truthfulness for a child is the same as truthfulness for an adolescent and the same as truthfulness for a man, woman, a scholar, a merchant, and so forth. There is not a special truthfulness for each of them, and the same goes for trustworthiness. Islam has been merciful to us by giving us a theology and a law that is ready and suited to every human being. There is not any verse that has one standard for one person and no one else. The verses are for everyone.

‘Guidance’ is anything that shows the end because the religion of our natural disposition could be wiped out due to parents not conveying to their children the way of Allah the Exalted regarding their life and what pertains to it, and the values that must be predominant. The bane is that fathers teach their sons how to eat and drink, but they forget to teach them about values. The True Lord, however, shows us mercy when we become heedless. He legislated and sent a new messenger for every time and a new guidance to remind us.

‘…that perhaps, in [the matter of] the meeting with their Lord, they would believe.’ Every bane originates in turning away from Allah’s legislation. They forget to bear in mind their meeting with Allah, but if they had kept their meeting with Allah in mind, they would have prepared for it because an objective is what makes a man embark upon the means. A poet said, Is there not someone to show me my destination before I set off?

How can there be a destination after I have set off?

We say to this poet, the first part is correct. As for the second, it is not precise because the destination is that which defines the path. Likewise, Allah legislated for the destination first and afterwards He set down the path to it. Allah has legislated for everything that the circumstances of human life require, and that is why there will not be any amendments because everything has been spelled out. The True Lord says after that:

وَهَٰذَا كِتَٰبٌ أَنزَلۡنَٰهُ مُبَارَكٞ فَٱتَّبِعُوهُ وَٱتَّقُواْ لَعَلَّكُمۡ تُرۡحَمُونَ ١٥٥

This, too, is a blessed Scripture which We have sent down follow it and be conscious of your Lord, so that you may receive mercy[155] (The Quran, al-An'am: 155)

The word book shows that it has reached a degree of preciousness such that it must be written down and recorded because someone does not record or write anything down unless it is crucial. Our Lord has said the Quran is a book, and sometimes He calls it a Quran. As a Quran, it is recited from the hearts, and as a book it is preserved in writing. When they came to gather it, they wrote it down so that it would match what was in the hearts.

'And this [Quran] is a Book. We have revealed which is blessed.' This means that Allah Glorified is He commanded it to be sent down, and the trustworthy spirit (the angel Gabriel) came down with it. The word 'blessed' means it contains more goodness and benefit than expected. You might say, 'So-and-so has a salary of two hundred pounds, but he is raising his children well and he is pleased'. Someone will say to you, 'That is a blessing'. It is as if this salary would never allow for these responsibilities to be carried out. The word blessed indicates that the hand of Allah is affecting all means, and we know that people always look towards the positive type of sustenance without considering the vaster negative. Positive sustenance gives you two hundred pounds while the negative sustenance strips you of the expenditures of which extent you are unaware. Thus, we find someone whose salary is a thousand pounds, but some of his children become sick, and another child needs private tuition. At this rate, the thousand pounds will run out and he still needs more.

Therefore, when the True Lord prevents someone from having to spend out in disobedience or sickness, this is a blessing in sustenance. We find someone whose wealth comes from lawful sources and he toils for it, Allah enables him to buy everything that he needs. Allah grants this small amount of wealth the attribute of acceptance. We also find someone whose wealth comes from unlawful sources, and Allah is angry with his wealth, so he spends it in [remedying] afflictions and trials, and he will need even more than what he has.

When you compare the Quran to the Torah in size, you find that it is smaller, but if you were to look at the blessings that it contains, you would find them endless. Every day the Quran gives a new gift and its wonders do not cease. Someone reads it and understands a certain meaning, while someone else reads it and understands a new meaning. This proves that the One speaking is Wise, and He has placed great benefit in something small.

This is the meaning of ‘And this [Quran] is a Book. We have revealed which is blessed…’ because every book has a specified time, a specified era and for a specified nation. As for the Quran, from the day Allah sent it down and until the Hour is established, it has and will continue to address new issues as they emerge and provide solutions for them. What is important is that the Quran came at a time of high aspiration for humanity along with civilization and its intellectual advancements. Therefore, it had to address all these issues in a way that would give it a constant advantage, and this can only happen if it contains blessings.

We all know that the Quran was revealed to an unlettered man, amongst an unlettered nation. There is profound wisdom behind this because the meaning of ‘unlettered’ is that he did not receive knowledge from human beings, but rather, he is the same as his mother gave birth to him (regarding knowledge). His knowledge and education came from Allah.

Therefore, being unlettered is an honour and an elevation in his sources of knowledge. The Quran came down amongst an unlettered nation because this religion was only sent down amongst this primitive and nomadic nation, moving from place to place without a law, but ruled instead solely by the chief of the tribe. When these spiritual values and legislative rulings came down to them, this itself proves that the book bearing these values and rulings came from Allah. If the Quran had been sent down to a civilized nation, it would have been called a transition of civilization. However, it was sent down to a nation that had not had any laws similar to those that governed the Persians or Byzantines.

Since this Book (the Quran) has these qualities that relieve the creation of the burden of legislating for themselves in such a way that absolutely guarantees for them the fulfilment of all what is good in this worldly life and the life to come, Allah the Almighty commands them to follow it and to be conscious of Him Glorified is He so that they might be graced with His mercy. (al-An'am: 155)

The word la`all in Arabic indicates the meaning of 'hope'. As a matter of fact, one may hope that somebody will do them a favour and thus say, 'So-and-so might give me such-and-such'. This statement indicates that a human being hopes that another human being will do them a favour. Yet, this human being, out of the fact that man is constantly subject to change, may do the favour or may not. They may even try to do the act required by the person but finds themselves unable to do it. When you say, 'I might do a favour for such-and-such', this clearly means that you are the one who is expected to do this favour, yet it is of importance here to know that you are also subject to change and thus may be unable to do the act even though you have the intention and the desire to do it.

But, the question is, 'Why did Allah the Almighty send down this Book'? Allah the Almighty wants to indicate the high and superior status of the adherents of Islam to which the Quran was revealed down. Thus, Allah Glorified is He says:

أَن تَقُولُوٓاْ إِنَّمَآ أُنزِلَ ٱلۡكِتَٰبُ عَلَىٰ طَآئِفَتَيۡنِ مِن قَبۡلِنَا وَإِن كُنَّا عَن دِرَاسَتِهِمۡ لَغَٰفِلِينَ ١٥٦

Lest you say, 'Scriptures were only sent down to two communities before us: we were not aware of what they studied' [156] (The Quran, al-An'am: 156)

This verse indicates that the Quran was revealed down to purify the previous beliefs that were previously sent down to the two groups, the Jews and the Christians. They have not studied the Torah and the Bible because they were an unlettered people whose members did not know how to read and write; the Quran was sent down so that they could not say, 'We were unlettered and thus were unable to study the heavenly Books previously revealed to the Jews and Christians'. As a matter of fact, this indicates clearly that Allah the Almighty wanted them not to seize on any excuse.

Allah Glorified is He then says:

أَوْ تَقُولُوا۟ لَوْ أَنَّآ أُنزِلَ عَلَيْنَا ٱلْكِتَـٰبُ لَكُنَّآ أَهْدَىٰ مِنْهُمْ ۚ فَقَدْ جَآءَكُم بَيِّنَةٌ
مِّن رَّبِّكُمْ وَهُدًى وَرَحْمَةٌ ۚ فَمَنْ أَظْلَمُ مِمَّن كَذَّبَ بِـَٔايَـٰتِ ٱللَّهِ وَصَدَفَ
عَنْهَا ۗ سَنَجْزِى ٱلَّذِينَ يَصْدِفُونَ عَنْ ءَايَـٰتِنَا سُوٓءَ ٱلْعَذَابِ بِمَا كَانُوا۟ يَصْدِفُونَ ﴿١٥٧﴾

Or 'If only the Scripture had been sent down to us, we would have been better guided than them.' Now clear evidence, guidance, and mercy have come to you from your Lord. Who could be more wrong than someone who rejects God's revelations and turns away from them? We shall repay those who turn away with a painful punishment [157] (The Quran, al-An'am: 157)

The polytheists could argue that if the Torah and the Bible had been revealed to them, they would have followed its guidance better than the Jews and the Christians. This statement on the polytheists' part indicates plainly that their minds were ready to accept faith. That is why Allah the Almighty did not want to let them seize on any excuse. He the Almighty says, 'Who could be more wrong than someone who rejects Allah's revelations and turns away from them'?

Linguistically, the verb sadafa or 'turned away' can be used as transitive and intransitive. 'Intransitive verbs' are those verbs that have or need no object. For example, when you say, 'So-and-so sat down'; the meaning of this sentence is crystal clear because you understand that someone has already done the action of sitting down. As for the 'transitive verbs', they are those verbs that have or need an object. For example, when you say, 'Zayd hit', the meaning of this sentence is not clear because you do not know the person who has been hit by Zayd and thus you expect the speaker to tell you the name of the person who has been hit.

As a matter of fact, the verb sadafa in this verse under discussion enjoys these two qualities. Allah the Almighty uses this particular verb in this context to convey two important meanings, as follows: when the verb is used in the intransitive sense, it indicates that the person themselves have committed the act of turning and shunning away from the way of guidance; when the verb is used in the transitive sense, it means that they cause others to turn away from divine guidance and thus they will be punished first and foremost for leading themselves astray, and meanwhile for causing others to deviate from the way. As such, Allah the Almighty uses this verb to indicate the two possible meanings. Indeed, it is on that person who led them-self astray and causes others to go astray that Allah the Almighty will inflict His Punishment twice. In this regard, Allah Glorified is He says, 'We shall repay those who turn away with a painful punishment.'

The verse indicates clearly that the Allah's punishment will be inflicted upon those who turn themselves and others away from the way of faith and guidance. If those people in question carefully reflected on this worldly life, they would certainly realise that death seizes people every day without giving them any prior notice. We know for certain that people's life spans are predestined by Allah the Almighty in Al-lawh al-mahfuzh (preserved tablet), and that death is the inevitable end of all beings. This means that every human being with a sound mind should consider that they may die at any moment. It is if Allah the Almighty wants to say, 'If death is man's inevitable end, why do they turn away from My way of guidance? Is there any way that they can live eternally in the world'? Allah the Almighty then says:

هَلۡ يَنظُرُونَ إِلَّآ أَن تَأۡتِيَهُمُ ٱلۡمَلَٰٓئِكَةُ أَوۡ يَأۡتِيَ رَبُّكَ أَوۡ يَأۡتِيَ بَعۡضُ ءَايَٰتِ
رَبِّكَۗ يَوۡمَ يَأۡتِي بَعۡضُ ءَايَٰتِ رَبِّكَ لَا يَنفَعُ نَفۡسًا إِيمَٰنُهَا لَمۡ تَكُنۡ ءَامَنَتۡ مِن
قَبۡلُ أَوۡ كَسَبَتۡ فِيٓ إِيمَٰنِهَا خَيۡرٗاۗ قُلِ ٱنتَظِرُوٓاْ إِنَّا مُنتَظِرُونَ ١٥٨

Are they waiting for the very angels to come to them, or your Lord Himself, or maybe some of His signs? But on the Day some of your Lord's signs come, no soul will profit from faith if it had none before, or has not already earned some good through its faith. Say, 'Wait if you wish: we too are waiting' [158]
(The Quran, al-An'am: 158)

Allah the Almighty tells those people, i.e. the Polytheists, clearly to undoubtedly wait for nothing except for the angles who are assigned to take their souls!

The word ‘angels’ here is used in a general sense. In another verse, Allah the Almighty says that those people who sin against themselves will surrender to the angles when the latter causes them to die. (an-Nahl: 28)

Indeed, no one will ever escape the angels, and that is why they extend their submission to them, i.e. the angels. Allah Glorified is He then says, ‘Are they waiting for the very angels to come to them, or your Lord Himself…?’ Concerning this part of the verse, i.e. ‘the Coming of Allah the Almighty’, some scholars mistakenly wanted to explain it in the light of ‘how humans do the act of coming’; they wanted to make between the two acts of coming, i.e. the divine one and the human counterpart resemble each other. Yet, this is totally wrong because man’s coming entails that they move from one place to another, a matter which is impossible to apply to Allah the Almighty. To those scholars, we say, ‘If you truly explain every act of ‘coming’ considering how we humans come, how do you then explain the act of coming of the ‘stupor of death’ in the saying of Allah in which He Glorified is He says that ‘the stupor of death will come in truth’ (Qaf: 19)?

So, the question to be asked here is ‘How can we interpret the act of coming on part of death’? We do not really know how death will come even though it is created, so how come we know about how the act of coming is performed on the part of Allah the Almighty? We must explain everything that is connected to Allah in terms of what befits His Essence which is to be within the framework of the undeniable fact that there is nothing resembling Him the Almighty (ash-Shura: 11). In the same manner, if we take this sound understanding into consideration, we will be fully aware of the fact that the ‘act of coming’ on part of a child is totally different from it on the part of a young man and so on. So, how can we think that this particular ‘act of coming’ on the part of Allah the Almighty? Wrong then, are those who understand the ‘act of coming’ on the part of Allah in the light of its counterpart by human beings. That is why I constantly repeat that we must not understand anything pertaining to Allah the Almighty by the virtue of our own human laws, but rather, by the virtue of the fact that Allah the Almighty is the Most High and thus everything pertaining to Him the Almighty must be understood in the light of the undeniable fact that there is nothing resembling Him the Almighty. That is why we must say, 'Allah the Almighty has hearing that is not like ours, sight that is not like ours, a hand that is not like ours and so on.'
